Small pieces of the raw root swallowed with a little cold water as an emetic for pains in the stomach. More water taken if all the pieces not vomited. Overdose considered fatal.

See also scrub pine (page 48).

Southern Carrier: Entire roots dried in the sun, and powdered by rubbing on a stone. About a dessertspoonful of the powder taken in hot water as an emetic for sickness. Too strong a decoction considered fatal.[1]

SALICACEAE, WILLOW FAMILY

Salix lasiandra Benth., WILLOW

Bella Coola: Six sticks about a foot long charred, and pulverized on a stone. A teaspoonful of the powder taken in a cupful of cold water for diarrhoea. Said to effect a cure in two or three hours.

B
C
T 137
757

A piece of the inner bark folded once and the folded edge inserted into a knife cut; other edges then separated and flattened down, and the wound covered with eagle down. Thought to make the pus come out. Same process used to heal incisions in the abdomen made by those who tried to cure pain in the stomach.

B
[237]
B
[752]

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Gitksan: Not used.

B
[771]

[1] The late Dr. C. F. Newcombe informed the writer that this plant seems to be used by every tribe in whose territory it grows.

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

They resolved to make an attempt to burn it and to break open the door. 648
On the following day they came up to the village, but the guard on the 726 towers used their guns to such good effect that the enemy had to retreat with severe losses. They made still another attempt, but with no better success. They had lost many men, while only two old men of the Talio'mH, Tumnk'akyas and A'lk·ins by name, and one woman had been hurt. The latter had been killed. When the Kwakiutl turned back a messenger was at once sent up to the lake to call the young men, who then went to Nuqa'lkH to ask for help. The Kwakiutl passed close to Nuak'slu'sta's father's canoe, but they were so terrified by the losses they had sustained that they passed by without so much as noticing it. Two of their number were so ashamed of their defeat that they would rather remain in the enemy's country than return with their friends, and they stayed ashore. Meanwhile the Talio'mH and the Bilqula were pursuing the fugitives. They had reached the outlet of Bentinck Arm without overtaking them. Then their chiefs resolved to return, as they believed that their enemies had a long start upon them. Later on they learnt that the Kwakiutl were at that moment only a few miles from them, about to continue their homeward journey, after having encamped at the outlet of the channel. Afterwards the Talio'mH found the two men who had remained ashore. They called them and promised to send them back to their friends, saying that the war had ended, and that they had no grudge against them. The men were, however, too much afraid, and finally starved to death.

Later on the Talio'mH and Bilqula organised an expedition against the Kwakiutl to take revenge for the unprovoked attack. A chief named Koani'la, whose father was a Talio'mH, while his mother was a Kwakiutl, was their leader. They intended to attack the Lō'kwiltok· and the Kwō'k·sōt'ēnoq. When they approached the village of the latter they sent a canoe ahead to search for the village, and to report the number of houses. For two days they were unable to find the village, which lies in a labyrinth of islands; but finally they found it, and saw that it consisted of sixteen houses. On the next morning they attacked it. The tribe was wholly taken by surprise and almost all of them were killed. Koani'la's mother lived at this place, and when she heard the Bilqula coming she asked at once for her son, and was taken care of by him. Only five men and four women escaped. The Bilqula allowed these to run away, as they had killed as many as they desired. Anuknl'teem, a chief of the Snaqtla'mh, was the only man of the Bilqula who was wounded. He died on the way home. They returned, but in the country of the Nā'koartok· they were overtaken by four Kwakiutl canoes which pursued them. The Bilqula were victorious, but Koani'la induced them to desist. During the fight two of the women, whom they had taken as slaves, and one boy jumped overboard, and were rescued by the Kwakiutl.

Medicine.

Boils are treated by cauterisation with dry bark or with gunpowder. 752
Sometimes a series of parallel cuts is made over swellings or boils. Fractured bones are set, and fastened between splints of cedar-bark.

Emetats of shark oil or clachen oil are given by means of a kelp tube, 757 with a mouthpiece made of the wing-bone of an eagle. Snake poison is [237] collected and used as a poison. Women wear tight anklets to prevent 700

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

quantities of ducks and geese, and the inhabitants of the inland villages sometimes made hunting expeditions to the nesting places of wild-fowl in the lakes of the interior uplands. Although numbers of birds were sometimes killed in this way, they were never a steady article of diet. The same is true of grouse. Always plentiful, these birds were commonly killed, but never in large numbers.

The basis of the food supply was fish. The river teemed with salmon, which enabled the country to support its relatively large population. Spring, sockeye, hump-back, dog, and cohoe salmon, all entered the river in thousands during the spring and summer, while the steel-head could be caught throughout the year. They were taken in weirs and their flesh smoked for winter use. Throughout the year, salmon was the principal article of diet. Second in importance was the olachen, a fish somewhat resembling a herring, which entered the river in great numbers during April or May. They were taken in purse-like nets,* allowed to rot for ten days or two weeks, and then boiled. The grease was skimmed off and kept indefinitely to be used as a relish for other foods. It was always a sign of poverty if a person were obliged to eat berries without olachen grease. Trout and bull-heads were found in the river, but were not sufficiently plentiful to be of importance.

Although no form of agriculture was practised, the Bella Coola used vegetable food to a considerable extent. Berries were abundant; some were eaten raw, but many more were pounded into a pulpy mass and dried in the sun. Cakes prepared in this way kept indefinitely and formed one of the regular winter foods. The bark of the hemlock and cottonwood was eaten, as well as the roots of many plants. In recent years many of these have not been used, so that an investigator is apt to overlook their great importance in early times. Although useless for food, the cedar was the corner-stone of Bella Coola material culture. From its trunk were split out, with wedges, the wide planks which formed entertained such kindly sentiments towards him that he would be glad to have his friend receive it.

*See Appendix A for a description of olachen fishing.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

In recent years the number of incombustible objects has increased enormously with the introduction of metal utensils, gramophones, and other things obtained from white traders. Although these are considered to be of use to the ghost, and must be carefully placed near the grave, they can be publicly exchanged for others by a relative. The sentiments expressed on such occasions are that the ghost, though aware of what is taking place, does not resent an open transfer; and that it is unnecessary to deposit the equivalent of what has been removed. There is undoubtedly a vague idea that the ghost uses, not the actual object, but its essence, which is received by the deposition. It must be emphasized that this feeling has not become crystallized to such a state that it is customary to replace goods laid on the grave with others. Such an exchange is a rare event and would cause animosity if carried out by anyone except a near relative.

Sometimes a dying person requests that a house be erected over his grave, a common plains tribe custom. This is built immediately after the funeral and articles that cannot be burnt are placed within it instead of being piled on the ground. The sorrowing relatives may choose to erect a picket fence around the spot, but no other mark for the grave is put up until a memorial potlatch several years after death. House or fence soon falls into decay and rarely an effort is made to repair either. Nor is the grave itself disturbed. Cow-parsnips, which are much used for food, grow frequently in cemeteries, but no one would gather the shoots that rise above a grave; they are food belonging to the dead person. The white man has taught the Bella Coola how to plant apple-trees and these are often set out in graveyards, though the fruit is allowed to fall to the ground for the benefit of those interred beneath. The Bella Bella are said formerly to have replaced at intervals the coffin containing a dead person, but this seems never to have been a Bella Coola practice. Indeed, a grave is never to the aesthetic, their skill in dancing and dramatics is noteworthy: no one who has witnessed a native dance can fail to have been impressed by the performance of the participants and the stage-craft of the carpenters. The fact that no system of writing had ever been devised has prevented the establishment of a native literature, but the practice of passing down an extensive folklore by word of mouth shows their narrative powers as well as their faculty for remembering details. At present it is difficult to appreciate what must have been their energy in earlier times when they faced the struggle for existence, armed with stone tools. Abundant salmon gave them adequate food, but only when weirs had been built with great labour. Though game was plentiful, the hunter was equipped with nothing more formidable than a bow and arrow. The simplest task required patience and skill undreamed of by the average white man. If the reader will allow his imagination to carry him backwards two hundred years, he will realize that the mere provision of food and clothing necessitated constant effort and ceaseless exertion.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Hand in hand with many admirable characteristics, the Bella Coola display others which strike the white man as unprepossessing. A first impression is the untidiness of their houses. Exteriorly, they are often fairly neat, but confusion reigns within. Clothing, instead of being hung up, is left lying on the floor; bed-coverings are piled carelessly; dirty dishes cover the tables; dogs and children swarm over the floor; flies abound; all is dirty and slovenly. The house itself may be uncompleted; a window lacks glass and has been boarded up; the roof leaks, or the steps are falling down. Nor are the surroundings more attractive. There is one struggling flower-bed in the village, but elsewhere the houses are surrounded by wastes of mud where horses and cattle wander, dogs prowl, and children play. In the distance the mountain peaks rise in splendour, but near at hand all is squalid and unkempt.

They are only slightly more particular about their personal appearance. Dirt does not distress them. They wash occa-

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

but the Bella Coola do not consider this aspect and the children grow up in an atmosphere entirely lacking in restraint of speech. Some stories teach a moral lesson, but they are recounted merely for entertainment. At the present time, no one knows who invented the stories; they have been handed down from dim antiquity and alterations or embellishments are considered improper, while the composition of new tales appears to be unknown.

Another pastime is smoking. Among some Indian tribes the practice has a definite religious significance, but this appears to be lacking among the Bella Coola. Most of the men enjoy either a pipe or cigarettes, and some of the women also indulge, but few carry the habit to excess. All the older people affirmed that their ancestors had smoked for generations. Tobacco was not grown, but kinnikinick, *milix*ʷ', was used, and also a plant known as lsaix'. Another smoking mixture was bark of lsxwatlp, toasted before a fire until dried and brown, and then crumbled between the hands. These materials have given place entirely to imported tobacco, and the white man's pipe has replaced the native one. The latter consisted of a gooseberry cane from which the pith had been extracted; sometimes a small bowl of elderberry wood was added, but often the mixture to be smoked was simply placed within the end of the hollow stem.

Adults, especially the men, are addicted to gambling. They are fond of placing stakes on a race or other trial of strength, and enjoy all kinds of games of chance. Some of the younger men have mastered a few of the simpler games of cards on which they spend a certain amount of time and money. The favourite gambling game, however, is one found in all parts of the coast, which is played with a pack of fifty-four smoothed crabapple sticks. The rules are complicated and no effort was made to learn more than the general principles. The pieces are divided among the eight or ten contestants and concealed; then one player guesses in whose hand a certain marked stick is hidden. If he is successful, the others pay him a forfeit; if

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

133 tains. From each pocket between these mountains an ice-cold affluent comes swirling down to the main river. The 137 predominant tree in the river valleys is the cedar[4] which in many cases attains great girth and height. Cottonwoods flourish in places, and everywhere there is an almost impenetrable undergrowth of devil's club, berry bushes, and other shrubbery of almost tropical density. On the lower slopes of the mountains, moss-festooned pines and spruces are the most common trees, gradually becoming smaller and fewer until the 133 barren peaks are reached. The mountains rise so precipitously that their snowcaps and glaciers seem to overhang the valley, a narrow ribbon of green winding far below. The range of vision from the bank of the river is limited by the all-encircling mountains. Here and there a distant vista opens up to expose peak after peak, but on the whole there is a feeling of confinement, in contrast with the open wastes of the upper country where the Bella Coola rises. Mountains, forests, flowing water, these are the three dominant impressions of the country (see Plate 6).

136 The mammals of central British Columbia, although comparatively common, have never been of primary importance.
[291] The marten, the wolverine, the lynx, and bears, both black and grizzly, were formerly hunted for their skins to serve as [262] cloaks. Deer were killed whenever possible, but formed a negligible item of diet. The beaver also was prized for its [439] flesh. The skins of moose and caribou were traded from the Carrier Indians, but neither of these animals was found in the [286] Bella Coola area. The mammal of greatest economic impor-
[237] tance was the mountain goat, the wool of which was woven into blankets. Smoked goat meat was formerly found in every [251] house and was almost the only flesh available during the [262] winter. Small game was abundant, but seals were a luxury.
Neither were birds of great importance to the Bella Coola.
[223] Members of the tribe resident near the sea-coast used to kill

[4]Appendix C contains a glossary of the scientific names of the flora and fauna mentioned in this monograph.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

quantities of ducks and geese, and the inhabitants of the inland 223 villages sometimes made hunting expeditions to the nesting [136] places of wild-fowl in the lakes of the interior uplands. Although numbers of birds were sometimes killed in this way, [262] they were never a steady article of diet. The same is true of grouse. Always plentiful, these birds were commonly killed, but never in large numbers.

The basis of the food supply was fish. The river teemed 226 with salmon, which enabled the country to support its rela- 262 tively large population. Spring, sockeye, hump-back, dog, and cohoe salmon, all entered the river in thousands during the spring and summer, while the steel-head could be caught throughout the year. They were taken in weirs and their [251] flesh smoked for winter use. Throughout the year, salmon was the principal article of diet. Second in importance was the olachen, a fish somewhat resembling a herring, which entered the river in great numbers during April or May. They [252] were taken in purse-like nets,[6] allowed to rot for ten days or two weeks, and then boiled. The grease was skimmed off and [263] kept indefinitely to be used as a relish for other foods. It was [237] always a sign of poverty if a person were obliged to eat berries without olachen grease. Trout and bull-heads were found in [735] the river, but were not sufficiently plentiful to be of importance. [556]

Although no form of agriculture was practised, the Bella Coola used vegetable food to a considerable extent. Berries 262 were abundant; some were eaten raw, but many more were [241] pounded into a pulpy mass and dried in the sun. Cakes [251] prepared in this way kept indefinitely and formed one of the regular winter foods. The bark of the hemlock and cottonwood was eaten, as well as the roots of many plants.
In recent years many of these have not been used, so that [178] an investigator is apt to overlook their great importance in early times. Although useless for food, the cedar was the 824 corner-stone of Bella Coola material culture. From its trunk were split out, with wedges, the wide planks which formed 322

[6] See Appendix A for a description of olachen fishing.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

After bestowal of these presents, the siki of the penultimate group of guests shakes his rattle, and exactly the same procedure is carried out by members of his party. They, too, give presents to X and the other Bella Coola chiefs. The same rites are carried out by each party of guests in the reverse order of their arrival. It is frequently near dawn before the first-comers have completed their dances and distribution of gifts. X then gives another meal to all, with no restriction on the choice of food. This concludes the night's ceremony, and the guests depart, except those who are staying in X's house. 556 *

THE POTLATCH: FIRST DAY

Considering the lengthy ceremonials of the preceding evening, it is not surprising that on this day no one stirs early. The guests receive their breakfast in the houses where they are accommodated, and meanwhile a number of young men gather in X's house to assist in the preparation of food for the main meal of the day. During the previous night a large amount of smoked mountain goat has been put in water to soak. This is now placed in a number of food-boxes, ready for distribution, water is added and hot stones lifted in to bring it to a boil. When the water comes to the boil, mountain goat grease is added, and then bearberries; it is usually about two o'clock in the afternoon before the meal is ready. The guests are summoned and the food given them, the chiefs, as usual, receiving more than those of lower rank. After eating they disperse to await the evening rites. [251] [252] [554]

It was impossible to obtain an accurate account of the ritual carried out on the evening of this, the first day of the potlatch proper. The ceremonial was of less importance than those preceding and following, and it has long fallen into disuse. The guests take up their accustomed places, and the Bella Coola members of the susaok range themselves near them and behind the fire. The corners next the door are occupied by non-members of the society. The singers beat out two of [182] 556 * 575 [535]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

782
778
* 787
[251]

About half a mile from the glacier there is a large rock shelter where mountain goat hunters are wont to smoke their meat. They are always careful to take with them dyed and undyed cedar-bark and eagle down, knowing that they may encounter the supernatural. Sometimes they hear the voice of uxxekam, a deep, long drawn-out hum, m·····. If this sound is repeated four times it is a happy augury, but if heard only once it presages ill fortune. In either case some member of the party, one who is ceremonially clean and is brave, blackens his face, puts on a collar of dyed cedar-bark, covered with eagle down, steps outside, and says in effect:

"Hail! Petrified One. In the beginning you came down from Ałquntäm, from all that was wonderful and powerful. You have not changed, hence we mortals can still hear your voice. Please, may it be well with us. There is none other like you."

If the supplicant is ceremonially clean the mountain will answer hi·····, four times, and there will be heard what sounds like a great landslide. Then the petitioner takes some small portions of meat, some dyed and some undyed cedar-bark, and eagle down and throws them on the fire.

"Please accept, Oh Kusiaot" (Powerful One), he says.

Thus propitiated, uxxekam grants them success in hunting.

778 (13) Spipixlnän·i: On the south side of the Dean River about one mile from its mouth. Here, in the beginning of time, Raven cast his war-knife, spla, which was turned to stone and can still be seen. Its power has likewise become localized at this point.

(14) In the beginning of time Mount Swakx, near the Dean River, was a man who was turned to stone. Across the river is his wife, Ałsłalnexkł, whose ancestral name is Kamiłkän, likewise petrified.

[755]
[785]

In most of these places[1] a sick person can receive assistance, if he is willing to risk the consequent dangers. The first essential is that he be in a "clean" condition by the observance of

[1] [i.e. - certain spots where power is localized - see cat. 116, pp 594-600 for their location - ANALYST]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 *756 *787 palm of one hand. The conspirators had been hoping for such an indication, since it gave the information to the brother who was peering through a crack. The younger sister persuaded the older one to hold up her palms to the fire to warm them, thus giving the brother an opportunity to shoot through a knot-hole in the wall of the house. His arrow transfixed his sister's hand and she fell, helpless, whereupon he entered and slew her.

The surviving brother and sister abandoned their home and travelled for a very long time without seeing anyone. Finally, they settled on a [186] mountain top and married. Since that time Carriers have married their sisters.[59]

THE MARRIAGE OF Tlitcäplilän·a'S DAUGHTER

Long ago, when the world was still sparsely populated, there were two poor orphans, a brother and sister, quite alone, without relatives. The boy, who was about eighteen years old, took great care of the girl. In summer, when the people scattered over the country in search of food, the two went together to catch and dry salmon for the winter. The brother [251] had great success. He caught many fish which he suspended on a frame to dry, in charge of his sister, while he went away for four or five days. On his return all the drying salmon had disappeared.

"That is unkind of my sister," he said to himself, "to have eaten all those fish so greedily."

He went to bed without saying anything, but next morning asked her:

"Is it you who have eaten all our food?"

The girl replied in a frightened whisper:

"Don't speak to me about it. I am terrified. A supernatural woman stole it. I think it was Tlitcäplilän·a. I heard something approaching and hid myself. A huge woman came to the drying rack, her snout-like mouth ranged among the fish and sucked them down like lightning, while her teeth rattled as if they were loose in her jaws. She went away as soon as she had finished our salmon."

Next morning the boy bade his sister hide, as he was going to attack the robber of his food. He prepared a bow with a strong arrow and took up his position in ambush overlooking the rack on which hung the salmon he had recently caught. Soon he heard a voice and presently Tlitcäplilän·a appeared, wearing a shaman's collar of dyed and undyed cedar-bark in alternate bands, plentifully sprinkled with eagle down. Her teeth rattled loosely in their sockets. When near the rack, her mouth formed itself into a snout with which she began to suck in the salmon with a horrible [59] This statement is undoubtedly a mere expression of Bella Coola contempt for their neighbours.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 539 * 756 * 787 Previous to her cure, Ṭlitcäplilän·a had promised that whoever made her well should marry one of her four beautiful daughters. She now bade them stand up and told the boy to choose whichever he liked. The four were identical in appearance, and the youth was in a quandary, but a young supernatural being standing near advised him to select the third in age, saying she was by far the most capable. All had wonderful powers but she excelled her sisters, since, if she closed her eyes and wished to be in a certain place, she straightway arrived there. So the lad led this girl out from among her sisters and in a flash all the supernatural ones vanished, except Ṭlitcäplilän·a and her four children. The mother said to her new son-in-law:

"I suppose you will spend the night with us but will want to go back to your own home tomorrow morning."

"Yes," answered the boy. "I am afraid to be too long absent on account of my sister down below."

"Don't worry on her account," said his mother-in-law. "If she should be dead I will restore her, or rather your wife, my daughter, will do so. She has the necessary power."

That night the young man spent in the home of Ṭlitcäplilän·a. Next morning he and his bride set out for the earth, travelling on the same easy, short route by which he had reached Nusmät·a. He thought he had been absent for one night only, but one night among supernatural ones being equivalent to a year among mortals, his sister had died of starvation. His wife rubbed her hands over the dead girl's face and she was at once restored to life, greatly to the delight of the bridegroom and all his human friends.

Ṭlitcäplilän·a's daughter had brought with her from Nusmät·a a dog which she instructed to watch her husband and report if he so much as flirted with any other girl. She warned him that if he did so, or if he ever ceased to pay the proper respect to herself, she would leave him and return to her home above. For three years the husband obeyed her instructions, but one night he met a pretty girl and was faithless to his wife. The ever-watchful dog reported this to his mistress, who went back above and never returned to her husband.

THE MARRIAGE OF Ṭlitcäplilän·a's DAUGHTER
(Second Version)

Long ago three brothers went off into the mountains to hunt goats. [251] They had tolerable success and hung up their quarry to dry, leaving Saxinao, the youngest brother, in charge. While the others were absent, Ṭlitcäplilän·a visited the camp and carried off the drying meat, the women listening from the village are able to tell how many have been caught from the number of times the cry xak'loi is raised. 226 796

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Then the salmon are cut up (only shell knives may be used for the purpose) and cooked. Everything must be used, heads, bones, and entrails, the only refuse being the blood which is scraped from the leaves and carried into the woods. The leaves themselves, and the strings of dyed and undyed cedar-bark are thrown into the river in accordance with a desire expressed by Noäkxnum long ago. When everything is ready for a meal, the men take their places in two rows, facing each other across a coarse bark mat. Bark spoons have been provided, and when the heralds call for food, the fisherman brings the heads of the salmon and the guests make the motions of eating, though in reality these parts are dried and kept for winter. Boxes containing a liberal portion of the choice meat are next served and all eat freely. Each guest puts on one side what he has not consumed as if to carry it away, as is the custom at an ordinary feast, though his share is really left in the shelter until the following day. Finally, a third course is provided, the back of the fish cooked with the bone in position. Like the last, the guests eat as much as they desire and pack up the residue as if to take away. Then they leave the Spring Salmon House. [412] 226 796 574 [251]

All the fish are not cooked on the one occasion. The following day the fisherman again calls back the men of his village. The same type of meal is served, but this time the guests carry away what they do not eat for the benefit of their families. This portion may be eaten by the women without affronting the salmon. [562]

This rite has not been performed in full detail in Bella Coola for many years, and it was impossible to collect information on some points. It is uncertain, for example, whether this ceremony was carried out by every fisherman or whether there used to be certain individuals with the prerogative of dealing with the first catch. The latter appears to be the most logical 226 796 424

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

226 manner, and was definitely stated to be the case by one well-796 informed old man. It is clear, however, that every spring salmon was landed with the cry of xak'loi·, taken to the Spring [424] Salmon House, and cut up by the men until the time when women were allowed near the river. Another old man stated [574] that the feast took place at night and that only the heads and [251] refuse of the first catch were eaten, the remainder being dried for the winter. Women of child-bearing age were not allowed [562] on the river bank, and were rigorously excluded from the Spring Salmon House until the time when the sun's shadow reached a diagonal scar on the slope of one of the mountains on the north side of North Bentinck Arm. This occurs about August. From that time onwards, there was no calling of xak'loi·, and women, except those who were taboo, could cut salmon freely on the bank. It was even stated that refuse of salmon could be thrown into the river after that time. No one knows the origin of this seasonal prohibition, or why it should end when the sun reaches a certain point, but it was faithfully observed in former times.

In Kimsquit similar rites were carried out, the chief variation being that the bodies of four swans were placed in the Spring Salmon House and the fish laid with these at intervals in the line. Moreover, the youth used to bite the back of each salmon as he presented it with the cedar-bark streamer. The same regulations with regard to drinking water, and crying after eating, were enforced for spring salmon as for olachen.

Miscellaneous Beliefs

372 The following miscellaneous beliefs and customs cannot be assigned to any special aspect of Bella Coola life:

If a spark from a fire jumps out and lights on a person's hand, it is said:

"The fire wants to give you [the person on whom the brand has fallen] food."

827 If a man sneezes repeatedly, it is said:

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

the packers were to meet them. They were not due to arrive for several hours, so Sänuxumäxots cooked the goat and had a plentiful meal ready for his followers. They asked whether he had had any luck, and he answered casually that his son had killed one, but when they expressed regret at his lack of fortune, Sänuxumäxots pointed to the pile of dead goats, visible in the distance, and said: 539* 224

"See what my son killed."

Never before had there been such a slaughter of goats at one time, and it was obvious that no time could be lost if the meat was to be smoked before winter. Fortunately, there was a large cave in the vicinity where they established their headquarters. The packers were divided into two parties; some brought in the carcasses, while others kept a fire smouldering, tended the drying meat, and boiled out the grease. It was a slow process and there was a heavy snowfall before it was finished. The snow drifted into the narrow valley to such a depth that it was impossible to think of leaving. The beleaguered hunters were well provided with food; melted snow gave them water, and the cave was sufficient shelter, so their confinement was more irksome than dangerous. Nor did it prove profitless. The smell of food attracted two martens which were so unafraid that they were killed with sticks. All the hunters began to make traps which soon provided them with enough skins to make several of the much-prized blankets. 539* [251] [237]

So the winter dragged away. The wife of one of the packers had a reputation for faithlessness and her husband's companions used to tease him by saying that his wife would have remarried before he got home. This wore on his nerves until he determined to try to reach the village in spite of the snow. He constructed a pair of snow-shoes and set out, carrying with him enough marten-skins for four blankets, packed in a sack made from the stomach of one of the goats. The journey was less difficult than he had feared; he camped for one night, and reached his own village soon after dusk of the next day. Looking through the doorway, he saw his father throwing food into the fire and realized that someone must have died. He called out anxiously, but his parent, who had long since abandoned hope for his son's safety, could not believe that his voice was real, and was not convinced until he actually stood before him. The long-absent one asked for whom the food was being thrown on the fire, and his father replied: [481]

"For you. We thought you must be dead and have burnt almost all your personal possessions."

"That does not matter," replied the son. "We have plenty of meat, grease, and furs."

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

226 about a foot of the surface. In the same slow manner a second stake is driven in, about ten feet from the first, and in such a position that the main force of the current would strike at right angles a line drawn between the two. Then two more stakes are placed in position, slightly below the first pair, and nearer together, as shown in the diagram (Figure 3). The posts are often driven before the main run of the fish, and the fixing of the net delayed until that time. It is fastened to the four stakes, with its open end, which faces upstream, forming a rough oval, ten feet wide, of which the lower side rests on the bottom and the upper is at the surface. The outer stakes hold the upper edge, the inner ones secure the lower brim. The olachen are slow-swimming fish which work their way upstream with the rising tide, and, when it turns, drift back into the net. Once within the opening, they lack strength to drive forward against current and tide, and are forced into the closed bottom, floating downstream, in thousands. At the peak of the season, a net is often extended to its full dimensions with a solid mass of fish, throwing a tremendous strain on supports and mesh-work alike. During the day, the mouth is closed with a cross-piece, nuxtnutsta, to prevent floating objects from drifting within and damaging it, and opened during the night at whatever hour the tide turns.

FIG. 3. Diagram showing position of the stakes supporting an olachen net.

Early in the morning begins the landing of the fish. The partners paddle out to the bottom of their net and, with considerable exertion, lift it into the canoe. A cord is tied around the bellied mass, cutting off a section, and the end is opened so that the fish from it fall into the bottom of the craft. Another part is dealt with in the same manner, then a third, and so in succession until the gleaming olachen are piled so deeply that no more can be loaded with safety. Sometimes two or three loads, each of many thousands, are taken from a single net. The partners slowly pole to shore where, at the present time, their wives and children wait to unload the canoe. The fish are packed into baskets, carried on the back [482] with the aid of a tump-line, and taken to pits which have been prepared ten to fifteen feet from the bank. These are three or four feet deep, lined 226 with planks, and with their bottoms covered with evergreen boughs. The 251 olachen are emptied into these holes, which are covered with more planks when full. If more fish are landed than can be handled conveniently in this manner, they are laid on branches spread on the ground, and a low wall of planks built up around them. Although the main run lasts for only three or four days, the olachen are so numerous that each group of partners is able to fill several of these storage pits.

252 Though most of the catch is thus disposed of, there is always enough

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

for treatment in other ways. Some are fried immediately, but the Bella Coola think they lack flavour, although most white men regard them as delicious. Many hundreds are dried for winter use in one of the following methods: 252 251

(A) Cedar-sticks, each about three feet in length, are split from the solid stem and smoothed down to a diameter of about one-half inch. One of these is passed through the gills and mouth of one fish after another until the rod is filled with a row of olachen, their tails hanging downwards. Dozens of these sticks are suspended horizontally over the central fire in a house, or, in brilliant sunshine, hung in the open. When dried to a certain extent, they are stored in the upper parts of the houses where the process continues whenever a fire is lit. When so treated they keep almost indefinitely.

(B) Narrow strips, each four to five feet in length, of flexible cedar-bark, are prepared by the women. The fisherman takes the ends of two of these, ties one around a fish's head, and the other around its tail. Another olachen is tied parallel to the first, and then others, until the two cords are supporting thirty to forty fish, each separated by about one inch. The middle of the strings is laid across a horizontal bar above a fire or in the open, and the process of drying continues as in the last method. The fish not infrequently catch fire if a large blaze is built up in a house, so careful people remove their olachen before a feast or other celebration.

Though dried olachen provide a useful article for winter diet, the fish are chiefly valued for their grease, sluk[1], whch is used as a condiment with all kinds of berries. It is sometimes extracted from the fresh fish, but the Bella Coola consider this to be tasteless and prefer to wait until the olachen have remained in the pits for ten days to two weeks. Warm weather hastens the process, but in any case nothing is done until the disgusting smell has penetrated for miles, proving that putrefaction is well advanced. In former times, all boiling was done with hot stones, but at present boxes with iron bottoms are used as kettles. These are of various shapes and sizes, an average being, perhaps, four feet long, three feet wide, and eighteen inches deep. These are set on fireplaces which vary according to the ingenuity of the refiner. Some are excavated in the river bank, lined with stones set in clay, and fitted at the inner end with an old stovepipe to provide draught for the miniature furnace. The box-kettle is placed on the ground over the excavation and the cook pours in water. Then his wife, children, and friends bring the putrid fish, which they ladle in until only a few inches of water are visible. A slow fire is built beneath, and, as the mixture begins to boil, the cook stirs it with a five-foot stick having a slightly flattened blade. Presently the grease begins to rise to the surface whence it is skimmed off and placed in recep-

258 [262] [263] [252] [415] [354] [415]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Saiuł: Thunder, anthropomorphized. 192*
Saiynas: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man. [821] salalsi: Historical account; the term does not include ancestral myths or other personal property. [173] sa·thalamm: 1—Food distributed by the donor of a kusiut dance; the term is also applied to presents given instead of food. [431]
2—Food stored up for this purpose, or even for a meal.
sa·tlpsta: Cannibalistic incubus. [25] sa·tlpsmm: Presents given as "Food" by a bridegroom and his relatives to the bride's kinsmen when the latter come to his house on the wedding day. [585] sallskhdimut: Profession of kusiut executioner. [431] salukwalas: Object obtained by a shaman from a supernatural being and displayed by him. [463]
sami: Sockeye salmon. [825]
Sanaltpmuhlts Alquntam: One of the sons of the supreme god.
Sanunumlsin: Supernatural being who has the prerogative of scratching in the land above.
Sanuthm or Sanuthmdimut: One of the names of Mount Nuitalt as chief.
Sannimanas, "The Light Bringer": 1—One of Raven's names as chief.
2—Ancestral name of a Stuw man.
3—A celebrated Bella Coola hunter and chief.
sathx; vocative, sathi; vocative plural, sathawa·ts: Comrade, especially one engaged in an enterprise with the speaker.
sa·tla: Spoon-shaped river canoe.
Sattia: Village at point between North and South Bentinck Arms.
Sattyenuts: River flowing into the middle Bella Coola from the north.
Sa·ima: Death, anthropomorphized. [761] salolts: Whetstone, archaic. [412]
Sa·tsk': 1—Kimsquit River.
2—Village near the mouth of the river. [101]
Sa·tskamp: Inhabitants of the Kimsquit River valley.
satskwal·a: Raft.
Sa·tlamman·i: Shaman's name acquired from Death.
sawa: Pillow. [513]
sawadjut, "Pillowness": Kusiut ceremonial at which no call is present.
sayi, vocative, sayinas: Brother or sister younger than speaker, especially the youngest of a family. [601] Sayinas: Proper name of a youngest brother mentioned in an ancient story.
saxham: Bracken. [824] saxwinas: Tide flats. [829]
sakdjulk: Heart.
Salualasam: That part of Sanp[w] which did not fall in the crash at the beginning of time.
Samhal: Village on Rivers Inlet.
Samsiutan·i: Part of a peculiar repository.
samsamlkdimut, "Like Salmon": The so-called "Winter Salmon," probably steelhead salmon, obtained by Raven in the beginning of time.
sa'mista, "Resting Place": Limit of the sun's course. The word for December is connected with this. [805] sankwolam: Leader of musicians. [821]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

quantities of ducks and geese, and the inhabitants of the inland villages sometimes made hunting expeditions to the nesting places of wild-fowl in the lakes of the interior uplands. Although numbers of birds were sometimes killed in this way, they were never a steady article of diet. The same is true of grouse. Always plentiful, these birds were commonly killed, but never in large numbers.

The basis of the food supply was fish. The river teemed with salmon, which enabled the country to support its relatively large population. Spring, sockeye, hump-back, dog, and cohoe salmon, all entered the river in thousands during the spring and summer, while the steel-head could be caught throughout the year. They were taken in weirs and their flesh smoked for winter use. Throughout the year, salmon was the principal article of diet. Second in importance was the olachen, a fish somewhat resembling a herring, which entered the river in great numbers during April or May. They were taken in purse-like nets,[a] allowed to rot for ten days or two weeks, and then boiled. The grease was skimmed off and kept indefinitely to be used as a relish for other foods. It was always a sign of poverty if a person were obliged to eat berries without olachen grease. Trout and bull-heads were found in the river, but were not sufficiently plentiful to be of importance.

Although no form of agriculture was practised, the Bella Coola used vegetable food to a considerable extent. Berries were abundant; some were eaten raw, but many more were pounded into a pulpy mass and dried in the sun. Cakes prepared in this way kept indefinitely and formed one of the regular winter foods. The bark of the hemlock and cottonwood was eaten, as well as the roots of many plants. In recent years many of these have not been used, so that an investigator is apt to overlook their great importance in early times. Although useless for food, the cedar was the corner-stone of Bella Coola material culture. From its trunk were split out, with wedges, the wide planks which formed

[a] See Appendix A for a description of olachen fishing.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

171 lieved that all the Kitkatla chiefs were powerful, but Tsihcie
+ 556 was the greatest of all. It is said that one of his prerogatives was to exercise jus primae noctis whenever a Kitkatla was 622 married. Without question, tales of this chief's prowess have 829 become exaggerated in transmission, none the less they show that the Bella Coola realize the great importance of the northern chiefs. Concerning their nearer neighbours, the Bella Bella, the Bella Coola understand the way in which the members of a family combine to help their chief in the giving of presents. They say that the Bella Bella consider the Bella Coola practice of each one endeavouring to make himself a chief to be foolish in the extreme. Such is also said to be the opinion among the Kwakiutl, who support their contention that in Bella Coola all are chiefs, from the fact that flooring exists under the seats of all, whereas in Fort Rupert, their home, such occurs only beneath the seats of chiefs.

262 Corresponding to the extreme paucity of functions pos-
574 sessed by Bella Coola chiefs, their prerogatives are likewise 622 scanty. Indeed, they take their validated seats only during certain rites of the secret society connected with chiefs, at potlatches, and at ceremonial meals. These last occur whenever a deer or seal is killed; the latter is considered a great delicacy.[1] [225] Anyone can kill a seal, but it would be unthinkable for a Bella Coola to share its flesh with his immediate family only. The ● [252] animal is cleaned, the hole made by bullet or spear carefully plugged, and the carcass boiled whole in a large box. Mean-[203] while a herald (I, p. 244) summons the chiefs to the house where the successful hunter lives. If the meal is to consist merely of one small seal, only a few chiefs are invited, those of greatest influence through their possession of "strong" seats. When [562] several seals have been killed, the number invited is correspondingly larger, but no woman may partake unless she ranks

[1] This is said to have been a personal prerogative, not shared by all chiefs, and requiring validation by valuable presents.

[178] [2] Only traces of the rite described in this paragraph occur at the present time. In fact, the reservation of seal meat for chiefs alone was discontinued towards the close of the last century.

U:Mc'Dowalth E-9 (1922-1924)1948
NES Bellacoola NES

After bestowal of these presents, the sisi of the penultimate group of guests shakes his rattle, and exactly the same procedure is carried out by members of his party. They, too, give presents to X and the other Bella Coola chiefs. The same rites are carried out by each party of guests in the reverse order of their arrival. It is frequently near dawn before the first-comers have completed their dances and distribution of gifts. X then gives another meal to all, with no restriction on the choice of food. This concludes the night's ceremony, and the guests depart, except those who are staying in X's house. 556 *

THE FESTAIN: FIRST DAY

Considering the lengthy ceremonials of the preceding evening, it is not surprising that on this day no one stirs early. The guests receive their breakfast in the houses where they are accommodated, and meanwhile a number of young men gather in X's house to assist in the preparation of food for the main meal of the day. During the previous night a large amount of smoked mountain goat has been put in water to soak. This is now placed in a number of food-boxes, ready for distribution, water is added and hot stones lifted in to bring it to a boil. When the water comes to the boil, mountain goat grease is added, and then huckleberries; it is usually about two o'clock in the afternoon before the meal is ready. The guests are summoned and the food given them, the chiefs, as usual, receiving more than those of lower rank. After eating they disperse to await the evening rites. [251] [252] [254]

It was impossible to obtain an accurate account of the ritual carried out on the evening of this, the first day of the potlatch proper. The ceremonial was of less importance than those preceding and following, and it has long fallen into disuse. The guests take up their accustomed places, and the Bella Coola members of the sumi range themselves near them and behind the fire. The corners near the door are occupied by non-members of the society. The singers beat out two of [112] 556 * 576 [535]

b:McDowell E-5 (1922-1924)948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

grease have been placed in readiness. X selects as many youths as the number on whom he intends to confer the names which have already been announced and validated among the Bella Coola, but are now to be made known to the foreign guests. He seats the lads, who are to substitute for the initiates, on the various boxes. Everybody understands that these are merely representatives. X requests two chiefs to act as his announcers, choosing two with good voices and abundant self-confidence. To one of these X whispers the xaxa name of one of the initiates. 556* 575 553

"His name is now——" calls out the announcer, pointing to one of the substitutes, and the listeners readily recognize the initiate intended, from the use, in conjunction with his new designation, of his well-known ancestral name. The heralds repeat the new name with the usual badinage, so that it becomes well known to all present. In like manner the xaxa name given to each initiate is publicly announced. The substitutes receive no advantage from their part in the proceedings. [203]

Then the lamps are opened and red elderberries poured into the canoes in front of the guests. Stones are provided with which the visitors pound the fruit into pulp which they proceed to mix with their hands, as clachan grease and cranberries are added. Then X's helpers distribute spoons and the feast commences. All start to eat, but after an interval one of the leading Bella Coola chiefs strikes the side of his canoe with a spoon, as a signal that all must stop. X has several dishes in readiness. If he is wealthy some of these will be carved in the shape of beaver, eagle, or other form in which an ancestor appeared. These dishes are filled with the food which all have been eating and then placed before the principal chiefs, who thus have a second supply. At this point the singers begin to beat out an ancient song of the type known as ne-ne. Each of these has been handed down from the distant past, when some chief, ancestor of X, had it composed for himself as a potlatch. The theme is always about the form or fame of his 556* 554 [252] 415 539 539 556* [171]

[The Breaker Dance]

* 575 * 796 [424] tsnix. X is one of the few ɬaɬaciat having the prerogative of using supernatural singers. The evening's ceremony concludes in the usual fashion.

Until the departure of his call, X is liable to fits of frenzy so that on both qulow and ndacam he often visits every house and breaks utensils, though his guardians appear to be making every effort to restrain him. Breakers, irrespective of their [424] exact prerogative, are enabled to act in any unusual manner they desire, and strive to excel in peculiar behaviour. A favourite trick is to smear themselves with excrement, either real or imitation. It is difficult to over-estimate the enormous [554] prestige which such actions call forth in the eyes of the uninitiated, to whom it appears that the coming of a call entirely [787] alters the mentality of the recipient, a belief which the ɬaɬaciat [828] make every effort to maintain. Nothing further need be said of either qulow or the preliminaries of ndacam, both of which follow the usual pattern.

* 575 * 796 781 When the uninitiated are admitted to X's house on ndacam evening, they are filled with wonder at the sight of the masked singers, of ɬawiłkwalalc Ałqunim, and of the four supernatural Breakers who move wildly to and fro as the songs are sung, as if only the eagle down which the ɬaɬaciat blow upon them restrains them from destroying property. The fluent Ant'ikwalaic makes the most of her opportunity to describe the wonders which are before their eyes. Then the uninitiated are told that it will be safer for them to withdraw, and hurry out. Presently they are startled to hear the sound of people moving, and the four supernatural Breakers, followed by all the ɬaɬaciat, leave the house and proceed to the lowest one in the village. Around the fire go the masked four, picking up stones and hurling them at any destructible property. Most [252] houses contain a number of stones which have been used in [578] boiling liquids, so that there is no lack of missiles. Ɬaɬaciat [685] who are wise take care to hide or remove valuable property before this inroad begins, since the wearers of the masks take advantage of the opportunity to destroy the goods of those

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

procession of supernatural beings according to X's choice. 575*
The proceedings terminate in the same way as those described 796* in the Stomach-Cutting dance.

X must obey the customary restrictions on his movements for the rest of the ceremonial season, and also remain in partial concealment for the summer following. The fiction circulated is that he is still suffering from the after-effects of decapitation. He is legally entitled to perform any other kwistem rite during the following winter, but it is most unusual for a man to do so on successive seasons. [424]

The Drowning Dance

In a third kwistem dance the performer appears to drown. X carried out this ceremonial during the third winter after his decapitation, but as usual it will be convenient to describe the ritual in the present tense.

During the summer, as for the Beheading dance, he obtains permission from the marshals. With the latter present, he then arranges with the singers and the carpenters to compose songs of the usual kwistem type and to prepare a mask. Since X had preserved the mask used at the time of his decapitation, it was not necessary to have one made. The intending dancer borrows from a kwistem friend one of the large boxes used for boiling olachen and this is taken in secret to some lonely spot in the forest. The carpenters cut a hole in the bottom and smear the edges with grease and dirt to conceal the aperture; skin hinges are fastened to one side of the movable section so that it can be opened easily and quickly. They also make a wooden framework the size and shape of X's body, to which the portrait-mask is attached to give a realistic representation of the man himself. [415] [252]

Nothing more can be done until near the winter solstice when the carpenters cut a hole in the floor of X's house, immediately behind the fire, and fasten the section removed with skin hinges to make a trap-door. Then the carpenters, marshals, singers, and other influential kwistem meet some evening

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

226 about a foot of the surface. In the same slow manner a second stake is driven in, about ten feet from the first, and in such a position that the main force of the current would strike at right angles a line drawn between the two. Then two more stakes are placed in position, slightly below the first pair, and nearer together, as shown in the diagram (Figure 3). The posts are often driven before the main run of the fish, and the fixing of the net delayed until that time. It is fastened to the four stakes, with its open end, which faces upstream, forming a rough oval, ten feet wide, of which the lower side rests on the bottom and the upper is at the surface. The outer stakes hold the upper edge, the inner ones secure the lower brim. The olachen are slow-swimming fish which work their way upstream with the rising tide, and, when it turns, drift back into the net. Once within the opening, they lack strength to drive forward against current and tide, and are forced into the closed bottom, floating downstream, in thousands. At the peak of the season, a net is often extended to its full dimensions with a solid mass of fish, throwing a tremendous strain on supports and mesh-work alike. During the day, the mouth is closed with a cross-piece, nuxtnuitsta, to prevent floating objects from drifting within and damaging it, and opened during the night at whatever hour the tide turns.

FIG. 3. Diagram showing position of the stakes supporting an olachen net.

Early in the morning begins the landing of the fish. The partners paddle out to the bottom of their net and, with considerable exertion, lift it into the canoe. A cord is tied around the bellied mass, cutting off a section, and the end is opened so that the fish from it fall into the bottom of the craft. Another part is dealt with in the same manner, then a third, and so in succession until the gleaming olachen are piled so deeply that no more can be loaded with safety. Sometimes two or three loads, each of many thousands, are taken from a single net. The partners slowly pole to shore where, at the present time, their wives and children wait to unload the canoe. The fish are packed into baskets, carried on the back [82] with the aid of a tump-line, and taken to pits which have been prepared 26 ten to fifteen feet from the bank. These are three or four feet deep, lined 51 with planks, and with their bottoms covered with evergreen boughs. The olachen are emptied into these holes, which are covered with more planks when full. If more fish are landed than can be handled conveniently in this manner, they are laid on branches spread on the ground, and a low wall of planks built up around them. Although the main run lasts for only three or four days, the olachen are so numerous that each group of partners is able to fill several of these storage pits.

52 Though most of the catch is thus disposed of, there is always enough

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

for treatment in other ways. Some are fried immediately, but the Bella Coola think they lack flavour, although most white men regard them as delicious. Many hundreds are dried for winter use in one of the following methods: 252 251

(A) Cedar-sticks, each about three feet in length, are split from the solid stem and smoothed down to a diameter of about one-half inch. One of these is passed through the gills and mouth of one fish after another until the rod is filled with a row of olachen, their tails hanging downwards. Dozens of these sticks are suspended horizontally over the central fire in a house, or, in brilliant sunshine, hung in the open. When dried to a certain extent, they are stored in the upper parts of the houses where the process continues whenever a fire is lit. When so treated they keep almost indefinitely.

(B) Narrow strips, each four to five feet in length, of flexible cedar-bark, are prepared by the women. The fisherman takes the ends of two of these, ties one around a fish's head, and the other around its tail. Another olachen is tied parallel to the first, and then others, until the two cords are supporting thirty to forty fish, each separated by about one inch. The middle of the strings is laid across a horizontal bar above a fire or in the open, and the process of drying continues as in the last method. The fish not infrequently catch fire if a large blaze is built up in a house, so careful people remove their olachen before a feast or other celebration.

Though dried olachen provide a useful article for winter diet, the fish are chiefly valued for their grease, sluk', whch is used as a condiment with all kinds of berries. It is sometimes extracted from the fresh fish, but the Bella Coola consider this to be tasteless and prefer to wait until the olachen have remained in the pits for ten days to two weeks. Warm weather hastens the process, but in any case nothing is done until the disgusting smell has penetrated for miles, proving that putrefaction is well advanced. In former times, all boiling was done with hot stones, but at present boxes with iron bottoms are used as kettles. These are of various shapes and sizes, an average being, perhaps, four feet long, three feet wide, and eighteen inches deep. These are set on fireplaces which vary according to the ingenuity of the refiner. Some are excavated in the river bank, lined with stones set in clay, and fitted at the inner end with an old stovepipe to provide draught for the miniature furnace. The box-kettle is placed on the ground over the excavation and the cook pours in water. Then his wife, children, and friends bring the putrid fish, which they ladle in until only a few inches of water are visible. A slow fire is built beneath, and, as the mixture begins to boil, the cook stirs it with a five-foot stick having a slightly flattened blade. Presently the grease begins to rise to the surface whence it is skimmed off and placed in recep-

258 [262] [263] [252] [415] [354] [415]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

Alalkmktmm: Supernatural being sent by Smaien·a to meet Neakgnm.

alalqo·xi, "One Who Is a Guest": The term applied to a youth whose father, a chief, will certainly give a potlatch to start him on the path to social importance though he has not yet done so. Such a lad is served ceremoniously at every feast. [556]

Ālhlxān·i: Abalone-shell covered stick used by one of the first settlers in the beginning of time.

Alhlxān·iatliax: One of the first women to settle at Tāl·io in the beginning of time.

aldinnki: Word of uncertain meaning often appended to lnxtāmem as complete term for the first night of a kusiut dance. [575]

aliknlxmm, "A Dragging Across" (as one does with a heavy log): The term applied to the transmission of a name from a wife to her husband either at marriage or later, when being repurchased. [425] [553]

aljkwis: Toasted food of any kind. [262]

Ālilixwuman: Ancestral name of a Stalx man.

alitiq': Perforated, adjective. [252]

alimusnām: Those who perform to assist marriage dancers.

Ālimalwalaix: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.

Al·imlsaix: One of the first men to settle at Tāl·io in the beginning of time.

alipāxlits, "Weapons of War": The term applied to the presents distributed by the groom and his relatives to the bride and hers prior to entering her house. [585] [431]

alipoalm: Gifts given in secret, soon after betrothal, by the father of the future groom to the father of the future bride. [584] alipotlām: Marshal.

Ālipmān·i: Immoral supernatural woman; synonym for Szimszimdi.

Alixmotusaix: One of the men who came to earth at Mount Tsnisi in the beginning of time.

Āl·likul: Totem-pole erected by the first settlers at Stalx in the beginning of time.

alkkul: Lying position with legs close together such as is maintained for four days by an adolescent girl, and also by a widow or a widower. [516] alq: Sisaek song in fast time.

alt: Rapid beating of time during which a dancer does not try to move his feet in rhythm with it. [533] [535] alumus: Kusiut dancer whose disguise becomes apparent through an accident.

Ālt'pmān·a: Daughter of the first settlers at Sātlia in the beginning of time.

alunlis: Synonym for lnxmdjat; one of the days of a potlatch, probably that following the appearance of a masked representation of the deceased. [556] alutlis: 1—Night-time.

2—That part of a Cannibal dance when songs are prepared in the middle of the night.

alx: Come, imperative singular.

Ālxcse: 1—One of Smaian's sons in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first women to settle at Nawalst in the beginning of time.

ālul·ilaix: Central seat behind the fire.

ālulijalx: Hammer with handle for pounding stakes for fish-nets. [412]

Ālklumlalxa: Mountain on north side of the lower Bella Coola.

ālklulum: One who estimates the passage of time by watching the movements of the sun. [805]

Ālnx·lpaman, "The Devourer of Meat Killed by Another": Term used by hunters to Wolf. [825]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

hätsän: Tail. 192*
hätskitl: Ants.
hax: Black hawthorn. [825]
Kalän-i: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man. [824] Kamilkän: Ancestral name of the wife of Swaky who was changed to stone in the beginning of time.
hanki: Region.
Kapsalopst: Kitlobe chief living in the beginning of time.
hasäly: 1—Marriage, properly arranged and legalized. [585]
2—The actual wedding day.
Kawulän-i: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit woman.[1]
kolai: Bark bucket for holding liquids. [415]
kolämkodjut: The seeking of assistance from a man who owns a curing repository.
kolämkusnäm: Investment-present, i.e., one for which a return is expected. [426] kolusta: Back-room in which nusak initiates and others are concealed.
kolän: Woman during catamenia. [431] koluta, "What Was Sent Down": Intangible possession, such as a myth or a prerogative, inherited from the distant past, usually from the coming to earth of the first settlers in the beginning of time. [424]
komapsta: Wooden tongs such as are used for lifting hot stones. [412] kolämkdjut ola kwanäyste: Kusiotem rite in which the performer appears to be drowned.
kul-aix or kul-ätl, "The Gainer": One who has been initiated as a member of the kusiut society but has not yet danced, especially one admitted through unauthorized knowledge or through successful participation in either a kusiotem or a Mystery dance. [575] kulul, "Rendered Incapable of Returning": Said of an uninitiated person who is alleged to have stumbled on a repository.
Koldup: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
kustaa: The dormant waiting for power by a shaman who, having had one visitation, awaits further manifestations before displaying his ability. [756] kipa, vocative, kipaa: Grandmother. [601] kika-tsam-an-i: Ceremonial marriage of a female child to an adult man.
Ki'laiakat: Name given to their canoe by the first settlers at Stuax in the beginning of time.
Kilalsamaus, "The Wise One": One of Raven's names as chief.
Kimilkän: One of the first women to settle at Alpalat in the beginning of time.
Kina'o: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
kimaw: 1—Crab. [825]
2—Enormous crab-like creature, alleged to be found far in the forest.
Kipaka: Name of a shaman who received his power from ghosts. [824]
kipi: Red elderberry.
kipla: Wooden tweezers used in the pounding of cedar-bark. [413]
kis: Unidentified plant. [252]
kisam: To toast dried salmon.
kislamatla: Supported, in the sense of held in place by physical assistance.
Kislgmatl: Locality on Dean Channel, west of Sarwilk.
Ki'ca: Place on south side of North Bentinck Arm, about one-quarter mile from its head.

[1]This name appears to be an entirely different word from Kalän-i.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192

qmāthnelp: The dancing, by several of his associates, to "help" a kuxlut performer.
Qnumi: Undefined locality in the Bella Bella area.
Qo: Mountain above Stuix.
[777] qokān-i: Supernatural bird, bringer of good luck.
[825] Qolkaiul: Locality near the head of Dean Channel.
qolon: 1—Beaver.
2—Nuxāxāmq name of a Kimsquit man.
Qolesti: Man mentioned in a song.
Qolliaohmq: Kuxlut name of a Stuix man with prerogative of biting himself.
qolulik: The location in a house taken by a wife when ceremonially seated behind her husband.
Qolxwliutl: Influential Nuxālit chief who died about 1910.
Qomāmāwala: Ancestral name of a Stuix chief; the designation may be of Kwakiutl origin.
Qomxua: 1—One of the nine supernatural beings.
2—White person.
3—Kuxlut name of a Kimsquit woman.
qomxiqwul: Clean, dry skull.
qomqmai-i: Stump, in the language of Raven.
Qomqma: 1—Supernatural being, lord of the under-sea world.
2—Ancestral name of a Qomqo-ti man.
Qomo'sola: Man living in Bella Bella in early times.
Qomotia: Ancestral name of a Tsimaif woman.
[534] qome-ti: Large, cone-shaped whistle used in xaxak rites.
Qomqo-ti, "Salty!": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
qoqai: To drift over, of smoke.
Qoqmqmāw-a: Name conferred on their sister by the first settlers at Stuix in the beginning of time.
[252] qopsta: Framework of split sticks for toasting salmon.
[534] qopia: Drum.
Qoqmai: One of the first men to settle at Nuxālit in the beginning of time.
Qoqqul: Bella Bella village.
qota: Kwakiutl term for "eagle down" presents.
qotlum: Third day of a kuxlut dance.
Qotlualis: Harbour on Labouchere Channel.
Qotlualis: Settlement in the Carrier country.
[581] qoxlum, "A Washing of the Hands": Term used to describe a marriage arranged by the offending party to settle a feud.
[825] qoxlik: Wolverine.
[527] qoxlāsis dimmi, "A Washing to Free from Taint": Term applied to a ceremony to clear the path of the children when a husband has married a slave wife or niece nurse.
Qwai: 1—One of the names of Raven as chief.
2—Tlaiqolum name of a Kimsquit man.
3—Kuxalt name of a Kimsquit man.
Qwāmaus: Supernatural woman from whom the Carpenters are said to have derived their skill in the beginning of time.
Qwaslas-i: 1—Kuxlut name of a Tsimaif man.
2—Kuxlut name of a Kimsquit man.
[825] qwaus: White swan.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[765] skwanat: 1—Memorial potlatch.
2—Mourning song.
3—The wailing of mourners at a grave.

[763] Skwanat-a-a, "The Weeper": Female supernatural being whose appearance indicates the death of a chief.

skwanatnkusis: Processional kusiut prerogative consisting of the right to sing of Snitmdu-a during kusiotem dances.

skwatsta: Name.

Skwo-ts: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola woman.

[824] Sla-kl: Whitewater River, the southern fork of the Bella Coola.

slaos: Long grass suitable for pasturage.

[252] slaqet'i: Smoked spring salmon with the bone removed.

slaxit: Many, adjective.

[554] slaxmidjut, "The One with Many Descendants": Term used to describe an elderly man with many children and grandchildren.

Sla-: Man mentioned in an ancient story.

[601] sleli: Game, resembling a tug-of-war, played with wooden loops and spears.

slemts, vocative, slemtskais: Grandchild; the vocative indicates endearment.

[578] slewanis: The deposition of eagle down on the heads of those quarrelling to pacify them.

sli-a: Gall bladder.

slqstm: 1—Breathing.
2—Sound of a nsaak whistle, referred to as the breathing of Mulakila.

slsk': Olachen grease.

Sluklwaily: 1—Ancient village in the upper Bella Coola valley.
[778] 2—Place of petrified power at site of ancient village.
3—Semi-anthropomorphized being responsible for power in this locality.

Slilm: Supernatural being resident at the mouth of every river.

slkmsta: The voice.

[824] slkwal: Dried elderberries.

slukwala: 1—Shaman-like power, as brought by the first people in the beginning of time.
2—Bella Coola woman.

[821] slulqam: Eclipse.

slwanmlila': 1—One who keeps in touch with a concealed Cannibal.
[424] 2—One who has the inherited right to assist kusiut or nsaak dancers; this prerogative occurs in Kimsquit only.

Smaielila: One of the names of the supreme god.

Smaielala: One of the names of the supreme god.

Smaiu-a: 1—Synonym for Slexlekwaily, q.v.
2—Ancestral name of a Bella Coola woman.

[424] smalsaim: A possession, such as a myth or a prerogative, inherited from the distant past, usually from the coming to earth of the first people in the beginning of time.

smlwalkwaily: Debris from cones eaten by squirrels.

Smnem, "The First": One of the first men to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.

Smnmeli: Man mentioned in an origin myth of a southern locality.

snit-ung, vocative, snit-ungs: Friends.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

for treatment in other ways. Some are fried immediately, but the Bella Coola think they lack flavour, although most white men regard them as delicious. Many hundreds are dried for winter use in one of the following methods: 252 251

(A) Cedar-sticks, each about three feet in length, are split from the solid stem and smoothed down to a diameter of about one-half inch. One of these is passed through the gills and mouth of one fish after another until the rod is filled with a row of olachen, their tails hanging downwards. Dozens of these sticks are suspended horizontally over the central fire in a house, or, in brilliant sunshine, hung in the open. When dried to a certain extent, they are stored in the upper parts of the houses where the process continues whenever a fire is lit. When so treated they keep almost indefinitely.

(B) Narrow strips, each four to five feet in length, of flexible cedar-bark, are prepared by the women. The fisherman takes the ends of two of these, ties one around a fish's head, and the other around its tail. Another olachen is tied parallel to the first, and then others, until the two cords are supporting thirty to forty fish, each separated by about one inch. The middle of the strings is laid across a horizontal bar above a fire or in the open, and the process of drying continues as in the last method. The fish not infrequently catch fire if a large blaze is built up in a house, so careful people remove their olachen before a feast or other celebration.

Though dried olachen provide a useful article for winter diet, the fish are chiefly valued for their grease, sluk[1], which is used as a condiment with all kinds of berries. It is sometimes extracted from the fresh fish, but the Bella Coola consider this to be tasteless and prefer to wait until the olachen have remained in the pits for ten days to two weeks. Warm weather hastens the process, but in any case nothing is done until the disgusting smell has penetrated for miles, proving that putrefaction is well advanced. In former times, all boiling was done with hot stones, but at present boxes with iron bottoms are used as kettles. These are of various shapes and sizes, an average being, perhaps, four feet long, three feet wide, and eighteen inches deep. These are set on fireplaces which vary according to the ingenuity of the refiner. Some are excavated in the river bank, lined with stones set in clay, and fitted at the inner end with an old stovepipe to provide draught for the miniature furnace. The box-kettle is placed on the ground over the excavation and the cook pours in water. Then his wife, children, and friends bring the putrid fish, which they ladle in until only a few inches of water are visible. A slow fire is built beneath, and, as the mixture begins to boil, the cook stirs it with a five-foot stick having a slightly flattened blade. Presently the grease begins to rise to the surface whence it is skimmed off and placed in recep-

258 [262] [263] [252] [415] [354] [415]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

258 tacles; metal coal-oil cans are found convenient for this purpose and have [41.5] almost replaced watertight boxes. After repeated stirrings and skimmings, all that remains is a mass of putrid flesh, bearing no resemblance [171] whatever to the fish from which it came. The Kitlobe are said to compress this into cakes for eating, but the Bella Coola throw it away. Some [415] cooks bail out the dregs by hand, but many of the box-kettles have a bung-hole at the bottom which, when opened, allows the semi-liquid remains to flow out into a rough trough leading to the river. As soon as one batch of olachen has thus been disposed of, another is boiled and [439] refined in the same way. The grease keeps indefinitely and is a useful [262] article of barter with the Carriers as well as a staple of Bella Coola diet.
Although the preparation removes much of its offensive odour, olachen grease has an unpleasant taste to the white man.

258 During the boiling, all other activities are suspended and the people 476 spend practically all their time on the river bank. If the fish are allowed to rot too long, much of the grease is lost, so men, women, and children are pressed into service to make the most of the short period. The men rise at dawn to start the fires on the bank, the women and children follow with food, and for several days the whole village camps, as if on a picnic, amid an indescribably foul smell that almost sickens anyone passing within hundreds of yards. There are tasks for everyone; the fish must be carried from the pits to the furnaces, wood must be brought, the fires stoked, the kettles stirred, the grease carried away, the fireplaces repaired, food cooked, and a hundred other chores. It is a scene of great activity, carried on with good humour and merriment, for the Bella Coola realize that they are storing up luxuries for the following winter. Even the dogs seem to share the general excitement, and do not disdain to eat the dregs from the kettles, which, when emptied into the river, attract numerous trout and gulls, to the joy of small boys with hunting desires.

BELLA COOLA CANOES

501 Although travel and transport by water is still as vital to the Bella [505] Coola as it was to their fathers, the motor-boat is fast replacing the canoe, and the science of manufacturing their own craft is being lost. In former times several types were constructed, but only one of these is still employed —the spoon canoe, sá ola, used on rivers (see Plate 21). These vary from twenty to thirty feet or more in length, and are about four feet wide;
they are without keels, and there is no difference between the bow and stern. Although one man can handle such a craft in smooth water, at 502 least two are required for a journey of any length, and four is the usual crew. The captain, who is either the best waterman or the one most familiar with the route, stands in the stern, the second in command in

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

782 next day the weather was fine. This particular method of 424 praying had been learnt by one of his ancestors in the begin-821 ning of time, and was afterwards transmitted in his family.
[785] With the coming of the white man and consequent decay of [177] customs, it has not been exercised since the death of the grand-father of the man from whom the information was obtained.

SACRIFICE

782 It might be expected that a clear division should be made between the subjects of prayer and sacrifice, but in practice they merge into one another. A mountain goat hunter, when camped near a glacier which he knows to be the haunt of some dreaded supernatural being, asks help from him. He wears [824] dyed and undyed cedar-bark decorations to make his request more ceremonious, and after the prayer throws them into the fire, saying:

"Please accept these, supernatural one," thus making an offering to supplement his verbal petition.

If he is even more cautious, or eager not to offend any [824] supernatural being in the vicinity, he throws on the fire tufts [825] of cedar-bark, eagle down, and scraps of food as well. Whether [26] or not the objects thus destroyed by the flames reach the being to whom the request has been made, is a matter upon which the Bella Coola do not theorize; but the generosity and self-denial of the donor is appreciated, and a favour is often granted in return. A man who frequently hears in his dreams the voice of some supernatural being, knows that it is taking an interest in his doings and endeavours to propitiate it, by placing on a fire tithits of any food he has obtained, saying at the same time:

"W'ai, wai, wai," "More, more, more," that is, "May I receive more of the same."

A foolish person fails to show his appreciation of favours received, but a wise man never forgets to do so.

Likewise a person is careful to propitiate supernatural [502] powers when in peril. Both at Kwatis and at Mesatche Nose, [139] [756]

I:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

621 623 ters, and the village constitutes a unit for all dances; in fact [535] this ceremonial unity is its most important function.

[796] With the exception of a few villages built on the seashore, each Bella Coola settlement consists of a row of houses on the 361 river bank. These are of the usual rectangular, plank-built [184] type typical of the North-West Coast. In front of them [342] stretches a sidewalk, usually supported by piles on the side nearest the river to make it level. The houses, too, in many [171] cases have piles beneath their front ends, made necessary by the steep slope of the bank. In large villages there may be two rows of houses, behind and above one another. Usually there [487] is a rough path parallel to the row of houses at the very edge of the river. The number of houses varies; before the smallpox [164] epidemic some villages contained as many as thirty or forty, others, only two or three. There is no definite arrangement of the houses; anyone may build where there is a vacant space. [433] Much the same arrangement occurs in the sea-coast villages, each of which depends for its main sustenance on an ocean fish-trap, as the river villages depend on a salmon-weir.

342 The central part of each house is occupied by a large fire, [354] often sunk a considerable distance below the level of the floor, and around this is an open space free to all. Toward the side-walls are raised the partitions, forming bedrooms for the different families, or for different members of one. In many cases the flooring is removed in three or four parts of the house for small fires on which different groups cook, the central fire being used for heating and for more important meals. The [572] number of families occupying a house depends on its size; an [622] important chief, with many relatives, often builds an enormous house which is occupied by ten or more families; smaller houses contain only two or three. Life in the larger houses is free and open; people are constantly passing in and out, and any- [261] one present when food is being distributed is given a share as a matter of course. Most of the houses are decorated with [353] carved upright posts and paintings on the beams and back-wall. [535] A door through the latter leads to the back-room, so important in dances.

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

844 fessional midwives. The child is washed in warm water. For ten days [846] the mother must remain in this hut. Father and mother must not go [825] near the room for a year (according to Nuak'xla'xta, for ten days), else the salmon would take offence.

553 The child is soon given its first name. On this occasion the whole [852] tribe is invited to a feast, the name is made public, and the guests receive [556] small presents. The child retains this name until it becomes a member of the Kû'siût, when it is given its Kû'siût name. This ceremony takes place after puberty has been reached. About this period the young man gives his first potlatch and assumes the Qê'mtsica name.

881 When a girl reaches puberty she must stay in the shed which serves as her bedroom, where she has a separate fireplace. She is not allowed to descend to the main part of the house, and must not sit by the fire of the family. For four days she must remain motionless in a sitting posture. She fasts during the daytime, but is allowed a little food and drink at a very early hour in the morning. After this term she may leave her room, but only through a separate opening. She must not yet
[292] come to the main room. When leaving the house she wears a large hat, [821] which protects her face against the rays of the sun. It is believed that if the sun should shine on her face her eyes would suffer. She may pick berries on the hills, but must not come near the river or sea for a whole year. She must not eat fresh salmon, else she would lose [265] her senses, or her mouth would be transformed into a long beak. She [261] must not chew gum or eat snow (see Fifth Report of Committee, 1889, p. 538).

584 If a young man wishes to marry a girl he goes, surrounded by his [431] friends, to the house of the girl's father and states his intention. His friends carry food and presents, and if the father accepts the suit he sends out a young man, who receives the food and presents and carries them into the house. Sometimes the father does not accept the offer at once. In such cases the young man may repeat the same ceremony until he is finally rejected or accepted. After the time of the marriage has [527] been agreed upon between the contracting parties, and the day preceding the marriage has arrived, the young man invites all the people to a feast, during which he states that he is to be married on the following day. He asks a number of men, generally from twenty to thirty, and four
[302] women to assist him. On the following forenoon they assemble, and accompany the bridegroom to the girl's house. They stay outside, and
585 four of the men dance. All of them have their faces painted red. Finally they enter, and the bridegroom gives a large amount of property to the girl's father. Then the girl leaves her parents and goes to the bridegroom, bringing him also a large amount of property which has been [431] given to her for this purpose by her parents and relatives. He in turn gives her blankets and other apparel of the best quality, and distributes presents among her relatives. This is repeated after some time. All he has given to his bride and her relatives is repaid to him with interest. A rich girl will repay twice or thrice times the amount given by the man. At the time of the marriage the bride's father may promise the groom to give him his Gîsax'ix secrets as soon as the pair have their first child.
[851] The children may belong to the father's or mother's gens, as the parents may choose.

586 In case of a separation the wife refunds the amount of purchase-money. The children may stay with either parent, or part of them may

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

133 tains. From each pocket between these mountains an ice-
137 cold affluent comes swirling down to the main river. The predominant tree in the river valleys is the cedar* which in many cases attains great girth and height. Cottonwoods flourish in places, and everywhere there is an almost impenetrable undergrowth of devil's club, berry bushes, and other shrubbery of almost tropical density. On the lower slopes of the mountains, moss-festooned pines and spruces are the most common trees, gradually becoming smaller and fewer until the 133 barren peaks are reached. The mountains rise so precipitously that their snowcaps and glaciers seem to overhang the valley, a narrow ribbon of green winding far below. The range of vision from the bank of the river is limited by the all-encircling mountains. Here and there a distant vista opens up to expose peak after peak, but on the whole there is a feeling of confinement, in contrast with the open wastes of the upper country where the Bella Coola rises. Mountains, forests, flowing water, these are the three dominant impressions of the country (see Plate 6).

136 The mammals of central British Columbia, although comparatively common, have never been of primary importance. [291] The marten, the wolverine, the lynx, and bears, both black and grizzly, were formerly hunted for their skins to serve as [262] cloaks. Deer were killed whenever possible, but formed a negligible item of diet. The beaver also was prized for its [439] flesh. The skins of moose and caribou were traded from the Carrier Indians, but neither of these animals was found in the [218] Bella Coola area. The mammal of greatest economic importance was the mountain goat, the wool of which was woven into [239] blankets. Smoked goat meat was formerly found in every [251] house and was almost the only flesh available during the winter. Small game was abundant, but seals were a luxury. [262] Neither were birds of great importance to the Bella Coola. [223] Members of the tribe resident near the sea-coast used to kill quantities of ducks and geese, and the inhabitants of the inland villages sometimes made hunting expeditions to the nesting places of wild-fowl in the lakes of the interior uplands. Although numbers of birds were sometimes killed in this way, they were never a steady article of diet. The same is true of grouse. Always plentiful, these birds were commonly killed, but never in large numbers.

*Appendix C contains a glossary of the scientific names of the flora and fauna mentioned in this monograph.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

The basis of the food supply was fish. The river teemed with salmon, which enabled the country to support its relatively large population. Spring, sockeye, hump-back, dog, and cohoe salmon, all entered the river in thousands during the spring and summer, while the steel-head could be caught throughout the year. They were taken in weirs and their flesh smoked for winter use. Throughout the year, salmon was the principal article of diet. Second in importance was the olachen, a fish somewhat resembling a herring, which entered the river in great numbers during April or May. They were taken in purse-like nets,[6] allowed to rot for ten days or two weeks, and then boiled. The grease was skimmed off and kept indefinitely to be used as a relish for other foods. It was always a sign of poverty if a person were obliged to eat berries without olachen grease. Trout and bull-heads were found in the river, but were not sufficiently plentiful to be of importance.

Although no form of agriculture was practised, the Bella Coola used vegetable food to a considerable extent. Berries were abundant; some were eaten raw, but many more were pounded into a pulpy mass and dried in the sun. Cakes prepared in this way kept indefinitely and formed one of the regular winter foods. The bark of the hemlock and cottonwood was eaten, as well as the roots of many plants. In recent years many of these have not been used, so that an investigator is apt to overlook their great importance in early times. Although useless for food, the cedar was the corner-stone of Bella Coola material culture. From its trunk were split out, with wedges, the wide planks which formed

[6] See Appendix A for a description of olachen fishing.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

[775] to the land above whence, in course of time, it comes down to [774] earth again to reanimate a new body." Consequently, the success of a hunter does not indicate his mastery over an [785] animal so much as the latter's good-will in allowing itself to be slain by one who has pleased him by ceremonial chastity (I, p. 110), or by one who has been endowed with skill by some other supernatural being. Men are accordingly careful to obey the wishes of their quarry. Long ago, a mountain goat told a shaman that he and his friends liked soot, so a hunter who has killed one always smears two bands of soot across its face from the right eye to the left side of the mouth. Another shaman was told by a bear never to use [411] owl-feathered arrows since none of his fellows killed with such would return. Plumes of other birds have since been used, preferably those of mallard ducks. Sometimes the wishes of an animal require considerable ritual. For example, when a bear is killed, the carcass is stretched upon neatly arranged evergreen boughs and skinned. The hunter reverses the pelt so that the tail lies near the neck, with the whole hanging loosely over the body. He pats it four times, as if pressing the skin back into place, and says:

[789] "Please don't linger. Go home and return," or,

"Please come to me tomorrow. Tell your brothers, your sisters, your uncles, your aunts and your other relations to come to me."

Should this be omitted, the animal is likely to stand up, skinless, shake itself, causing the pelt to return to its place, and run away. Yearling mountain goats are especially prone to do this, as already mentioned. Even if an animal does not show its resentment by escaping in this way, it often refuses to return to earth unless the proper rites have been performed over its carcass.

[262] Bears have another aversion: they do not like to be eaten by men. So the hunter leaves the skinned body for wolves and eagles when he invites to devour it. In so doing, he does not address them by their usual names, but calls Wolf, Ilkwa-i-gamen, "The Devourer of Meat Which He Does Not Kill," that is, "The Biting Scavenger"; and Eagle, Acatlaiyaw-dawnm, "The Constant Eater," that is, "The One Who Eats before He Is Hungry." Next morning the fish has been devoured and the hunter believes his guests have eaten it. Animals and birds, being supernatural, can hear the words of mortals and read their thoughts. The significance of these actions is that animals have the power to conceal themselves, so a hunter must gain their favour before he can hope to succeed. Belief in the efficacy of such customs as these is rapidly falling into decay and bear meat is now often eaten, but the skull is carefully placed in an evergreen tree near where the animal is slain, so that it may come back to life.

[185] *There are doubters in Bella Coola as in every other community, and several of the older men express disbelief in the immortality of animals.

1:96 Overnight E-5 (922-1924)768
NEA Bellacoola NES

Fish, likewise, are immortal. In autumn the streams are choked with dead and dying salmon, but the Bella Coola know that they are not really dead, they have merely shed their worthless blankets in accordance with Algantlin's decrees. At that season of the year he causes the rivers to rise so that they will sweep away these useless and outworn cloaks.

Although the salmon, from the kindness of their hearts, allow human beings to feast on their blankets, yet they have certain likes and dislikes which are carefully observed. From the time the first spring salmon appear (I, pp. 770-780) until the rising of the July moon, women are not allowed to eat them or to go near the river. Men may eat the fish, but instead of throwing the bones to dogs, they carefully return them to the river saying:

"These come back tomorrow."

If this is inconvenient, bones can be thrown into the woods with impunity.

Salmon, like men and animals, live a human-like existence in their homes far beneath the surface of the ocean. They lack and desire earthly objects, especially pounded cedar-bark (see Appendix A) to use as sponges for their children, so the Bella Coola throw pieces of it and maple down on the water.

S:96-Gerrath R-1 (952-0524)948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

539
B25

the bail to follow him into water up to her waist. Then Raven suddenly grasped her under the arms, hauled her into his craft, and fled. The sockeye salmon were cried out to anger and kept into their canoes for permit, but one by one they sank. Women had done her work well. For a time the chase was close; in fact, the sockeye salmon nearly caught Tsikoll in North Bentinck Arm, but as danger threatened, Raven seized a pole and delivered several vigorous thrusts which sent the canoe beyond the reach of the already sinking pursuers. The pole made in the ocean by his thrusts are still visible near the site of the Bella Coola Canneries, as well as the pole which he threw ashore when he had finished with it; a bronze petrified and one will be seen immediately behind the manager's house. To the south of the Bella Coola River, Raven threw the chief's daughter into the water. The descendants are the sockeye salmon which visit that stream, and it is due to his failure to capture more than one, that so few sockeyes come to this river. [108]

Another version of this myth was collected from a Kitamaat man.

It describes how Raven went alone to Tsikoll in the land of the salmon, in the guise of an old man. He was continually received in the house of Steqes, chief of the salmon, who gave him a meal of dried fish. Raven carefully watched to ascertain what he had received from his wooden model, and when he found out that it was the bone at the back of the neck, he secreted one in the palate of his mouth. Presently one of the salmon women became ill, and Steqes said:

"Old man, you have hidden a bone."

The salmon searched Raven, but failed to find what he had hidden, and he was able to return to Kitamaat with it. He added this bone to one of his models, and it was at once able to swim strongly; in fact, it became a red salmon.

This fish was the ancestor of all coast-bound salmon, which are still called Sawamhilhaat ai Kyam, "The Salmon-like Fish of Raven." They are not considered as valuable for food as other salmon. [264]

Another exploit accredited to Raven in the beginning of time was the bringing of herring to Kitamaat.

Many of these fish then inhabited the ocean, and Raven determined to bring them to increase the food supplies of his people. A girl happened to catch a single herring for from shore and brought it to Raven, who secured Tsikoll with its scales. Then he set out for the land of the herring beyond the western ocean. On arriving, Raven went to the house [112] of a woman, Ishdanis-a, who dwelt with her mother, a Gull. After a meal, Raven led us his bearers by calling her of the countless herring that lived at Kimsquit, and how happy he could make some of her relatives by taking them home with him. Ishdanis-a declined the story and sent one of her brothers to investigate Raven's canoe because, if the fish were plentiful as he knew, some of the snake would certainly be in his craft. The herring youth looked inside the canoe, and was deceived by Raven's subterfuge. On receiving a favourable report, Ishdanis-a willingly gave Raven a large box filled with herring. Elated at his victory, Raven set out for home and there he spat into the water as he neared the beach at Kimsquit. The Kimsquit people knew of Raven's search for herring, and did not at first believe him when he reported his success, but the fish bitterness so rapidly that his claim was vindicated.

The herring so obtained were the progenitors of all that now live in the waters adjacent to Kimsquit.

One of the foods regarded by the Bella Coola as a luxury is a foam-like whip prepared by beating up dried buffalo berries in water. Raven is given the credit for introducing this to Bella Coola.

Long, long ago, Shdzhnalk, a mountain in the Carrier country above Burnt Ridge, was a chief, possessing human characteristics. Buffalo berries flourished on his slopes, and he moved to keep them for food for his guests. On one occasion he invited all the animals and birds, including Raven, to a feast and dance. His house was the interior of the mountain, and when all had assembled he carefully closed every opening so that none of the berries could escape. Raven determined to obtain some of this food for the Bella Coola, and accordingly used his power to force one of the guests to go outside. As soon as a door was opened to let this out, Raven seized some of the whip and flew away, scattering drops of it to the flight. Berries grew wherever the drops fell, and since that time everybody has been able to make this luxury. Shdzhnalk was very angry, but could do nothing.

Though Hqamtsin created the world, he did not make it perfect nor apply it with many of the conveniences possessed by men of the present generation. Raven, endowed both with imagination and remarkable power, was always seeking ways of improving conditions. In the beginning of time there were no mirrors, and if a man wanted to paint his face, or decorate himself for a dance, he was forced to rely on the assistance of lieved that all the Kitkatla chiefs were powerful, but Tsdzis was the greatest of all. It is said that one of his ancestors was to receive five potlatch souls whenever a Kitkatla was married. Without question, some of this chief's powers have become exaggerated in transmission, now the less they show that the Bella Coola realize the great importance of the northern chiefs. Concerning their nearer neighbours, the Bella Bella, the Bella Coola understand the way in which the members of a family combine to help their chief in the giving of presents. They say that the Bella Bella consider the Bella Coola practice of each one endeavouring to make himself a chief to be foolish in the extreme. Such is also said to be the opinion among the Kwakiutl, who support their conviction that in Bella Coola all are chiefs, from the fact that flowing crests under the seats of all, whereas in Fort Rupert, their home, such crests only beneath the seats of chiefs.

Corresponding to the extreme paucity of functions possessed by Bella Coola chiefs, their prerogatives are likewise scanty. Indeed, they take their exhibited seats only during certain dances of the secret society connected with chiefs, at potlatches, and at ceremonial meals. These last occur whenever a deer or seal is killed; the latter is considered a great delicacy.[1] Anyone can kill a seal, but it would be unthinkable for a Bella Coola to share its flesh with his immediate family only. The animal is cleaned, the hide made by boiler or spear carefully plugged, and the carcass boiled whole in a large box. Meanwhile a herald (k.p. tsaq) summons the chiefs to the house where the successful hunter lives. If the meal is to consist merely of one small seal, only a few chiefs are invited, those of greatest influence through their possession of "strong" souls. When several seals have been killed, the number invited is correspondingly larger, but no women may partake unless she ranks

[1] This is said to have been a personal prerogative, not shared by all chiefs, and requiring validation by valuable presents.

[2] Their crests of the type described in this paragraph were in the present case, in fact, the ownership of seal were the chiefs alone has disappeared towards the close of the last century.

Schellwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

as a man by the duly validated ownership of a chief's name in his own right. Formerly a slave was never allowed to eat seal, unless he had been the slayer. If many seals are killed, chiefs from adjacent villages are sometimes invited. The chiefs seat themselves according to their proper positions and are served with the blood-stained grease that floats to the top of the water as the meat is boiling. When cooked, the meat is cut into strips, measured in terms of so many finger breadths, according to the number of guests. The cuts run down each flipper, so that each receives a narrow strip including one of the toes. The head is always given to the herald.[8]

Wealthy chiefs frequently invite their fellows to ordinary meals even when no seal or deer has been killed. On these occasions, as at seal feasts, the guests are designated by their ancestral names, not by those in general use.

Chiefs are also accustomed to meet for the discussion of matters connected with the winter ceremonial; on such occasions their number may be augmented by men of influence in the secret society, though they do not rank as chiefs. Such a meeting is always called when a new member is to be initiated into the hamatsa society. If there is difference of opinion the influence of even a nawalt chief is outweighed by a man of importance in the society. The matter is discussed by all present and a decision reached by general agreement. It is difficult for a white man to understand how such is possible without either a vote, or general recognition by all that the sign of some individual must be accepted. The writer was present at one such meeting, and was struck by the manner in which, after considerable, and at times heated, discussion, a consensus of opinion was reached, and accepted even by those who had proposed a contrary course.

Near every village is a place where the chiefs hold such meetings. All the inhabitants know the general locality, but [8] Very effort was made to ensure the accuracy of this account, but errors must creep in on account of the length of time which has elapsed since the ceremony functioned not in full detail.

Cop.

I:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

ability are always seeking to lend goods to those who are planning potlatches or other rites, knowing that the investment is safe and lucrative. 556* [726]

X uses his own discretion as to how much wealth is necessary. He knows how much he owes for presents received on previous occasions, and would not dream of giving a potlatch until able to repay these. Failure to do so would hold him up to the derision of the whole countryside. But he acts upon his own judgment with regard to interest. If he continues to hoard goods until he is able to repay with great increase, he gains prestige from his generous returns, but meanwhile he does not enjoy the distinction which would have followed a smaller affair at an earlier period. Further, there is the uncertainty about how much his wife's family will contribute, though that can be estimated with a fair degree of accuracy; in Bella Coola every transaction is made publicly, so each man knows the wealth of his neighbour. The favourite month for a potlatch is October, before the kwiot dances, when there is abundance of food. At this season there is plenty of salmon roe, berries, and crabapples, all of which might be ruined by frost. Occasionally, a potlatch takes place after the kwiot period, but in that case the only foods available are eulachon grease, smoked meat, smoked fish, dried hemlock-bark, and dried berries. If several men in one village decide to give potlatches in the same year there may be rivalry and dispute as to which shall be first. There is no satisfactory method of settling this point. [726] [796] [262] [578]

When all is ready X tells a herald (I, p. 844) to summon his fellow villagers to his house the following day for eloemen. It is customary for all to accept, but no social obligation is broken should a man or woman fail to do so. [203]

The next morning no one eats in his own house, knowing that free food will be distributed. While his expected guests are adorning themselves by washing and painting, X, aided by his family and others, prepares large quantities of food, borrows boxes, and makes other necessary arrangements. Pre- [302] [426]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

the potlatch is recognized to such an extent that an attack upon envoys is unthinkable, though one or two myths recount how this unwritten law was violated on rare occasions. A canoe meeting potlatch messengers veers over to the other side of the channel to give them the right of way.

On reaching the destination the canoe is brought to close to shore until the inhabitants of the village have gathered on the beach, which they swiftly do on the arrival of strangers. The messenger sounds his whistle, the significance of which is fully understood by members of the nuxalk society. Any chief who wishes to show his wealth and importance will invite them to his house. As they are landing, he sends a herald to summon a number of influential people of his village, who seat themselves in their rightful places. As the messengers enter they are given seats on the bench behind the fire, the spot usually reserved for chiefs. A number of lads are called in to toast smoked salmon, and when this has been done the fish are broken into shreds by young girls and served to the messengers on a mat, in lieu of a table-cloth. The envoys do not deliver their message as soon as they arrive. On the contrary, they spend the rest of the day aimlessly talking with their hosts, and sleep in the house where they have been received.

The following day likewise passes without ceremony, but towards nightfall the host summons all his fellow-villagers to his house. The singers take up their customary places and beat out a hauiat tune. Upon hearing his or her air, the owner of it starts to dance. Using their own discretion, the singers beat out the tunes of hauiat after hauiat, and each dances. In like fashion the singers beat out nuxalk songs, and the owner of each dances. Since the supernatural beings are not present, the dances are merely of a ceremonial, not a sacred, nature. When all have danced, each gives a present to the envoys. These gifts are not returnable. They are merely "eagle down," but it is necessary that something be given to validate the dances. The value is immaterial, so far as the purpose is concerned, though a chief who wishes to exhibit his chief-like

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

The first course is dried coho salmon mixed with olachen grease. The fish is first placed in boxes, approximately one to every four persons, though a chief may be honoured by an individual box, and the grease poured over it. As always, any food not consumed is carried away. Failure to do so would be an insult to X. Then round wooden dishes are distributed into which are poured the berries of Vibrnum pacifiorum. The waiters pour olachen grease over these and the mixture is eaten with wooden spoons. These two foods are invariably the first meal of a potlatch.

If the sisi of the last guests to arrive has not returned the power given him by the Bella Coola expert, he now stands up and shakes his rattle as a signal that he desires to start his dance. The Bella Coola sisi also stands up, and the visiting sisi contorts himself and finally pretends to produce something from his stomach, which he throws across to his colleague. The latter feigns to catch it, cries heip loudly several times, and makes the motions of hurling what he has just received into the room at the back of the house where the initiates are concealed. Then he sits down. Meanwhile the last-to-arrive party of guests have started to beat out the tune of one of the sisi[1] songs of their own sisi who dances in time to it. Then another song is beaten out and another member of the party dances, and so on until all have danced who desire to do so. Each wears his own head-dress and each performs in the manner already described. After the dancing, the members of this party of guests give presents to X and other Bella Coola chiefs. There is no fixed ratio between the value of the gifts and the rank of the recipients, though chiefs receive more than lesser men, and X most of all. These presents are qualqut, which may be translated as "eagle down-ness," merely a mark of friendship and goodwill. They are not returnable. Goods so received are distributed by X with his other possessions at the potlatch, care being taken not to return them to the donors, which would be insulting.

[1] In the songs (E, p. 307) are monotonous and

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

the front-door facing the river, but has to leave the house through the trap beneath the enclosure where she sleeps. The Bella Coola consider it unthinkable for a girl to disregard these prohibitions, but if this should happen, she would be chased home by her parents, by the Guardian of the River, or, in fact, by any elderly member of the community. The strongest reason for respecting these regulations is the belief that disobedience brings death; no one knows how it is inflicted, but a careless girl soon dies. During this period she cannot eat fresh salmon, though she is allowed them if they have been smoked for four or five days. Her scanty meals are brought to her in the enclosure where she is virtually a prisoner. It is true that she can leave it and wander in the woods, but her comrades avoid her as being in an unclean condition of which they are afraid, and she is barred from taking part in all activities by the river which constitute so large a part of the life of the Bella Coola. A girl cannot pick berries during this time, as no more would grow in the valley which she had thus defiled; she must not touch anyone, nor allow anyone to touch her; she must not pass in front of a man; she must go to bed before everyone else in the house, and be the last to arise. The danger of breaking some taboo is so great that it is safer for a girl to remain within her enclosure where her mother, and other old women, gather to tell her the many things which it is fitting for an adult woman to know. This seclusion is not pleasant, but it conventionally serves to emphasize the importance of married life to which it is a prelude. The writer remembers an occasion when a Bella Coola family was eating very fresh salmon while one of the daughters, who had recently reached adolescence, watched enviously. Her grandfather rose and gave the child an orange, remarking that in his youth little girls did not receive such dainties to sweetness their lot.

Adolescent girls wear certain distinctive articles of clothing and ornaments. The most noticeable is a skull-cap bound with grass; this is the only time in a woman's life that a hat is worn. She also wears ear-rings, each consisting of a ring

! Lie - one year after puberty - Analyst

Smithsonian E-5 (922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

768 entertained such kind sentiments towards him that he would [178] be glad to have his friend receive it. 768

In recent years the number of incombustible objects has 177 increased enormously with the introduction of metal utensils, 775 gramophones, and other things obtained from white traders. Although these are considered to be of use to the ghost, and must be carefully place near the grave, they can be publicly exchanged for others by a relative. The sentiments expressed on such occasions are that the ghost, though aware of what is taking place, does not resent an open transfer; and that it is unnecessary to deposit the equivalent of what has been removed. There is undubtedly a vague idea that the ghost uses, not the actual object, but its essence, which is received by the deposition. It must be emphasized that this feeling has not become crystallized to such a state that it is customary to replace goods laid on the grave with others. Such an exchange in a cast command would cause animosity if carried [578] out by anyone except near relative.

Sometimes a dying person requests that a house be erected 764 over his grave, a common Bella Bella custom. This is built [763] immediately after the funeral and articles that cannot be burnt [177] are placed within it instead of being piled on the ground. The surviving relatives may choose to erect a picket fence around the spot, but no tombstone for the grave is put up until a memorial potlatch several years after death. House or fence soon falls into decay and rarely an effort is made to repair either. Nor is the grave itself disturbed. Cow-parsnips, [262] which are much used for food, grow frequently in cemeteries, but no one would gather the shoots that rise above a grave;
they are food belonging to the dead person. The white man has taught the Bella Cola how to plant apple-trees and these [245] are often set out in graveyards, though the fruit is allowed to [177] fall to the ground for the benefit of those interred beneath.
The Bella Bella are uniformerly to have replaced at intervals 765 the coffin containing a dead person, but this seems never to have been a Bella Coola practice. Indeed, a grave is never

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

place in the manner already described. After passing through the fourth hole, or for the fourth time through the single opening, the two go to some lonely pool in the forest where the mourner washes. They light a fire and deposit on it some of his clothing, placing the rest in a stump or hollow tree. The friend always takes with him a supply of new clothing which the person being purified puts on and returns home, cleansed from the immediate taint of death. 764 783

The above rite protects widower or widow, but does not alter the fact that for one year they are ceremonially "unclean" and must obey sundry taboos. They must not go to the bank of the river, or even appear at the front door of a house facing it. To do so is displeasing to the salmon; for the same reason they cannot eat this fish unless it has been smoked. If they wish to travel on the ocean, they cannot embark at the village but must go through the woods to a point on the shore and there be picked up by the canoe. There is a regular "Widows and Widowers Rock" about a mile on either side of every village on the ocean. The one near Kimsquit is called Iplew'ti, and there is thought to be blood on it. A person mourning a consort must wear a hat decorated with miniature coppers of which the bottoms are bent upwards; should this be omitted, when the offender remarries, the new husband or wife will soon die. 765 [783] [825] [262] [484] [292] [761]

In addition to these taboos, there are customary laws of behaviour, an infraction of which renders the offender liable to social disapproval. Widows and widowers should cut their hair short, and the former should rub ashes on the face. Sexual intercourse is prohibited to both sexes; if this rule is broken, the relatives of the deceased are insulted. Remarriage should not take place for at least a year, although among poor people it sometimes occurs after only six months, in which case all taboos and restrictions automatically cease. There is no law on this point, but it is considered fitting to allow this period to elapse. These requirements clearly indicate that bereavement is not merely an individual affair, but entails social and [621] [302] [734] [587] [735]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

These become lilies (of the species known as lilkûwalp or *walilkwätsälätsälätsäl

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

of these demi-gods of antiquity are favourite themes for stories. The powers of the later shamans have been far less than those of their forefathers, and their exploits have been of a somewhat different character. Hence it is possible to divide the subject into three sections:

(1) Shamanism in the distant past.
(2) Modern shamanism.
(3) Shamans from the dead.

SHAMANISM IN THE DISTANT PAST

Information on this phase is contained in stories and a few anecdotes which describe the achievements of ancient demi-gods, endowed with miraculous powers of various kinds. The tales are similar in type to those dealing with the granting of supernatural aid to the unfortunate, so that it is in many cases difficult to differentiate them. As might be expected these narratives are not exact. Frequently the teller does not know from what being the ancient shaman received his power, nor can he explain the abilities described, which are different from, and superior to, those with which he is familiar. In fact it is customary to describe any mythical hero as a shaman.

Tales of this kind can be related by any one; they are not the personal property of a specific family. Many of them, that of Wanuel'ix, for example, are well known and are told and retold constantly.

In addition to information obtained from stories, a few isolated facts are remembered regarding ancient shamans. It is thought that various taboos connected with hunting were begun by them in the distant past. Such restrictions and injunctions were firmly believed in and strictly adhered to until [illegible] many of them are still observed. The usual method of hunting harlequin ducks is, or was until recently, from a canoe, with a angling set up in the bow to hide the hunter, crouched with bow and arrow in readiness; several shamans, however, were able to kill the birds by merely waving the butt-end of a paddle towards them. Such power would be of enormous value, since the Bella Coola consider these ducks a great delicacy, and say that their flesh resembles that of seals. In fact, when an invitation to a seal feast is given the words used mean, "come to eat harlequin ducks."

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NEs Bellacoola NEs

No attempt was made to collect all the shaman stories current in Bella Coola, but the subject is amply illustrated by those gathered, of which the following is representative.

The Adventures of W'aumal-is Long, long ago, there dwelt among the people who lived on the shore of Dean Channel and were partly Kimsquit, partly Bella Bella, a mighty shaman, W'aumal-is. He was a married man with a son just learning to walk, and an adopted one about twelve years old. One day W'aumal-is told the latter to fetch water, but the lad was lazy and made no motion to obey, so his foster father kicked him angrily. Whereat the boy cried out:

"What are you hurting me for? Why don't you kick your wife or your partner? They are always sleeping together when you are away."

W'aumal-is apparently paid no attention to this, merely saying:

"Stop crying. I am sorry I kicked you so hard. Run along and get the water."

W'aumal-is, who was a great hunter, began to get his canoe ready for a seal hunting trip, and told his adopted son to accompany him. The two set off within a few hours. W'aumal-is owned a stick of which one end possessed the power of causing death, and the other of restoring life; he had only to make the motions of throwing this stick at a living creature, death-dealing end foremost, and the one at which it was pointed fell dead. Many seals had been killed by this means when W'aumal-is asked the boy:

"What was it you said when I kicked you?"

By this time the lad had regained his temper and was sorry he had disclosed what he knew.

"I said nothing," he answered, "but gave a shout of pain."

"You lies," W'aumal-is calmly replied. "You said that my wife was sleeping with my partner."

The boy, realizing that all was known, answered resolutely:

"Yes, I did say that. I have often seen her doing so when you were absent."

It was late afternoon by this time and W'aumal-is at once headed back to the village, which they reached soon after dark. No one saw their approach, so W'aumal-is told the boy to stay with the canoe and the seals

Lillooet (Lowville) E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE Bellacoola NE6

#539
#737

point black range, apparently killing it. Had rolled the carcass over to the back, preparatory to skinning it, when the second barrel accidentally exploded. The noise woke the "dead" bear, which grappled with the hunter and mauled him in spite of his cry:

"I never hurt you."

The man finally escaped and made his best of his way back to the village in a badly wounded condition, dripping blood. Some boys saw him and rushed home, telling of the news to-kich the chief was returning. Suddenly a supernatural being appeared claim, saying:

"I am Hyaxmin's son whom you have twice slain while I was attending to my father's business. But he is been pleased at your gift of copper, so I will help you."

The supernatural stranger was none one than the cherished son of Hyaxmin, friendly-mobile Hyaxmin. It is he who had previously appeared, first as the strange creature, and the as a bear. He told the man to close his eyes, and, when he had danse, his wounds disappeared. Soon after the people, who had been summoned by the boys to help the hunter, met him returning and were amazed to find him uncovered.

THE MAN WHO WAS HELPED BY GRIZZLY BEAR

Once long ago, there was a poor man he had no friends. Nothing that he attempted prospered, until finally he was reduced to drinking the water in which dog salmon had been urped preparatory to boiling. One day when walking in the forest, he saw a man swimming in a lake. It was really Grizzly Bear which had urped off its skin on the back and had entered the water as a man to unbend amuse itself by throwing heavy stones back and forth.

"Please come to," said the swimmer to the poor man. "Take off your clothes and wash with me."

The man did so, and when he was in thinks the bear said to him:

"You have been doing wrong to drinks that foul dog salmon water. None of an supernatural man like you to do."

The bear massaged the stomach of thanes and pressed his fingers [illegible] four times, until the man was purged of all the salmon water. The bar strongly urged him never to drink any more of it, and since that time he has obeyed the injunction, realizing that the supernatural man is not like it. The poor man was then scrubbed with devil's club, brambles, spruce branches, and other thorny boughs which lacerated his flesh. But, the bear threw one of the heavy stones across the lake, and told the ma to use it back. He tried and failed. Again the supernatural one tabed him with the thorny

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

it is certain that ones of this type took place about 1870. No information could be obtained about other surgical practices. The Bella Coola are unacquainted with either trephining or cupping, and it is most unlikely that they performed more than cutting and the setting of broken limbs. Though incisions are primarily for boils and abscesses, one may be made in case of any obstinate pain, in the belief that some foreign matter has entered the body and must be extracted. 752 [759]

For Stomach-Ache (two means)

757

(1) Peel the outer surface of red elderberry roots and chew a section until all the juice has been squeezed forth and swallowed; then spit out the tasteless bark and take a second piece. This must be continued for some time. It is dangerous to allow the liquid to remain within the stomach, so warm water must be taken as an emetic.

(2) Take five roots of the plant ma'xwal i, each about one-tenth of an inch in diameter and one inch in length, grind them to powder and pour on water. Warm the mixture to body heat and drink in large quantities. This acts as an emetic and the patient feels hungry after vomiting. If cooked for a longer time, the roots provide a valuable food. [262]

This medicine is not sufficiently potent for serious attacks.

For Stomach-Ache, and also for Other Internal Pains (two means)

(1) Strip the bark from a kel'xelp (birch?) branch a few inches in diameter and about three feet in length, and boil for an hour in a small amount of water. Care must be taken not to boil the decoction too long or it will become poisonous. Drink about four cupfuls of the mixture. It causes the stomach to heave violently, followed by vomiting. Then drink warm water, which also acts as an emetic. Take a further potion of the medicine, then more water, and continue with alternate doses until the vomit is clear. This medicine is so powerful that a patient usually recovers by the following day.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

phases of activity, leaving here only certain rules about diet and a number of prohibitions which hunters must observe. 784

FOOD TABOOS OBSERVED BY WOMEN

Women must not eat bear meat. To do so would derange the catamenia and cause profuse growth of hair. 562

Women of child-bearing age must not eat beaver. To do so would cause a difficult delivery. [841] [826]

A woman of child-bearing age must not eat toasted salmon until the sticks have been removed which hold it in front of the fire. She will bear twins if this injunction is disregarded. [844] [845]

TABOOS OBSERVED BY HUNTERS

No hunter or fisherman may leave the village in the morning if he has been foolish enough to break the night's fast. It is customary to depart at dawn and take a small meal when nearing the hunting or fishing-ground. 224 [226] [264]

No hunter may drink water in which dog salmon have been soaked. Animals dislike this liquid and avoid a man with it in his stomach.

When traps have been set, and a party of hunters is sitting around the camp-fire in the evening, no one must pass between it and one of his fellows. If this should be done, heedlessly, animals would disregard the bait that has been set out.

When mountain goat hunters are travelling, the most expert must lead the party. When he sits down, so must the others, and no one can change places with him. This is said to be a custom of the Carriers as well as of the Bella Coola. [171]

When a hunter is cutting up a bear, he must be careful not to cut a vein which is said to run across the chest and down each fore-paw. To do so causes sickness. [825] [753]

When a hunter kills a bear, he must place either the skull or the whole head in a tree near the scene of the kill, otherwise he will become blind. In some families, the men remove only an eye, place it in a notched stick and set this under an over- [752]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)948
NES Bellacoola NES

since each fisherman provided one when his box was filled. 226

No one is allowed to drink water immediately after eating 796 the first olachen of the spring, since to do so would cause a 574 flood. It is considered most improper for a child to cry soon after partaking of this food; if he does so, he is quieted by [365] having nettles stuffed into his mouth. As already described, if a person dies before the first fish have passed through his bowels, a shaman must wipe his lips with cedar-bark.

After the first meal of olachen, stakes for the nets can be 226 driven, and the restrictions become less exacting. Women are not allowed to assist in fishing, but the men devote their full [562] time to the task, working with zest and energy.[1] An abundant supply of olachen is a source of joy, and all listen eagerly for the singing of the thrush, cmcmcmcmh, which signifies that the [325] nets are full to bursting. Half jocularly, people invite the bird to come and eat, but his melody is interpreted as:

"I shall eat when the river is full."

RITES CONNECTED WITH THE FIRST SPRING SALMON[2]

Salmon is the most important article of Bella Coola diet 226 and the rites which accompany the earliest taking of the fish 796 are relatively complicated. [262]

When the first spring salmon have been caught, they are laid in the canoe with their heads all pointing eastward, upstream. The fisherman poles to shore, but instead of landing his catch, he fastens the salmon to a stake driven at the edge of the bank so that they remain in the water. A number of posts are usually placed in readiness, each decorated with alternate spirals of dyed and undyed cedar-bark and crowned with an eagle's tail. Each day one or two more fish may be caught, but all are left in the water until the first have become soft, thus giving sufficient time for the necessary preparations on shore. It is the duty of every owner of a salmon-weir to build near its end a so-called Spring Salmon House, a shed-like [343]

[1] For a description of olachen fishing, see Appendix A.
[2] Cf. Boas, p. 76.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

[Kusiut Society Initiation]

*575 individual, other than an indefinite recollection of the amount 796 of goods used for his dyed cedar-bark. People always have 556 sufficient goods to validate kusiut prerogatives; in fact, if a proud person gives too lavishly to confirm the initiation of a relative, the marshals sometimes burn the goods, giving no explanation other than that the uninitiated must not be led to believe that a kusiut ceremony is an affair of wealth like a potlatch. Formerly, goods were given only at initiation ceremonies, but between 1880 and 1890 a chief gave presents, instead of food, at a dance. His example was followed, since none was willing to be outdone, although such gifts are still called "food." The name of the donor is always announced, whether he is the dancer himself or one of his relatives.

*575 X, though now a member of the kusiut society, is still a 784 novice and cannot give a dance[a] until the next ceremonial
[796] season, that is, until one year has elapsed. The marshals instruct him about his costume, and about the manner in which he must deport himself during this period, matters which depend to a considerable extent upon his prerogative. If he [262] is a Cannibal, Scratch, or Breaker dancer he must not eat unsmoked salmon, nor must he enter a house in which either a potlatch or a memorial potlatch is taking place.[b] Failure to obey this injunction would warrant punishment from a foreign tribe. Unless his prerogative is to give one of these, or the [302] Ghost dance, he must keep his face constantly blackened.
[292] Every novice must wear a collar of dyed cedar-bark. The marshals warn him to be circumspect in dealing with uninitiated persons; he can talk to them, but it is most improper for him to engage in any familiarity or frivolous play. Above [524] all, he must neither gamble nor take part in non-athletic games.
[522]

[a] A Cannibal novice, however, begins to exercise his prerogative immediately, although he must also perform a sampling dance the following year.

[b] This prohibition was more broken at Rivers Inlet. A skilled leader was required to arrange the feast at a memorial potlatch and the only man fit for the purpose, a resident of Rivers Inlet, was a Cannibal novice. After much deliberation he was called upon, but great care was taken to hide his identity and it was years before the information became known.

[The Cannibal Dance]

787 * 575 * 796 [562] [262] away since no female can witness a Cannibal's first meal. Three kukusiut are dispatched to ask for food, as if they were begging on behalf of X. Olachen grease, dried salmon, dried meat, and other luxuries are always given to them, and the uninitiated women are excited at witnessing this collection of food. Sometimes a request is made during the day, and the messengers are entitled to call upon any individual by name to provide grease or some other delicacy.

[752] The actual feeding is done by a shaman who is also a kusiut. He first dips his hands in the grease, warms them at the fire and rubs them over X's face as the struggling Cannibal is held by six or eight kukusiut. Members of the society keep calling out hoip to soothe X, who is supposed to be like a wild animal, and to have lost all desire for ordinary food. Like a maniac he snaps at the shaman's fingers, while the kukusiut cry out and the uninitiated watch with fear and amazement. After rubbing the Cannibal's cheeks four times, the shaman shouts out that he is almost ready to eat. The heralds echo his words, and go through the village to inform all of what has taken place. The shaman now puts a few morsels of food in a spoon and tries to feed X, who struggles and tries to bite pieces out of the utensil itself. Undiscouraged, he puts small pieces of food actually into X's mouth, heedless of the snapping jaws, and at last persuades him to swallow a little.

"He has eaten," the shaman calls out joyfully, and the heralds repeat the good tidings.

An effort is next made to force him to drink, but X only bites the vessel, and the fingers of the shaman, and succeeds in drenching himself with the liquid. But at last he swallows a few mouthfuls.

"He has drunk," calls the shaman, and as before the heralds repeat his words.

The shaman now tells the uninitiated that X will be all right, but that it will be safer for them to depart, so they leave willingly. Heralds keep everyone in the village informed of the events.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE4 Bellacoola NE4

[The Dance of Winwine]

*575 *796 824 way as with the salmon, except that the jumping is omitted. The order of display is according to the time of ripening for each, but there is so much difference of opinion about this that no rigid order is maintained. The first shown is always the cow-parsnip, but after that there is no definite sequence. The following "berries" were shown at a dance not many years ago: cow-parsnip; Ribes laxiflorum; wild gooseberry; tall bilberry; thin-leaved bilberry; blueberry; black huckleberry; red elderberry; dwarf bilberry; Ribes bracteosum; salalberry; Canadian buffalo berry; wild red raspberry; blackberry, Rubus spectabilis Pursh.; salmon-berry; black hawthorn; flowering juneberry; bunchberry; wild rose; red bearberry.

The informant was not certain that the above was the exact order in which the berries were shown on the occasion described. It is probable that it is approximately correct, however, since he added that the wild strawberry had also been shown, but as he could not remember its correct place he had omitted it. Other old men stated that the following food plants had been used at other Wiwuine dances: ôli, one of the [262] [177] Fritillaria, species undetermined; perennial clover; black raspberry; crabapple; cranberry; fern root; bracken root. Foods introduced by the white man were shown at a recent dance, including: potato, carrot, turnip, and a miniature can of pre- [273] served peaches, such as are commonly used in the manufacture of native wine.

*575 *796 Sometimes no one is able to guess the object represented, and when all have grown discouraged the exhibitor puts his ear against X's mouth. The uninitiated assume, of course, that the dancer's supernatural power makes it easy for him to tell the answer and that he is transmitting the information to the bearer who promptly gives it. If an uninitiated person should guess the correct response rapidly, it is taken for granted that she has found favour with the supernatural beings. When the last berry has been thrown on the fire, a twaiat stands up and starts a song describing the Hermaphrodite and his actions in the land above. The singer provides his own time by beating cause though an infant in arms, though uninitiated, can be brought to dances by its mother; distinctions between rich and poor, slave and freeman, become of slight importance; all that really matters is whether a person is or is not a factor. Membership in the society seems to the uninitiated the most desirable thing in life, although their lives are always so strong that they never cease to dread actual admission. The feeling of class consciousness which exists in a somewhat mild form at other seasons of the year, gives place to a powerful sentiment of superiority on the part of members of the society over those who are not so fortunate. Even the respect normally shown to chiefs is submerged since they, too, are subject to the rule of the marshals.

Apart entirely from this attitude of superiority and inferiority, is the bond of fellowship engendered among members of the society by the rites. Whatever happens, the uninitiated must be deceived. Moreover, the psychological effect of gathering nightly in a body for a specific purpose is tremendous. Night after night they eat together; night after night they listen to the words of the marshals, who impress on them the need for co-operation and secrecy, who hold before them the good example set by their fellows who have carried out rites successfully, who emphasize the fact that they are doing as their fathers did. The ceremonial impact is of greatest consequence at all these gatherings, but when the uninitiated have withdrawn the federal rules somewhat and enjoy themselves. The food itself is always of the best and some of the usual restrictions are removed. It is, for example, the only time that women are allowed to eat the flesh of seals. If this delicacy is provided the marshals enjoy the tidbits, but after Cannibals, novices, and others have received preferential treatment, the remainder is distributed to all and sundry.

It has been stated by some writers, especially those unfamiliar with the significance of native ceremonial life, that the dances of the central tribes are orgies of immorality. This point was investigated with care and it may be stated posi-

[illegible] THE BELLA COOLA INDIANS

[illegible]

(1) [illegible]

(2) [illegible]

(3) [illegible]

(4) [illegible]

(5) [illegible]

(6) [illegible]

(7) [illegible]

(8) [illegible]

(9) [illegible]

(10) [illegible]

(11) [illegible]

[illegible] Songs

The words of so-do songs are believed to have been handed down, unaltered, for many generations. The words, too, are frequently ancient although the singers sometimes make slight changes so that they will be more suitable for the chief to whom honour they are being sung. Owing to the decline of ceremonials in which they were used, few so-do songs are now remembered.

[illegible]

[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] THE BELLA COOLA [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[

APPENDIX D

1927

[552]

[576]

[625]

[533]

[242]

[252]

[575]

[631]

[584]

[516]

[533]

[535]

[534]

[412]

[405]

[425]

[illegible]: Supernatural being sent by Jesus-a to meet Pinkeyna.

[illegible], "One Who Is a Guest": The term applied to a youth whom father, a [illegible], will certainly give a potlatch to marriage on the path to social importance. Gift for him not yet done so. Such a lad is served commensurately at every [illegible].

[illegible]: Mistress-shell crested stick used by one of the four sections in the [illegible] of time.

[illegible]: One of the five women to work at [illegible] in the beginning of time.

[illegible]: Word of concern meaning often appended to [illegible] to complete [illegible] for the four sight of a hunter down.

[illegible], "A Dragging Person" (as one dies with a heavy leg). The name [illegible] to the commission of a name from a wife to her husband either [illegible] Drage to him, when being superfluous.

[illegible]: Ceremonial tool of any kind.

[illegible]: Ancestral name of a Haas man.

[illegible], infinite.

[illegible]: Those who perform to assist marriage dances.

[illegible]: Earlier name of a Bella Coola man.

[illegible]: One of the four men to work at [illegible] in the beginning of time.

[illegible], "Weapons of War": The term applied to the property distributed by the [illegible] and his relatives to the bride and have prior to entering her house.

[illegible]: Gifts given to guests, some after betrothal, by the father of the groom [illegible] to the father of the Green bride.

[illegible]: Wrathful.

[illegible]: Ancestral supernatural woman, synonym for [illegible].

[illegible]: One of the men who came to work at [illegible] in the beginning [illegible] of time.

[illegible]: Totem pole erected by the five workers at [illegible] in the beginning of time.

[illegible]: Long position with hair close together such as is maintained for four days [illegible] widowed girl, and also by a widow or a widower.

[illegible]: Ceremonial song in her time.

[illegible]: Ad hearing of time during which a dancer does not try to move his feet to [illegible] time with it.

[illegible]: Daughter of the five workers at [illegible] in the beginning of time.

[illegible]: Easter dancer whose dagger becomes apparent through an accident.

[illegible]: Ceremonies for guardian, side of the door of a potlatch, probably that his [illegible] the appearance of a marked representation of the dancer.

[illegible]: Right-time.

[illegible]: That part of a Cannibal dance when songs are prepared to the middle of the night.

[illegible]: Ancestrale singular.

[illegible]: One of Omega's sons in the beginning of time.

[illegible]: One of the four women to work at [illegible] in the beginning of time.

[illegible]: Control man behind the fire.

[illegible]: Dancer with hands for pounding stakes to fish nets.

[illegible]: Mountain on north side of the Inner Bella Coola.

[illegible]: One who measures the passage of time by watching the movements of [illegible].

[illegible], "The Revenge of Man Killed by Another": Term used by human [illegible].

#182

Ala: canoe village.
Alacqil, "Up of the Dalcap Point": Name given to a hill where are was lighted to inform.
[424] alacmaxalis: Refusal to lend to an associate a family prerogative such as the employment of marriage dances.
[374] alaqalcmam: Ritual served when a chief's fellow villagers are called in, preparatory to an announcement of his coming potlatch.
Alaxcyaqim: Name of a family chieftain.
Alex, "The Opening of the Sky":
1.—One of the first men to settle at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.
2.—One of the first men to settle at Ocean in the beginning of time.
3.—Name of a Snake-Fish chief.
Almalakla: Former name of a Bella Coola town.
Almamalkum: One of the first men to settle at Ocean in the beginning of time.
[375] Alnimcmam: Guest having the ability to enter the back-room and treat intimate concerns there. The function probably considers the employment of his skills.
Alqhaxa: Hidden, supernatural beings who remain supernatural Cannibals.
[399] alqmaxa: Personal hearing of strife.
Alsamcmam: Wife of Dandelion, the supernatural hunter.
Alsaxlikalm: Supernatural calendrical experts.
Alsaqhlikla: Outlawed of Kalchlamlaxa, he is known only to Kimsquit.
[373] alsaxtamk: Former house of mystery.
[374] alsaxtamnalc: Visit paid to a rich person, especially the coming of foreign guests to a neighboring community.
alsaxtamnalqqa: Call used by hostile tribes announcing to a neighboring community.
[423] alsaxtamlis: The "dragging forward" of a name, crest, or other intangible gift; requires from such an inalienable either an marriage or loan or a repurchasing of the gift.
[389] alsaxtam: To drag a heavy burden.
[424] alsaxlis an: Conferrer issued with shallow grease.
[321] alsaxxa: Visit to the equivalent for a foreign intimate.
Alsaxalkum, "Facing Both Ways": Second name after the crown relative.
Alsqaxcmlq, "The Extinction Time": Outlawed assemblage of the Kalchlamlaxa after departure of a Cannibal.
[377] alsqalkim: Adoption of a person resembling the deceased to replace the latter.
Alsqhlakla:
1.—Supernatural being who serves mortals.
2.—Name received by a shaman from this being.
alta: Fruit.
[425] altamam, "Fruit Supplier": The term applied to the giving of the use of land or marriage.
Altalkl, "Dandelion": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
[156] altqmx: Shaman's collar of dyed and undyed cedar-bark, arranged in chevron crests.
[382] altqmxlk: Crested, term applied to a girl secluded in adolescence.
[325] Alqmxlaxa: Supernatural name of shellfish, applied to those brought by the first people to the beginning of time.
Alqmxlikla, "A Giant Shellfish": Name given to an Alqhlaxa man in the beginning of time.

[illegible] THE BELLA COOLA INDIANS

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] THE MULA CHAKRA [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

THE BELLA COOLA INDIANS

[illegible]

Z:Mc:Dewolfe E-1 [1922-1924] 1948
NEA DeDewolfe NEA

APPENDIX D

[illegible]: Goods collected by the relatives of a man when working on his ceremonial or religious or other actions in preparation for a potlatch.
[illegible]: A dark-legged person who tries to cross a river, some of a string figure.
[illegible]: That part of a house on either side of the central fire.
[illegible]: 1.—Wing, a supernatural being.
2.—Wing, brought-in factor participation.
[illegible]: Presents given to the man who bids a bride to her husband during a wedding.
[illegible], "Dark-Cloud": A supernatural being.
[illegible]: Shadow.
[illegible]: Chamber, archer.
[illegible]: Brother-in-law or sister-in-law.
[illegible]: Shaman's stick with power of life at one end and death at the other.
[illegible]: Mostly grass that rises to the surface of the water when a seal is cooked.
[illegible]: That on which a chief sits, that is, his ceremonial prestige gained by the distribution of much wealth.
[illegible]: 1.—Carbon hide.
2.—Thing made of carbon hide.
[illegible]: Dragon-moth collar-bark earring.
[illegible]: Carbon.
[illegible]: Love charm consisting of hair of the man desired mixed with other ingredients.
[illegible]: Supernatural being who causes nightmares.
[illegible] or [illegible]: Words, in contradistinction to supernatural songs.
[illegible]: Body.
[illegible]: Assumption of human characteristics by mankind in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Professional name of a female berry-picker.
[illegible]: Professional female berry-picker.
[illegible]: Mountain goat grease.
[illegible]: Cave.
[illegible], "When the Bear Divided": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
[illegible]: Son of the first settlers on Green Bay in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Dungeness.
[illegible]: One of Raven's female Crow relatives.
[illegible]: Bad luck gain.
[illegible]: Ringer's house.
[illegible]: Tree.
[illegible]: Part of a river where there are rapids and projecting stones.
[illegible]: 1.—Mountain goat, decorated with crest, crested mountain goats.
2.—Plain goats crested mountain goats to indicate major ceremonies performed by the deceased.
[illegible]: 1.—Village in the upper Bella Coola valley.
2.—Famous hunter mentioned in an ancient story.
[illegible]: Dried dog salmon cooked in water.
[illegible]: Shaded representation of a dead person in man form.
[illegible], "Someone Dropping Through the Roof": A supernatural being.
[illegible]: Black raspberry.
[illegible]: Clown.

[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]

R

of these data refer to insects, and may be of interest to entomologists, although my spelling of Indian words is very problematical, because some of the sounds I can neither hear nor make, and I am unable to record adequately many of those that I can hear. The data here given are preliminary to a complete working over of my notes, but are believed to be nearly complete.

Insects apparently were not so well observed by the Bellacoola as were useful mammals and plants, the stinger of the bumble bee, for instance, being supposed to be in its mouth. Few insects had names, that is, mainly those which were used or which troubled the Indians. Insects were not used for food, and honey was unknown until after the coming of the white man. The head of the gad-fly was used as a pattern in painting designs, the coat of the yellow jacket in sympathetic magic or witchcraft, and "fly spit" was said to be good for sores. They had a story about the bumble bee.

Among the Ulkatcho also observation of insects was weaker than that of mammals and plants, and they apparently had names for only a few insects, those which troubled them. Any lore also and its method of taking prey were known. Insects were of no use to the Ulkatcho whatever. No instance was observed of an Indian smoking himself with a burning fly held in his mouth. They employed smudges, fish oil, gum of the cottonwood, and blossoms of ceo parsnip with oil to protect themselves from mosquitoes, black flies and sand-flies, and smoke to protect foods from flies.

The fly lore, among the Ulkatcho, is called Ulcoolkatc. It is said to be numerous at Ulkatcho, but that it was useless and that there was no story about it. My informant voluntarily showed me the pits made by the larvae of this insect and, striking sticks for the purpose, demonstrated its well-known method of taking its prey.

The grasshopper (Dolichopoda), that makes a noise by rubbing its wings together when it flies, was called Tokoa, among the Ulkatcho.

"Fly spit," that is the material surrounding a nymph of a spittle insect, also known as a frog hopper (Cercopidae), is said

POLYPODIACEAE, FERN FAMILY

Polypodium vulgare L., Polypody, Fukuatsu Dense Type

Bulb Code: Deep-sensitive mixed with leaves of the red color (Page [illegible]) or with other mentioned roots which the [illegible] but together—bulbs and the more denotion value [illegible] for pains in the stomach, but not for vomiting or diarrhoea. Bulbs or seeds not a purgative.

Roots showed for smallpox [illegible].

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Asplenium ruta-muraria Sage, Lucy Type

Bulb Code: Little roots chopped off, from [illegible] to [illegible] or [illegible] with roots or branches of the correct (Page [illegible] [illegible]), bulbs enough, but for a short time only, and the [illegible] used as a wash for sore eyes.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Asplenium spleniomanes Sw., Bonnie Type

Bulb Code: Root taken not to [illegible] [illegible] from eating several kinds of shellfish in the early part of the month.

Fern, species unknown

Northern Carrier: Root bulbs and the denotion value [illegible] for [illegible].

Gilmore: The large, round, green [illegible], but not the [illegible] with leaf of [illegible] (Page [illegible]) and [illegible] with (Page [illegible] [illegible]), a little piece of which [illegible] (Page [illegible]) or [illegible] [illegible] (Page [illegible]), and [illegible] of [illegible] [illegible] (Cynthia [illegible]), [illegible] a little piece applied to a [illegible] or [illegible], which is brought to a [illegible]. [illegible] for [illegible], and as a plaster on the [illegible] for hemorrhage of the lungs.

LYCOPODIACEAE, CLUB MOSS FAMILY

Lycopodium clavatum L., Crosses Club Moss

Southern Carrier: Inserted in the nose to cause bleeding and cure headache.

OPHIOGLOSSACEAE, FERN FAMILY

Botrychium lunaria Sw., Tom

Bulb Code: Branches with leaves [illegible], and the denotion value [illegible] for the lungs. Bulbs a purgative not as seeds.

[illegible] traditional authorities. The child is washed in warm water. For her from the mother must remain in this hut. Father and mother must not go [illegible] over the room for a year (according to Fredi Mirdita, for ten days), after [illegible] the whole month takes effect.

[illegible] The child is now given its first name. On this occasion the whole [illegible] father is invited to a feast, the name is made public, and the guests receive [illegible] present presents. The child whose first name will be become a member [illegible] of the Kiraski, where it is given its Kiraski name. This ceremony takes [illegible] place after puberty has been reached. Above this period the young man [illegible] gives his first publicly and assumes his [illegible] name.

[illegible] When a girl reaches puberty she must stay in the shed which serves [illegible] as her bedroom, where she has a separate fireplace. She is not allowed [illegible] to descend to the main part of the house and must eat alone by the fire of [illegible] the family. For ten days she must remain secluded in a sitting posi- [illegible] tion. She then during the daytime has to allowed a little fresh air [illegible] [illegible] at a very early hour in the morning. After this time she may [illegible] leave her room, but only through a separate opening. She must not [illegible] enter in the main room. When leaving the house she wears a large hat, [illegible] which protects her face against the eyes of the men. It is believed that [illegible] if the men should chance to see her face her eyes would suffer. She may [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] go with the mother and part with the father. The choice is left to the parents and children.

When a person has died, the corpse is washed, the lips painted red, the legs are folded up, and the cloth folded over the body. The accompaniment of the deceased to put into his mouth, his chair, pot, etc., the back pole covering the hearth and the front pole toward Tokwaed. The body is placed in a box and the latter is often fastened a few inches above the level of the ground. The face of the deceased is kept uncovered. Part of his property and gifts from his friends are deposited near the grave. The bodies of the deceased are buried. His coat hanged on a [illegible] scaffold, which also shows how many crimes (spears, head-dressing, and shoes he had given away in potlatches). The objects are placed or carved on the scaffolds. Formerly slaves were killed at the funeral of chiefs. The number of slaves killed was also thinked by as many totem figures on the memorial scaffolds. After burial for the use of the deceased is thrown into the fire. This is repeated frequently during a prolonged period after the death has occurred. However the crests of the deceased portrays of a wood a little foot is thrown down at a place between the fire and the door, where the mourners, the lower crests, the house of the dead, is believed to be.

The hat of a mourner must be protected against the glint of the deceased. His mark, which is a dress-head, into the ground at each period of their halts. After four days from our departure to the water, Mourners must not early and go into the woods, where by stick four dress-bodies into the ground, in the corners of a square, which they choose themselves by tethering their bodies with cedar-bushes. They also cover a cradle, after surrounding this shape four and from and wrap through the cloth, following the course of the sun. We they do so four subsequent mornings, observing each time cover the Mourners and then two cloth. The fact that this time cut off a lock. If they should not observe these regulations it is believed that they will dream of the deceased. Women when mourning wrapped their bodies with cloth or shawl.

The mourning regulations for a widower or a widow is especially strict. The first duty for the chief would that, and must not speak a word, also the head chief or husband would be a hand on a month of the affairs, who would then die. They must not go into water, and are forbidden to watch or see salmon for a whole year. In the same length of time they must not eat fresh herring or chicken. Widow and widower chosen themselves in the same way as other mourners. Their shoulders are considered sacredness, and must not fall on evil spirits.

Every time after the death of a wife or husband, given his mourning relatives further the whole tribe to a potlatch. On this occasion he singer a mourning song for the deceased and gives away presents; his guests, it was explained to me that this would the mourning widow or was the most so giving away the house of the deceased.

Succession and Inheritance

The authority of the Kitsada Office greatly from the authorities of the other tribes of the North Pacific coast. It is impossible to say to

McDermith R-5 (1921-1924)948
NEA Bellacoola NES

quantities of ducks and geese, and the inhabitants of the inland villages sometimes made hunting expeditions to the nesting places of wild-fowl in the lakes of the interior uplands. Although numbers of birds were sometimes killed in this way, they were never a steady article of diet. The same is true of grouse. Always plentiful, these birds were commonly killed, but never in large numbers.

The basis of the food supply was fish. The river teemed with salmon, which enabled the country to support its relatively large population. Spring, sockeye, hump-back, dog, and coho salmon, all entered the river in thousands during the spring and summer, while the steel-head could be caught throughout the year. They were taken in weirs and their flesh smoked for winter use. Throughout the year, salmon was the principal article of diet. Second in importance was the olachen, a fish somewhat resembling a herring, which entered the river in great numbers during April or May. They were taken in purse-like nets,* allowed to rot for ten days or two weeks, and then boiled. The grease was skimmed off and kept indefinitely to be used as a relish for other foods. It was always a sign of poverty if a person were obliged to eat herring without olachen grease. Trout and bull-heads were found in the river, but were not sufficiently plentiful to be of importance.

Although no form of agriculture was practised, the Bella Coola used vegetable food to a considerable extent. Berries were abundant; some were eaten raw, but many more were pounded into a pulpy mass and dried in the sun. Cakes prepared in this way kept indefinitely and formed one of the regular winter foods. The bark of the hemlock and cottonwood was eaten, as well as the roots of many plants. In recent years many of these have not been used, so that an investigator is apt to overlook their great importance in early times. Although useless for food, the cedar was the corner-stone of Bella Coola material culture. From its trunk were split out, with wedges, the wide planks which formed for consumers in other ways. Some are fried immediately, but the Bella Coola think they lack flavour, although most white men regard them as delicious. Many hundreds are dried for winter use in one of the following methods.

* See Appendix A for a description of olachen fishing.

2:McDowell R-1 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellevale NEA

(1) Cedar-sticks, each about three feet in length, are split from the solid core and smoothed down to a diameter of about one-half inch. One of these is passed through the gills and mouth of one fish after another until the rod is filled with a row of eulachon, their tails hanging downwards. Dozens of these sticks are suspended horizontally over the central fire in a house, or, in brilliant sunshine, hung in the open. When dried to a certain extent, they are stored in the upper parts of the houses where the process continues whenever a fire is lit. When so stored they keep almost indefinitely.

(2) Narrow strips, each four to five feet in length, of flexible cedar-bark, are prepared by the women. The fisherman takes the ends of two of these, ties one around a fish's head, and the other around its tail. Another eulachon is tied parallel to the first, and then others, until the two cords are supporting thirty to forty fish, each separated by about one inch. The middle of the strings is laid across a horizontal bar above a fire or in the open, and the process of drying continues as in the last method. The fish are subsequently smoked if a large blaze is built up in a house, so careful people remove their eulachon before a feast or other celebration.

Though dried eulachon provide a useful article for winter diet, the fish are chiefly valued for their grease, ulel, which is used as a condiment with all kinds of berries. It is sometimes extracted from the fresh fish, but the Bella Coola consider this to be unclean and prefer to wait until the eulachon have remained in the pits for ten days to two weeks. Warm weather hastens the process, but in any case cooking is done until the disgusting smell has penetrated for miles, proving that putrefaction is well advanced. In former times, all boiling was done with hot stones, but at present boxes with iron bottoms are used as kettles. These are of various shapes and sizes, an average being, perhaps, four feet long, three feet wide, and eighteen inches deep. These are set on fireplaces which vary according to the ingenuity of the owner. Some are excavated in the river bank, lined with stones set in clay, and fitted at the inner end with an old sacrapipe to provide draught for the miniature furnace. The box-kettle is placed on the ground over the excavation and the cook pours in water. Then his wife, children, and friends bring the parcel fish, which they hold in until only a few inches of water are visible. A slow fire is built beneath, and, as the mixture begins to boil, the cook stirs it with a five-foot stick having a slightly flattened blade. Presently the grease begins to rise to the surface whence it is skimmed off and placed in recepwalk backwards, or on their heads. Mortals sometimes see ghosts, but the apparition seals their lips so that they cannot recount their experiences. Death invariably follows. Shamans and other mortals endowed with great powers have been able to penetrate to the realm below, and the knowledge of conditions there has been derived from their accounts. Food is scarce in that land and ghosts are often driven up to earth to search for it. Even a small morsel is enough to satisfy their hunger, so that mortals throw fragments on the fire for the benefit of their dead relatives. If a person drop a crumb it is because a ghost has hooked it away from his hand; no wise Bella Coola ever picks up such a morsel, knowing that to do so would offend the hungry spectre. Deceased beings are generally feared, although instances are known in which they have shown kindness, particularly to their relatives. Like so many supernatural beings, they figure most prominently as patrons of kusiut dancers (see vol. II, chap. 1). Further information concerning them is contained in the description of life after death.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Not even a complete list of beings would exhaust the beliefs of the Bella Coola concerning the supernatural, since any unexpected visitation is attributed by them to this source. For example, when Mackenzie appeared, the first white man with whom the Bella Coola had come in contact, they thought that he must be from another world. Some thought him a dead man returned to life, and others considered him a supernatural visitor from above who had fallen down to earth, as did their first ancestors. The latter view prevailed, and it was ultimately decided that he must be Somcus, a supernatural being resident aloft of whom little was known. This name was applied to him, and it has since been given to all white men.[18]

[18]Although it was in 1793 that Mackenzie passed down the Bella Coola valley, a number of stories of that event were still remembered in 1922. What most impressed the Bella Coola was his ability to make fire quickly. One man, now living, stated that he had heard from his mother that her father had spoken with him. Traditions of this type are valuable as reflecting the interests of a people, but their historical accuracy may well be doubted. One Kimsquit man, for example,

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

Pre-
* 556 sently the guests assemble, those who are nuxut wearing on [575] their heads one or more weasel skins as a mark of membership [237] in the society. Each takes the seat to which he is entitled,
[292] the chiefs behind the fire, or on either side of it, the commoners,
[554] slaves, and foreigners in the two corners nearest the door. The heralds move to and fro between door and fire, their constant exchange of remarks adding to the general interest of the affair. It is the function of a herald to lend dignity to chiefs by [203] the tone of his observations, but should one fail to live up to his station, the herald is privileged to comment thereon. In some respects his position approximates that of a buffoon, but as a herald always receives valuable presents, the office is sometimes accepted by ambitious young men, willing to undertake the slightly derogatory duties in return for the substantial gain.

● 264 A number of young lads, friends or relatives of X, distribute
* 556 the food. It is placed in boxes; an important chief is not called upon to share with any one, whereas six or seven men of no [883] standing may partake from one box. These receptacles, with whatever food remains in them, are taken home by the guests;
[578] otherwise the host would be insulted. Many boxes are lost in this way, a source of considerable irritation. After the first course, a second follows, consisting of a different kind of food in another box, and in some cases there is a third, and even a fourth course. A chief must never appear stingy. The more he gives, the more does his prestige increase. Also, a man who gives freely receives abundantly, so that generosity brings its 583 reward.

* 556 Next, the father or other male relative of X's wife, or a [537] fluent friend who speaks for him, stands up and makes a speech, extolling the fame of his own family by sketching in general
[425] outlines one of the myths of his ancestors, and announcing that X's wife is taking to her husband some portion of it. This may [424] be the prerogative of using a spoon carved, for example, with [532] the shape of a beaver; or a carved box, or a totem-pole with certain figures on it, or the right to use a painting of a grizzly bear on the wall of his house, or an ancestral name.

Dawson E-5 (1922-1924)948
WEA Bellacoola MSS

go to the homes of their friends in the village; it is a matter of convenience, not of ritual. 556* [574]

In the evening, there may be no rite of any kind, but X often invites everyone to his house for the performance of non-ceremonial dances. The singers strike up one of his nuxwt or o'alt (I, p. 177) tunes and he dances to it. Then a tune belonging to one of his relatives is beaten out, and he too dances. After several have thus performed, a meal is served and all disperse. No supernatural beings are in attendance, hence there is no solemnity to the occasion; the evening's rites merely serve to show the guests the dances owned by their host and his family. 635 556*

As each party of guests arrives the same procedure is repeated. X provides food for those who have assembled from day to day, so he anxiously awaits the last-comers. When at last they come the guests from all other towns are in their allotted sections of X's house, and are free to make gibes at the tardiness of those latest in appearing. Occasionally, hard feelings are engendered in this way, although it is an established custom to mock at the last to arrive. They seat themselves and a small amount of food is given them. 556* 574 [628]

RITUAL CARRIED OUT BY THE GUESTS

Two youths, chosen by X for the purpose, sprinkle eagle down over the heads of all those present, as far as possible blowing it first over the chiefs. It serves as a token of good-will, and marks also the ceremonial nature of the occasion. Then a leading nuxwt, perhaps a sibi, stands up and says in effect: 556* [788] [237] [575]

"Thank you for coming. You are welcome. We thank you for coming to witness what X has done. He is delighted to have you here, because he has lost many of his relatives and wishes to perpetuate their memory. They would be grieved if he did not do so."

An elaborate meal is now served by a number of young men. [264]

¶ 552 The first eulana is dried coho salmon mixed with eulachon grease. The fish is first placed in boxes, approximately one to every four persons, though a chief may be honoured by an individual box, and the grease poured over it. As always, any food not consumed is carried away. Failure to do so would be an insult to X. Then round wooden dishes are distributed into which are poured the berries of Vibernum pauciflorum. The waiters pour eulachon grease over these and the mixture is eaten with wooden spoons. These two foods are invariably the first meal of a potlatch.

[24] [24a] [578]

¶ 553 If the sibi of the last guests to arrive has not renounced the power given him by the Bella Coola experts, he now stands up and shakes his rattle as a signal that he desires to start his dance. The Bella Coola sibi also stands up, and the visiting sibi contorts himself and finally pretends to produce something from his stomach, which he throws across to his colleague. The latter feigns to catch it, cries hoip loudly several times, and makes the motions of hurling what he has just received into the room at the back of the house where the initiates are concealed. Then he sits down. Meanwhile the last-to-arrive party of guests have started to beat out the tune of one of the sisaul[19] songs of their own sibi who dances in time to it. Then another song is beaten out and another member of the party dances, and so on until all have danced who desire to do so. Each wears his own head-dress and each performs in the manner already described. After the dancing, the members of this party of guests give presents to X and other Bella Coola chiefs. There is no fixed ratio between the value of the gifts and the rank of the recipients, though chiefs receive more than lesser men, and X most of all. These presents are cpandjat, which may be translated as "eagle down-ness," merely a mark of friendship and goodwill. They are not returnable. Goods so received are distributed by X with his other possessions at the potlatch, care being taken not to return them to the donors, which would be insulting.

553 575 595 556 [554] [578]

[19] As the songs (I, p. 317) are sometimes sung.

grease have been placed in readiness. X selects as many youths as the number on whom he intends to confer the names which have already been announced and exhibited among the Bella Coola, but are now to be made known to the foreign guests. He starts the lads, who are to substitute for the initiates, on the various boxes. Everybody understands that these are merely representatives. X engages two chiefs to act as his announcers, choosing two with good voices and abundant self-confidence. To one of these X whispers the sacred name of one of the initiates.

"His name is now——!" calls out the announcer, pointing to one of the substitutes, and the laymen readily recognize the initiate intended, from the use, in conjunction with his new designation, of his well-known secretal name. The heralds repeat the new name with the usual bellowings, so that it becomes well known to all present. In like manner the sacred name given to each initiate is publicly announced. The substitutes receive no advantage from their part in the proceedings.

Then the boxes are opened and red elderberries poured into the canoes in front of the guests. Stones are provided with which the visitors pound the fruit into pulp which they proceed to mix with their hands, so clarkia grease and crushed berries are added. Then X's helpers distribute spoons and the feast commences. All start to eat, but after an interval one of the leading Bella Coola chiefs strikes the side of his canoe with a spoon, as a signal that all must stop. X has several dishes in readiness. If he is wealthy some of these will be carved in the shape of beaver, eagle, or other form in which an ancestor appeared. These dishes are filled with the food which all have been eating and then placed before the principal chiefs, who thus have a second supply. At this point the singers begin to beat out an ancient song of the type known as ocala. Each of these has been handed down from the distant past, when some chief, ancestor of X, had it composed for himself at a potlatch. The theme is always about the form or fame of his

[556]* [575] [553] [205] [556]* [324] [252] [415] [539] [533] [556]* [171]

[illegible] a grave or tomb [illegible] dancing-room, rarely, when it is necessary to obtain a portion of a skeleton for magical purposes. In such a case, the coffin lid must be lifted up on the side away from the [illegible] so that he looks within over its upturned edge. A person failing to obey this injunction will soon die.

Burning or deposition near the grave is not mentioned in the actual crematory and artifacts of the deceased. There, too, must be laid dried salmon which a man has smoked for winter use, as well as pulverized berries and other foods made ready by a woman; to eat food prepared by a dead person causes indescribable sickness. In recent years, the coffin, if a man died after oiling and sewing a fish, is allowed to open, and then not unfastened. So, too, the canoe in which a body has been brought home must be destroyed. The Bella Coola are not always able to state reasons for these actions, but it is apparent that the underlying sentiment is that the taboo of death lies upon any object prepared by the deceased, or that has been in contact with a corpse.

The rituals described above may be considered as religious in nature; almost equally important are the social requirements of paying those who have assisted at a funeral. This indebtedness falls on the near relatives, though all members of the mourning family are obligated in a somewhat indefinite manner. If a canoe has been destroyed that did not belong to the deceased, the owner must be recompensed. Presents must be given to the pall-bearers, to the women who bore the flaming bark, to the grave-diggers, to those who delivered laudatory orations, and to all others who assisted in any way. Failure to do so brands the relatives as miners with little respect for the deceased; lavish recompense shows that they have the outlook and minds of chiefs. Consequently, even poor people try to give as generous rewards as possible, both for their own sakes and out of respect to the dead person. Unfortunately, it was impossible to obtain details of the ceremony at which this takes place. The increase in wealth in recent years has made it possible to give memorial potlatches soon after death

37 viewed by the presence of welcome guests. Mention is fre-56 quently made of the journey taken by the dead man to the 69 scenes of his ancestral myths. In addition to being an orator, the speaker must also be a cumsit chief, since it is felt that none other can have the necessary assurance and poise to refer to these most sacred and important subjects. During the speech, assistants blow eagle down over the heads of all present.

Food has been prepared in advance, and as soon as the speaker has finished, the heralds call the guests to partake of it. The first course is then distributed, smoked salmon mixed with olachen grease. Speeches are sometimes delivered during this part of the meal, as well as at the second course, cranberries with more olachen grease. If the guests have arrived during the afternoon, there is no delay between the feast and the ritual that follows, but if they have come during the morning, there is a gap until the evening. Visitors usually time their arrival for the early part of the afternoon.

37 The next event is a speech from one of the foreign chiefs, phrased in grandiloquent terms similar to those used by the 56 Bella Coola orator. He speaks of the manner in which the 69 supernatural Carpenters have hunted the deceased, but reminds 109 his hearers that this is because Alpuntém has decreed it, there-33 fore all must be for the best. He refers to the dead man's crest, and to the manner in which this guise will be available to him.
During the day, the singers have been careful to learn the tune of a mourning song used by the ancestral family of each foreign chief likely to speak. This they now beat out, often assisted by some of the guests, and always accompanied by their singing. No one dances to accompany the song; it is merely a tactful mark of sympathy, implying that the speaker himself knows the grief occasioned by death, and, also, that he too is sufficiently important to be able to use a mourning song. If, as is usually the case, there is more than one influential chief in the party, a second rises to speak, repeating in different terms the sentiments expressed by his predecessor. Another other Bella Coola, asking him to announce that he, Schooner, with Dan and George, was going to hold a memorial potlatch that evening to which all were invited. Robert is not a herald but undertook this duty owing to the absence of qualified heralds. Meanwhile the grave had been filled in and the people began to drift away as it rose to ground level. Their attitude throughout had resembled that of white people at a funeral, and the hilariousness that characterizes so many Bella Coola gatherings was entirely absent except among the playing children. By 4.30 P.M. all had left the scene.

In view of the large number of guests expected it had been decided to hold the memorial potlatch, not in one of the old-fashioned houses, but in the village hall, built according to the white man's style of architecture and illuminated with swinging gasoline lamps. This is a large, rectangular building, undivided by partitions, with a stage at one end and a door at the other. About 6.30 P.M. the singers, Nebuchadnezzar, Jim Pollard, Billy Pollard, Alec Davis, Kimsquit Alec, and Robert Hood, gathered at the hall and seated themselves below the stage. Billy Pollard had prepared a mourning song during the day, Kimsquit Alec another, and it was decided to use two others that were well known to all. The singers sat and practised these four for some time, while at intervals various Bella Coola strolled in, listened for a few minutes, then walked out again. Anyone was allowed to do so, but few availed themselves of the opportunity. Meanwhile Captain Schooner had brought $10 worth of rice, raisins, and condensed milk which he placed beside a huge iron cauldron outside the front door. Jim To-Morrow, a Bella Coola of no great intelligence, volunteered to act as cook and soon had a fire blazing and the food boiling.

About 8.00 P.M. the people began to assemble, bringing their own plates and other utensils. After considerable delay and chatter, the guests took their places in the hall, seating themselves regardless of rank on benches ranged along the two side walls and massed at the rear. By mutual consent a portion of the single row of benches along the left wall was reserved for the Carrion and other foulpoxes. The cook began to bake the raw corn bread provided by Captain Schooner; there were cakes by some of the younger men who poured helpings into the dishes of the guests. Spoons had been forgotten, and there was delay until there were provided by divers split from a block of wood for the purpose. Contrary to ancient usage, no courage was made to serve food to the guests in order of their rank. Men, women, and children were sitting everywhere, the infants kept moving around and crying continually throughout the performance, but no one seemed to be disturbed thereby.

When everyone had eaten, Nathaniel-Nelson, who had been sitting facing the other singers, knelt on the floor to attract attention and then rose to speak. He asked the help of all to make the ceremony a success, and then assuage the grief of the bereaved relatives.

Joe Williams and his daughter had taken their places on the right-hand side of the hall and had requested Willie Mack, a former speaker and influential chief, to assist them in announcing the financial transactions. They spread a blanket on the floor on which the bills were counted, and beside this Willie knelt. Joe gave him a sum of money, which was counted and re-counted; Willie then held it up in the vain hope that it could be seen by everyone in the hall. He announced the amount, also that it was to relway (the divorced) Mrs. George Nelson from her late husband, and that it would "make clean the place where she sat." A young man delivered the money to George who added it to the general stock for later distribution. Next a copper was produced, held up, and presented to him for the same purpose. Meanwhile Joe, assisted by his mother and other relatives, had been counting the money which they proposed to give to Captain Schooner in settlement of the previously contracted debt. One hundred and fifty dollars were produced and handed to Willie Mack, who held them up and announced that it was in return for the $100 given by Captain Schooner on a previous occasion to Joe Williams, his wife, his son, his daughter, his mother, and his stepfather. The bills they after the funeral, the relatives of the dead person burn the [178] remainder of his property, which passes through the earth to [268] the ghost for whom it is intended. Clown-singers have taken their places and begin to hum out music, and presently the recently deceased appears, stepping backwards from the backroom in time to the beating of sticks. He is at once surrounded by his fellows, each anxious to learn the latest news of relatives still alive. This dance is really to welcome the new arrival, and takes place irrespective of his rank. After it has been held, it is hopeless to attempt to rouse a dead person, although that has been done several times during the four days immediately succeeding death.

Only shamans are able to pass down into the land of the [156] dead, though stories are told of inadvertent visits to it in relatively recent times. Human beings are prevented from visiting their dead relatives, but the latter, being supernatural, can come to the earth at will. They are always dreaded, and anyone who hears their whistling or their tongueless chatter comes in his house, and hopes they will pass by. Shamans [156] can understand their speech and to them the dead explain their mission. If the relatives of a dead person have failed to burn [168] all his personal possessions, he returns to earth to inform them, through a shaman, of the omission. The house is searched for anything left and it is burnt at once near the grave, though no one knows how a ghost would punish failure to give him his property. Thoughtful people, remembering the scarcity of [264] food in the land below, frequently give presents to their dead relatives by casting small morsels of food on the side of the [172] central fire nearest the front door, beneath which is a passage to the lower regions. The food becomes magnified as it falls down this, so that even small fragments are sufficient to feed many hungry ghosts. Since the introduction of metal stoves, [177] it has become customary to throw food into a fire kindled for the purpose in the cemetery; the most suitable time is at dusk, although people are always afraid that spectres may be prowling around at that hour. If sufficient presents are not given [156] to a ghost, he informs a shaman of the fact and the latter notifies the relatives of the deceased. If no shaman is consulted, the death does not bestow to help himself. Invisible, and armed with a barbed hook, he approaches a person who is resting and pulls away a crumb which falls to the earth. Should the man stoop to pick this up, the ghost, unfitted of his beard, leaves the offender with his hook, causing toothache or sometimes a sharp pain in the head or stomach. Other illnesses are caused by the ghosts living with invisible arrows those who have offended them. Consequently, no one picks up a crumb which has fallen, since it is impossible to know whether it has been an accident or a mimic. Another indication of a ghost's hunger is loss of a tooth. The loser should throw it as a fee with an invitation to the dead to accept his offering.

The barrier between ghosts and human beings is considered to be little more than a wall of smoke, just too dense for ordinary eyes to penetrate. In early times intercommunication between the divisions of the two worlds was so easy that a dying mother was once allowed to send her dead child on earth. Unfortunately, the woman's mother one day insisted on holding her grandchild, unaware that he was a ghost. Shocked at his appearance, the old woman dropped the child, much to the anger of the dead people.* Ever since that time it has been impossible for human beings to see and talk with their deceased kinsmen. Like so many Bella Coola stories, it is doubtful whether this one is regarded as more than an item of ancient history; it is considered to be a fact, but it is not one that enters into the daily thoughts of the people.

Ghosts frequently come to their old homes at night where dogs can see them. If one of these animals begins to bark and gazes fixedly at a spot where nothing is to be seen, it is because a wraith is standing there and the dog's owner hopes that it will remain invisible. It is true that some individuals have received shamanistic power from a ghost, but more often a visitation is disastrous and to be avoided. A dead person often

*This story is recorded in detail later (I, p. 177).

[illegible] (1912-1924)948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

them conclude it more likely that they will grant his requests. Therefore, a shaman is usually called upon to perform the following rites: 756* 782

(1) Washing the mouth of a person who has died without vomiting from his body the first salmon or eulachon of the season (I, p. [illegible]). [764]

(2) Making sacrifices for the complicated rites of the potlatch (I, p. [illegible]). [556]

(3) Purgation for mainspare before starting on a journey, by pulling eagle down into the air (I, p. 106). [484]

(4) Purgation for sick by means of placing food on the water and blowing eagle down into the air at Menatchie Nose and Kwaxsa (I, p. [illegible]).

In fact a supplication to any supernatural being can be made with greater prospect of success by a shaman than by any other person.

The Power of Shamans

As has been said, a shaman actually has power within himself, and this is so strong that it may be a source of danger to others. If a man should pass behind one so endowed when the latter is eating, his spirit would be drawn from his body into the shaman's mouth, which would close with a click, crushing the spirit and killing the man. This is quite involuntary on the part of the shaman. It happened more than once among the early inhabitants, and since that time people have been very careful not to pass behind an eating shaman; this taboo was still in force until about 1885. A shaman, too, is said to be able to recall a spirit which has left its body, and thus caused illness. It is believed by some that shamans can see the position of a person's tally post, and so judge the length of his life. These examples show the varying beliefs of different Bella Coola concerning the powers of shamans. 756* [761] [264] [178] [755]

But the force within the shaman is really more dangerous to its possessor than to others. As certain "unclean" objects are able to subdue supernatural beings, so do these same ob- 756* 783 841 called out to him, and then remembered no more. It was obvious that she had seen a ghost.

It is over diseases caused by ghosts that a shaman from the dead has power. If a person picks up and eats any morsels which he has dropped he will usually suffer, because, though he thinks the crumbs have fallen, they have really been pulled from his hands by a hungry ghost, who thus showed his desire for food. By picking up and eating the fragments, the man thwarts a dead person who retaliates by forcing some sickness into him. Ghosts may visit this land of the living and ask their relatives for food or clothing, but mortals, unable to hear the speech of the dead, are unaware of the requests of their deceased relatives, and so do not answer them. The irritated ghosts respond by causing sickness. In such cases a shaman from the dead is able to suck out the cause of the ill, and sometimes to display it as a bone, twig, or other small object and at the same time to tell the sufferer what it was that his relatives desired. Like ordinary shamans, a shaman from the dead uses his own discretion whether or not to employ the violent beating of sticks, and like his fellow-practitioner receives payment from those whom he has helped. There are no fixed charges, but a successful shaman is always wealthy.

The intimate contact of ghosts with shamans has already been mentioned in connection with the ability of the latter to learn from the ghost of a murdered person whom he believes to be his slayer.

There is one method of sacrificial curing practised by shamans from the dead alone. If the sickness refuses to yield to ordinary methods, the practitioner makes ten cedar-bark vessels, fills these with grease and places them near the fire, one between it and the door, one on the inner side, and four on either side of it, parallel to the side walls of the house. By each vessel are placed two small wooden figures, roughly carved to represent men, and decorated with dyed and undyed cedar-bark. After endeavouring to suck forth the disease, with or without the assistance of the frenzied beating of sticks, the phases of activity, leaving here only certain rules about diet and a number of prohibitions which hunters must observe. 784

FOOD TABOOS OBSERVED BY WOMEN

Women must not eat bear meat. To do so would damage the ceremonia and cause profuse growth of hair. 262 562

Women of child-bearing age must not eat beaver. To do so would cause a difficult delivery. [841] [826]

A woman of child-bearing age must not eat roasted salmon until the sticks have been removed which hold it in front of the fire. She will bear twins if this injunction is disregarded. [844] [845]

TABOOS OBSERVED BY HUNTERS

No hunter or fisherman may leave the village in the morning if he has been foolish enough to break the night's fast. It is customary to depart at dawn and take a small meal when nearing the hunting or fishing ground. 224 [226] [264]

No hunter may drink water in which dog salmon have been soaked. Animals dislike this liquid and avoid a man with it in his stomach.

When traps have been set, and a party of hunters is sitting around the camp-fire in the evening, no one must pass between it and one of his fellows. If this should be done, heedlessly, animals would disregard the bait that has been set out.

When mountain goat hunters are travelling, the most expert must lead the party. When he sits down, so must the others, and no one can change places with him. This is said to be a custom of the Carriers as well as of the Bella Coola. [171]

When a hunter is cutting up a bear, he must be careful not to cut a vein which is said to run across the chest and down each fore-paw. To do so causes sickness. [825] [753]

When a hunter kills a bear, he must place either the skull or the whole head in a tree near the scene of the kill, otherwise he will become blind. In some families, the men remove only an eye, place it in a notched stick and set this under an over- [732]

[Secret Society Initiation]

X sometimes receives two generations at his initiation, one from each parent, or from some other immediate relative. In this case both are expounded. The singers listen intently, knowing that they will never be called upon to compose songs on the tlama, or tlamun. According to some informants they immediately sing one, as if they had just created it, though it was really prepared in advance. The tsalaxiat listen until they have mastered it.

Helpers now distribute the food provided by X's father, or whoever is responsible for his initiation. At every tsalaxiat ceremonial the marshals are the first recipients, then the singers, and finally the others without distinction. As the guests are eating, X's father gives presents to all, without deference to rank. An announcer calls out:

"There are [for example] ten bear-skins from X's mother. They are to obtain for him his cedar-bark bracelets."

These goods are then distributed. Similarly other gifts from various relatives are handed out for his anklets, his blanket, his collar, his head-dress, and all other parts of his clothing. As each item of his ceremonial costume is validated, X dons the prepared article. A novice's head-dress consists of a round roll of dyed cedar-bark, covering a grass frame; in Ilaxo and the other villages of the upper valley this is decorated with a tuft of swan's down. The tsalaxiat of these villages also wear a distinctive decoration consisting of a swan's skin with the feathers attached. In recent years it has been customary to pile all the goods together and distribute them as ala'ti, which has the significance of "something that has vanished for the novice's dyed cedar-bark." Theoretically, the aim of the donor is to bestow his presents on all equally, but if he finds that he has some remaining, he gives these to the chiefs, or to the relatives of someone whom he expects will soon be a novice. None of the goods used in general distributions are returnable, but a chief who receives an extra gift at the end usually remembers from whom it was received and cancels his indebtedness at the earliest opportunity. There is no close connection between the disbursements and the worth of the predictions does last not for one year, but for four. X is not subject to any other restrictions. If he wishes to go hunting he can remove his cedar-bark collar and long is for convenience in the forest near his village, endeavoring it on his return. The katsina show considerable interest in their new member, not only by warning him what he must not do, but by teaching him how to dance and to growl or make other of the necessary, but unusual, noises. During the remainder of the ceremonial season X is required to attend every katsina dance, thereby learning much of the ceremonial, and during the following summer his relatives, especially if food is plentiful, frequently invite the katsina to their house. The singers hear out well-known tunes, or practise those which will be required for the following winter; if a song has been composed for X he dances in time to it, in the style proper to his prerogative. Formerly, when there were many novices, dances of this type took place frequently and were useful in giving constant practice to singers and neophytes alike. As no calls from supernatural patrons can come at this time of year, it follows that all such dances are of a non-sacred nature, although the uninitiated are excluded. During his period as a novitiate, X has one privilege; he can take food from anyone at any type of ceremony. It is remembered that one novice was even bold enough to take food which had been placed as an offering for the dead.

[Racket Society Initiation]

When the next katsina season opens, X attends every performance. This is probably the most thrilling and nerve-racking period in his life. He does not know exactly when he will be allowed to give his dance, since that is a matter of arrangement between his relatives and the marshals, but he knows that the time will soon be at hand. When the great day, or rather night, actually comes, X is usually in a state of abject terror. The rite itself does not differ from those about to be described except that the first song relates the manner in which X found the repository. But the mental attitude of X differs greatly from that of an old performer. One informant,

[illegible] 575*
796*
834
828

[illegible] Kusiut dances for the rest of the ceremonial season. During this period he remains secluded within his house, and the uninitiated willingly avoid him, believing him to be mentally deranged. He attends every dance dance, where his lowest gestures helps to frighten the uninitiated. If strangers from Kitasoo or Tsi'ie visit Bella Coola, he at once becomes frenzied, rushes to the beach and scratches them, precisely as a Cannibal would do; in this case he must be purified in the same manner. A Scratcher always saves goods to recompense scratched foreigners. If it is the first time that X has danced, he must remain secluded for the following summer, and give his ceremony the next winter. During the warm months he remains within the back-room of his house, and though some of the uninitiated know of his presence, still believing him mad they do not intrude upon his privacy. The coming of foreigners during this period excites him to frenzy and he scratches them, irrespective of the time of year.

It might be mentioned that some Scratcher names are indicative of the dancer's function, and others, such as "The Cause of Fear," have reference to his prowess. [551]

THE BREAKER DANCE

When a Bella Coola speaks of the fear which kusiut dances cause the uninitiated, he almost invariably cites in order the Cannibal, Scratch, and Breaker dances. Kulusiut with these three prerogatives have no more privileges than other members of the society, nor are they considered superior in rank, but similarity in their functions leads to an almost automatic association. If questioned further, a Bella Coola will usually say that he regards the Cannibal dance to be first, with the Scratch and Breaker equal, but less important. Breakers share with Cannibals and Scratchers the prerogatives of not blackening their faces; of having as theme for their songs the land

575*
796*
424 781
554 302
533
264

J: McIlwraith E-3 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

[The Breaker Dance]

* 575 * 796 above; of sitting in one of the back corners and receiving the first food at ritual meals; of paying those on whom they [424] coercise their prerogative, and of liability to frenzy on arrival [539] of strangers. This last prerogative, if it may be so termed, [264] lasts for the ceremonial season, and in the case of a novice, for the following summer as well. Moreover, Breakers do not destroy the goods of fellow-Breakers, Scratchers, or Cannibals.

* 575 * 796 424 539 In view of the similarity of this rite to those already described, no effort was made to collect full details. Different Breakers have minor variations in ritual, similar to those already illustrated. The following is an account of the manner in which the Breaker, Syek of Snaitli, performed the rite a number of years ago. As on previous occasions, it will be convenient to use the present tense, and to refer to the dancer as X. Syek gave the following account of the origin of his prerogative.

Long, long ago, soon after the first people had come to this earth, a marriage was about to take place in the village of Snaitlat. At that distant period the people were so powerful that they could themselves initiate kusiut dances, and the bridegroom determined to do so in honour of the event. He chose to imitate the actions of Sanaitpumalsi Alqantam, one of Alqantam's sons, whom he remembered having seen throwing stones in his father's house before he, the bridegroom, was sent down to this world.[a] When goods were piled up ready for distribution as marriage presents, the man began to hurl stones around; one of them ricochetted from a box, struck his bride and killed her. This unforeseen accident solved the question of his name, as by universal consent it was decided that he should be called, Syek, "He of the Faulty Aim."

Since that time a law has been enforced that no Breaker may throw a rock except ceremonially during his dance, and the marshals punish one who disobeys this injunction. If a Breaker is in the forest with a number [231] of kukusiut, it does not matter if he fails to uphold this tradition; the essential is that the uninitiated do not see him cast a stone, even at a yelping dog, the usual reason for doing so in Bella Coola.

* 575 * 796 When X wishes to dance he must first obtain the consent of the marshals in the usual manner. He also arranges with kukusiut to have boxes and other wooden objects placed within cause though an infant in arms, though uninitiated, can be brought to dances by its mother; distinctions between rich and poor, slave and freeman, become of slight importance; all that really matters is whether a person is or is not a dancer. Membership in the society seems to the uninitiated the most desirable thing in life, although their fears are always so strong that they never cease to dread actual admission. The feeling of class consciousness which exists in a somewhat mild form at other seasons of the year, gives place to a powerful sentiment of superiority on the part of members of the society over those who are not so fortunate. Even the respect normally shown to chiefs is submerged since they, too, are subject to the rule of the marshals. 575* 796* 182 571 [781]

[776]

[a] This being is also called Nuslowamuslam, "The Cherished One."

Apart entirely from this attitude of superiority and inferiority, is the bond of fellowship engendered among members of the society by the rites. Whatever happens, the uninitiated must be deceived. Moreover, the psychological effect of gathering nightly in a body for a specific purpose is tremendous. Night after night they eat together; night after night they listen to the words of the marshals, who impress on them the need for co-operation and secrecy, who hold before them the good example set by their fellows who have carried out rites successfully, who emphasize the fact that they are doing as their fathers did. The ceremonial import is of greatest consequence at all these gatherings, but when the uninitiated have withdrawn the kukusiut relax somewhat and enjoy themselves. The food itself is always of the best and some of the usual restrictions are removed. It is, for example, the only time that women are allowed to eat the flesh of seals. If this delicacy is provided the marshals enjoy the tidbits, but after Cannibals, novices, and others have received preferential treatment, the remainder is distributed to all and sundry. [262] [562] [264]

It has been stated by some writers, especially those unfamiliar with the significance of native ceremonial life, that the dances of the coastal tribes are orgies of immorality. This point was investigated with care and it may be stated posi- 575* 796* 577 273 834

515 sionally, in a half-hearted manner, but it is not unusual for a man to allow the basin of water in which he makes his ablutions to remain standing for two or three weeks. Not many [177] years ago the Carriers taught their neighbours to make a kind [296] of soap from the ashes of burnt cottonwood sticks thrown into [388] water; with this clothes are washed irregularly and in most cases from sheer necessity only. In former times bathing was [785] a semi-sacred rite, but this fell into disuse with the passing of [177] the old religion, and the use of soap and water merely for the sake of cleanliness has not become a daily habit. The women [291] have more vanity; the younger girls especially like to have new clothes, though they wear them carelessly, heedless of fit. [196] An effort is often made to clean up for ceremonial dances, but it entails little more than the removal of the more obvious dirt and the putting on, over unchanged undergarments, of a sweater. Pride in personal appearance, love of tidiness, delight in a clean house, are all quite foreign to the Bella Coola.

356 Probably the reason for lack of comforts in the houses is simply that the people do not feel the need for them. They [264] consider it no hardship to sit on a rickety chair, scoop up food [231] from a common dish and, if they think of it, throw morsels [152] down to the dog or the cat. The smell, the flies, the dirt, the chaos do not concern them. Capable of undergoing privations, hardships, and even sufferings, they think neither of the comfort of themselves nor of others. Their domestic animals are 231 often treated abominably, not through lack of affection or cruelty, but from callousness. More than once the writer has seen a favourite dog steal a piece of food from the table. Its master, after a furious blow or kick at it, would suddenly, as if by inspiration, throw a choice bit to the animal, saying:

"Why, he must have been hungry!"

Though the Bella Coola feel a kinship with animals unknown to the white man, it is not combined with any recognition of their feelings as living creatures. There are, of course, many exceptions, but on the whole public opinion demands [577] generosity and kindness only towards human members of the group. The moral code is not concerned with animals.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

#192
[824] ist'nik: Tree, probably birch.
Kaiaskal': One of the first men to settle at Qwiqui in the beginning of time.
Kaiskha: One of the first men to settle at Ewaldi in the beginning of time.
Kalhem: Bella Bella woman mentioned in an ancient story.
Kalal: Kimsquit man.
[222] Kalqum: Kactat name of a Bella Coola man.
[262] kalqum: The gathering of fern root for food.
Kalqumetum: Name conferred on their sister by the first settlers at Sisa in the beginning of time.
Ka'lus-a: Kimsquit man mentioned in an ancient story.
[585] kalumkhlumta: Public ceremony, previous to marriage, of the bride's ancestral myths in order to cause children to be born.
[842] kalqum: Ritual on the day before a marriage, including the cration of myths by the bride's relatives, the chanting of ancestors, and the singing of songs of all kinds.
[576] Kamai-a: 1—Mysterious supernatural woman.
2—"Please," or "Thank You," a word implying benison.
Kamalong[w]: 1—One of the first men to settle at Nalimo in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Nuqkalz in the beginning of time.
3—Name of the first sky that fell in the beginning of time.
Kamalzlil: Lazy supernatural beings who accompanied Nankynum.
Kamalymus: Man mentioned in an origin myth of Alqatlad.
Kamalzlalu: Kactat name of a Kimsquit man.
Kamalzung[w]: House brought to earth by first settlers at Nuqkalz in the beginning of time.
[824] kamil': Kelp.
[227] kamula: Cod hook.
kamut: Termination.
[824] kanaw-i: 1—Shell fungus.
2—Kactat dance in which a shell fungus is used.
Kanilhu: One of the first women to settle at Sisa in the beginning of time.
kas-tmat: Ceremonial crest.
Kamsia: Herald of a Tal-is chief in the beginning of time.
kasbu: Trap.
Kasuhlilum: 1—Daughter of the first settlers at Salia in the beginning of time.
2—Daughter of Qiqmat, one of the first settlers in the upper Bella Coola valley in the beginning of time.
[264] kauilku: Assemblage of the people for a meal of any kind.
Kauqulkum: One of the first men to settle at Rivers Inlet in the beginning of time.
Kawalhqlzu-a: Supernatural berry-picker resident in the land of ghosts.
[825] kejai: 1—Hump-back salmon.
2—Convex transverse beam near front and rear of house.
3—Mountain on the Dean River.
Kepsis: Kactat name of a Kimsquit man.
Kiatsu: Man mentioned in an ancient story of Raven.
[752] kiatat: The seeking for shaman's power by a lad.
[825] kiawis: Golden eagle.
kiehu: Top, toy.
[524]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

#192 nalaimis: Synonym for gano'o, the large cone-shaped sound whistle.
[534] Nalaq-ait: Side valley of the Kimsquit River.
Nalaq-kai: Side valley of the Kimsquit River.
Nalqaxbawa-a, "Heaven River": River flowing from the north into the northern corner of the head of North Bentinck Arm. The Anglicized form is Nalaxbawa-creek.
[103] na'nqaleis: Items supernaturally born from another at sea level.
[823] Nemaiu-a: Lemay village.
Nemiliah, "The Mother of Dogs": Name given to a Bella Bella woman in an ancient story.
Nezalk: Bella Coola valley.
[101] Nezalkmq: Inhabitants of the Bella Coola valley.
Nqaw: Kwakiut name of a Sisaq man.
Nsaxm: Name of a female conqueror.
Nqaxbwlaxs, "The Light Giver": One of the names of the supreme god.
nqaw: Light.
Nsaxin: Kwakiut name of a Bella Coola Cannibal.
Nsaxmalkin: E'qas name of a Kimsquit man.
Nqaxmlaxwqa, "Stick-Breaker": Name taken by daughter of the first settlers at Sisaq in the beginning of time.
[825] nsaxxaxal: Mountain goat with long hair on its chest.
nsaxxiwat, "The Silent Night": The hushed assemblage of kwakiut after departure of a Cannibal.
[227] nsaxxaxim: Cross-piece which holds open mouth of shaken net.
Nsawala: Village on Dean Channel below Kimsquit.
[585] nsawmalaxkum: Public promise by the parents of bride and bridegroom on the wedding night that names will be provided for expected children. This is [425] combined with an exchange of origin myths. The term is also used for a similar promise of rights to hunting grounds, although the greeting of this is nsaxmaxin.
[828] Nsaw: Mountain near Sisaq.
nsyakkikamut: Person who wanders away from home in dependency.
Nsyal-skin: One of the first women to settle at Tal'a in the beginning of time.
Nu'yaa-taiw: Land of salmon.

o

o'alqaw: Kimsquit term for a hill, orchard.
O'ai: Kwakiut lad mentioned in an ancient story.
[824] ohal: Grass with edible roots growing on tide-flats.
[262] Olqimsqy: Valley pre-emptied by one of the first settlers at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.
Olqimsum: Herald who came down to the Dean River in the beginning of time.
olq: 1—The kwakiut perspective of something.
2—Bad, adjective.
Olqim-i: Kwakiut name of a Sisaq man.
Oilkqaiw, "The Worthless One": Name assumed by a woman in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.
[825] Omakkamut, "The One that Changes Itself": Supernatural name of spring salmon.
[264] omalal: Assemblage of the people for food of any kind.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Cannibal Dance]

The most feared of all Cannibals are those who have the 575* unusual prerogative of eating corpses. At present (1922), 796*
there is only one man with this right, whereas at least seven can bite the living. His prerogative was recently obtained [424] from the people of Rivers' Inlet, although the ritualistic de- [177] vouring of corpses was well known to the Bella Coola in former days. All informants agreed, however, that the actual eating of a body was practically unknown.[11] Even when one was provided and the Cannibal dragged it from house to house, accompanied by an escort of kukusiut, though he sank his teeth into the flesh and pulled forth morsels of the carcass, he invariably disposed of them as soon as he was out of sight of the uninitiated, as in the case of the dog. Of course, blood and small pieces of flesh must have been swallowed inadvertently, but the rite was always essentially ritualistic, not real.
More often, the "corpse" consisted of a wooden frame-work, shaped like a human body, and covered with the scraped skins of deer or dogs. The interior was filled with the flesh of an animal, and the whole buried in the graveyard until the meat had become foul. The uninitiated, from a distance, watched the exhuming of this object and concluded that it really was a long-buried body. Fear prevented them from making a close inspection, so that the defects of the imitation were not apparent. The frames were kept hidden from year to year; [688] an inquisitive non-member who chanced to stumble upon one would have to be initiated or die.

On account of the long time that has elapsed since a complete corpse-eating Cannibal dance was carried out, it was found impossible to obtain a detailed account of the ritual.
This deficiency is unimportant since all informants agreed that it closely resembled other Cannibal dances.

Like other Cannibals, one who has the prerogative of eating [424] dead human flesh can perform as often as he desires, subject [787] only to the approval of the marshals, who have no hesitation

[11] Apart from this ceremonial eating, no trace of cannibalism was found among the Bella Coola. [266]

575 her the secrets of the Kû'siût. She wore ornaments of red cedar-bark
773 around her head, wrists, and ankles; her face was blackened, her hair 776 strewn with eagle-down. She commanded the woman to dance in the same way as she saw her dancing. The people should accompany her dance with songs, and, after she had finished, they should dance with masks. She said, 'Whenever a person sees me your people shall dance the Kû'siût. If you do not do so I shall punish you with death and sickness. In summer, while I am in my house, you must not dance the Kû'siût.'

Ever since that time the Bilqula dance the Kû'siût. When a man has 575 seen Anâlikûtsai'n sitting before her cave he will invite the people to a 776 Kû'siût. A ring made of red and white cedar-bark is hung up in his house, and the uninitiated are not allowed to enter it. Only in the evening, when dances are performed, they may look on, standing close to the door. As soon as the dances are over they must retire from the taboo house. Each Kû'siût lasts three days.

535 The various dances performed by members of the Kû'siût are also the 575 property of the gentes, and the right of performing them is restricted
614 to members of the gens. They must not be given to a daughter's husband, 424 as is the case with the Sisan'kn dances (see above), but belong to the members of the gens alone. They may, however, be loaned and borrowed
[424] by members of the gens, who have a right to a particular dance, but who do not own it. Permission to use a mask or dance is obtained from the owner by payments. The owner may reclaim the dance or the borrower
575 may return it at any time. Membership of the Kû'siût is obtained through an initiation. At this time the novice is given his Kû'siût name, which [551] he retains throughout life. Each gens has its peculiar Kû'siût names,
[428] which are inherited by young persons from their parents or from other relatives. Thus a young man who had the name of Pô'pô until he was about seventeen years old obtained at his initiation the name of Tl'akô'ôtl. I have not reached a very clear understanding of the details of the initia-
[554] tion; it seems that the dance is simply given to the novice in the same way as the Sisan'kn, this initiation being connected with a potlatch. But [787] still it seems possible that he must 'dream' of the dance which he is to perform. Only the highest degrees of the Kû'siût have to pass through a religious ceremony of some importance. The highest degrees are the [554] xlaqô'tla (the Hâ'mats'a of the Kwakiutl), the Ô'lxq (the Nô'tlmatl of the Kwakiutl), and the Dâ'tla (the Nô'ntaistatl of the Hâ'iltsuk). These grades are also hereditary. A Kû'siût novice may acquire them at once at his first initiation.

When the xlaqô'tla is initiated he goes into the forest, where he 575 encounters his guardian spirit. It is believed that he goes up to the sun, 785 and formerly he had to take human flesh along for food. The chiefs hold 787 a council the night preceding the beginning of the ceremonies, and anyone who wanted to show his liberality offered one of his slaves to be
[266] killed, in order to serve as food for the xlaqô'tla. The offer was accepted and a payment of from ten to twenty blankets made for the slave. The latter was killed, and the members of the xlaqô'tla order devoured one-half of the body before the departure of the novice to the woods. There the latter is tied up and left to fast. He may stay there for twenty or thirty days until the spirit appears to him and takes him up to the sun, 575 where he is initiated. Early one morning he returns, and is heard outside the houses. He has lost all his hair, which, it is believed, has been torn

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NEA Bellacoola NEA

575 796 them. Let the chief give them red cedar-bark." The people take small pieces of blankets, and sew red cedar-bark on to them in designs corresponding to the paintings on the faces of these deities, and they give these to the deities in order to appease them. Then they throw grease into the fire. During all this time E'xem stands in the rear of the house; and when a painting has been finished, the man who offers it to the deity shouts, "Xemsemult'ts.la t'sis'tsa'!" ("This is Xemsemult'ts.la.") And E'xem sings, "Yayh'lamts'tk'a wa k'wsisnal'x.at, t'nix' tal'ya; ala'sa.'a'nsmaxsma nsak'sainsnal'x nsalkalsmsa'ya." As soon as he has finished his song, a loud noise is heard on the roof, as though a heavy stone were falling down. E'xem arises and performs a dance, while the noise of whistles is heard proceeding from him.

575 I am not familiar with the details of the ceremonial, and shall proceed to record the principal characteristics of the various societies. The Cannibal is initiated in the House of Myths by Ba'xaus.la. I recorded above (p. 34) how a young man was initiated by this spirit, and how he was returned to his friends. The return of the Cannibal is accompanied by ceremonies similar to those recorded in this tradition. It seems that the ceremonies of the [184] Cannibals of various families are much alike, each having a tradition of its own referring to the initiation. It is believed that all the Cannibals, during their initiation, go up to the sky. I was told that on this journey they have to take human flesh along for food. It is said that in former times the chiefs held a council the night preceding the beginning of the ceremonies, and any one who wanted to show his liberality offered one of his slaves to be killed in order to serve as food for Ba'xaus.la. The offer was accepted, and a payment made for the slave. The latter was killed, and the members of the [266] Ba'xaus.la order devoured one-half of the body before the departure of the novice to the woods.

The spirit appears to the novice while he is in the woods, and takes him up to the House of Myths, where he is initiated. Early one morning he returns, and is heard outside of the houses. He has lost all his hair except a little in the median line of the head. It is believed that it has been torn off by the strong wind blowing in the higher regions. Some Cannibals do not devour human flesh, but tear dogs to pieces or devour raw salmon. The 575 796 ceremonial consists in pacifying the Cannibal, and exorcising the spirit that possesses him. This is the object of the ka'xist ceremonial. After a Cannibal has returned, the people try to capture him. When he is first heard to approach, the speaker, whose face is painted black, and who wears a cedar-bark ring, and is covered with eagle-down, shouts, "Tsa'ma'n'an tak'axta'l.a. tast.'al'on'al. P'ala'xtsalsstsnal' tsa'ma'n'an tsaiswalt'l.a. t'as.'aiotst'al'!" ("Arise, it may be our Cannibal. Awake!") The Cannibal is accompanied by four assistants, who are called Alilpa, and who from time to time utter woman to dance in the same way as she saw her dancing. The people should accompany her dance with songs, and, after she had finished, they should dance with masks. She said, "Whenever a person sees me, your people shall dance the kû'sint. If you do not do so, I shall punish you with death and sickness. In summer, while I am in my house, you must not dance the kû'sint." 575 773 776 535

8:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1897
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Ever since that time the Bi'lxula dance the kû'sint. When a man has seen Anaklkuie'ai'x· sitting in front of her cave, he will invite the people to a kû'sint. A ring made of red and white cedar bark is hung up in his house, and the uninitiated are not allowed to enter it. Only in the evening, when dances are performed, they may look on, standing close to the door. As soon as the dances are over, they must retire from the taboo house. Each kû'sint lasts three days. 575 776 535

The various dances performed by members of the kû'sint are also property of the clans, and the right to perform them is restricted to members of the clan. They must not be given to a daughter's husband, as is the case with the sisan'k· dances, but belong to the members of the clan, who have a right to a particular dance, but who do not own it. Permission to use a mask or dance is obtained from the owner by payments. The owner may reclaim the dance or the borrower may return it at any time. Membership of the kû'sint is obtained through an initiation. At this time the novice is given his kû'sint name, which is inherited by young persons from their parents or from other relatives. Thus a young man who had the name of Pû'pû until he was about seventeen years old, obtained at his initiation the name of L'akû'ot. I have not reached a very clear understanding of the details of the initiation; it seems that the dance is simply given to the novice in the same way as the sisan'k·, this initiation being connected with a potlatch. But still it seems possible that he must "dream" of the dance which he is to perform. Only the highest degrees of the kû'sint have to pass through a religious ceremony of some importance. The highest degrees are the xlaxû'la (the hâ'mata'a of the Kwakiutl), the ô'lex (the nû'lmat. of the Kwakiutl), and the dâ'lia (the nû'ntsistalat. of the Kwakiutl). These grades are also hereditary. A kû'sint novice may acquire them at once at his first initiation. 535 575 [426] [551] [428] [556] [171] [554]

When the xlaxû'la is initiated, he goes into the forest, where he encounters his guardian spirit. It is believed that he goes up to the sun, and formerly he had to take human flesh along for food. The chiefs held a council the night preceding the beginning of the ceremonies, and anyone who wanted to show his liberality offered one of his slaves to be killed in order to serve as food for the xlaxû'la. The offer was accepted, and a payment of from ten to twenty blankets was made for the slave. The latter was killed, and the members of the xlaxû'la order devoured one-half of the body before the departure of the novice to the woods. There the latter was tied up and left to fast. He may stay there for twenty or thirty days until the spirit appears 575 785 787 [266]

8:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1897
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575 to him and takes him up to the sun, where he is initiated. Early one [785] morning he returns, and is heard outside the houses. He has lost all [787] his hair, which, it is believed, has been torn out by the strong breeze blowing in the higher regions. He is quite naked, and bites everyone [55] whom he can lay hold of. If he can not catch anyone he will bite his own arm. It is believed that he has lost his soul, which fled from the [774] body when the spirit came to him. Therefore the shamans must try [756] for four days to recapture his soul. The night after they have recovered it the xlaxō'ła dances, clothed in a bearskin and wearing a large [292] head ring, heavy bracelets and anklets, all made of red cedar bark.
[301] Sometimes he appears wearing the mask of the S'a'ıpata (fig. 300), the spirit which initiated him. This mask corresponds exactly to that [532] of BaxbakualanuXsi'wae of the Kwakiutl. Some xlaxō'ła do not [171] bite people, but merely devour raw salmon or tear dogs to pieces and devour them. Those who bite people will also devour corpses. The xlaxō'ła has to observe a number of regulations.
[266]
[525] For four years after his initiation he must not [834] gamble. He must stay away from his wife for one year, but this period is being reduced to one month. For two or three months he must not leave his house.

Fig. 300.
MASK OF THE S'A'IPATA.
Bella Coola.
Cat. No. 18600, U. S. N. M.
Collected by F. Boas.

The ō'lex (the laugher) and the dā'tla (the thrower) do not go into the woods to be initiated, but both must fast three days before their first dance. The ō'lex "makes fun of everything" and scratches people with his nails. The dā'tla carries stones and sticks and breaks household goods and canoes. If he has destroyed some object during the day, he pays for it at night when he dances. The ō'lex and the dā'tla, after they have danced, must stay in their houses for one month.

575 If a person transgresses the laws of the kō'sint, for instance, when 638 the xlaxō'ła gambles, or when a man performs a dance to which he has no right, also when a person derides the ceremonies or makes a mistake in dancing, his punishment is death. The chiefs assemble in [292] council and the offender is called before the court. After his offense has been proved, he is asked whether he is willing to suffer the penalty of death. If he is not willing and one of his relatives is found willing 575 to take the penalty on himself, the guilty party is spared and the sub-688 stitute killed in his stead. The execution of the judgment is intrusted 754 to the shaman, who bewitches the condemned person by throwing dis-756 ease into him or by poisoning him in some other (supernatural?) way. The object thrown by the shaman is a shell, bone, or finger nail, around

1: McIlwraith, E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

THE WASH-BASIN

A third supernatural element which must be in good condition if a Bella Coola is to prosper in life, is a nuskelusta, wash-basin. In the land above, Ālquntām has a large one filled with water which, having been constructed by himself, is replete with power. When a child is born, a small part of this receptacle, with its contents, is reserved for him; the supernatural artisans choose the actual section, but it is Ālquntām who gives them the ability to do so. A fortunate man, whose ventures are successful and to whom goods are attracted, is said to have a good wash-basin; whereas the ill-luck of an unfortunate person is attributed, among other reasons, to the small size of his supernatural vessel. The Bella Coola have no clear ideas about the connection between an individual and his wash-basin. Some state that it remains in the land above; others believe that its intangible essence comes to a child at birth and grows up with him, always near his body, as if it were the offspring of the basin in the land above. As long as it remains in motion the owner continues in good health and prosperity, but if it becomes sluggish he falls ill. Long ago, shamans knew how to reanimate a wash-basin, but since the time of the first people, when supernatural ability was common, this has been a lost art. Senile decay is attributed to listlessness of this possession.

River water, being a creation of Ālquntām, is akin to the water in his basin above. Boys are always advised to bathe in the river at dawn; the act is termed āskelusam, a word connected with nuskelusta. A prayer is uttered while washing. The combination of verbal appeal and the application of water strengthens the petitioner's wash-basin and so increases his chances for prosperity. Until a few years ago, this practice was almost universal. Water is always considered a strange substance, obviously a supernatural creation, and believed to be the chief means of sustenance for a child after being weaned.[86]

[86] This may be a mere rationalization.

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

726 hair with white eagle-down. Warriors when on a war party must not [714] drink more than four mouthfuls of water, else they would be killed. A watchman was appointed in each canoe, who sat in the bow. On landing [271] near the village of their enemies they divided themselves into a number of parties, one house of the village being assigned to each. Then, early in the morning, when all were asleep, they rushed up to the village uttering their war cry 'sus!' They took a stand at the fire which burns in the centre of the house, and if any one of the enemies succeeded in taking up his arms and came out of his bedroom they killed him. Then 727 they entered the bedrooms, killed the men, and took the women and children along as slaves. The heads of the dead were cut off, the houses burnt, and they returned home singing war-songs. The heads which they had taken along were then scalped, and the scalps tied to each end of a pole.
When they approached their village one man stood up in the bow of each canoe and swung the pole to which the scalps were attached, and they all sang songs, in which their deeds were recounted. The scalps were valued the higher the longer and fuller the hair. They were used in the Sisan'ku.

648 The following tales of war expeditions offer some points of interest.
726 About thirty or forty years ago there was a famine at Bella Coola. The people went overland to Knight Inlet, which belongs to the Tenaqtaq, a [731] tribe of the Kwakiutl, to fish there. The Tenaqtaq made fun of them, took from them the fish they caught, tore the blankets from the backs of the women, and seduced many of them. Finally the Bilqula returned home. There they held a council and resolved to make war upon the Tenaqtaq. The Tinneh joined them in this expedition. They crossed the mountains in four days. When they approached Knight Inlet they sent two spies in advance, who were to count the number of houses in the village of the Tenaqtaq. Early in the morning they attacked the houses, and killed a great many men. The Tenaqtaq could not escape, as they were hemmed in by the river. The Bilqula slew them with knives, lances, and stone axes. They took away the clothes of the women, leaving them naked, and subjected them to shameful insults in revenge for the disgrace put upon their wives and daughters. Then they burnt the village.

About thirty-five years ago the Talio'mu were attacked by the Kwakiutl. Originally they intended to attack Nuqa'lku, but the raven, according to the narrator, changed their mind, as he always protects the village of Nuqa'lku. They came in many canoes, while most of the Talio'mu were at the lake, which is situated above that town, fishing.
Four men were in charge of the village, and a number of old men and women had also remained at home. The father of Nusk'zlu'sta, who told me of these events, happened to be out picking berries, accompanied by his wife. He saw the canoes passing by and kept himself hidden. The [712] village of Talio was at that time surrounded by a strong stockade, which consisted of a double row of palisades crowned with thorns. At each corner there was a strong box fastened on the stockade like a tower.
Here watchmen were stationed, who were able to shoot at the enemy while being themselves protected. At that time the Talio'mu had only four guns. The Kwakiutl sent out two spies, who reported that the village was well fortified. The Talio'mu had seen the canoes coming and were on their guard. The Kwakiutl thought that they would not be able to enter the village until after the stockade had been destroyed.

5: Smith E-5 (1920-1923)1929 NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Carrier NE7
Tsimshian NE15
Sekani NE14

UMBELLIFERAE, PARSLEY FAMILY

Osmorrhiza sp., Sweet Cicely

Bella Coola: Ten to fifteen little pieces of root, as large as the end joint of the thumb, ground by rubbing on a stone; two cupfuls placed in water warmed to blood heat, and two cupfuls of the decoction (according to the strength of the patient) taken internally as an emetic. Decoction acted (sometimes as a purgative instead of an emetic) within five or ten minutes, but lost its power if heated too much. Warm water taken afterwards until the patient vomited four or five times and the stomach was entirely cleaned. Used also for pneumonia.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Heracleum lanatum Michx., Cow Parsnip

Bella Coola: Roots crushed, baked (or boiled in a box with hot stones), and applied as a poultice for boils. If too hot a poultice injured the skin.

Raw, uncrushed root inserted in an opened boil and left from half a day to a day. Pus said to come away with the root.

See also white fir (page 50), balsam fir (page 50), black cottonwood (page 54), and false bugbane (page 57).

Southern Carrier: Blossoms steeped in eulachon or other oil and the mixture rubbed on the body to keep off flies and mosquitoes.

Northern Carrier: Roots applied to swellings and bruises.

Sikani: Roots mashed and applied to swellings of neuralgia or rheumatism.

Gitksan: Roots mashed and applied to boils, rheumatic and other swellings.

Angelica genuflexa Nutt.

Bella Coola: Roots boiled and decoction taken internally as a purgative. Not an emetic. Sometimes used raw, but never roasted.

Gitksan: Roots well boiled with twigs of squashberry (Viburnum pauciflorum Raf.) from which the bark had not been removed, and decoction taken internally for headache and weak eyes.

Ligusticum scothicum L., Lovage

Bella Coola: Leaves spread over a hot stone or stones and used as a medicinal bed for the sick.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Cicuta Douglasii (DC.) C. and R., Water Hemlock, Poison Parsnip

Bella Coola: Roots used as a purgative.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

ARALIACEAE, GINSENG FAMILY

Aralia nudicaulis L., Sarsaparilla

Bella Coola: Roots boiled in a box with hot stones, and decoction taken internally as often as desired for pain in the stomach, or merely as a beverage. Nowadays sweetened with a little sugar. Stem, or its bark, not used.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Gitksan: Not used.

5: Smith E-5 (1920-1923)1929 NE6 Bellacoola NE9
Carrier NE7
Tsimshian NE15

Ledum groenlandicum Oeder, LABRADOR TEA
Bella Coola: Leaves boiled, and the decoction used as a simple beverage, or for pain in the stomach, but not for diarrhoea or vomiting. Neither an emetic nor a purgative.
Southern Carrier: Not used formerly, now as a beverage only.
Gitksan: Leaves boiled, and the decoction used as a diuretic, or merely as a beverage.

Gaultheria shallon Pursh, SALAL
Bella Coola: Leaves toasted, pulverized by rubbing, and applied to cuts.
Southern Carrier: Not used.

LABIATAE, MINT FAMILY

Prunella vulgaris L., HEAL-ALL
Bella Coola: Roots, leaves, and blossoms washed, boiled, and a cupful of the weak decoction taken internally for the heart. Not used for diarrhoea or vomiting.
Southern Carrier: Not used.
Gitksan: Not used.

Mentha canadensis L., MINT
Bella Coola: Entire plant boiled, and the decoction taken internally, as often as desired, for pain in the stomach. Not used for vomiting, constipation, or diarrhoea.
Southern Carrier: Entire plant boiled, and a cupful of the decoction taken internally for the stomach, colds, lung affections, and various ailments.
Gitksan: Not used.

SCROPHULARIACEAE, FIGWORT FAMILY

Castilleja miniata Dougl., PAINT-BRUSH
Bella Coola: Not used.
Southern Carrier: Not used.
Gitksan: Entire plant boiled, and the decoction taken internally for bleeding, stiff lungs, sore eyes, and lame back, possibly caused by kidney trouble. A purgative and diuretic.
Seeds boiled and the decoction taken internally for coughs.

CAPRIFOLIACEAE, HONEYSUCKLE FAMILY

Lonicera involucrata Banks., BLACK TWIN-BERRY
Bella Coola: Leaves chewed and cud applied for itch.
Leaves chewed and applied to boils, after they were cut open, to draw out the poison.
Leaves crushed and applied to burns and sores of gonorrhoea.
Bark toasted, pulverized, and applied to sores of gonorrhoea.
Bark boiled and decoction taken internally for cough.
Southern Carrier: Bark boiled for five hours, and the decoction used daily as an eye-wash. Roots, leaves, and berries not used.
Northern Carrier: See scrub pine (page 49).
Gitksan: Fresh juice of berries used in sore eyes. Inner bark (when berries not available) soaked in water, and the milky solution used in the eyes.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

556 performance of rites of this kind. But sociological and ethical [182] concepts, shown at their highest development in the potlatch, are not limited to a few weeks of the year, or to any class of the community. Generosity on a large scale can be publicly [577] displayed by chiefs alone, but to a lesser degree this virtue must be practised by everyone, since avarice is considered a 576 major sin. Anyone who happens to pass a house in which a meal is taking place must be invited to share it; to do other-574 wise would be considered rude. The person summoned must take at least a trifle to show that he is not churlish and too proud to eat with his host, while if he is hungry, he shares [177] whatever is being served as a matter of course. The head of the family should be the first to taste any wine[11] as proof that [273] it is not poisoned, but otherwise he fares little, if any, better
[342] than his guests. This custom is now rapidly falling into disuse through the construction of individual family houses with doors [414] and locks. The fisherman who has exclusive rights to a suitable place for netting olachen or salmon must give some of his 476 catch to anyone who asks him. If he has landed four salmon, [226] the first solicitor is given one, later comers, none at all. When a net is set in the river, anyone passing is allowed to raise it and take some of the contents; if there are two fish, he may remove one, if many, three or four. To take all would be a [685] despicable theft, sufficient to brand the transgressor as greedy;
[626] hence public opinion prevents the system from being carried to excess. A hunter who brings back several mountain goats [224] or other large game is expected to invite his neighbours to a feast, which virtually means that he must share his takings.

556 Presents of this kind increase the prestige of the donor who has thus acted in accordance with Bella Coola ethics, and are 431 advantageous investments since others must reciprocate. The system is carried to such lengths that, until recent years, it was more profitable to give away goods than to sell them. In the case of a sale, the purchaser endeavours to give as little as possible, whereas the recipient of a gift returns as much as of Eagle, Raven, and Blackfish, three of her crests of which the masks were available. They agreed that Timothy Snow[50] was the best carpenter available and that he should be commissioned to put them in shape and arrange their use. Reuben wanted to sing a sisaok mourning song, to which he had a prerogative derived from his Bella Bella mother, and it was also decided that the band[51] should play. Reuben informed his father that he would contribute $60 towards the expenditure.

[11]This is a modern practice, dating from the introduction of home-brew.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Meanwhile Jessie had been washed by female friends, clad in her best clothing, and laid in her coffin. This was a rough box, contributed by the manager of the cannery and shaped like a white man's coffin. At intervals, women came near and wailed dolorously without heeding others similarly engaged. The news was carried to all the Bella Coola, those men who owned gasoline launches taking the word to the logging-camps without being requested to do so. A Carrier Indian who happened to be returning from the cannery spread the word through the village, where each woman who received the message hurried off to some friend, with whom she began to wail.

Early on the following morning, Captain Schooner returned home with his wife, Jessie's stepmother. He had been crying and was sad, but seemed willing to talk. He spoke of the proposed memorial potlatch, and expressed the sentiments recorded on vol. I, p. 473. He was grave and dignified, absolutely determined to perform what he considered to be the necessary ritual, oblivious of consequences, and heedless of what he held to be an unjust law. During that summer, Captain Schooner had been a rather heavy drinker, but on this occasion he abstained from wine, and said that he hoped no one would show disrespect to his daughter by appearing in a drunken condition either at the funeral or the subsequent rites. It is [50] He was not closely related to the Schooners.

[51] Most of the younger Bella Coola were members of the band, performing white man's music on white man's instruments. Andy Schooner was bandmaster, but it is unlikely that this influenced the decision, since the performance of the band was customary at funerals when the writer was in Bella Coola.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

In his younger days X was somewhat wild, taking his full share in the frivolities of the village, and having a fondness for wine which he brewed himself. On one occasion he prepared a barrel of the mixture, half of which he promptly consumed with the aid of a few friends, then, semi-intoxicated, he fell asleep. He dreamt that there came to him what must have been a male being, although all that was visible was the lower half of his body, which was gleaming white. The apparition seized X by the nape of the neck, lifted him from the floor, and carried him across the house to the barrel of wine, revolving sunwise on himself the while. 159 787 [273]

"You made this fearful stuff," said his supernatural visitor. "It will make your life dirty, as dirty as this."

Still turning sunwise on himself, with these words he carried X to the doorstep and held him suspended, face downwards over it. Everyone who enters must tread there, so that it is recognized as being the dirtiest part of the house, and X had no doubt about the meaning of the apparition's remark. This experience was so vivid and impressive that X asserted he immediately became a Christian and abandoned his evil ways. At the present time he is one of the few Bella Coola not addicted to home-brew. [797] [273]

A few years later the same being came a second time. X had been ill for a number of months with a sickness caused, so he believed, by a sorcerer. His friends had carried him to bathe in the Hot Springs and the treatment helped his condition considerably, but a little later he suffered a relapse, and was so wretched that he told his mother he would die presently. The same night he was visited by his apparition, but this time he could see the whole body; it was a man with large, powerful frame and a face so white that he could not bear to look at it. The figure was clad in undyed cedar-bark, and X immediately realized that he would recover, though he knew he would not be granted the same power as if the clothing had been of dyed cedar-bark such as is worn by supernatural shamans. The dream-man told X that he had come to him because of the clean condition he had attained by washing in the Hot Springs, followed by continence, and warned him that he must continue this for a year from the time of his immersion or he would die, but that if he obeyed this injunction he would recover. His visitor, who was, of course, a supernatural being, took X under one arm and carried him far to the south, where he washed him in a hot spring at the base of a steep mountain. Then he vanished; X arose and prepared to make his way home, but, lo, he was there already. Rationalizing later, X concluded that his body must have remained in his house, and that it was either his spirit or his life that had been carried away. [755]

As X lay asleep the next night, the same being came to him and

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Dance of Winwina]

*575 way as with the salmon, except that the jumping is omitted.
*796 The order of display is according to the time of ripening for 824 each, but there is so much difference of opinion about this that no rigid order is maintained. The first shown is always the cow-parsnip, but after that there is no definite sequence. The following "berries" were shown at a dance not many years ago: cow-parsnip; Ribes laxiflorum; wild gooseberry; tall bilberry; thin-leaved bilberry; blueberry; black huckleberry; red elderberry; dwarf bilberry; Ribes bracteosum; salalberry; Canadian buffalo berry; wild red raspberry; blackberry, Rubus spectabilis Pursh.; salmon-berry; black hawthorn; flowering juneberry; bunchberry; wild rose; red bearberry.

The informant was not certain that the above was the exact order in which the berries were shown on the occasion described. It is probable that it is approximately correct, however, since he added that the wild strawberry had also been shown, but as he could not remember its correct place he had omitted it. Other old men stated that the following food [262] plants had been used at other Winwina dances: ilk, one of the [177] Fritillaria, species undetermined; perennial clover; black raspberry; crabapple; cranberry; fern root; bracken root. Foods introduced by the white man were shown at a recent dance, including: potato, carrot, turnip, and a miniature can of pre-[273] served peaches, such as are commonly used in the manufacture of native wine.

*575 Sometimes no one is able to guess the object represented,
*796 and when all have grown discouraged the exhibitor puts his ear against X's mouth. The uninitiated assume, of course, that the dancer's supernatural power makes it easy for him to tell the answer and that he is transmitting the information to the bearer who promptly gives it. If an uninitiated person should guess the correct response rapidly, it is taken for granted that she has found favour with the supernatural beings. When the last berry has been thrown on the fire, a kusiut stands up and starts a song describing the Hermaphrodite and his actions in the land above. The singer provides his own time by beating cases though an infant in arms, though uninitiated, can be brought to dances by its mother; distinctions between rich and poor, slave and freeman, become of slight importance; all that really matters is whether a person is or is not a kusiut. Membership in the society seems to the uninitiated the most desirable thing in life, although their fears are always so strong that they never cease to dread actual admission. The feeling of class consciousness which exists in a somewhat mild form at other seasons of the year, gives place to a powerful sentiment of superiority on the part of members of the society over those who are not so fortunate. Even the respect normally shown to chiefs is submerged since they, too, are subject to the rule of the marshals.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Apart entirely from this attitude of superiority and inferiority, is the bond of fellowship engendered among members of the society by the rites. Whatever happens, the uninitiated must be deceived. Moreover, the psychological effect of gathering nightly in a body for a specific purpose is tremendous. Night after night they eat together; night after night they listen to the words of the marshals, who impress on them the need for co-operation and secrecy, who hold before them the good example set by their fellows who have carried out rites successfully, who emphasize the fact that they are doing as their fathers did. The ceremonial import is of greatest consequence at all these gatherings, but when the uninitiated have withdrawn the kukusiut relax somewhat and enjoy themselves. The food itself is always of the best and some of the usual restrictions are removed. It is, for example, the only time that women are allowed to eat the flesh of seals. If this delicacy is provided the marshals enjoy the tidbits, but after Cannibals, novices, and others have received preferential treatment, the remainder is distributed to all and sundry.

It has been stated by some writers, especially those unfamiliar with the significance of native ceremonial life, that the dances of the coastal tribes are orgies of immorality. This point was investigated with care and it may be stated posi-

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

*575 tively that such is not the case among the Bella Coola. At *796 the present time both drunkenness and vice are rampant, but 577 neither of these practices is apparent on the nights when dances
273 are taking place. The writer was present at many kusiut [834] dances, in each case attended by practically every resident, and during them he saw only two drunken men. With regard to these, the sentiment of the influential members of the society was one of regret that the marshals could no longer exercise their prerogatives and punish the offenders. As several Bella Coola expressed it:

"Our dances are sacred and ceremonial, a drunken man spoils them."

As a rule they do not regard drunkenness as a serious vice, if a vice at all, hence this attitude was illuminating. It is more
*575 difficult to speak with certainty about morality; no breaches *796 of it could have occurred at the ceremonies witnessed, nor was 577 there any evidence that the excitement led to any licentious
834 actions. On the whole, the dances are desirable since they provide a source of tremendous interest and importance. Vice flourishes with lassitude and boredom; anything that stimulates the people reduces it, and when the Bella Coola are engaged in ceremonial rites, the sentiment of the seniors of the community is strongly opposed to anything that interferes with the solemnity of the occasion.

There is no reason to suppose that these factors were not present in former times, more potent than now when belief in the supernatural powers of the kukusiut has passed away. The whole question of sexual morality at kusiut dances was investigated with considerable care.

One point emphasized by all Bella Coola was that no kusiut was allowed to have relations with an uninitiated person, whether his wife or not, during the period that his face was blackened and he was wearing a ceremonial collar. The reason for this prohibition seems to have been one not of morality, but of the necessity for preserving the dignity and secrecy of [688] the kusiut society. An offender was punished by being struck

Ridout Wraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

gwa'mālwawaqal	aiyawaiyo ayawā	533*
he circled and returned	Sang[w].

[WOMAN'S CANOE]

C The third part of this song has been forgotten.

(e) Recorded as song VII D 39a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.
(f) A sign of victory, eagerly watched for when a war-party is returning. [727]
(g) A reference to Wīsai, one of Sīnaqal's first ancestors in the beginning of time. He made a journey to the Skeena, returning from there with canoe and paddles decorated with sun designs. The exploits of his descendant are compared with those of his pattern, that is, his first forbear. Such references to family history are sources of pride to the chief being honoured. [773]
(d) That is: From whom I am descended.

Fragment of a Xe'da Song(a) Used by Qayauditma of Kimsquit(b)

A Kaiyawawāna	di ithaitmqdai	hailhaiwaxit
Presently he will be ashamed	that chief	if I get aiyadilālādai my copper.

(a) Both tune and theme are said to be of Kwakiutl origin. [177]
(b) Recorded as song VII D 34b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

Fragment of a Xe'da Song Used by Sīnaqal of Kimsquit(a)

A Sawailhqwalwadai	yaa (B) dāqwtaiyalhwadai	Ollāqwalwilwadai
They are smiling,	greetings to the out-stretched glass!	They drink

awadi gawaxālā
the food of white men(?).

[WOMAN'S CANOE]

B and C have been forgotten.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 41b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.
(b) Literally: Hello!
(c) This song was used at a potlatch where the fare provided was whisky. The tune is said to be very ancient although new words were composed for the occasion. [556] [279]

A'alt Songs

A'alt songs somewhat resemble tsaask ones and, like them, are difficult to collect completely. Parts of many are remem- [575] [796]

2:McIlwraith E.5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

but the Bella Coola do not consider this aspect and the children grow up in an atmosphere entirely lacking in restraint of speech. Some stories teach a moral lesson, but they are recounted merely for entertainment. At the present time, no one knows who invented the stories; they have been handed down from dim antiquity and alterations or embellishments are considered improper, while the composition of new tales appears to be unknown. 538 [867] [178]

Another pastime is smoking. Among some Indian tribes the practice has a definite religious significance, but this appears to be lacking among the Bella Coola. Most of the men enjoy either a pipe or cigarettes, and some of the women also indulge, but few carry the habit to excess. All the older people affirmed that their ancestors had smoked for generations. Tobacco was not grown, but kinnikinick, *milix*ʷ, was used, and also a plant known as *lsaix*ʿ. Another smoking mixture was bark of lsxwatdp, toasted before a fire until dried and brown, and then crumbled between the hands. These materials have given place entirely to imported tobacco, and the white man's pipe has replaced the native one. The latter consisted of a gooseberry cane from which the pith had been extracted; sometimes a small bowl of elderberry wood was added, but often the mixture to be smoked was simply placed within the end of the hollow stem. 276 [517] [249] [824] [177]

Adults, especially the men, are addicted to gambling. They are fond of placing stakes on a race or other trial of strength, and enjoy all kinds of games of chance. Some of the younger men have mastered a few of the simpler games of cards on which they spend a certain amount of time and money. The favourite gambling game, however, is one found in all parts of the coast, which is played with a pack of fifty-four smoothed crabapple sticks. The rules are complicated and no effort was made to learn more than the general principles. The pieces are divided among the eight or ten contestants and concealed; then one player guesses in whose hand a certain marked stick is hidden. If he is successful, the others pay him a forfeit; if 525 pose should remain continent for several nights to increase his generative powers. He then selects a time for beginning the rite and on the second and fourth nights from that date sleeps with his wife, holding intercourse repeatedly and vigorously until he is utterly exhausted. Before dawn on the third and fifth days he must wash in the river or in some quiet stream. Then follow four nights of restraint, a further intercourse, and washing before dawn. The period is next increased to eight nights, then twelve, and finally sixteen, each with a similar contact and bathing. The nights of abstinence are thus forty in all, a lucky number. An unmarried man can obtain power in the same manner with the assistance of a female friend; it is the act itself that is vital, not the union of husband and wife.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

At the present time, only two Bella Coola are said to know this particular type of ceremonial chastity, which they conceal carefully, even refusing offers to buy their knowledge. It is potent at any time, but especially if the periods of continence have been so arranged that they terminate at one of the solstices. Then, indeed, can a hunter set off with every prospect of success, knowing that the human taint disliked by animals has been removed, and been replaced by a ceremonial cleanliness pleasing to them. If the time terminates at the winter solstice, the hunter should set out immediately; if it ends in June, he must remain away from women after his final intercourse. In September or October, when ready to leave for the hunt, he must sleep beside his wife for the last four nights; each night he must place his leg between hers, and each morning the two must wash together. The best fortune of all is obtained by a man who observes this forty-night period for four successive years.

Another, and more common, count[34] is to observe continence for four nights, followed by intercourse. Immediately afterwards, the man should eat as much devil's club[35] as pos-

[34]The record of nights is kept by notches cut in a stick or by knots on a cord.

[35]Or false hellebore. This latter plant is thought to be so poisonous that the eating of even a twig an inch in length is fatal; a very small amount, however, all that is ever taken, acts as a powerful emetic.

T McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

224 785 sible, selecting small twigs from which the bark and spines have been rubbed off. This acts as an emetic, so that before washing in the morning he has vomited from his stomach all [824] polluting matter, especially any human hair which animals [278] consider particularly unclean. Before dawn he goes to the [783] river and remains beneath the surface as long as possible, irrespective of the coldness of the water. Then he returns slowly to his house. Four nights later the same acts are repeated. These eight nights of continence are followed by two further periods, each of four nights, making a total of sixteen. Thus fortified, a hunter anticipates great success.

785 A person practising ceremonial chastity is in a condition peculiarly susceptible to disaster, and must observe certain restrictions. If, for example, anyone sees him as he returns from washing in the morning, the power which he has been accumulating so laboriously is lost. Owing to this belief, it is customary for a man to wash long before dawn and to come creeping into his house through a hole in the floor. He must always be the last to retire at night, the first to rise in the morning; and he must say nothing about what he is doing. Intercourse is, of course, absolutely forbidden except on the proper nights, and at other times he must not even put his arm around his wife. Failure to obey these restrictions destroys any advantage from [837] ceremonial chastity, while actual disaster follows should a man's wife misconduct herself with anyone else when he is using her for this purpose. If she is unfaithful, her husband is certain to be slain by an animal when hunting, or to slip and be killed on a mountain trail. Animals know all that human beings do [825] or think, and they punish anyone who is unable to perform ceremonial chastity fittingly. Behind these restrictions there 831 is undoubtedly the sentiment that intercourse, held duly and 785 properly at the right time, is not a mere desire of the flesh, but a ceremonial act. Indeed, when the Bella Coola speak of it in [833] connection with ceremonial chastity, they do not use the [195] common term, e·m, which has a coarse implication, but xoldjut which has a polite and almost sacred implication.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

777 owing to the failure of hunters to observe ceremonial chastity.
* 787 When obtained, a sisiutl was cut into small pieces, one of which [789] worn upon the person would make the flesh so hard that an arrow could not penetrate.

[776] Sometimes the sisiutl assumes the form of either a spring or a cohoe salmon. Not long ago a Bella Bella man, travelling in a canoe, ate one of these. Once devoured, it reformed itself, made its way out by consuming the man's lower jaw, then jumped overboard and was lost.

The mere appearance of a sisiutl does not necessarily bring misfortune to the beholder, even if he has not the necessary knowledge, or courage, to take advantage of it. The following is an instance.

On one occasion the father's father of a middle-aged Bella Coola was going upstream at the time the salmon were jumping, when, unknown to him, one leaped into the canoe behind him. His first knowledge of anything untoward came to him when the bow rose out of the water, and, looking around, he saw that this was caused by the weight of a grease-covered stone lying in the bottom of his canoe; the salmon had vanished. The man threw overboard his floor-board with the stone on it. When he told his friends afterwards of his experience, they informed him that he had missed an opportunity for obtaining supernatural good fortune, as the "salmon" must have been a sisiutl.

789 The sisiutl can also be used as a charm. If a man, while in [776] a pure condition through the observance of ceremonial chastity, eats a small portion of the flesh, it renders him proof against bullet or arrow. An intelligent Bella Coola stated that his father's brother had done so on one occasion, with the result that a bullet, fired by his wife's mother's father, fell harmless at his feet after striking him.

● 278 Medicine can also be obtained indirectly from a sisiutl.
776 When one of these fish-like creatures swims through a pond, 824 wriggling as it goes, it frequently sheds some of its scales.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

These become lilies (of the species known as lälkänelp or walilikwätsälätsäläts, "The most potent of the pond") from the roots of which a tonic can be brewed. They can be collected by anyone, and the places where they grow are well known, but certain rules must be followed. Before reaching the pond the gatherer must find four spruce saplings, cut from each a bough projecting eastward, and lay these two by two, beside the water, with a space between. After plucking the lily roots he must place them on the ground between the spruce branches and tie the whole into a bundle with strips of dyed and undyed cedar-bark. He must be careful to wind these wrappings clockwise. On arriving at the house where the tonic is to be prepared, the bundle must be thrown in through the smoke-vent, never carried through the door. After these precautions the medicine can be prepared with safety. The roots are cut into thin slices and boiled for four days; a sick person then drinks several cupsful of the brew, which is particularly good for the blood. This remedy is especially effective if the patient is observing ceremonial chastity. The person administering the potion sees to it that the one being treated conforms to certain regulations for forty days. He must not eat fresh meat, fresh salmon, or any food prepared by a widow or a catamenial woman; he must not approach too closely a girl who is secluded following puberty, and he must observe absolute continence, not even sleeping with his wife. Death follows the breaking of any of these taboos.

Although supernatural good fortune is most frequently obtained from either a mätsqus or a sisiutl, it can be derived from other supernatural beings. In such cases the acquisition is seldom dangerous. The following tale describes the qokän·i.

Long before the coming of the white man, but very long after the first people came to this earth, a certain Kimsquit man, Wikwanutl, who was also called O'miätl, was snaring mountain goats on Mount Tcopinätl when he heard on the upper slopes a peculiar cry which he recognized, from descriptions given him by the old people, as the note of a qokän·i.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948.
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*756 (3) Choosing a place where two small hemlocks are growing on each side of a small stream, the seeker after power 783 bends down the four saplings so that their branches reach the *787 water, and with these scours his body, the spines frequently rasping his skin. When finished, he releases the saplings, which fly back to their original position.

(4) Another method is to devour four small sections, each [278] rather larger than a match, of false hellebore root. These are drunk with cold water and cause vomiting. The use of this plant is not limited to dawn, nor is it necessary to repeat it every fourth day. Apparently, the usual prayer is not said with it.

[785] Any, or all, of these methods, especially if combined with the observance of ceremonial chastity, may purify the performer so that he will be able to see what is not vouchsafed to most persons. Ťlitcäplilän·a, or one of the other supernatural beings, may grant him a revelation with shaman's power. This does not always happen, as the above means of purification are not omnipotent, but in many myths where the hero obtained supernatural power it was due to his having tried one of the above, or a similar ritual.

*756 The most common method of becoming a shaman is *787 through the appearance of Ťlitcäplilän·a when a person is ill.
[776] This woman, who always wears a blanket-like cape decorated with dyed and undyed cedar-bark, is able to travel anywhere at phenomenal speed. She, or some other supernatural being, may appear to a sick person irrespective of sex, whether or not ceremonial chastity has been observed. It seems as if she took pity on the sufferer and came to bring relief. The following are typical examples:

A woman had long been crippled with rheumatism. She was so helpless and weak that she spent most of her time curled in a heap on the floor, heedless of the ashes and dirt with which she was covered. Her friends barely attended to her wants.
[776] One day she heard a thump on the roof, though no one else could hear it, nor could they hear the whistle with which

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

E

ełxsa or ełxsal·i: Medicine; generic term for all remedies of a magical or medicinal nature. [278]
e·m: Coitus, term in common usage.
emis: Nephew or niece. [601]

ełimals: Ancestral name of a Snuile·tl man.
'enilałän·a: Daughter of the first settlers at Green Bay in the beginning of time.
enilałaikila: Moon, semi-anthropomorphized.

H

hai·shakila: 1—Bella Bella term, commonly used in Bella Coola, for ssaok official 2—Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
haidal: Type of sea-going canoe used by the Haida; the word may be a corruption from English.
Hai·le·kela: Man who descended to the upper Bella Coola in the beginning of time.
Hän·o: One of the first women to settle at Schooner Pass in the beginning of time.
haohao: Mythical, supernatural bird. [825]
Hamcu: 1—One of the first men to settle at Nuxwlst in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Q̣wiyai in the beginning of time.
hali: Penis.
haip: Call used by members of the kusiut society to strengthen their fellow-members.

I

ikw': Pounded cedar-bark, undyed. [824]
ilaix: Zigzag course up or down a mountain slope.
Ilaiẓal: Twalälit's dog.
Ilimai·s: One of the first women sent down west of Kwatna in the beginning of time.
ildustas·da sxim: Bandage of undyed cedar-bark placed around an infant's head to produce cranial deformation. [856] ildutsam, Bandages: Term applied to presents distributed as validation for the bitings of a self-Cannibal. [431] ilk: One of the fritillariae. imältsndjutqwlsan: Abbreviated rite of Noäkymm dance.
imänta: Nest.
I'mäsilak: Ssaok name of a Kimsquit man.
Imimätlnaix, "The Moorer": Male supernatural child who fastens Noäkymm's craft.
ipänap, "Hold Him Down": Cry used in Cannibal dances.
ipaxollai, "Accept": Said to spring salmon during the ritual connected with the first taking of these fish. [226] ipäxsutsmm: Alleged singing of a ssaok initiate's song by the supernatural being, Mälakila.
ipo'lo·smm: Reduction of the value of an investment-present by immediate return of part of it. [426]
i·pis: Moss. [824] ismänusämkdim: Polyandry.

5: Smith E-5 (1920-1923) 1929 NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Carrier NE7
Tsimshian NE15
Sekani NE14

B C T 137 757 Symphoricarpus racemosa Michx., GARDEN SNOWBERRY

B [164] Bella Coola: Branches, large and small, with the bark left on, boiled, and the decoction taken internally daily as the best cure for gonorrhoea. A diuretic. Roots, blossoms, and berries not used for medicine, unless, as one informant stated, the berries were used with the branches.

See also tideland spruce (page 51).

Southern Carrier: Juice of ripe berries used in sore eyes.

Gitksan: Not used.

B C T S 137 757 Sambucus racemosa L., RED-FRUITED ELDER

Bella Coola: Bark of the roots placed in water, a few hot stones added until water reached blood heat, and decoction used as a powerful emetic and purgative for pain in the stomach.

Bark of the roots peeled with the teeth, chewed, preferably with a little cool water, and juice swallowed as an emetic and purgative. Said to act within half an hour.

Southern Carrier: Roots boiled, and two cupfuls of the warm decoction taken internally twice a day as a purgative.

Northern Carrier: Roots brewed, the first water discarded and the second taken internally as a purgative.

Sikani: Bark boiled, and the decoction taken internally as a purgative.

Gitksan: Bark of roots scraped off, water added to the bark, and the infusion taken internally as an emetic and purgative.

B C T 137 757 Viburnum pauciflorum Raf., SQUASHBERRY

Bella Coola: Bark chewed, and the juice swallowed for whooping cough and cold on the lungs.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Northern Carrier: Inside bark crushed, steeped in cold water until the water turned green, and one cupful of the infusion taken internally as a purgative and for dysentery.

Gitksan: Bark and twigs boiled, and one cupful of the decoction taken internally in the morning for coughs and "consumption". Said to be always taken in conjunction with devil's club (page 62). See also Angelica genuflexa Nutt., page 61.

VALERIANACEAE, VALERIAN FAMILY

B T 137 278 Valeriana septentrionalis Rydb., VALERIAN

T C [302] [237] Bella Coola: Not used.

Southern Carrier: Roots, mixed with grease, used for perfume.

Northern Carrier: Valerian? blossoms crushed, and the oil, often mixed with fat from a black bear hide, applied as a hair tonic. Believed to make the hair smooth and shiny, to help its growth, and to give it a fragrance.

Gitksan: Entire plant steeped in bear grease and the grease applied to hair and face as a perfume.

C [302] Valeriana sitchensis Bong., VALERIAN

Southern Carrier: Leaves mixed with grease used as a perfume for the hair.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 number of puppets is always made. Certain kukusiut, known *796 as änuyax, have in connection with their dance prerogative, the 532 ability to summon and display supernatural objects in the [424] form of small puppets. These are sometimes patrons, more often [787] not, and include not only beings having human form, but snakes, hummingbirds, and other creatures. By calling his being, an änuyax receives strength which can be transmitted to someone else—so the uninitiated believe—by passing it into [775] the recipient's body. Non-members are told that X suffers death from which he is resurrected by his own powers, rein-
[787] forced by those passed into him by other members of the society through the transference of their puppets. The most potent "patron-puppet" is the giant toad. It is difficult for a [781] white man to understand how intelligent people, as are many of the uninitiated, can be deluded into believing that the somewhat rudely carved wooden figures which they see moving before them are supernatural beings. Emphasis must again be laid on the awe, mystery, and power of the ceremonies in the eyes of those who do not understand them, and the very great skill shown by the carpenters in making use of hidden strings, trap-doors, and other devices to increase the dramatic effect. Puppets are guarded very carefully by their owners and are usually hidden in some cleft of the mountains. A well-constructed one is used when necessary for many years.

* 575 Other preparations must be made for the stomach-cutting.
* 796 As in all other kusiut dances, deception is practised and X is not really disembowelled. Instead, a wooden, or copper, frame is made to shield his stomach; over this is arranged the skin of a deer or a dog, cut to cover him from chest to thighs, with even the navel imitated. This camouflage is held in place by his breech-cloth and by a strap passing around his chest. He wears a blanket which conceals most of the fastenings so that the artifice is not noticeable in the dim light of the house. The chief difficulty is to find a dog with skin the same colour as X's.
[281] Many animals are killed, and the fur removed by immersion in boiling water, but sometimes half the dogs of a village must

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Stomach-Cutting Dance]

be slaughtered before one is found with skin to match.[47] The 575* marshals carefully supervise all these arrangements, but of 796* course on this night the work alone is allotted. The entrails of [281] several dogs are kept and worn by X between his false stomach and the wooden frame.

After the allotment of tasks in connection with the mech- 575* anical work required, the marshals ask four women to come 796* forward. Those selected are usually old people with good 533 voices who, from long experience at the dances, have mastered the two[48] songs used at each kusiotem dance. The theme of these never varies and is believed to have been handed down from the distant past. No prerogative is attached; the marshals and singers merely choose four women whom they think 2 will be good performers. The songs resemble those sung at mourning ceremonies; in fact, they are used with that significance when X has been "killed" by disembowelling. The singers, the women chosen, the marshals, and any other kuku- siut who feel competent to do so, discuss in an animated manner the exact wording and tunes of the songs. Then the musicians beat out the time and the women sing one after another, while the audience drones. In view of the solemnity of the occasion, it often happens that senior singers from adjacent villages are invited to be present to render assistance. The necessity for practising X's songs, apportioning the carpentry, and rehearsing the mourning songs has taken up more time than is usual on a nusiutälsap night, and it is late before all is completed. Then, after the usual meal and admonishments, the people disperse.

Early the following morning the carpenters and those to 575* whom work has been allotted gather early in X's house. A 796* band, about two feet long, composed of alternate strands of 211 dyed and undyed cedar-bark is prepared and placed on the [47]Informants offered no explanation as to why this wholesale slaughter of dogs failed to arouse curiosity and suspicion in the uninitiated. [781]

[48]Or four; there was difference of opinion among Bella Coola informants on this point.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 575 kukusiut send back X's call in the usual manner. Then, two
* 796 by two, the masks are cast on to the fire and the ceremonial is over.

THE DANCE OF THE TALLY POSTS

[773] As previously described, a tally post is erected in the land
[777] above for every Bella Coola at birth. As long as this memorial [753] is upright and firm, the individual to whom it refers enjoys health and prosperity, but if it becomes crooked he falls ill.
[424] The uninitiated believe that several kukusiut have the prerogative of climbing to the land above during the ceremonial season and straightening leaning tally posts. This is such a
[178] useful ability that it must have exercised great influence on the uninitiated in early days, but the rite has not been properly
[164] carried out since the smallpox epidemic in the last century. The following account was obtained from two old men [115] who remembered the manner in which a certain Onikotl of Tcmotl performed a year or two before "The Great Sickness." Neither of the informants was a kusiut at the time, but they were able to supplement their recollections of the dance with what they afterwards learnt when initiated, so the following account is probably accurate in outline though deficient in detail. It will be convenient to refer to the dancer as X, and describe the ceremony in the present tense. It was also performed at Kimsquit many years ago.

The rite resembles kusiotem dances in many respects. X must obtain the consent of the marshals during the preceding summer, and their permission is refused unless the prospective dancer is a man of proved discretion. If they agree, X asks a [283] number of kukusiut women to help him by making a very long and strong rope of nettle fibre. At intervals the work-women gather for the purpose in the back-room of X's house, taking [688] care that no uninitiated see what they are doing. Every effort is made to ensure that there is no flaw in the rope as a break would be a serious matter, punishable by death.

Near the winter solstice the marshals choose a suitable time

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

APPENDIX A

MECHANICAL PROCESSES

NO attempt was made to study either the material culture of the Bella Coola, or their methods of manufacturing, but information on some points was obtained incidentally. All sociological and religious features connected therewith have already been described. 121

THE TAKING AND PREPARATION OF OLACHEN

227

The run of olachen, sputx, comes about the end of April, and as many as possible are caught. In preparation, nets, *ähe'x*ᵘ, are brought out from the boxes where they have been stored during the winter, examined, and repaired. If necessary, new ones must be manufactured out of nettle-(lxwa-) fibre laid away by the women for this purpose. By rolling the material on their legs, they produce a thin twine; five strands of this are then interwoven, making a finished cord capable of resisting great strain. The nets are constructed by the men. The type used at the present time, which is said not to differ from that formerly employed, consists of a purse-like sack, oval in cross-section, open at the wider end and tapering very gradually to the other, which is closed. The total length is about thirty feet, the diameter at the open end about eight feet, and at the closed end about three feet. A new net is dipped in a mixture of boiled hemlock-bark to darken it, and then boiled in a solution of willow-bark to prevent the knots from slipping. 226 221 283 462 286 386

The setting out of a net is not an easy task, so two or three men agree to work as partners. In the present degenerate days, property rights are not respected and each group selects a suitable spot. The best location is where the water is about three feet deep and runs rapidly, but without ripples, over a smooth piece of the bottom; such a place is called a sklläx. When the fish begin to run plentifully, the partners paddle out to set their net, taking with them four stakes, each about ten feet in length. The weight of a full net is tremendous, so the poles have to be driven down at least six feet, a difficult task on account of the stony bottom. Selecting the exact spot, one of four posts, älkdjälos, is set upright and held in position by being tied to a cross-piece, nudjiqosta, fastened to the canoe for the purpose. While his two partners hold the craft steady, the third man begins to pound down the stake; metal mauls are now commonly used, but in former times this work was always done with an unhafted stone maul, lxwema. The fishermen relieve one another intermittently until the top of the pole has been driven down to within 226 476 423 178 412

Ⓒ McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 182 *

shaqahlw': Goods collected by the relatives of a man when working on his commission as carpenter or other artisan in preparation for a potlatch.
Sxa tsxem: A short-legged person who tries to cross a river; name of a string figure.
sxaq': That part of a house on either side of the central fire.
Sxisxma: 1—Sleep, a supernatural being. [513]
2—Sleep, intangible hasiat prerogative.
sxisxnem: Presents given to the one who leads a bride to her husband during a wedding. [585] Sxqumthastwi, "Dark-Shade": A supernatural being. [431] sx-pal: Shadow.
sxtqumas: Hammer, archaic. [412]
sxkas: Brother-in-law or sister-in-law. [601] sxlamalqs: Shaman's stick with power of life at one end and death at the other.
sxlhas: Bloody grease that rises to the surface of the water when a seal is cooked.
sxlq: That on which a chief sits, that is, his ceremonial prestige gained by the distribution of much wealth. [283] sxlta: 1—Caribou hide. [825]
2—Thong made of caribou hide.
sxsem: Chequer-work cedar-bark matting. [285] sxtakt: Caribou.
sxtmi: Love charm consisting of hair of the one desired mixed with other ingredients. [832] Sxtmstla: Supernatural being who causes nightmares. [828] sxtmsta or sxtmstnalc: Mortals, in contradistinction to supernatural beings.
sxtmstaltkstn: Body.
sxtmstnalcstm: Assumption of human characteristics by mankind in the beginning of time.
Sxtmsxwnkstnlw-a: Professional name of a female berry-picker.
Sxtmsxwnkstnam: Professional female berry-picker. [825] sxka: Mountain goat grease. [824] sxkalqa: Castor.
Sxkhal, "What Has Been Divided": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
Sxkla: Son of the first settlers at Green Bay in the beginning of time. [825] sxmas: Octopus.
Sxnaklas: One of Raven's female Crow relatives. [386] sxqmarma: Red rock paint.
sxta: Singer's baton.
sxulk: Text. [823]
sxlle-pass: Part of a river where there are rapids and projecting stones.
stalc: 1—Memorial-post, decorated with crest, erected near grave. [211]
2—Plain posts erected near grave to indicate major ceremonies performed by the deceased. [764]
Stalas: 1—Village in the upper Bella Coola valley.
2—Famous hunter mentioned in an ancient story. [262]
stalcum: Dried dog salmon soaked in water.
stamsalk: Masked representation of a dead person in crest form.
Sly', "Rainwater-Dripping-through-the-Roof": A supernatural being.
sulwalt: Black raspberry. [824] talstn: Ocean.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

to prepare three songs for X, choosing as themes the usual kusiotem facts, with any additional details from the performer's myth which he may give them. The marshals instruct the maker of the successful mask to put hair on it and to attach a neck. 575* 796* 532 [539]

Four days later the same group again meets in the forest and X tries on the mask. When in position it rests on top of his own head with a stick passing down behind his occiput to his waist, where it is fastened by a belt; the general effect is that he has a superimposed head. Minor adjustments are suggested and made and X takes the mask, while the unsuccessful attempts are burnt. The marshals solemnly warn the participants of the seriousness of the rite in which they are about to engage. X conceals the mask with great care in some cleft of the mountains.

At intervals the singers meet and listen to the tunes each has composed, until they decide on the three most suitable, which they practise. [533]

Nothing more takes place until after the winter solstice, when X and the marshals select the exact date for the rite. After a qotlum, the marshals, singers, carpenters, and other kusiut functionaries remain in the house to rehearse the coming ceremony. The head is placed in position, supported by a framework of reeds which can be separated by strong pressure. When X raises his blanket over his own head, the mask portrait alone is visible, and only the wearer's extra height might cause suspicion. Around his "neck," in reality the junction between X's own head and the false one, is tied a rope, so arranged that when pulled from each end, it slips, contracts on the reed framework, and ultimately tears through it to separate the head from the body.[11] Raw meat and blood have been placed inside the "neck" so that, when the mask is pulled off, it appears as if X's flesh were exposed and he falls to the [11] An old man showed the writer the method of fastening, but I was unable to learn it. The rope, instead of being knotted, is wound within itself so that, when the framework is broken, it comes away untangled. [284]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

824 their houses. Dishes, benches, cooking-boxes, cradles, totem-[322] poles, canoes, all were carved from this wood. The bark was [285] woven into baskets, and when dyed formed the most common [531] ceremonial decoration.

Even within the forty miles of the river valley formerly 132 occupied by the Bella Coola there are considerable variations in climate. At the mouth of the river the typical Pacific coast type is found, without great extremes of temperature and with much rain, especially in winter time. During winter, the moisture is precipitated as snow a few hundred feet above the valley, and the limit of the snow can be watched on the mountain slopes, rising or falling a few feet from day to day. Farther up the valley, the winters are colder and in many cases snow lies for weeks on the ground, and in the upper part of the Bella Coola area the winters are severe, although much more moderate than on the upper regions immediately to the east.

What has been the history of the inhabitants of this land?
173 They believe that long, long ago, Alqantăm, the supreme [176] god, caused their first ancestors to be created in his house, Nazmăt-a, in the land above, and sent them down to populate the Bella Coola valley. These first people came in groups of two or three, brothers and sisters, or occasionally man and wife, each group descending, in many cases in animal form, to a certain mountain and then making their home at its foot. They brought with them animals and fish, tools and houses, also the knowledge of ceremonial dances. In fact, they differed from the Bella Coola of the recent past only in having greater supernatural power. These first people increased with extraordinary rapidity, until each group grew into a village, bound together by a knowledge of their first ancestor. In 173 course of time the occupants of certain villages combined, as 361 some increased more rapidly than others, but on the whole each settlement maintained its character of being the descendants of one group of the first settlers of this world.

This mythological belief is a fair picture of Bella Coola life
[175] as it was when the first white man visited the valley. Mac-

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

who has had a call during the season. Nothing further need be said concerning the ritual of qoṭlm which follows the pattern already described. 575* 796*

During the following day a screen of yellow cedar mats is raised in one of the corners behind the fire; it must be large enough to conceal those who are to wear the numerous masks and give them space to fit them on in comfort. The kukusiut begin to gather late in the afternoon and the usual long discussion takes place as the carpenters decide who shall wear which mask, while the marshals move to and fro. There is no stage-manager to settle disputes, but ultimately order evolves from chaos, and when dusk has fallen the heralds are dispatched to invite any kukusiut who have not appeared. When all is in readiness, a shout is raised for the eager uninitiated, who come crowding in to sit near the door. Ano'likwelsaix moves to and fro, in and out of the enclosure, talking all the time, and telling the uninitiated that presently they will see very powerful supernatural beings. The following account is of the masked figures used when Qaxelān i last performed the dance; it must again be emphasized that their actual choice depends on the wishes of the dancer and his family, and that the order in which they appear is immaterial. His performance was probably the typical nakusam of a Mystery dancer. [285] 575* 796* 532 776

The first to appear are Swuslaxwai and the three hiding-places of X's power. Since they are always uncommon, it follows that no fixed designs are possible, and the carpenters rely upon their own inventive abilities to paint and carve human-like beings. Ano'likwelsaix gives eloquent explanations as the three stalk around the fire and disappear from sight. It would have been equally proper if they had appeared singly.

Next comes Sānellqmulels Alquntām, wearing a small mask, barely covering his face; above it, in his hair, is dyed cedar-bark puffed out to resemble a wig. He carries a stick with a band of the same material around the middle, and a tuft at either end concealing a nail with sharp, projecting point. Around the fire he dances frantically, leaping into the lwa, a tool consisting of a slightly bent stick with sharpened point, into the cut, and runs it upwards to make a vertical incision as high as she can reach. Going around to the other side of the tree, the woman makes another cutting of the same kind. Finally, she inserts her fingers at the bottom and pulls gently outwards, so that the bark is drawn off in a long streamer which tapers to a point at the top. The other half section of the tree is similarly stripped; this treatment frequently kills saplings which can then be used for fire-wood. Although small trees are preferred, a woman sometimes collects her bark from a large one by means of many vertical incisions. 314 [412]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

The bark is taken home without further preparation. The woman carefully peels off and throws away the rough outer bark, leaving the smooth inner covering, lwqal, which alone is valuable. If the weather is fine, this is dried in the sun for two or three days; otherwise, it is placed over a fire within the house. When all moisture has been removed, it is rolled up and kept for future use. The bark can be used for making baskets with no further treatment except splitting into bands of the proper width. [285]

When pounded bark, such as is widely used for ceremonial purposes, is required, the woman prepares the necessary tools. Two small sticks, each about six inches in length and one-half inch in diameter, are used as tweezers, kipla, though the bark can, if necessary, be held in the hand. Two beating sticks are required, each about two feet in length, six inches wide, and half an inch thick; one edge of each is rounded off, though not sharpened to a cutting surface. When all is ready, the woman crouches on the floor, with the lower beater, lqanq, held stationary before her on a box or other raised rest, and lays an end of the bark over the rounded edge. Taking the other, the upper beater, spikta, in her right hand, she strikes downwards so that its edge slides down the side of the stationary stick, bruising the fragment of bark. With her left hand she pushes the piece slightly further over the edge, and again the upper beater falls. This is repeated time after time until the whole length is pulverized and softened. It is tiring work, but a woman accomplishes more in an hour than seems possible as her muscles become accustomed to the shearing motion. The bark becomes broken and frayed but its tensile strength is sufficient to prevent it from falling apart. Then the woman brushes it with shavings to remove loose fragments and the work is done. This type of pounded cedar-bark is called ikw'. 287

Ikw' is usually dyed red before being used for ceremonial purposes and is then termed mak'. In winter the dye is made from alder-bark with pieces of the wood attached, but in summer only scrapings from the inner bark are used. Water is placed in a vessel, urine added, pieces of alder 287 386 [824]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

287 thrown in, and hot stones lifted in to heat the mixture. Even at the present time dye is never made on a stove, as it is thought that the 386 gradual heating by means of stones is essential. As it becomes warm, the woman thoroughly stirs the ingredients with her hands, then, when it boils, some of the bark is lifted out and more added. This process is continued until the brew is deep red in colour. It is allowed to stand for a few minutes before the pounded cedar-bark is placed in it. The operator gently works it around until it is saturated, then lifts it out and hangs it up to dry. Several pieces of bark can be dyed in one solution, though it is necessary to add more alder-bark and more stones to maintain the proper strength and heat.

[285] Although red cedar-bark is the kind most commonly used, the Bella [177] Coola sometimes use the yellow cedar for mats and blankets, an art learnt from the Bella Bella.

THE MANUFACTURE OF PAINT

386 Paint, such as was used both for decorating the body and for por-[302] traying designs on wood, was obtained from a kind of rock found near the head of a creek entering the Bella Coola from the south near Sunxl. [532] Fragments of the red stone were broken off, thrown into a vessel con-[317] taining water, and brought to a boil by the insertion of hot stones. Under the action of heat the rock became soft so that the manufacturer was able to pulverize it and run off the semi-liquid mixture into a small box. He would then chew cedar-bark and salmon roe, and spit into the paint, thoroughly mixing his saliva with it. When dry, the mixture was ready for use, and could be kept indefinitely.

[532] Anyone could paint who had the artistic skill, and it was chiefly artists [177] who used to make this kind of paint. Since the introduction of the white man's brilliant colours, there has been no demand for the duller native shade, and the making of paint has been discontinued.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

sk̓xqalikw': Goods collected by the relatives of a man when working on his commission as carpenter or other artisan in preparation for a potlatch.
Stcā·tsxom: A short-legged person who tries to cross a river; name of a string figure.
ṣtcaq": That part of a house on either side of the central fire.
Stcitoma: 1—Sleep, a supernatural being. [513]
2—Sleep, intangible kusiut prerogative.
stciusnăm: Presents given to the one who leads a bride to her husband during a wedding. [585] Ṣtcqwastlustkwi, "Dark-Shade": A supernatural being. [431] ste·ptl: Shadow.
stetqumas: Hammer, archaic. [412]
stekoo: Brother-in-law or sister-in-law.
shätmälxs: Shaman's stick with power of life at one end and death at the other. [601] stilwa: Bloody grease that rises to the surface of the water when a seal is cooked.
stiṗ: That on which a chief sits, that is, his ceremonial prestige gained by the distribution of much wealth. [283] shikx: 1—Caribou hide.
2—Thong made of caribou hide. [825]
shxom: Chequer-work cedar-bark matting. [285]
siläxkt: Caribou.
sihms: Love charm consisting of hair of the one desired mixed with other ingredients. [832] Sihmsila: Supernatural being who causes nightmares. [828] sihmstä or sihmstänälos: Mortals, in contradistinction to supernatural beings.
sihmstaliksta: Body.
sihmstänälosäm: Assumption of human characteristics by mankind in the beginning of time.
Stlxwaxwaknimän·a: Professional name of a female berry-picker.
Stlxwaxwakanam: Professional female berry-picker. [825] siska: Mountain goat grease. [824] siskalaya: Castor.
Siskiut, "What Has Been Divided": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
Slskla: Son of the first settlers at Green Bay in the beginning of time.
sismäs: Octopus. [825] Slsoakhlxs: One of Raven's female Crow relatives.
sisqmasma: Red rock paint. [386]
sisla: Singer's baton. ṣlsalk: Text.
slila·qaxs: Part of a river where there are rapids and projecting stones. [823]
stuin: 1—Memorial-post, decorated with crest, erected near grave. [211]
2—Plain posts erected near grave to indicate major ceremonies performed by the deceased. [764]
Stuix: 1—Village in the upper Bella Coola valley.
2—Famous hunter mentioned in an ancient story. [262]
stutnm: Dried dog salmon soaked in water.
stutuseiks: Masked representation of a dead person in crest form.
Sly', "Rainwater-Dripping-through-the-Roof": A supernatural being.
sukwlil: Black raspberry. [824]
sulstu: Ocean.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

133 tains. From each pocket between these mountains an ice-cold affluent comes swirling down to the main river. The 137 predominant tree in the river valleys is the cedar[4] which in many cases attains great girth and height. Cottonwoods flourish in places, and everywhere there is an almost impenetrable undergrowth of devil's club, berry bushes, and other shrubbery of almost tropical density. On the lower slopes of the mountains, moss-festooned pines and spruces are the most common trees, gradually becoming smaller and fewer until the 133 barren peaks are reached. The mountains rise so precipitously that their snowcaps and glaciers seem to overhang the valley, a narrow ribbon of green winding far below. The range of vision from the bank of the river is limited by the all-encircling mountains. Here and there a distant vista opens up to expose peak after peak, but on the whole there is a feeling of confinement, in contrast with the open wastes of the upper country where the Bella Coola rises. Mountains, forests, flowing water, these are the three dominant impressions of the country (see Plate 6).

136 The mammals of central British Columbia, although comparatively common, have never been of primary importance.
[291] The marten, the wolverine, the lynx, and bears, both black and grizzly, were formerly hunted for their skins to serve as [262] cloaks. Deer were killed whenever possible, but formed a negligible item of diet. The beaver also was prized for its [439] flesh. The skins of moose and caribou were traded from the Carrier Indians, but neither of these animals was found in the [286] Bella Coola area. The mammal of greatest economic impor-
[237] tance was the mountain goat, the wool of which was woven into blankets. Smoked goat meat was formerly found in every [251] house and was almost the only flesh available during the [262] winter. Small game was abundant, but seals were a luxury.
Neither were birds of great importance to the Bella Coola.
[223] Members of the tribe resident near the sea-coast used to kill

[4]Appendix C contains a glossary of the scientific names of the flora and fauna mentioned in this monograph.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

APPENDIX A

MECHANICAL PROCESSES

NO attempt was made to study either the material culture of the Bella Coola, or their methods of manufacturing, but information on some points was obtained incidentally. All sociological and religious features connected therewith have already been described. 121

THE TAKING AND PREPARATION OF OLACHEN

227

The run of olachen, sputx, comes about the end of April, and as many as possible are caught. In preparation, nets, *älte'x*ʷ, are brought out from the boxes where they have been stored during the winter, examined, and repaired. If necessary, new ones must be manufactured out of nettle-(lsna-) fibre laid away by the women for this purpose. By rolling the material on their legs, they produce a thin twine; five strands of this are then interwoven, making a finished cord capable of resisting great strain. The nets are constructed by the men. The type used at the present time, which is said not to differ from that formerly employed, consists of a purse-like sack, oval in cross-section, open at the wider end and tapering very gradually to the other, which is closed. The total length is about thirty feet, the diameter at the open end about eight feet, and at the closed end about three feet. A new net is dipped in a mixture of boiled hemlock-bark to darken it, and then boiled in a solution of willow-bark to prevent the knots from slipping. [226] [221] [283] [462] [286] [986]

The setting out of a net is not an easy task, so two or three men agree to work as partners. In the present degenerate days, property rights are not respected and each group selects a suitable spot. The best location is where the water is about three feet deep and runs rapidly, but without ripples, over a smooth piece of the bottom; such a place is called a sklläx. When the fish begin to run plentifully, the partners paddle out to set their net, taking with them four stakes, each about ten feet in length. The weight of a full net is tremendous, so the poles have to be driven down at least six feet, a difficult task on account of the stony bottom. Selecting the exact spot, one of four posts, älkdjälos, is set upright and held in position by being tied to a cross-piece, nudjiqosta, fastened to the canoe for the purpose. While his two partners hold the craft steady, the third man begins to pound down the stake; metal mauls are now commonly used, but in former times this work was always done with an unhafted stone maul, lixwoma. The fishermen relieve one another intermittently until the top of the pole has been driven down to within 226 [476] [423] [178] [412]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

luta, a tool consisting of a slightly bent stick with sharpened point, into the cut, and runs it upwards to make a vertical incision as high as she can reach. Going around to the other side of the tree, the woman makes another cutting of the same kind. Finally, she inserts her fingers at the bottom and pulls gently outwards, so that the bark is drawn off in a long streamer which tapers to a point at the top. The other half section of the tree is similarly stripped; this treatment frequently kills saplings which can then be used for fire-wood. Although small trees are preferred, a woman sometimes collects her bark from a large one by means of many vertical incisions. 314 [412]

The bark is taken home without further preparation. The woman carefully peels off and throws away the rough outer bark, leaving the smooth inner covering, łuqai, which alone is valuable. If the weather is fine, this is dried in the sun for two or three days; otherwise, it is placed over a fire within the house. When all moisture has been removed, it is rolled up and kept for future use. The bark can be used for making baskets with no further treatment except splitting into bands of the proper width. [285]

When pounded bark, such as is widely used for ceremonial purposes, is required, the woman prepares the necessary tools. Two small sticks, each about six inches in length and one-half inch in diameter, are used as tweezers, kiṗla, though the bark can, if necessary, be held in the hand. Two beating sticks are required, each about two feet in length, six inches wide, and half an inch thick; one edge of each is rounded off, though not sharpened to a cutting surface. When all is ready, the woman crouches on the floor, with the lower beater, łqanḑ, held stationary before her on a box or other raised rest, and lays an end of the bark over the rounded edge. Taking the other, the upper beater, ṡpikta, in her right hand, she strikes downwards so that its edge slides down the side of the stationary stick, bruising the fragment of bark. With her left hand she pushes the piece slightly further over the edge, and again the upper beater falls. This is repeated time after time until the whole length is pulverized and softened. It is tiring work, but a woman accomplishes more in an hour than seems possible as her muscles become accustomed to the shearing motion. The bark becomes broken and frayed but its tensile strength is sufficient to prevent it from falling apart. Then the woman brushes it with shavings to remove loose fragments and the work is done. This type of pounded cedar-bark is called ikw'. 287

Ikw' is usually dyed red before being used for ceremonial purposes and is then termed mok'. In winter the dye is made from alder-bark with pieces of the wood attached, but in summer only scrapings from the inner bark are used. Water is placed in a vessel, urine added, pieces of alder 287 386 [824]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

287 thrown in, and hot stones lifted in to heat the mixture. Even at the present time dye is never made on a stove, as it is thought that the 386 gradual heating by means of stones is essential. As it becomes warm, the woman thoroughly stirs the ingredients with her hands, then, when it boils, some of the bark is lifted out and more added. This process is continued until the brew is deep red in colour. It is allowed to stand for a few minutes before the pounded cedar-bark is placed in it. The operator gently works it around until it is saturated, then lifts it out and hangs it up to dry. Several pieces of bark can be dyed in one solution, though it is necessary to add more alder-bark and more stones to maintain the proper strength and heat.

[285 177] Although red cedar-bark is the kind most commonly used, the Bella Coola sometimes use the yellow cedar for mats and blankets, an art learnt from the Bella Bella.

THE MANUFACTURE OF PAINT

386 Paint, such as was used both for decorating the body and for por-[302 532 317] traying designs on wood, was obtained from a kind of rock found near the head of a creek entering the Bella Coola from the south near Sunxl. Fragments of the red stone were broken off, thrown into a vessel containing water, and brought to a boil by the insertion of hot stones. Under the action of heat the rock became soft so that the manufacturer was able to pulverize it and run off the semi-liquid mixture into a small box. He would then chew cedar-bark and salmon roe, and spit into the paint, thoroughly mixing his saliva with it. When dry, the mixture was ready for use, and could be kept indefinitely.

[532 177] Anyone could paint who had the artistic skill, and it was chiefly artists who used to make this kind of paint. Since the introduction of the white man's brilliant colours, there has been no demand for the duller native shade, and the making of paint has been discontinued.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

133 tains. From each pocket between these mountains an ice-cold affluent comes swirling down to the main river. The 137 predominant tree in the river valleys is the cedar[4] which in many cases attains great girth and height. Cottonwoods flourish in places, and everywhere there is an almost impenetrable undergrowth of devil's club, berry bushes, and other shrubbery of almost tropical density. On the lower slopes of the mountains, moss-festooned pines and spruces are the most common trees, gradually becoming smaller and fewer until the 133 barren peaks are reached. The mountains rise so precipitously that their snowcaps and glaciers seem to overhang the valley, a narrow ribbon of green winding far below. The range of vision from the bank of the river is limited by the all-encircling mountains. Here and there a distant vista opens up to expose peak after peak, but on the whole there is a feeling of confinement, in contrast with the open wastes of the upper country where the Bella Coola rises. Mountains, forests, flowing water, these are the three dominant impressions of the country (see Plate 6).

136 The mammals of central British Columbia, although comparatively common, have never been of primary importance.
[291] The marten, the wolverine, the lynx, and bears, both black and grizzly, were formerly hunted for their skins to serve as [262] cloaks. Deer were killed whenever possible, but formed a negligible item of diet. The beaver also was prized for its [439] flesh. The skins of moose and caribou were traded from the Carrier Indians, but neither of these animals was found in the [286] Bella Coola area. The mammal of greatest economic impor-
[237] tance was the mountain goat, the wool of which was woven into blankets. Smoked goat meat was formerly found in every [251] house and was almost the only flesh available during the winter. Small game was abundant, but seals were a luxury.
[262] Neither were birds of great importance to the Bella Coola.
[223] Members of the tribe resident near the sea-coast used to kill

[4]Appendix C contains a glossary of the scientific names of the flora and fauna mentioned in this monograph.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

PLATE 2

115
142
291
302

Photograph by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

Joshua Moody

[p 26 (B)]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

PLATE 3

115
142
302
291

Photograph by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

Captain Schooner

[y 26 (c)]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

PLATE 4

115
142
291
302

Photograph by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

Jim Pollard

[#26 (0)]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

782 party. Canoes always start soon after dawn, and each mem-
224 ber of the expedition is careful to pray before leaving, and also 726 to avoid eating in case food should in any way interfere [785] with the success of the venture. Before reaching their destination, a chief in each canoe draws from a pouch some eagle down brought for the purpose, holds it before his mouth, and blows a little towards each of the four cardinal points, at the same time asking Minakais to smile on the enterprise and grant a safe return. This does not guarantee success, but it is felt that any disaster which may occur would have been more serious if assistance had not been thus requested.

782 Although Älquntäm, under the name of Minakais, is the 776 one to whom prayers are most often addressed, petitions are sometimes made to other beings. In the beginning of time, when Raven had superabundant power, mortals frequently sought his assistance. At the present time, he is sometimes asked for aid, in the belief that he may still have some shreds of his former power, or be in a better position than men to intercede with Minakais. If ravens croak when it is raining, 782 people may ask them to request the supreme being to stop the 776 rain; in such cases, a petitioner is careful to address a raven
825 as Nowakila, his title as chief, rather than as Qmax. In cold 821 winter weather, a raven is sometimes caught alive, its head smeared with grease, and as it is released, the captor says:

"Please end the cold wind, Nowakila."

782 Prayers are also said half humorously, half seriously, on many occasions. When, for example, clothing has become too [291] ragged for further use, it is thrown on a fire with the remark:

"Please come to me again, new."

The thrower does not actually believe that in so doing he is asking help from his clothing, but it gives him a certain sense of satisfaction thus to have expressed his desires.

782 The prayers above described can be said by anyone, at any 424 time; they are means of propitiation known to the whole 821 community. In addition, information was obtained about two prayers, each of which is the jealously guarded prerogative

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

PLATE 11

142
231
291
516
622

Photograph by the author

A Bella Coola couple with their dogs; the one on the left is a chief.

[-p 186 (e)]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

He is especially rich in caribou-skins, used for foot covering, and goat-skins, so treasured for their wool.[7] He and his wife have laid up abundant food, and, most important of all, his wife's family is wealthy. Rumours have spread that X will soon give a potlatch and perhaps one or more foreign chiefs has given him a large cone-shaped whistle, such as is used in ɹsaok ritual (see Plate 12). These whistles, called qomo·ts, are often referred to as the "breath" or "voice" of a chief; they are also called sloptsta, the "heart" or "wind" of a chief; a third designation is nulwinuts. X carefully conceals a whistle in one of his boxes. Such a present expresses the kindly feeling existing between those akin to one another in that they have risen to a position of eminence above the common crowd. Its receipt spurs a man to greater efforts to amass the wealth necessary for giving a potlatch by keeping before his eyes the realization of what another has done. A rival chief never gives such a present. X returns each whistle secretly at the time of his potlatch.

Early in the autumn X decides that he has almost enough wealth. To complete the essential amount he will not hesitate to borrow from his friends. It is most unusual to be refused, for it is incumbent on X, unless he wishes to lose the esteem of the community, to repay his borrowings with heavy interest, and when X distributes his goods at his potlatch it will be announced how he has obtained them, and the lender is proclaimed as a person of sufficient wealth to be able to spare some of it. Goods so loaned are termed "belt goods," a reference to the manner in which a man fastens up his cape with a belt before setting to work. The assumption is that X will have to labour to repay his indebtedness. Failure to repay is a serious matter, and the lender would be justified in seizing a canoe or other valuable article as surety for his debt; in fact, feuds are commonly caused by unpaid debts. Men of business

[7] Formerly, when goat-skin blankets were highly valued, goats were never shot for fear of the blood staining the wool. Instead, they were cornered by dogs, and choked to death in nooses. For presentation, each skin was laid out on the floor and then cut into longitudinal strips, two, three, or four fingers wide.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

857 better than hunting birds and small animals with miniature bows and arrows, or snaring them in nooses of grass or string. Little girls make playhouses in which they cook wonderful meals of berries, with perhaps the addition of a wooden fish. On the whole, however, the children do not enter into play as boisterously as white boys and girls, nor do they seem to derive as much pleasure from it. In former times, when clothing was [152] scanty, small lads used to delight in picking nettles and beating [291] one another with the stinging branches; this must have caused considerable pain, but it was a point of honour not to cry out, and anyone, perhaps caught unaware, who showed discomfort, [526] was laughed at as a coward. Both boys and girls are fond of swinging, and even adult women sometimes find time to enjoy themselves by swaying to and fro at the end of a rope.

Young Bella Coola do not have as many toys as white children, and none of them is complex. Some girls have crude [575] wooden dolls, though elaborate figurines are reserved for use [231] in kusiut dances. Perhaps the most cherished plaything is a small puppy or, in recent years, a kitten, though the unfortunate animal is handled and mauled without consideration. A good carpenter may make for his son a wooden top or a bull-roarer, to the envy of his less fortunate friends. Both types of toys are said to be used in [575] Nusmăt-a and at some kusiut dances the masked figures carry them to play with.

526 There is one game, sleti, which the salmon are [825] said to delight to watch, and which is accordingly played by boys as soon as the first spring salmon have been disposed of with fitting rites. Each makes for himself, or is given by his father, a wooden spear with a projecting barb, fastened as shown in the accompanying sketch (see Fig. 1). A loop of branches is made and thrown into a pool of stagnant, or slow-moving water, on each side of which stands a rival group of competitors. At a signal, all throw their spears simultaneously, with the intention of passing them through the ring, so that the barb of each will

Fig. 1. "Tey spear."

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

PLATE 13

142
291
302
342
516

Photograph by the author

Mrs. Joshua Moody (left) and Mrs. Willie Mack, two Bella
Coola women

[p 516 (A)]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

PLATE 14

142
291
302

Photograph by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

Mrs. Jim Pollard, a Kitamaat woman

[p516 (8)]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

PLATE 15

142
291
302

Photograph by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

Mrs. Jim Pollard, profile

[p 516(c)]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

142
291
302
342

PLATE 16

Photograph by the author

Reuben Schooner, a Bella Coola man, and his children

[p 516 (D)]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

PLATE 17

142
291
302
342

Photograph by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

Lame Charlie, a Bella Coola man

[p 516 (E)]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

PLATE 18

142
291
302

Photograph by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

Captain Myers, an aged Bella Coola man

[p 516 (F)]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

PLATE 19

142
291
302

Photograph by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

Skookum Mary, a Kimsquit woman

[p 516 (G)]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

PLATE 20

142
291
302

Photograph by the author

Alec Davis, a full-blooded
Bella Coola

[p 516 (H)]

515 sionally, in a half-hearted manner, but it is not unusual for a man to allow the basin of water in which he makes his ablutions to remain standing for two or three weeks. Not many [177] years ago the Carriers taught their neighbours to make a kind [296] of soap from the ashes of burnt cottonwood sticks thrown into [388] water; with this clothes are washed irregularly and in most cases from sheer necessity only. In former times bathing was [783] a semi-sacred rite, but this fell into disuse with the passing of [177] the old religion, and the use of soap and water merely for the sake of cleanliness has not become a daily habit. The women [291] have more vanity; the younger girls especially like to have new clothes, though they wear them carelessly, heedless of fit. [796] An effort is often made to clean up for ceremonial dances, but it entails little more than the removal of the more obvious dirt and the putting on, over unchanged undergarments, of a sweater. Pride in personal appearance, love of tidiness, delight in a clean house, are all quite foreign to the Bella Coola.

356 Probably the reason for lack of comforts in the houses is simply that the people do not feel the need for them. They [264] consider it no hardship to sit on a rickety chair, scoop up food [231] from a common dish and, if they think of it, throw morsels [152] down to the dog or the cat. The smell, the flies, the dirt, the chaos do not concern them. Capable of undergoing privations, hardships, and even sufferings, they think neither of the com-
231 fort of themselves nor of others. Their domestic animals are often treated abominably, not through lack of affection or cruelty, but from callousness. More than once the writer has seen a favourite dog steal a piece of food from the table. Its master, after a furious blow or kick at it, would suddenly, as if by inspiration, throw a choice bit to the animal, saying:

"Why, he must have been hungry!"

Though the Bella Coola feel a kinship with animals unknown to the white man, it is not combined with any recognition of their feelings as living creatures. There are, of course, [577] many exceptions, but on the whole public opinion demands generosity and kindness only towards human members of the group. The moral code is not concerned with animals.

Tlaxamgmitl: Name acquired in the beginning of time by a Rivers Inlet man from a sea-lion.
[825] lleakudhtcl: Sardine.
Tlikmaxotâkka, "The Walking One": Supernatural name of the water ouzel.
Ilikmuts: Song sung during Cannibal dance while the performers run from house to house.
[825] tlima: Mountain goat sinew.
Tlisla: 1—One of the first men to settle at Stuix in the beginning of time.
2—Wife of Mount Nusqalst, when in human form at the beginning of time.
Tlitcaplilân·a: One of the nine supernatural siblings, a woman who brings aid to those in sickness and is thus the initiator of shamans.
[825] ltixin: Sea-lion.
Tlmstadimut, "Be Like a Person": Instruction given to a stick in the beginning of time. This designation has since been used as an ancestral name.
[821] ltok': 1—Moon.
2—The zenith.
[825] ltokly: Virulent skin disease.
ltopan·i: Cormorant.
Tloqo·tl, "Small Mound": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
Tloqots, "Maligner" or "Defamer": A supernatural being.
ltpa: 1—Gaff.
2—To cut wood for masks.
ltpanap: "Cut!" Call used on second day of kusiut dances.
[823] ltpapalam: Small trickle that flows from rocks near the Hot Springs on Labouchere Channel. The term is probably applied to other similar rivulets.
[415] ltulai·: Water-tight basket.
[824] lmiax: Water-washed stump with scoured, radiating roots.
Tniqo: Region on the upper Kitlobe River.
[482] lnixstl: Tump-line.
tobs: Navel.
Tobntl: Raven's canoe in the beginning of time.
[825] loqa: Mink.
lomidjut, "He of the Big Family": Term used to describe a man with many descendants.
[583] lop·a: Synonym for ldamamamm, the repurchase of a wife from her husband. This term is perhaps used in Kimsquit alone.
[825] lopiwac: 1—Fawn.
2—Nustrkâmg name of a Kimsquit woman.
[821] Tpiksta: Star in the Great Bear.
lqanj: Lower of the two beaters used in the preparation of cedar-bark.
Tqwantlos, "Facing": Village at head of South Bentinck Arm, synonymous with Tal·lo.
[291] lsaikstl: Hat with flat top and broad brim.
lsaix: Stonecrop.
Tsaislitl: Kimsquit shaman mentioned in an ancient story.
Tsa·kmai: Bella Coola warrior living in the last century.
Tsalits: Kimsquit hunter mentioned in an ancient story.
Tsâl: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
Tsaskmem: Village on east side of South Bentinck Arm.
lse·tl: Green barnacles on water-covered stones.
[825] lsiks: Large woodpecker, species unidentified.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 192*

Wat·as: Xuxais woman living in the beginning of time.
wais: Dog. [825]
wawnic: Dog, archaic.
wa·xsia: Cape of yellow cedar-bark. [291] waxwaxtsia: Brother or sister of grandparent.
Wiakai: One of the first women to settle at Snuiłli in the beginning of time. [601] Wiaqaii: 1—One of the first men to settle at Tāl·io in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Stuix in the beginning of time.
Wikwan·ekwla: Synonym for Ḱwla: Influential Ḱwakiutl woman captured in the beginning of time by a Nusqalst chief.
Wikwanutl: Kimsquit hunter mentioned in an ancient story.
wina, vocative, winao: War-party.
Winās: Slave living at Nusqalst several generations ago.
winās di qala, "War-Party of the Ocean," or winās di sā·ildjo·ts, "War-Party of the Tides": Supernatural being.
Winwina: Supernatural being who captured birds and fish for the benefit of mankind.
Winwinumak: Supernatural being, perhaps identified with one of the warm winds.
winxta: Assistance rendered by the inhabitants of a town to a neighbouring settlement being attacked. [628]
Wipitpawakās: Bella Bella chief living in the beginning of time. [726] Wisamkilak: Smaoan's daughter-in-law in the beginning of time.
Wi'tālao: Ancestral name of a Kimsquit man.
Wiłsdks: Sisaok name of a Kimsquit man.
Wixat: Man who travelled to the Skeena River in the beginning of time.
Wixon: One of the first men to settle at Schooner Pass in the beginning of time.
wł·a: Kusiut dance in which the nine supernatural siblings are summoned to earth.
Włx: One of the first women to settle at Schooner Pass in the beginning of time.
Wlx: One of Raven's female Crow relatives.
wlx: Cripple.

X

Xaiāqałtl: Ancestral name of a Tāl·io man.
Xaiqts: Stream entering the Bella Coola from the north near Nuiłtux. [821] Xai·utl: Continuous North Wind, anthropomorphized.
xak'loi·: Cry raised as each of the first spring salmon is brought ashore. [226] Xālaiya: Step-daughter of Raven in the beginning of time.
xaqānts: Great blue heron. [825]
Xat: Designation of a tribe, probably a branch of the Carriers, dwelling far to the south-east of the Bella Coola.
xaxaf': Canada goose.
xał·a: Root of qāxmāts, an unidentified plant.
Xekalus: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola Cannibal.
Xekwotsen·a: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Xelitmai: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola woman.
xem: The successive rising of the sun from day to day. This word, which is common in derivatives, appears usually to be pronounced xem after s. [821] Xemcua: 1—One of the nine supernatural siblings.
2—One of the first men to settle on the Dean River in the beginning of time.
3—One of the first men to settle at Snuiłli in the beginning of time.

Pre-
* 556 sently the guests assemble, those who are susaok wearing on [575] their heads one or more weasel skins as a mark of membership
[237] in the society. Each takes the seat to which he is entitled,
[292] the chiefs behind the fire, or on either side of it, the commoners,
[554] slaves, and foreigners in the two corners nearest the door. The heralds move to and fro between door and fire, their constant exchange of remarks adding to the general interest of the affair. It is the function of a herald to lend dignity to chiefs by [203] the tone of his observations, but should one fail to live up to his station, the herald is privileged to comment thereon. In some respects his position approximates that of a buffoon, but as a herald always receives valuable presents, the office is sometimes accepted by ambitious young men, willing to undertake the slightly derogatory duties in return for the substantial gain.

264 A number of young lads, friends or relatives of X, distribute
* 556 the food. It is placed in boxes; an important chief is not called upon to share with any one, whereas six or seven men of no [883] standing may partake from one box. These receptacles, with whatever food remains in them, are taken home by the guests; otherwise the host would be insulted. Many boxes are lost in [578] this way, a source of considerable irritation. After the first course, a second follows, consisting of a different kind of food in another box, and in some cases there is a third, and even a fourth course. A chief must never appear stingy. The more he gives, the more does his prestige increase. Also, a man who gives freely receives abundantly, so that generosity brings its reward.

583 Next, the father or other male relative of X's wife, or a
* 556 fluent friend who speaks for him, stands up and makes a speech, [537] extolling the fame of his own family by sketching in general
[425] outlines one of the myths of his ancestors, and announcing that X's wife is taking to her husband some portion of it. This may [424] be the prerogative of using a spoon carved, for example, with [532] the shape of a beaver; or a carved box, or a totem-pole with certain figures on it, or the right to use a painting of a grizzly bear on the wall of his house, or an ancestral name.

Poor people, white guests, or others from whom no return can possibly be received, share equally in the distribution; the money goes to all to validate the transaction. On the other hand, X expects that the presents, if any, made to a few individuals after the general distribution, will be returned with interest. In selecting the recipients of these he has been animated, first, by the necessity of repaying old debts, and secondly by his desire to make good investments in the shape of presents to those likely to show their chiefly nature by returning with heavy interest. No request is ever made for such repayment, but as the transaction has been publicly announced, a man fears to fail to repay, since that would lower his prestige. No one may refuse a present, no matter how embarrassing it may be. 553 556* 575 [558]

After the gifts have been distributed the songs of the initiates are practised. Members of the susaok society join in with the singers; the other spectators listen attentively, full of interest, but take no part. X with his helpers then gives food to all, and they depart. [533]

Before the coming of the white man a potlatch was a rare event, and susaok members were initiated at local gatherings. The period of confinement was the same as that just described, but instead of merely practising the songs during the interval, the initiates appeared and danced to them. It will be convenient here to describe that ritual, emphasizing the fact that at a potlatch, when the initiates can be confirmed in the presence of foreign guests, this preliminary rite does not take place. 535 556* 575 177

After the distribution of goods the singers beat out[16] the tune of any one of the initiates, and all emerge in close succession from the back-room, each wearing a blanket, without distinctive design, a collar of dyed and pounded cedar-bark decorated with pendant weasel skins, and the distinctive susaok head-dress (see Plate 15).[1] This consists of a circlet of grizzly bear claws, surmounted in front by a small forehead mask; from the inner side of the circlet there rise a number of sea-lion 292 535 556* 575 237

[16] The present tense is used for uniformity.

[1] [see cat. 116, facing p 218 - ANALYST]

242 whiskers over which is scattered eagle down. From the back 535 of the head-dress hang weasel skins. In Bella Bella it is said to be customary for a skin to be added on every occasion when a * 556 susaok is confined to the back-room. This may happen as many 575 as fifteen times to the child of wealthy parents, and a few Bella Coola have adopted the practice of marking each with a skin.
[237] Usually, some six or nine are hung in two tiers, without consideration of the number of times the wearer has been in seclusion. The central figure of the forehead mask is a head with [532] a hooked nose, the recurved hook being joined to the face itself. This figure does not vary with the wearer's ancestral myth, and no one knows what it represents. This design is [177] said to have been introduced to Bella Coola from the north a few generations ago; before that time the head-dress consisted [237] of a circular band of dyed cedar-bark, decorated with the tail [824] feathers of one of the large woodpeckers. The Bella Coola call it simply, "forehead mask." Each initiate carries a hollow [532] rattle, carved in the shape of a bird, which he holds in his right [534] hand, belly uppermost. Long, long ago, when a dancer failed to do so, the rattle became alive and the bird flew away; hence, this rule has been obeyed ever since.

535 Each initiate takes up his station in some part of the house behind the fire and dances to the beating of the sticks. The
* 556 left hand of each is clasped behind his back and in his right he 575 holds the rattle and keeps it in constant motion by shaking his wrist. Ability to do this is one of the marks of a good dancer. Keeping the body stiff and the legs close together, he rises with slight jumps, barely altering his position on the floor. Sometimes he slowly turns around sunwise[17] in his series of jumps, at other times he does not alter his position. The head is bent from side to side and downwards at each jump, causing the eagle down to fly in all directions. Susaok assistants blow more of the material on to the head-dress at intervals (see Plate 16).[1]

[821] [17]The Bella Coola believe that the sun moves from east to south to west to [796] north. Many ceremonial movements follow this direction, which will henceforth be described as sunwise.

[1] [See cat 116, facing p 219 - ANALYST]

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

one after another of the concealed initiates, while the audience, consisting of susaok alone, join in the singing. As the sounds drift out to the guests, they too beat out some of their well-known susaok songs. 535 556* 575

At high tide, as the canoes draw near, carefully guided by poles and saddles, the susaok troop down to the beach to meet the guests, led by a siki, who alone wears an apron of puffin beaks and carries a rattle. The singers beat out one of his tunes and the siki dances on the beach, while the supernatural whistle which has been sounding from the back-room of X's house, is now heard at his side, blown by an assistant under cover of his blanket. After the siki has danced, the singers among the guests, and there are always enough of them to make possible the beating out of the better known tunes, sing one of their siki's songs as he dances on the platform surmounting the canoes. [292] [533]

The Bella Coola siki, surrounded by a group of susaok, now begins to turn about in a frenzied manner, always sunwise, bending down, then straightening himself, twisting and writhing like a maniac. Finally, standing erect, he pretends to throw something to the foreign siki, and then falls to the ground. The recipient makes the motion of catching something heavy, and at the same time one of his accomplices in the canoe sounds another susaok whistle, deluding the uninitiated observers into the belief that some power has been transmitted, which is the source of the strange noise. The visiting siki revolves four times; twisting and bending, then straightens up and throws back his cloak, to expose a mask representing Mulakila. This has been concealed there all the time, but the uninitiated readily believe it to be the creature which has made the noise, or else that it is an object miraculously made by this being. The siki revolves four times more, with the mask in plain sight and the whistle constantly booming, while a fluent speaker "explains" the meaning of it all to the uninitiated who are watching with interest from the background.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

292
342
532
535
575

PLATE 16

Photograph by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

Eagle down being blown over a sisaok dancer

[facing P219]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

552 575 [184] [292] [535] between the two societies. Presently the elderly a'alk returns, clad in his ceremonial costume consisting of the head-gear, a blanket, and a narrow apron from which hang deer hooves, small pieces of copper, or other jingling articles. The singers strike up his song, and he dances near the fire in a manner depending upon which of the four dances he has the right to perform. Again the siki leaves the house; when he returns he announces that a tutwinam is coming with a song for the youth, naming the one who is to be made an a'alk. A moment passes, and in stalks a masked figure depicting the form taken by the first ancestor of the novice, or the being from which one of his later forefathers received an a'alk prerogative. Sometimes two of these beings appear. The apparition circles the fire, stops beside the singers, and chants a song to them in a low voice. Then it enters the back-room and is seen no more. Presently the singers strike up the song they have just heard. To those who are neither a'alk nor sisaok it seems that the song was brought by the supernatural visitor; in reality, it is the one previously composed by the singers and taught by them to the wearer of the mask to lend realism to the performance. The youth concealed within the back-room does not emerge on this occasion, the song is merely sung in practice. Sometimes the masked figure appears during the daytime and walks openly along the shore of the river like a foreign guest, as indeed it is said to be.

[184] [178] The coming of a tutwinam is one of the points of resemblance between a'alk and sisaok rites. The older people agree that this has long been a feature of the former society, adopted by the latter in recent years. The description given in this section appears to be of the original and proper use, although, as already noted, the sisaok have recently employed tutwinam for somewhat different purposes.

It is uncertain whether or not the a'alk novice remains secluded any longer within the back-room. In ancient times he probably did, but with the recent growth of the sisaok

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Bellabella NE5

BB 539 BC A 539 BC BB [226] [825]

a person has been in contact with supernatural beings to enable him to enter.

Ailsamka told them everything, that her mother had failed to teach her how to cut up black cod, "so Xemoqwa sent blackfish to catch me so that I could be taught," she said. "You must be very careful to cut them up properly or trouble will come upon you."

The correct method, as taught by Raven, is to split the fish cleanly without severing the bones. Sā-paxsk's daughter had erred ~~by~~ cutting the one which is equivalent in a fish to the human collar-bone. She told them of the fish that abounded in Xemoqwa's house; of the red-fish, which disobeyed their mother by playing outside the house so that their stomachs were often forced out from their mouths[1] and they floated up to the surface; of Xemoqwa himself and his large hat; and of the other denizens of the underworld. The people listened attentively and ever after cut up black cod in the prescribed fashion, though if Ailsamka had not been carried off to Xemoqwa's house Raven's teaching would undoubtedly have been forgotten.

After being after his daughter's safe return, Sā-paxsk gave a potlatch. He took for himself the name Xemoqwa, and at the same time reproduced in his own house as much as possible of what his daughter had described. Thus there were imitation fishes, especially the halibut, around the house, while the red-fish were shown as wooden models that could be drawn up to the roof by hidden strings representing the manner in which the fish float up to the surface of the ocean. Xemoqwa, himself, was shown wearing his large ball topped hat, of the type known as Sīsoil.[2]

While Ailsamka was under the water Xemoqwa had shown her xwaak whistles, and at this potlatch they were used while the girl was concealed within the back-room as a xwaak initiate.

BC [177] [556]

This was the[3] origin of the xwaak ceremonial, which spread in time from the Wakas people to the Bella Coola. The name Xemoqwa passed to one of Sā-paxsk's descendants who, when he gave a potlatch, arranged

BC BB [424] [292] [532]

[1] The red-fish is an unidentified deep-sea fish which dies in shallow water through lack of pressure.

[2] This style was always worn by Xemoqwa and Alqunstin and, as many of the first people obtained their power from one or other of these beings, the prerogative of using such hats at potlatches is quite common. They are made of cedar roots, are waterproof, and are usually painted with one of the wearer's ancestral crests. When either Xemoqwa or Alqunstin is shown on a totem-pole he is displayed with one of these hats.

[3] It will be noted that the narrator tacitly assumes any origin recorded in his myth to be the sole, or authentic one.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

the front-door facing the river, but has to leave the house through the trap beneath the enclosure where she sleeps. The Bella Coola consider it unthinkable for a girl to disregard these prohibitions, but if this should happen, she would be chased home by her parents, by the Guardian of the River, or, in fact, by any elderly member of the community. The strongest reason for respecting these regulations is the belief that disobedience brings death; no one knows how it is inflicted, but a careless girl soon dies. During this period she cannot eat fresh salmon, though she is allowed them if they have been smoked for four or five days. Her scanty meals are brought to her in the enclosure where she is virtually a prisoner. It is true that she can leave it and wander in the woods, but her comrades avoid her as being in an unclean condition of which they are afraid, and she is barred from taking part in all activities by the river which constitute so large a part of the life of the Bella Coola. A girl cannot pick berries during this time, so no more would grow in the valley which she had thus defiled; she must not touch anyone, nor allow anyone to touch her; she must not pass in front of a man; she must go to bed before everyone else in the house, and be the last to arise. The danger of breaking some taboo is so great that it is safer for a girl to remain within her enclosure where her mother, and other old women, gather to tell her the many things which it is fitting for an adult woman to know. This seclusion is not pleasant, but it unquestionably serves to emphasize the importance of married life to which it is a prelude. The writer remembers an occasion when a Bella Coola family was eating tasty fresh salmon while one of the daughters, who had recently reached adolescence, watched enviously. Her grandfather rose and gave the child an orange, remarking that in his youth little girls did not receive such dainties to ameliorate their lot.

Adolescent girls wear certain distinctive articles of clothing and ornaments. The most noticeable is a skull-cap bound with grass; this is the only time in a woman's life that a hat is worn. She also wears ear-rings, each consisting of a neat

784 881 [761] [262] [783] [222] [513] [867] 881 [292] [301] [439]

1/4 [ie - one year after puberty - ANALYST]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

the same manner the fluent speaker outlines a myth belonging to the ancestral family of X's mother, again with emphasis on the dancers used by her ancestors. X, as a member of both ancestral families, can combine his rights from both sides, but it is customary for him to use no more than five or six performers. Should X have no claim to this privilege from either mother or father, an almost unthinkable situation, he is able to borrow the prerogative of using some from friends. The sentiment on which this oration of myths is based is the one so often mentioned; it marks the close relationship between the future children and their noble ancestors of old, a source of strength to the former. 537 585 [426]

X's father now names those whom he wishes to assist him on the following day. These are the dancers, who are chosen primarily for their skill in dancing, and secondarily in accordance with their rank. With them he selects a number of persons to stand near and help or "cherish" them as they perform. He also asks the services of some of the women who are professional droners; of the keeper of the marriage song of his ancestral family; and, finally, of a number of men to sit near the singers and assist them with suggestions. It would be most exceptional for anyone so called upon to decline the honour. It is near morning by this time and the guests depart. 585 [535] [614]

On the following morning, the actual wedding day, X's father calls to his house those selected the previous evening as dancers and their assistants. The former wear blankets decorated with small copper ornaments[1] and carry circular wooden rattles provided with handles. Their clothing and rattles may be their own, but if they do not possess suitable attire, it is incumbent on X's father to provide them. Skins are piled up within the house, and some of these are said to "make soft the [534]

[1]At the present time there is uncertainty as to the proper clothing of a marriage dancer. Several informants stated that it was a copper-decorated blanket, whereas others said that there was no special attire; one man claimed that an attempt was made to imitate the form and costume of X's first ancestor, and another that ceremonial costume was used. Probably there was no uniformity in custom. [292] [535] [184]

Lib: Growth E-5 (1922-1924)948
NEB Bellecrofts NEB

tried to incorporate as many of these as possible, so that the rite soon became a chorus of obscenities. The songs were sung and resung until all present were familiar with them, then the donor of the rite distributed food and all departed.

The following afternoon everyone, including those uninitiated into either society, were invited to the donor's house. Probably the only absentees from the village were the deserting wife and her lover, while guests from neighbouring settlements were often in attendance. On this occasion, for the first time, the deserted husband used to take the leading part. When the singers struck up the tune of the first song, he used to appear, supported by four or five assistants. His face was blackened with soot, he wore a lynx-skin belt, and above his head was fashioned some insulting object, usually a representation of the female organs made of wood, cedar-bark and berries, as realistic as possible. As the singers sang, aided by those who had learnt the songs on the previous day, the husband danced, moving his body so that the ornament on top of his head was shaken suggestively. Meanwhile the spectators kept calling out filthy epithets of any kind on his ex-wife and her lover. Sometimes the dancer was able to insert some obscene remarks into the display. On one occasion, for example, he pulled some lynx fur from his belt and threw it in the face of a Tlé-is man who happened to be present, and who had once seduced a married woman and accordingly been the butt of a similar rite, with the remark:

"All Tlé-is women have hairy pudends like that."

The guests were invited to suggest foul nick-names for the man with whom the dancer's wife had eloped. One of these was adopted by general agreement of opinion, and the man was commonly called by it henceforth. Two names so created were:

Hadzu, "The One Whose Face is Wrinkled like a Woman's Organs," and, Zwakwil, "The One Who Cohabited Publicly."

One very old man is still, 1923, commonly called by this last designation, much to his annoyance.

When the songs had been sung, each accompanied by the dancing of the deserted husband, the dancer of the ceremony distributed food and the guests departed. The only advantage to the giver of the rite was that it enabled him to show his wealth in an apparently disinterested fashion by gifts of food. Usually he was a friend of the aggrieved husband.

When a husband deserted his wife, the other women of the village used to perform an exactly similar ceremony. The same type of songs were composed, and during their singing the deserted wife used to dance, wearing above her head representations of a penis and testicles. By means of hidden strings she was able to cause the former to become erect.

On other occasions the ceremony was varied by an announcer asking the offended party about the appearance of the deserter. There followed a minute and highly coloured description about the unpleasantness of his genital organs, a description which was swiftly incorporated into the songs.

It can be taken as a matter of course that the above description is little more than an outline of the Bella Coola ceremony of shaming. In spite of its deficiencies, it is important, as evidence of the former sentiment with regard to divorce. Obscene though the ceremony must have been, both in acting and in the free use of personalities, it must have been a powerful deterrent to divorce.* Indeed it would be difficult to imagine a stronger one in a community where a man's position is judged by public opinion and where his greatest aversion is to public ridicule. It is unfortunate that we shall probably never know whether the rite was associated with chiefs or commoners.

COMMERCIAL MARRIAGE

Since marriage gains much of its importance from the considerable business transactions between the two families, with

* Similar rite was occasionally carried out for commercial motives.

1:McDowalth E-3 (1922-1924)948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

place in the manner already described. After passing through the fourth hole, or for the fourth time through the single opening, the two go to some lonely pool in the forest where the mourner washes. They light a fire and deposit on it some of his clothing, placing the rest in a stump or hollow tree. The friend always takes with him a supply of new clothing which the person being purified puts on and returns home, cleansed from the immediate taint of death. 764 783

The above rite protects widower or widow, but does not alter the fact that for one year they are ceremonially "unclean," and must obey sundry taboos. They must not go to the bank of the river, or even appear at the front door of a house facing it. To do so is displeasing to the salmon; for the same reason they cannot eat this fish unless it has been smoked. If they wish to travel on the ocean, they cannot embark at the village but must go through the woods to a point on the shore and there be picked up by the canoe. There is a regular "Widows and Widowers Rock" about a mile on either side of every village on the coast. The one near Kimsquit is called Xpiw'ii, and there is thought to be blood on it. A person mourning a consort must wear a hat decorated with miniature coppers of which the bottoms are bent upwards; should this be omitted, when the offender remarries, the new husband or wife will soon die. 765 [783] [785] [262] [484] [292] [761]

In addition to these taboos, there are customary laws of behaviour, an infraction of which renders the offender liable to social disapproval. Widows and widowers should cut their hair short, and the former should rub ashes on the face. Sexual intercourse is prohibited to both sexes; if this rule is broken, the relatives of the deceased are insulted. Remarriage should not take place for at least a year, although among poor people it sometimes occurs after only six months, in which case all taboos and restrictions automatically cease. There is no law on this point, but it is considered fitting to allow this period to elapse. These requirements clearly indicate that bereavement is not merely an individual affair, but entails social and [620] [302] [834] [587] [735]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

Such an adoption occurs only when the deceased was the owner of a Bella Bella myth and the song in question had been used to mourn a real or fictitious relative. It is contrary to custom to use the tune or words of a song not composed for a member of the deceased's ancestral family. 556* 769 [533] [177]

The actual delivering of invitations by the envoys to the desired guests does not differ from the manner already described, except that they are asked "to come to visit the sick [donor]." The significance is, of course, that the mourner's condition is that of a patient. To indicate the reason of their visit, guests at a memorial potlatch always wear a little dyed cedar-bark around their heads. [203] [292] [294]

On arrival, the first party of foreign guests is conducted to the donor's house, where they make themselves comfortable in the section allotted to them by the heralds. An elderly Bella Coola chief who is a famous orator has been asked by the donor to speak, and he rises to do so as soon as his fellow-villagers have entered and taken their places. No set phrases are used, but the speaker usually begins by reminding all present of the way in which their ancestors were created in Nuxwá·a, and how all must return thither. It is an occasion on which eloquence is essential, and the speaker delights in using as many archaic words and rhetorical expressions as possible, with constant references to religious beliefs and ancient history as recorded in mythology. Then he speaks of the death which is the occasion of the ceremony. If the deceased were an old man, he is referred to by a special term not in common usage, nuhá·ás, which implies wisdom and respect as well as extreme age. The orator states that he has fallen, using the term ḡayás, normally applied to the thunderous crash of some mighty tree. He speaks of a young chief as xwʼtlémkis, short-lived, a person who has been hunted down by the supernatural Carpenters. He continues by sketching the works of the deceased, the number of potlatches he gave and the manner in which his name was known to many tribes. Finally he tells of the donor's grief, and of how this "sickness" has been alle- 537 556* 769 [195]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

969
4556
533

"Please stop crying. We have made good your memory. You are a light to your brother. Go to Smaoexek where he stands among the abalone-shells far to the south.[28] Thence go overland to Rivers Inlet where a skämtsk will serve as canoe for you.[29] You will see the long house where your ancestor obtained shaman's power."[30]

Meanwhile Reuben Schooner had been out of sight behind the curtain of the stage. After a short interval, he emerged wearing a blue blanket decorated with mother-of-pearl buttons sewn on in raven design. He was followed by two other influential members of the sisaok society, Alexander Clallaman and Nebuchadnezzar, similarly attired. Reuben began to sing in a low, sad, penetrating voice of considerable musical power and, followed by the other two, walked slowly in a sunwise circle around the hall, all the time shaking his right hand, held projecting outwards at right angles from his elbow. The song was in Bella Bella, and even the singer did not fully understand the meaning, and few of the audience had any idea of its significance. When the three had almost completed the first circuit, someone brought Reuben a rattle, which he clutched in his right hand as he continued his way. The reason of the shaking at once became evident; he should have had a rattle throughout but few of these were left in Bella Coola at the time and it had not been possible to borrow one before beginning his song. Again the three slowly circled the hall, Alexander and Nebuchadnezzar calling out at intervals:

"Listen to the mourning song of the chief."

After the second circuit of the hall, Reuben paused near the singers and spoke to Alec Davis, a sisaok siki. The latter rose and stated how the prerogative of siki, including the right to sing, unaccompanied, a mourning song on occasions such as this had been transmitted both to Reuben and his brother Harry from Ab-sti, a Bella Bella chief to whom they were [28] See incident in one of Jessie's ancestral myths.

[29] See incident in one of Jessie's ancestral myths.
[30] See incident in one of Jessie's ancestral myths.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 756 and heard her utter the name that was to be his, as a shaman,
* 787 Nitsumdimut. He began to shake his hands as if dancing, for he was too feeble to do more, and began to sing the song. His mother at once called in the singers who listened, learning it for future use. The man is firmly convinced that if his mother had not thus called in the singers so speedily he would, after four days, have received another vision, and with it real shamanistic power. As it is, he is a shaman, since he was cured when at the point of death by Ṭhitcäplilän·a and received a name and song from her, but he is unable himself to effect cures. As soon as the singers had departed, his mother at once began to make for him a collar formed of alternate bands of dyed, and [292] undyed, cedar-bark. This is the distinctive decoration worn constantly by a shaman for a certain period after receiving his powers, and at all times when dancing. Within a few days all the inhabitants of the village were called in and the man's [553] family distributed presents, thus validating his shamanistic
[554] name. Such presents are not returnable; "they have become nothing" for the designation. Thus accredited, a shaman is in a position to start curing, if his song has contained a reference to a basin, otherwise, as in the present case, he is merely a shaman in a social sense, not professionally. There is thought to be actually within the new shaman's body, some peculiar [292] power which is too potent to allow him to mix with others. Accordingly he wears the distinctive collar, which serves as a [84] warning to menstruating women and others who are unclean to remain at a distance, and he spends much of his time alone in the forest. This continues until the next kusiut dance season when the coming to him of a yeux (II, p. 6) frees him from restraint, since the one supernatural power drives out the other. If the shaman himself is unwilling to have a yeux, it is sufficient if one comes to a son, or other near relative.

A shaman who has been told by his supernatural visitor to use a basin instructs a carpenter to make one for him. The design depends either on the owner's wish, or on that of his benefactor if the latter has decreed specifically.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 756 to make known to all that there will be a dance on the following day, using the name of the shaman. After such announcement, it would be most unusual for anyone to think of leaving a village until after the performance.
556
[203]

Towards dusk on the appointed day the people are summoned to the house of the shaman. Near the door are seated those who are not initiated kukusiut; in the inner part of the house are members of the society, with the singers in their accustomed places behind the fire. The shaman stands alone between the fire and the door and sings one of his songs, the time being marked by the words alone. Then he dances, his wrists shaking, his head rolling from side to side, and his feet marking time to the beating of sticks, as the singers accompany the singing of his song. If more than one song has been composed he dances to each, always accompanied by other shamans and by them alone. The shaman's costume consists of the usual blanket, and eagle down is scattered in his hair, with the additional and distinctive mark of intertwined dyed, and undyed, cedar-bark. After every song, the singers beat time very rapidly,[1] too rapidly for the dancer to keep pace with it, so he merely sways backwards and forwards shaking his hands violently. Then the shaman, assisted by a few friends whom he has chosen for the purpose, performs a conjuring feat to impress the uninitiated. The kukusiut realize that this may be merely a deception, but since real shamans perform something of the same nature, there is always the possibility that it may be genuine. The shaman may choose some feat which he has seen some old shaman perform, or he may use something which he has seen in a dream; or rely purely on his own inventive ability, aided, as he always is, by carpenters. The method of carrying out each trick is carefully guarded, with the result that it was impossible to obtain information about more than a few. After the conjuring act, the shaman gives food to all, followed by presents. If it is the first time that he has given

533
535
* 756 556
[292]
* 756
556

[1] This fast beating of time is called ala; it occurs only in shaman and naxnox dances.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

such a ceremony, that is, if he is validating his name, the gifts must be valuable. On later occasions, irrespective of whether it is the same trick or another that is performed, the presents will be of small value. Goods so given are not returnable. After dancing, a shaman wears his collar of dyed and undyed cedar-bark all summer, in fact until he rids himself of his supernatural endowment by the performance of a kusiut rite the following winter. 756* 556 [292]

Thus there is close inter-dependence of shaman and kusiut dances. On any later occasion, at a ceremony when songs of all types are being sung, if the singers beat out the tunes of those used at the ritual just described, the shaman dances to them. This is said to "cure" him, as if the power within him was a source of danger. [575] [533] [535]

The following are examples of the conjuring tricks performed, most of them done by the shaman Ninitsamlaix, a relative of an informant, who was able to learn the methods employed. 756* 789

On one occasion Ninitsamlaix prepared two boxes, apparently the ordinary wooden sort used for cooking; across each he arranged a diagonal cross-piece so that the receptacle contained two watertight compartments. Previous to the performance, Ninitsamlaix poured water, dyed red with the bark of the alder, into one section of one of the boxes, and put eagle down in one of the compartments of the other. When the time came to carry out the rite he asked an accomplice, another shaman, to bring some water and pour it into his box. This was done, the assistant taking care to put it into the empty half, not into that which contained the dyed water. Ninitsamlaix shook the box and poured out some of the liquid to prove that it really was water, and then drank. The spectators, unaware of the cross-piece, did not notice that he did so from the corner opposite to that from which he had poured the water. He had, of course, drunk the dyed fluid. Ninitsamlaix cried out that what he had swallowed was paining him, and proceeded to vomit the red water, much to the surprise of the

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

ceal their subterfuges, it sometimes happens that an uninitiated 575* person sees or hears something which he should not know. The 688 simplest way to deal with this situation is to kill the observer. It is said that as late as 1900 a young man, impelled by curiosity, wandered up a valley into which he had been warned not to penetrate, and met a Cannibal whom he believed had vanished into the upper realms. Almost dumbfounded, he accepted the latter's invitation to sit down, and was slain by him. More often, and especially if the observer is the child of a kusiut, he is initiated into the ranks of the society. If this happens at any time of year except the actual cere- 575* monial season, he cannot perform immediately, but he is taken to the secret meeting place of the village chiefs, and there the mysteries of the organization are explained to him. The uninitiated are told that the observer has had a shaman's experience. With the aid of the older kukusiut he then performs a dance and conjuring feat of the type already described (I, p. 564), and is secluded until the next autumn, meanwhile [292] ● wearing the distinctive collar of a shaman. In the songs used [756] on this occasion no mention is made of a wash-basin, so of course the lad only performs ceremonially. When winter comes he is formally initiated into the society.

It is somewhat difficult to understand and explain the 575* sentiments which lead a young man to obey rigidly the dictates 781 of the senior kukusiut in deceiving his former friends. If 626 it becomes known that a youth has seen something which should have been concealed, the senior kukusiut of his village [688] meet in their ceremonial spot and decide that he must be put through the shaman's rite. Some relative of the youth is always ready to provide the necessary kusiut prerogative; otherwise he would have to be killed. Two or three members are then sent to catch the young man. On some pretext they lure him into the woods and then carry him away, struggling in fear, to the holy of holies, the place which he had been told to avoid since he would die if he penetrated to it. Here he finds all the seniors of his village, seated with grave expressions on

[Kusiut Society Initiation]

*575 call is that something strange has happened to the "mortal." At intervals throughout the day he repeats this announcement, 203 and towards nightfall goes around calling:
796 Skinap, skinap, kukusiast, "Cure, cure, ye members of the kusiut society, power has come to the son of the chief [or to the mortal]."

The kukusiut assemble in X's house, taking their places around the fire; the uninitiated crowd near the doorway. X is seated among his relatives and some of the senior members of the society behind the fire. A herald calls out:

"I want a siki to help X."

*575 In every village there are at least two kukusiut who have, embodied with their kusiut name, the professional prerogative 791 of acting as healer to every novice; it is believed that the 796 ancestor of each obtained a name and this right through a [424] revelation from some supernatural healer. Since that time the owner of the name has been able to insert some of his own ever-[773] present power into a neophyte to enable him to sustain the dangers of admission to the society. This is the fiction taught to the uninitiated. The profession of siki can be trans-[425] mitted by willing like any other prerogative and it occasionally happens that the same individual is siki for both kusiut and nusak. In answer to the herald's call, the two siki come forward and crouch behind the fire, one on either side of it. [302] Their faces are blackened with soot, and each wears a blanket, decorated with dyed cedar-bark, thrown loosely over his [292] shoulders, leaving the chest and stomach bare except for an [237] apron of deer hooves or puffin beaks. Meanwhile beating sticks are distributed among most of the kukusiut who strike furiously on the floor with them without any attempt to keep time; the sole object is to produce the greatest din possible.

One of the siki contorts himself in an amazing manner, presses his hands against his stomach as if to force something from it, and rolls from side to side on his haunches, until at length he produces, as if from his body, a rock crystal (see Plate 3). He waves this to and fro in his hands, then goes

[See category 116, p 86(c) - ANALYST]

[Kusiut Society Initiation]

X sometimes receives two prerogatives at his initiation, one from each parent, 575* or from some other interested relative. In this case both are 796 expounded. The singers listen intently, knowing that they [425] will later be called upon to compose songs on the theme, or [553] themes. According to some informants they immediately sing [533] one, as if they had just created it, though it was really prepared in advance. The kukusiut listen until they have mastered it.

Helpers now distribute the food provided by X's father, 575* or whoever is responsible for his initiation. At every kusiut 796 ceremonial the marshals are the first recipients, then the 556 singers, and finally the others without distinction. As the [264] guests are eating, X's father gives presents to all, without deference to rank. An announcer calls out:

"Here are [for example] ten bear-skins from X's mother. They are to obtain for him his cedar-bark bracelets."

These goods are then distributed. Similarly other gifts from various relatives are handed out for his anklets, his blanket, his collar, his head-dress, and all other parts of his clothing. As each item of his ceremonial costume is validated, [425]
X dons the prepared article. A novice's head-dress consists [292] of a round roll of dyed cedar-bark, covering a grass frame; in [184] Stuix and the other villages of the upper valley this is decor- [237] ated with a tuft of swan's down. The kukusiut of these villages also wear a distinctive decoration consisting of a swan's skin with the feathers attached. In recent years it has been customary to pile all the goods together and distribute them as ālq̄ᵊlł, which has the significance of "something that has vanished for the novice's dyed cedar-bark." Theoretically, the aim of the donor is to bestow his presents on all equally, but if he finds that he has some remaining, he gives these to the chiefs, or to the relatives of someone whom he expects will soon be a novice. None of the goods used in general distributions are returnable, but a chief who receives an extra gift at the end usually remembers from whom it was received and cancels his indebtedness at the earliest opportunity. There is no close connection between the disbursements and the worth of the

[Kusiut Society Initiation]

*575 individual, other than an indefinite recollection of the amount
796 of goods used for his dyed cedar-bark. People always have 556 sufficient goods to validate kusiut prerogatives; in fact, if a proud person gives too lavishly to confirm the initiation of a relative, the marshals sometimes burn the goods, giving no explanation other than that the uninitiated must not be led to believe that a kusiut ceremony is an affair of wealth like a potlatch. Formerly, goods were given only at initiation ceremonies, but between 1880 and 1890 a chief gave presents, instead of food, at a dance. His example was followed, since none was willing to be outdone, although such gifts are still called "food." The name of the donor is always announced, whether he is the dancer himself or one of his relatives.

*575 X, though now a member of the kusiut society, is still a
784 novice and cannot give a dance[11] until the next ceremonial
[796] season, that is, until one year has elapsed. The marshals instruct him about his costume, and about the manner in which he must deport himself during this period, matters which depend to a considerable extent upon his prerogative. If he
[262] is a Cannibal, Scratch, or Breaker dancer he must not eat unsmoked salmon, nor must he enter a house in which either a potlatch or a memorial potlatch is taking place.[12] Failure to obey this injunction would warrant punishment from a foreign [302] tribe. Unless his prerogative is to give one of these, or the Ghost dance, he must keep his face constantly blackened.
[292] Every novice must wear a collar of dyed cedar-bark. The marshals warn him to be circumspect in dealing with uninitiated persons; he can talk to them, but it is most improper for him to engage in any familiarity or frivolous play. Above [524] all, he must neither gamble nor take part in non-athletic games,
[525]

[11] A Cannibal novice, however, begins to exercise his prerogative immediately, although he must also perform a complete dance the following year.

[12] This prohibition was once broken at Kemgas. A skilled leader was required to arrange the taste at a memorial potlatch and the only man fit for the purpose, a resident of Ikmal, was a Cannibal novice. After much deliberation he was called upon, but great care was taken to hide his identity and it was years before the infraction became known.

[The Dance of Noakxnim]

*575 snatches from old songs. The Bella Bella are said to use the *796 same compositions from year to year, and recently some of [533] these, both tunes and foreign words, have been adopted by [177] the Bella Coola. Long ago the marshals would have prohibited this custom even if the user had legitimately obtained the foreign prerogative by marriage.

As the time draws near for Noäkxnim to start his voyage, [805] X anxiously consults any of the elder kukusiut who may be calendrical experts as to the exact date. The system of reckoning time is not sufficiently exact to avoid errors, but the day ultimately arrives on which, after much discussion, it is agreed that Noäkxnim is leaving. Word is passed around to the singers, who sleep that night in X's house, ready for their duties on the morrow.

Early in the morning X stands up, gazes fixedly towards the west, and calls out:

[987] "Once more I see what I saw last year," or some other more or less specific claim to a vision.

It is believed that Noäkxnim must round four points before [773] reaching Bella Coola; in fact, his journey beneath the sea is similar to that of a canoe pushing up one of the long fiords.

Some of the marshals are always in readiness and one of *[203] them tells a herald to go to every house, repeating what X has said. This serves both to impress the uninitiated, and to notify the kukusiut of what is about to take place. The mes-
*575 senger does so, and when all have gathered, the singers, seated
*796 behind the fire, begin to beat out one of the songs composed 533 during the summer months. The theme is of X's phenomenal eye-sight, due to his patron having sent to him the super-[776] natural being, Nuälomtnam, at the moment of his departure. This being does not seem to possess corporeal form, but is rather a sight-producing medium. In the song he is often likened to a swift-flying bird; when the uninitiated hear of this they are suitably impressed with the remarkable ability of X at having such a creature sent to him. X, who has donned a [292] head-dress consisting of the white tails of two eagles, dances

[The Dance of Noakxnim]

if he so desires. The kukusiut listen to the song, and when it is resung they join in. They practise it repeatedly, until familiar with both words and tune. This part of the ceremony lasts for about two hours. 575* 796* [533]

The singers, and any others who are prepared to beat time, are always provided with long, flat, thin sounding-boards to increase the din of the pounding. When the marshals decide that the song is sufficiently familiar, they tell some of the kukusiut to carry these boards to the lowest house of the village. They do this, and also scatter clean sand on the floor, as is customary whenever a supernatural being is to enter. The uninitiated persons within the house watch with great interest. The singers enter and take their places behind the fire, then other kukusiut and finally X himself; his face is unblackened, but he wears his two eagle tails in his hair and a collar of dyed cedar-bark. On his head is a thin cylindrical circlet, about four inches high, of the same material, ornamented with swan's down by the inhabitants of the villages of the upper Bella Coola valley. The collar consists of a roll of grass, entirely covered with dyed cedar-bark from which pendant tassels of the same hang down over his chest; similar ones are worn by sisaok dancers, except that the tassels hang down their backs. Every kusiut dancer wears these two ornaments, and those who have the necessary prerogative adorn themselves with an apron of deer hooves or puffin beaks. Blankets are always worn. Kukusiut women wear in addition woollen pubic garments. [292] [534] 575* 796* 292 [424] [237]

As the singers beat out X's tune, accompanied by the voices of themselves and other kukusiut, he dances. Since his style is typical of all kukusiut except Cannibals and a few others, it will be well to digress at this point in order to describe it. X raises his arms until their upper parts are approximately the height of his shoulders, and project outwards and slightly to the front; they are bent at the elbows with the forearms vertical, thus bringing the hands opposite the top of the head. Both wrists are shaken constantly, the muscles of the lower 575* 796* 535

[The Dance of Noakxnim]

*575 since a certain kusiut has the definite prerogative of throwing *796 them on the fire. As each is tossed into the flames he calls out:
184 "Please return directly to the supernatural ones."

The only exception is for the mask of Ana'likwolsix for which his cry is:

"Please return directly to your repository."

*575 Before X can again take his normal place in the community
*796 it is necessary to remove from him the call, which is conceived 987 as being something physical that has entered his body. This is the belief taught to the uninitiated so emphatically that the kukusiut themselves appear to believe it; at any rate, whatever their inward thoughts, they act as if the call had substance. As soon as the masks have been burnt one of the kukusiut suggests that it is time to expel the call. All the kukusiut in the house crowd around X, as many as can reach his body pressing against his stomach with their hands, always in an upward direction. Higher and higher they go, from stomach to chest, from chest to neck, as if massaging some object. At list it is thought to have been expelled, and X brings his hands together, as if holding something with great care. Suddenly he throws them up in the air, opening them as he does so, and calling out:

Awakâlimut ola âmâxyxw, "Go back to your ancient home."

Those ritual words have been handed down from ancient times and are used by every kusiut to dismiss his call. Whither it is sent is problematical. Some say to X's repository, others to Nuxqalxwaista; the Bella Coola do not know. Often one of his songs has been sung on the sidewalk outside X's house; the call may be returned from there.

This rite ends the ceremony and the kukusiut dispene. It is obvious that every nalaxam must vary according to the patron of the dancer, but the above is typical of the ritual. A call can now come to any kusiut, and one often descends at this time, so that X's nalaxam is kustômem for another dancer.

*575 For the rest of the ceremonial season X has to observe *796 certain rules. He must wear his collar of cedar-bark and 307
*272

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

attend every kusiut dance. Usually all kukusiut do so in any case, but the attendance of all novices and those who have had calls is obligatory. If the dancer's face has been blackened, it must be kept so during this period. At every qotlim he dances to his eight songs, and throughout the ceremonial season has the power of attracting to himself the spirit of an uninitiated person. He sleeps in whatever house a dance is taking place, but is forbidden to hold sexual intercourse except in his own, which, of course, is possible only when a call comes to another housemate. Failure to obey this injunction was formerly punished by the marshals with death. These rules apply to every dancer.

Ālquntām enters Nusqulxwaista at the winter solstice, and at that time calls come to those kukusiut of whom he is patron. It is uncertain whether or not this entails the regular ceremony of four nights' duration. On the entry of the supreme being, Noākxnim seizes his paddle (or pole?), returns to Smaien·a, and then descends the Bella Coola River. It is believed by the uninitiated that X can see him as he passes, and the singers compose a ninth song for him. The words describe how the departing Noākxnim empties a large number of olachen into the river.[19] X dances to it, but no call comes to him. This final episode of the complicated ritual occurs, of course, after calls have come to other kukusiut.

It sometimes happens that no kusiut of whom Noākxnim is patron has enough food to give the lengthy dance just described, but some type of ritual is necessary to inaugurate the ceremonial season. Accordingly, someone with the proper prerogative is asked by the marshals to see Noākxnim when at the mouth of the river; then, when he passes upstream four days later, a call can come to any kusiut. This abbreviated ceremony, termed Imāltndjutqulsan, is carried out in the manner described above, except that it is completed in four days with only two songs.

[19] Nuākxnim is accordingly often called Nuālalnim.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Cannibal Dance]

575*
796*
787

Towards dawn, a herald goes through the village crying loudly:

"Get up, you young men! Get up all ye people! Something strange has come upon the young man."

The uninitiated are expelled and the kukusiut assemble in X's house where he is acting as if demented, biting any of his associates except other Cannibals, Scratchers, Breakers, or those whose patrons are ghosts. Meanwhile those who are not members of the society cower in their own houses, and are told that if they dare to look out, X, scenting them, will bite them to death. At intervals during the morning, X goes around to the other houses, naked and savage, snapping at everyone he sees. The uninitiated hide in the bedrooms, but peek out occasionally and hear his growlings and the shrieks of mock terror with which his associates greet his bites and threats. The kukusiut tell non-members when it is safe for them to leave their hiding-places for necessary purposes, but at all other times they remain in concealment, listening with fear to the dangerous maniac.

About midday X returns to his house where a large number of kukusiut have assembled. The uninitiated certainly, and perhaps some of the kukusiut as well, believe that Cannibals are carried away to the land above where they are exposed to great dangers, and to prevent this an effort is always made to bind the dancer. The marshals and X's relatives have made the necessary preparations, consisting of the manufacture of a long rope, in addition to the usual dyed cedar-bark collar and a bear-skin. The kukusiut enter whole-heartedly into the dramatic spirit of the rite, and the robe is thrust over X in spite of his furious struggles. Then the collar is forced over his head, while the women drone and the whistles sound eerily, to the wonder of the uninitiated listening from adjacent houses. The thick, cable-like rope is doubled and a circle of kukusiut form around the seemingly demented dancer, each man holding a section. X rushes against one part of the circle after another, as if to force his way out; sometimes he bends down, and those

[172]

[292]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575*
796*
142
342
292
791

PLATE 3

Photograph by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

Sisi producing a crystal from his stomach

[p. 84 (c)]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575*
196*
142
342
292●
787

PLATE 5

Photograph by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

Cannibal with incubus in form of a bear

[p. 84 (E)]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575*
796*
532
292

PLATE 7

Photograph by the author

Blanket with wooden skulls worn by a cannibal

[p. 164 (A)]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575*
796*
776
532
292

PLATE 9

Photograph by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

Thunder dancer. Notice the cedar-bark collar with pendant tassels and the framework of twigs decorated with eagle down.

[p. 164 (c)]

[The Dance of Winwina]

Another tsaxiat derived the prerogative of having W'inwina as patron from a myth previously cited (II, p. 45). After Raven had seen Nuklaxum and chronicled him for Millemalkanis, he flew down the food once more, observed W'inwina, and made him patron for Omgamdzilda.

The ritual of the dance of W'inwina does not vary, irrespective of its origin; accordingly one account will suffice and the performer can be referred to as X.

This dance occurs also at Kimsquit where the repository is actually in the house a few yards from shore.

W'inwina is supposed to return to Bella Coola when the January moon is full;* accordingly X consults the moonbath and makes his preparations slightly before that date. Four days before the full moon, the uninitiated are excluded from the house and a ritual enclosure is built between the fire and the back-room. This rite differs from most tsaxiat dances in that the call does not come at this time. Irrespective of whether or not the tsaxiat happen to be present on the evening of this day, X moves to the enclosure and sits there, looking eastward for the return of W'inwina. Heralds inform the uninitiated in the other houses of what is taking place. X wears a collar of dyed cedar-bark and a head-dress of eagle tail feathers, but his face is not blackened.

For three nights and three days X remains in the enclosure, gazing to the east, and meanwhile no uninitiated does even so pass outside of his house. As the fourth night is falling, messengers summon the tsaxiat who enter and sit in silence as if waiting for something; the heralds inform non-members that X's vigil will soon be over. After an interval they are likewise called in, and eagerly take their places near the door, where they receive a share of the food being served. Suddenly X jumps down from the enclosure and cries out loudly:

"The supernatural young man has left his child with strangers while he has been on a journey. Now he is returning,

*Owing to faulty astronomical observations the exact date is without bound.

[The Dance of the Tally Posts]

During pelin and nahcum days the companions gather in X's house where they construct a long ladder. The uprights and rungs are of split cedar, and each of the lower is decorated with a ruff of dyed, and a ruff of undyed cedar-bark, two white eagle-tail feathers are fastened to the top. In the afternoon of nahcum, a hacier who is also a chief blackens his face, dons a collar of dyed cedar-bark and sallies forth to invite guests from the adjacent villages. About the same time the audience in X's house is pushed back and the ladder is erected, projecting a considerable distance above the roof. The uninitiated are in clearly and wonder what is now pressed. In the evening the hahacier assemble and the singers lead out X's two songs for the benefit of the guest visitors. Then the uninitiated are called in. They see the lower part of the ladder, and gaze with wonder on X who keeps walking backwards and forwards in his ceremonial costume, clad in a dance apron and a black blanket to which is tied one end of the long rope. Two hahacier assistants hold a section of it as if to anchor him. The dancer carries a wand which he keeps shaking violently. The two songs are sung and everything is now ready for the main performance. Still shaking his wand, X climbs the ladder and disappears from sight through the roof, dragging the rope after him. The sound of the wand grows gradually fainter and fainter, but the cable is steadily drawn up through the opening. It is at midnight that the uninitiated hardly require the explanation given by an elegant hacier that a strange power has come to X, enabling him to climb up a ladder which lengthens of its own accord until he will ultimately reach the land above. The owner explains how the dancer will be able to straighten the tally posts, and thus have it in his power to govern the life of an individual, though normally it is only the supernatural beings who can do so. In this connection he employs the term mulkin, a word seldom used which has the significance of "A Measuring of the Span of Life."

As at hacinim dances, spies guard the doorway and threaten death to the hahacier unless X return in safety. He gaiion. When the dance has ended, X gives presents, first to each spectator, and then to those who have assisted him, starting with the singers. This is the last event of the evening and the kokwiri disperse. 575* 796* [#31]

[The Ghost Dance]

The factor of doing things in the reverse order appears not only in actions, but in the order of the ceremonies. Those just described, although at the beginning of the rite, resemble a kokwiri in many respects. Consequently, it is not surprising that the next night is gaiion. The singers are the first to assemble and they compose a second song for X, with the same theme but different words and tune to that already prepared. Meanwhile the kokwiri are gathering and when they have learnt the new song, the ministrant are summoned. No enclosure has been built, and X is much in evidence. His body has been painted green with a proportion of green cultivated leaves, he wears the usual collar of dyed cedar-bark and a kind of head-dress with a triangular projection over his forehead. The new songs are sung, and X dances vigorously to each in the manner just described. This is followed by the customary gaiion ritual, kwiri after kwiri dancing as the singers have sung his new songs. Finally a Camilal begins to growl forcibly in one of the new corners and the ministrant fan hurriedly. The kokwiri sit together, listening to the admonitions and remarks of the mandals, and then X dances once more. Among the peculiarities of the Ghost dance is the fact that the call may be received at this point, or X may again become mad, according to the wishes of the mandals. If they desire a further display of his insanity, he rushes out as soon as he has finished dancing and proceeds to the lowest house of the village. A number of kokwiri follow him and appear to be trying to prevent him from picking up handfuls of dirt from the floor and throwing them in all directions in an aimless manner. As a matter of fact his guardians take care that X hurls approximately the same amount in each house, as none of them is willing to have more damage done in his own house than in others. After a visit to each dwelling, the party returns to [5.33] [p.42] [p.42] 575* 796* 787

#182

Kwanusa, "Left Foot": Dzee squaloney named from part of a supernatural creature.

Kwanusa: Kwanusa house living in the last century.

[372.5] Kwanusa: Dzeedzee-shell.

Kwanusa, "Not Finished": Said concerning a hunter who has between initiation and his first complete dance.

[372.6] [371] Kwanusa: Shell cup of grass and dzeedzee-shells worn by adolescent girls during initiation.

Kwanusa: Grass, especially from play, to a hunter dance.

Kwanusa: 1.—Supernatural beings.
2.—Assemblage of the people for ceremonies of different kinds, especially shamans' dances and gambling competitions in connection with the Winter dance.
3.—Kwanusa were for the first night of a hunter dance.

Kwanusa, "A Screaming": Said of cups which a witch relative have given some property to the husband's dear that have received to return.

[372.7] [371] Kwanusa: Place of amusement of a Winter dance's guests.

Kwanusa: Old people, especially persons this is a polite term for indirect address.

Kwanusa: Eighth initiation, especially the ceremonial purchase of a chief to a female.

[375] Kwanusa: Dance carried with unusual cross.

Kwanusa: 1.—Moon.
2.—Daughter of the first ancestor on Galiu.

[372.8] Kwanusa: Spring salmon.

Kwanusa: Spring salmon house.

Kwanusa: Dedicatorial name of a hunter needed.

Kwanusa: Supernatural being resident on the mouth of the Bella Coola River.

Kwanusa: 1.—The ceremonial of moth to behavior to the manufacture of masks and other requirements.
2.—Moon, the time when such tasks are assigned, the second evening of a hunter dance.

Kwanusa-Kwanusa, "The Western Widow": Name given to the daughter of the top ancestor on Galiu.

[372.9] Kwanusa-Kwanusa: Thin which serves as pattern, pattern, or model for a hunter crest.

Kwanusa: Second night of a potlatch.

[372.91] Kwanusa: Anthem, gambling, the structure built into a cross for use in hunter dance.

Kwanusa, "Where People Go": A collecting pod owned by Nuxes or Kwanusa.

Kwanusa: Nuxes and Nuxe Channel.

Kwanusa, "The Dance When Very Poor Making Increases Is Its Body": One of Tlesquillen's songs and hence a designation given to shamans.

Kwanusa: Supernatural beings who guards handkerchiefs.

Kwanusa: 1.—"The Open Mouthed" (in the order of open or semi-closed pots, cups). One of Tlesquillen's songs and hence a designation given to shamans.
2.—Name of a shaman whose powers are said to have been derived from ghosts.

[1252] [372] Kwanusa: Bath running water.

Kwanusa: 1.—Name of ordinary individuals, this term is used to distinguish those who are being initiated into the secret society.
2.—Resembling supernatural man when awake.

[illegible]: Locality near Snaw where berries are plentiful.
[illegible]: Chief living at Tal'a in the beginning of time.

A

[illegible]: One of the a'alt dances.
[illegible]: I, first person singular.
[illegible]: Herring eggs when brought into house ready for preparation as food.[1]

B

[illegible]: Supernatural animal.
[illegible]: One of the first women sent down west of Kwatna in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: To guess, as done by the uninitiated at a Mystery dance.
[illegible] or [illegible]: Kwakiutl supernatural being.
[illegible]: Lamprey.
[illegible]: Kwatna name of a Salia man.
[illegible]: Abalone shell.
[illegible]: Influential Kwatna woman who died about 1870.
[illegible]: Bell-capped hat worn by chiefs.
[illegible]: A Kimsquit company.
[illegible]: Snaw man mentioned in an ancient story.
[illegible]: Supernatural, man-like creature.

D

[illegible] "do ut amy": The sky, regarded as the lower side of a land inhabited by supernatural beings.
[illegible]: 1—"The Comet," synonym for Nusiyawn.
2—The hunter prerogative of seeing Nusiyawn.
[illegible], "The Ever-Comer": Synonym for Nusiyawn.
[illegible]: Supernatural being who owns Nusiyawn.
[illegible]: Supernatural dog salmon resident in the land above.
[illegible]: Nisa's husband.
[illegible]: Aunt's husband.
[illegible]: One of the four men to settle at Alqulaal in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Archaic term for hunter Breaker.[2] [illegible]: Frayed cedar-wood, as used for tinder.
[illegible], plural, [illegible]: Box; term used in dance address for an adult.
[illegible]: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
[illegible], "The Dawn Owner": Designation of the supernatural woman Kwatna.
[illegible]: Collective term applied to the Kwakiutl-speaking people of the mainland.
[illegible]: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
[illegible]: Chief of abalone-shell people on the lower Fraser in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: One of the first men to settle at Snaw in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: One of the first women to settle at Tal'a in the beginning of time.

[1] This word was recorded from a man with the individual usage of an r sound.
[2] This word was recorded from a man with the individual usage of an r sound.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

nuxc: Kwakiutl term for pressure distributed on "Eagle down."
pots: Scoop-net for catching salmon in rivers.
pqqamhqin: Head-dress of eagles' tails worn by hamatsa dancers.
qmamil: Spring water.
Tsaqaiis: Settlement in the Carrier country.
xnu'll: Cow parsnip.
Xaxlem: Name obtained in the beginning of time from the Skeena people in whose language it is said to mean adzes.
Xaxwaxlaxbalis: Shaman who obtained his power from Thunder.
Xaxwaxtlis: Daughter of a Kitkata chief living in the beginning of time.
xwalwalis: Wrestling.
Xwalqa-i, "The Creek": Name taken by one of the first settlers at Halkem in the beginning of time but long since changed to a hamatsa designation.
xwaxwaqwa: 1—Shamaniqhird.
2—One of the first men to settle at Hqaitsa in the beginning of time. [825] xwaxwamal-ais: Puppet-person in the form of a humaniqhird.
xwqlu-ais di ciut: The concluding ritual of the hamatsa season.
yaqaiis-i: Gambling game played with cottonwood sticks. [525] Yqalaxtsis, "The One Whose Work Has Failed": Professional name of a hamatsa member.
yqlamtsis: The desertion of her husband by a wife. [576]

Y

Yalaxlis: Ancestral name of a Gisaa man.
Yalqalaxwaxwa: Example man mentioned in an allegedly historical account. [576] yaw: "Halo!" "Hail!" or "Greetings!"
ya-i: Exclamation having the significance of, "May you have a safe passage," said when a corpse is drawn through the seat.
Yaxlis: One of the first men to settle at Hanqamil in the beginning of time.
Yaxsqis: Baby Bolo man mentioned in an ancient story.
yemmem: 1—Pyrogravire, tangible or intangible, which some hahamatsi possess in addition to a dance.
2—Similar pyrogravire formerly displayed in secret rites.
yaw: 1—Call, that is, that which impels a hamatsa to dance.
2—Hamatsa whistle.
Yi'wadalaxa: Man sent down west of Kwakiutl in the beginning of time.
yudis: Term, implying both wealth and good fortune, applied to a man able to give a memorial potlatch soon after the death of a relative.
yqwilamm: Pressure given by a prospective bridegroom on his future father-in-law. [431] yu: Good, adjective. [584] yuki: Mountain goat. [825] Yi'wadalis: Green Island.
yukis: "All Right," cry used in a hamatsa dance.
Yalwa: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Yqalbalalis: One of the first men to settle at Hqaitsa in the beginning of time.
yulalaxwa: Bringing down of a call by means of the rite of xwaqlu.
yulalaxwa: Pressure given by the bride's relatives to the groom's when they come for boxes on the wedding day. [431] [585]

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

576 773 776 796 tools of genuine skins, and to swing carved rattles. The man, later on, returned to the sea. Ever since that time the Dîlqala dance the Sisau'ka. Besides this it is stated that the Raven gave each gens its secrets.

FIG. 8.—Mask representing K'mak'mak'lîqa.

FIG. 9.—Mask representing K'ala'qoka.

532 575 776

619 532 722 Each gens has its peculiar earrings, which are used in the Sisau'ka only, and are otherwise kept a deep secret, i.e., they are the sacred property

FIG. 10.—Mask representing K'ala'kau.

FIG. 11.—Mask representing D'ômal'qalîlaka.

575 776

[539] [285] dress of each gens. All gentes, however, wear the beautiful carved headdresses and use the same rattles, regardless of the carving they represent.

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

out by the strong breeze blowing in the higher regions. He is quite naked, and bites everyone whom he can lay hold of. If he cannot catch anyone he will bite his own arm. It is believed that he has lost his soul, which fled from the body when the spirit came to him. Therefore the shamans must try for four days to recapture his soul. The night after they have recovered it the Gwgil'da dance clothed in a bear-skin and wearing a large handing, heavy bracelets and anklets, all made of red and white cedar-bark. Some Gwgil'da do not bite people, but merely devour raw salmon, or four dogs to poison and devour them. Those who bite people will also eat corpses. The Gwgil'da has to observe a number of regulations. For four years after his initiation he must not gamble. He must stay away from his wife for one year, but this period is being reduced to one month. For two or three months he must not leave his house.

The G'ûq (= the laughter) and the Dû'ûs (= the thrower) do not go into the woods to be initiated, but both must fast three days before their first dance. The G'ûq 'makes fun of everything' and mimicks people with his nails. The Dû'ûs carries stones and sticks, and breaks household goods and canoes. If he has destroyed some object during the day he pays for it at night when he dances. The G'ûq and the Dû'ûs must stay for one month, after they have danced, in their houses.

If a person transgresses the laws of the K'ûwît, for instance when the Gwgil'da gambles, or when a man performs a dance to which he has no right, also when a person destroys the ceremonies or makes a mistake in dancing, his punishment is death. The chiefs assemble in council and the offender is called before the court. After his offence has been proved he is asked whether he is willing to suffer the penalty of death. If he is not willing, and one of his relatives is found willing to take the penalty on himself, the guilty party is spared, and the substitute is killed in his stead. The execution of the judgment is entrusted to the shamans, who bewitch the condemned person by throwing disease into him, or by poisoning him in some other (unconventional?) way. The object thrown by the shamans is a shell, bone, or finger-nail, around the middle of which objects a brown hair is tied. If the object strikes the offender he will fall sick. Blood collects in his stomach, and if it so happens that he vomits this blood, and with it the disease-producing object, he will recover, and is not molested any further. The masks (not the whistles and other ceremonial) used in the K'ûwît are hung immediately at the close of each dancing season. Persons must wear a necklet of red cedar-bark over their blankets for a whole year. The masks used in the dances represent mythical personages, and the dances are pantomimic representations of myths. Among others the thunder-bird and his servant Ts'ûqsi'nxwa, who wears a mask with red and blue stripes over the whole face from the right-hand upper side to the left-hand lower side, and a staff with red and blue spiral lines, appear in the dances. Prominent masks are also Qô'ûxûnx and his brothers and his sister (see p. 418), Hamamatsû'ûq and his fellows, the raven and the Pamp'ûxûx, and many others.

Customs regarding Birth, Puberty, Marriage, and Death.

When the time of delivery approaches, the woman leaves the house and repairs to a small hut built for the purpose. She is assisted by per-

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NEB Bellecoola NEB

994 hereditary midwives. The child is washed in warm water. For ten days
[94] the mother must remain in this hut. Father and mother must not go [95] near the room for a year (according to Nuk'ulela, for ten days), else the spirits would take offence.

95 The child is now given its first name. On this occasion the whole
[95] tribe is invited to a feast, the name is made public, and the guests receive [96] small presents. The child retains this name until it becomes a member of the Kwan, when it is given its Kwan name. This ceremony takes place after puberty has been reached. About this period the young man gives his first potlatch and receives the Qi'ulelem name.

99 When a girl reaches puberty she must stay in the shed which serves as her bedroom, where she has a separate fireplace. She is not allowed to descend to the main part of the house, and must not sit by the fire of the family. For four days she must remain motionless in a sitting posture. She bathes during the daytime, but is allowed a little food and drink at a very early hour in the morning. After this hour she may [98] leave her room, but only through a separate opening. She must not yet [99] come to the main room. When leaving the house she wears a large hat, which protects her face against the rays of the sun. It is believed that if the sun should shine on her face her eyes would suffer. She may pick berries on the hills, but must not come near the river or sea for a whole year. She must not eat fresh salmon, else she would lose [96] her senses, or her mouth would be transformed into a long beak. She [96] must not chew gum or eat meat (see Fifth Report of Committee, 1885, p. 110).

104 If a young man wishes to marry a girl he goes, accompanied by his [103] friends, to the house of the girl's father and makes his intention. His friends carry food and presents, and if the father accepts the suit he sends out a young man, who receives the food and presents and carries them into the house. Sometimes the father does not accept the offer at once. In such cases the young man may repeat the same ceremony until [107] he is finally rejected or accepted. After the time of the marriage has been agreed upon between the contracting parties, and the day preceding the marriage has arrived, the young man invites all the people to a feast, during which he states that he is to be married on the following day.
He asks a number of men, generally from twenty to thirty, and four [108] women to assist him. On the following morning they assemble, and accompany the bridegroom to the girl's house. They sing velently, and 105 four of the men dance. All of them have their faces painted red. Finally they enter, and the bridegroom gives a large amount of property to the girl's father. Then the girl leaves her parents and goes to the bridegroom, bringing him also a large amount of property which has been [108] given to her for this purpose by her parents and relatives. He in turn gives her blankets and other articles of the best quality, and distributes presents among her relatives. This is repeated after some time. All he has given to his bride and her relatives is repaid to him with interest.
A rich girl will repay twice or three times the amount given by the man.
At the time of the marriage the bride's father may produce the groom to give him his name (to marry) or more as the pair have their first child.
[111] The children may belong to the father's or mother's gens, as the parents may choose.

116 In case of a separation the wife refunds the amount of purchase-money. The children may stay with either parent, or part of them may

8:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1897
NE6 Bilacoola NE6

every morning when the sun rises. He takes on that he rises pop- 556
ely. The first six of these dolls are grouped in pairs, and are 773 believed to paint their faces with designs representing moon, stars, 776 and rainbow. In the hands these dolls make their appearance, and are represented by masks. Xe'mstem and Xemsalk'ota wear the 532 design of the full moon, indicated on the nose of Xe'mstem by a 575 double curved line in red and black, the black outside, passing over 776 forehead, cheeks, and upper lip. Xemsalk'ota has a double curved line in red and black, the red outside, which sweeps over forehead, cheeks, and chin. Ahmalk'ila and Ahmalk'ila wear the design of the crescent, drawn in red and black, with differences similar to those between the first and second masks. The SEQ'emq'emkt'lik'a and Q'ela'ntem have designs representing stars, lik wearing the same style of mask. The seventh is Qala'xova, who face represents the blossom of a salmon-berry bush. The next border, Kalt'las (who wears no hair blankets but), wears the horn of the rainbow in black and blue. The ninth, Ka'mas'k, wears on his head a mask representing a kingfisher, and is clothed in a bird-skin blanket. The last of the series is a woman called a'mat qalt'ts (to be eater), the sister of the others. Her face is painted with the design of a bladder filled with grease. She figures in several legends as among previous and par-tened by the people whom she has visited.

The sisaxl', which is danced at potlatches and other festivals of 575 the clans, is premitted over by a being that lives the sun. A man who 773 had gone out hunting met the sisaxl' and was attracted by him to the 776 secrets of the house. When he returned, he said the people to clean 776 their houses and to show them with clean underfur he intended to return. Then he danced the sisaxl' and told a people what he had seen. He said that the being had commanded them to perform this dance and to adorn themselves when dancing in carved headdresses with tails of sea-lion skins, and to swing wood rattles. The man, later on, returned to the sun. Ever since Bilcoola dance the sisaxl'. Besides this, it is stated that heaven gave each clan its 614 secrets. Each clan has its peculiar carvings which are used in the 424 sisaxl' only, and are otherwise kept a profound secret, i. e., they are 532 the sacred possessions of each clan. All chieftainsmen, however, wear the beautiful carved headdresses and use the seven clans, regardless of the carving they represent. Every time the said objects of a clan are shown to the people a potlatch is given. Thereof objects, although 424 the property of the various clans, must nevertheless be acquired by 532 each individual—that is to say, every freeman has the right to 556 acquire a certain group of carvings and use, according to the clan 614 to which he or she belongs. Slaves and slave children, also illegitimate children, can not become sisaxl'. Women can not take a part carving, but some such could is to given him by his relatives—fathers, mothers, or other brothers. Qualtla'ts, the Indian, to whom I

8:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1897
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575 to him and takes him up to the sun, where he is initiated. Early one [785] morning he returns, and is heard outside the houses. He has lost all [787] his hair, which, it is believed, has been torn out by the strong breeze blowing in the higher regions. He is quite naked, and bites everyone [55] whom he can lay hold of. If he can not catch anyone he will bite his own arm. It is believed that he has lost his soul, which fled from the [774] body when the spirit came to him. Therefore the shamans must try [756] for four days to recapture his soul. The night after they have recovered it the xlaxo'ła dances, clothed in a bearskin and wearing a large [297] head ring, heavy bracelets and anklets, all made of red cedar bark.
[301] Sometimes he appears wearing the mask of the Ts'ā'qoła (fig. 200), the spirit which initiated him. This mask corresponds exactly to that [532] of Bastokuxlanx Xa'wat of the Kwakiutl. Some xlaxo'ła do not [171] bite people, but merely devour raw salmon or tear dogs to pieces and devour them. Those who [546] bite people will also devour corpses. The xlaxo'ła has to observe a number of regulations.
[525] For four years after his [634] initiation he must not gamble. He must stay away from his wife for one year, but this period is being reduced to one month. For two or three months he must not leave his house.

Fig. 200.
[illegible]
[illegible]

The o'ła (the laughter) and the da'ła (the thrower) do not go into the woods to be initiated, but both must fast three days before their first dance. The o'ła "make fun of everything" and mock the people with his calls. The da'ła carries stones and sticks and breaks household goods and canoes. If he has destroyed some object during the day, he pays for it at night when he dances. The o'ła and the da'ła, after they have danced, must stay in their houses for one month.

575 If a person transgresses the laws of the kwaxt, for instance, when 698 the xlaxo'ła gambles, or when a man performs a dance to which he has no right, also when a person destroys the ceremonies or makes a mistake in dancing, his punishment is death. The chiefs assemble in [892] council and the offender is called before the court. After his offense has been proved, he is asked whether he is willing to suffer the penalty of death. If he is not willing and one of his relatives is found willing 575 to take the penalty on himself, the guilty party is spared and the sub-681 stitute killed in his stead. The execution of the judgment is intrusted 799 to the shamans, who bewitches the condemned person by throwing dis-796 ease into him or by poisoning him in some other (unmentioned?) way. The object thrown by the shamans is a shell, bone, or finger nail, around

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

¶ 539 *987 words he met twelve grizzly bears, at a time when he carried twelve arrows. The bears said to one another:

"Let us kill that puny man."

When they began to uproot trees to show their strength, Kalkup replied:

"All right! Do your worst. I will kill you all."

He shot his arrows, shattering the trees behind which the grizzly bears were standing, and after a tremendous fight succeeded in killing them all. He returned to his sister and told her that he had killed twelve grizzly bears, but had almost lost his own life in doing it. She was much alarmed, and, fearing for his safety, asked him to abandon such dangerous hunting.

A few days later when he shot at a squirrel in a tree he missed it, and his arrow lodged far above the ground. Kalkup climbed after it, and, as his eyes were always fixed on the arrow above him, he did not notice that the trunk was growing rapidly taller. Finally, the tree passed upward through a hole in the land above and Kalkup crawled to it, using his bow as a gangplank. He found himself in a flat, level, treeless country, containing game, at least as he judged from a well-defined runway which passed near the place where he stood. It was evening by this time, so Kalkup made a snare of his bow-string and set it in the path, hoping that the animal which had made it, whatever it might be, would be caught during the night. Then he lay down and slept.

Early the following morning he heard a low rumbling, and to his amazement he saw the sun heading straight for his snare. Kalkup then realized that the runway was its path. He expected that his bow-string would be broken by the impact, but to his surprise the snare held and the sun was fairly caught. Its chief emerged from within and looked around without noticing the frightened lad who lay perfectly still.

"Who did this?" he demanded angrily, but Kalkup did not answer.

Presently the mice which we placed in the land above came to him and asked:

"Did you do this? It is a terrible thing, a great miracle which you must rectify."

"How?" required Kalkup.

"Cover our bodies with paint* and we will gnaw through the string of your snare."

Kalkup smeared the mice with paint, but when they tried to gnaw through the cord they were driven back by the intense heat.

[283]

*It was formerly customary for all Bella Coola to carry small pouches containing paint.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB
Bellabella, NES

Be 534
787

boulder and round it lightly, even farther than Grizzly Bear himself had been able to do.

"Now," said Grizzly Bear, "go home. But don't display your powers immediately. If they start to handle you roughly as before, just pretend still to be weak, and watch who are your chief tormentors. Then, if they anger you too much, exert your strength."

When the youth returned to his village his companions, who knew of his search for supernatural aid, came running out.

"Here comes an ordeal," they said, "who went away to get power."

They were all eager to learn whether or not he had succeeded, but the lad did not gratify their curiosity. After a time they began their usual sport of wrestling, nor was it long before they had begun to throw their playmates to and fro, as they had often done. He allowed them to believe him a weakling until the whole crowd jumped on him, forcing him to the ground, and derriding him for his failure to obtain supernatural help. Then he exerted his strength. Catching one of his persecutors by the neck he squeezed him until his head was squeezed from his body; now he seized two, one in each hand, and crushed them together with such a shock that they were killed. Grizzly Bear had endowed him with the strength of a bear, which he used to slay all who had maltreated him. Once avenged, he assumed the form of a grizzly bear and ran away, never to return.

THE DOG'S WIFE[10]

OB
534
Be 534
787

A chief and his wife had a daughter who, not having reached the age of puberty, always slept beside her father. One night she was awakened by hearing a man holding intercourse with her, but she could not tell who it was. The same thing happened repeatedly just before dawn, her seducer always fleeing so rapidly that she could not identify him. Greatly puzzled, she at last hit on a plan to find her lover. Like all women she carried a small bag containing the paint used to decorate herself; she took this to bed with her, unclosed, and determined to throw it at the person who was visiting her. Towards dawn she was seduced as usual, hurled her pouch in the darkness, and heard the thud as it struck someone. In the morning [illegible] there was a stain of paint over its face and there was considerable discussion as to how this could have happened. The girl was terrified, suspecting, as was the case, that the dog had heard her make some unkind remark about its face and had become her lover in revenge.

The girl soon felt that she was pregnant. The time of delivery arrived with unprecedented rapidity, and she gave birth to four puppies, three 10 Sale Sale story.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NES Bellacoola NES

place where he is not likely to be disturbed, and addresses the supreme god in a loud tone of voice, requesting his assistance. 782

Although prayers can be said at any time of the day, or at any season of the year, there are occasions when they are more potent than at other times. At dawn, for example, a wise young man is accustomed to go alone to the river to wash and pray. He enters the icy water, blows mucus over his hands, and rubs his body vigorously* either with a smooth pebble, or, if it can be obtained, with a stone taken from the stomach of a sea-lion.* As he scours himself, he asks Menakaiz to grant him long life, power, success, and strength. On coming from the water, he repeats his request, and then washes himself again. This process is repeated four times, making eight prayers in all. A young man who does this habitually, and in other ways placates the supreme deity, is likely to have success, and may even be given supernatural assistance by one of the many anthropomorphic or zoomorphic creatures. The underlying belief is that Alpuxtēn actually hears the words spoken and, pleased thereby, aids the petitioner either directly, or by strengthening the supernatural elements in his body. [783]

Menakaiz has power over both rain and dry weather, and is petitioned for whichever is desired. When the sun is obscured by rain clouds, the Bella Coola pray: [821]

"Please clean your face, Menakaiz," or,

"Please show us your face, we need you."

Before a man starts on a journey, either by canoe or on foot, he always asks help for his undertaking. [484]

"Menakaiz," he prays, "Be with me," or "Go before me," or, "Give me what I want."

Corresponding to the importance of the occasion, prayers are always made before the departure of a hunting or war [824] [825] [826] [827] [828] [829] [830] [831] [832] [833] [834]

*Ochre was formerly used for rubbing both the body and clothing. It was followed by the application of clean water, and undoubtedly had a religious significance; indeed, washing purely for cleanliness was not habitual until recently.

*The Bella Coola stone that scours are often found in the stomachs of sea-lions. One specimen, considered of great value, was seen; it was indistinguishable from a water-scoured river pebble.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

515 sionally, in a half-hearted manner, but it is not unusual for a man to allow the basin of water in which he makes his ablutions to remain standing for two or three weeks. Not many [177] years ago the Carriers taught their neighbours to make a kind [246] of soap from the ashes of burnt cottonwood sticks thrown into [388] water; with this clothes are washed irregularly and in most cases from sheer necessity only. In former times bathing was [189] a semi-sacred rite, but this fell into disuse with the passing of [177] the old religion, and the use of soap and water merely for the [291] sake of cleanliness has not become a daily habit. The women have more vanity; the younger girls especially like to have new clothes, though they wear them carelessly, heedless of fit. [196] An effort is often made to clean up for ceremonial dances, but it entails little more than the removal of the more obvious dirt and the putting on, over unchanged undergarments, of a sweater. Pride in personal appearance, love of tidiness, delight in a clean house, are all quite foreign to the Bella Coola.

356 Probably the reason for lack of comforts in the houses is simply that the people do not feel the need for them. They [264] consider it no hardship to sit on a rickety chair, scoop up food [231] from a common dish and, if they think of it, throw morsels [152] down to the dog or the cat. The smell, the flies, the dirt, the chaos do not concern them. Capable of undergoing privations, hardships, and even sufferings, they think neither of the com-
231 fort of themselves nor of others. Their domestic animals are often treated abominably, not through lack of affection or cruelty, but from callousness. More than once the writer has seen a favourite dog steal a piece of food from the table. Its master, after a furious blow or kick at it, would suddenly, as if by inspiration, throw a choice bit to the animal, saying:

"Why, he must have been hungry!"

Though the Bella Coola feel a kinship with animals unknown to the white man, it is not combined with any recognition of their feelings as living creatures. There are, of course, many exceptions, but on the whole public opinion demands [577] generosity and kindness only towards human members of the group. The moral code is not concerned with animals.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

539

manner in which he had shielded them from the falling fish. Sawmakc alone kept his original name.

When returning they made presents of abalone-shell* to everyone they met, and reaching Kimsquit they made very valuable gifts to all the people. The four had been absent about six months, and as they approached their home the three elder brothers poked fun at Skaqoa, saying:

"You will find that your wife has gone to another husband while ours will be waiting for us."

They found the reverse to be true. Skaqoa's wife alone had remained faithful to her absent husband; all the others had taken new consorts. The three fickle wives regretted what they had done as soon as they saw the wealth brought back by their former husbands but it was too late to change their course, so they were left lamenting. Many people were rather jealous of Sawmakc's success, but he distributed valuable presents to all. Soon after this the three brothers married new wives, refusing to take back their former ones, much as the latter desired it.

Another informant stated that the first settler at this village was a single man, Swakc, who brought a stone hammer as a present from Skawtaw.

ORIGIN MYTH OF *Natqwadi

In the beginning of time Skawtaw sent down to the Dean River four brothers, Qwayayai, Yeiiks, Epenkkilkwais, Tsaskadimat, and their sister Sawmaa. They brought with them a herald, Nacqwalaia, who was a kingfisher, and two men, Xomcis and Sqaiaya, who had the prerogative of dancing at weddings. The five came as black bears, and for a long time retained that form. Yeiiks carried with him from Nacmir a several moosehides, a stone axe, some dyed cedar-bark, sticks for making fire, and the prerogative of a funeral dance. After tarrying a few days at their landing place, the party set out down the river, with Nacqwalaia flying in front as guide. He was a kingfisher at the time and used to make short flights with quivering wings, and then stop until his bear friends had caught up with him, exactly as those birds do at the present time when a canoe travels up a river. On reaching Natqwadi, "The Place of Many Spawning Sockeye Salmon," about a mile and a quarter from the mouth of the river, on the south-east side, they camped for the night.

[539
301
435]

*This was formerly valued very highly, both for its use as beads and ornaments, and because it had to be imported from a great distance.
*Related by Jim Pollard.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

the front-door facing the river, but has to leave the house 784 through the trap beneath the enclosure where she sleeps. The 881
Bella Coola consider it unthinkable for a girl to disregard these prohibitions, but if this should happen, she would be chased home by her parents, by the Guardian of the River, or, in fact, by any elderly member of the community. The strongest [761] reason for respecting these regulations is the belief that disobedience brings death; no one knows how it is inflicted, but a careless girl soon dies. During this period, she cannot eat [262]
fresh salmon, though she is allowed them if they have been smoked for four or five days. Her scanty meals are brought to her in the enclosure where she is virtually a prisoner. It is true [783] that she can leave it and wander in the woods, but her comrades avoid her as being in an unclean condition of which they are afraid, and she is barred from taking part in all activities by the river which constitute so large a part of the life of the Bella Coola. A girl cannot pick berries during this time, as no [222] more would grow in the valley which she had thus defiled; she must not touch anyone, nor allow anyone to touch her; she must not pass in front of a man; she must go to bed before [513] everyone else in the house, and be the last to arise. The danger of breaking some taboo is so great that it is safer for a girl to [867] remain within her enclosure where her mother, and other old women, gather to tell her the many things which it is fitting for an adult woman to know. This seclusion is not pleasant, but it unquestionably serves to emphasize the importance of married life to which it is a prelude. The writer remembers an occasion when a Bella Coola family was eating tasty fresh salmon while one of the daughters, who had recently reached adolescence, watched enviously. Her grandfather rose and gave the child an orange, remarking that in his youth little girls did not receive such dainties to ameliorate their lot.

Adolescent girls wear certain distinctive articles of clothing 881 and ornaments. The most noticeable is a skull-cap bound [292] with grass; this is the only time in a woman's life that a hat is [301] worn. She also wears ear-rings, each consisting of a neat
1/4 [ie - one year after puberty - ANALYST] [439]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

851 bundle of four macaroni-shaped shells, probably Dentalium, [301] which are said to have been imported from the north in early [439] times. These marks serve to indicate the position of the girl, who is both feared and respected, possessed of supernatural [789] power, and yet baneful. Many Bella Coola stories describe how adolescent girls have been able to vanquish supernatural [538] beings; perhaps the most striking of these is the manner in which they once saved mankind when the sun came too close to the earth. At the end of a year, or eleven months according to one old woman, the seclusion is terminated, and the girl resumes her normal activities. The first time she goes to the river she must throw on the water four pieces of dyed, and four pieces of undyed cedar-bark. This is especially important if the salmon are running at the time, although no explanation of this ritual is given.

582 The resumption of her freedom indicates that a girl has 556 reached marriageable age. Chiefs sometimes confine their daughters for even longer than a year, and usually delay their 882 marriages for several years to demonstrate their importance; but this is not necessary, nor is it practised by other than wealthy individuals. It is not uncommon for a girl to wed before her year is out; in that case her restrictions automatically [554] lapse. Chiefs never allow such a curtailment for their daughters; to do so would diminish the prestige of the latter, and be detrimental to the status of their children when they marry 836 and have families. Illicit intercourse with a secluded adoles-883 cent is considered not only illegal but disgusting as well. Between the period of confinement and marriage, intercourse is [881] prohibited and guarded against by the parents of a girl, but is not considered filthy and seems to have been fairly common in former times with the daughters of poor people and slaves.
This sometimes took place before the first menstruation in spite of the disapproval with which this was regarded.

826 Although the menstrual blood which appears at the first
841 discharge is considered more baneful than that emitted on later 789 occasions, it is always regarded as uncanny or unclean. It is

1:Mc:Gwenth E-5 (1912-1924)1943
NEA Bellevue NEA

MARRIAGE RITES

Y's family decide when the period of engagement shall be terminated. Although it is considered undignified for X or his relatives to hurry them in this matter, there is always a certain amount of urging. Y's father has strong reasons for procrastination. A long engagement strengthens the status of the children whom his daughter may bear, and besides, he frequently receives presents from X's relatives. As Y's relatives will have to bear the heavier part of the expenses of the wedding, it may be necessary for them to delay it for years while saving the requisite goods. The ceremony may take place at any time of the year. Foreign guests are occasionally invited, but usually only the members of X's and Y's village are present. If the marriage should be with the child of a foreign chief his relatives and friends are present to take part. When Y's relatives decide that they are ready, they choose the actual day after consultation with X's family, though the assumption is that Y's father merely informs X's father of the date.

It is incumbent on X's family to proclaim the event on the day preceding the ceremony. In the late afternoon his father sends a herald through the village calling out:

"Ewinay, ye chiefs! Ewinay, ye wives of chiefs! Ewinay, ye commoners!"

The actual meaning of ewinay is unknown, though it is well understood to be an invitation to gather for the announcement of a wedding. In conjunction with the summons, X's ancestral name is used, although all in the village are probably well aware of what is about to take place. It is noteworthy that at a marriage the guests, as well as the participants, are called by the ancestral names, as opposed to the kasior names by which individuals who own such are generally known. Red colouring is much in evidence at weddings; heralds smear their faces with red paint and the guests similarly tint themselves. They wear collars, wristlets, and anklets of undyed cedar-bark, and cover themselves with eagle down.

[illegible] while the relatives are preparing the body for disposal. For a child, these services are performed by the parents; for a married man whose parents are dead, by his brothers and other kinfolk; for a married woman, by her husband or the members of her own family. If she has borne no children, it is customary for her relatives to carry out the funeral rites, especially if she has been many times relinquished from her husband. If such repayment has not been made, it is considered correct for a husband to bury his wife, although it is a point of honor for her relatives to reimburse him later for his expenditure. On the other hand, when children have been born and financial assistance mutually given and received several times, it is proper for the husband to perform the funeral rites, although he may receive assistance from his wife's kinsmen. There is no rigid ruling on the point, but hitherings seldom occur in connection with disposal of the dead. Members of the immediate family are ready to assist in every case, both on account of the disgrace that would follow a niggardly funeral, and also as a means of displaying their wealth.

The first essential is to wash the body, a rite performed by men for a man, by women for a woman. It is immaterial who does this though some of the relatives usually volunteer. Neither husband nor wife touches a dead consort, though it is said that long ago a man would hold intercourse with a deceased wife to indicate his excessive grief. The most influential member of the immediate family takes the lead in the various necessary acts, although there is always endless discussion and advice from members of the remoteness family and others interested. A tom-ring is placed in the anus of the corpse; if this is omitted, the body will not be able to dissolve into its elements but will range the earth as a walking phantom, causing injury to anyone who observes it. If the deceased has just eaten some of the first run of spring salmon or eulachon, a shaman washes out his mouth with a sponge of undyed cedar-bark which he throws into the river. The essence of the salmon is thus extracted from the body; if come to dancing, unconsciously begins to convince himself that he is different from lower morals.

Before dancing is dared initiation into the Darter society, and then the ritual of various dances, it will be convenient to outline the type of ceremonial, although emphasizing the fact that each differs so much from every other that lengthy descriptions will be necessary later on. When a person has been initiated, either in the proper manner during the ceremonial season or as a "dancer" during the summer, he is known as a lion, a novice, until the Darter dances of the next winter. During this period he wears certain distinctive outer-dark ornaments and is expected to keep himself somewhat apart from the uninitiated. He is always required to give his ceremonial during the first dance season after initiation, by so doing he comes to be a novice. In later years a Darter can suit himself whether or not to perform. Having once done so, he is a fully qualified member of the society, not does he increase his rank in direct proportion to the number of his ceremonies. It is true that one who often dances learns himself praised by the moralists, and gains a certain amount of fame among his fellow Darters. But no matter how often he may perform, he cannot become a chief, with prestige spread far and wide among neighbouring villages, nor can he increase the fame of his ancestors by adding honors to his ancestral names. Thus the benefits are not sufficient to urge a man to concentrate on Darter ceremonials to preference to polarchism. The society is essentially one in which a relatively poor man can display his semi-religious prerogative equally with a chief. Usually, a man performs a complicated ritual, such as that of a Cannibal dance, done at four times during his lifetime, but exceptions occur in which an dramatic theme is preserved may be more often given.

A man who proposes to give a dance must always notify one of the moralists of his village, who summons his fellows, some of the senior members of the society, and chiefs who are plus Darters to discuss the invention. If it accords one of the [illegible] dials with a hatchet to call them in, they seem joyfully, though somewhat fearfully, and stand on either side of the doorway. In [illegible] they gaze on the scene, wondering what they are. The singers strike up the first of Ts songs and he dances, while singers and dancers sing the words and the women dance. To the uninitiated it appears most impressive and desirable, while even the present white men are hardly remote indifferent. In intervals a whistle, which the uninitiated believe to be the voice of the owl, sounds softly from beneath the weight of a reliable dancer. When a dance ceased, T's second song is sung, and so in succession the night. Then the singers strike up very well-remembered tune, perhaps one used last year, and the owner dances. This is repeated for eight or ten songs. In later parlance, every dancer who has had a call during the season must dance, the ceremony tends, therefore, to become longer and longer as time goes on, although the singing of the songs of a previous year is omitted. When enough performers have danced, a dancer's song is often sung and the owner dances "to clear the house." At this point the uninitiated spectators are told to withdraw. Then a meal is served to the crowd who, as members of a similar organization, are honoured guests and have been seated together in a corner, conspicuous in their wonderful ceremonials. When their departure, the initiated are more leisurely, while are needed after another adviser them as to their conduct. Then presents of comparatively small value are distributed. The menfolk would consider it unbecoming for T to provide over-lavishly. The fine gifts are to the singers, the rest to the makers of the masks. Though these presents are, in essence, pay, they are never thought of in that light. T is under obligations, T has cleared himself of these obligations, to the Bella Coola outside. When all is over, T once more dances to one of his softly sung songs. Then one of the menfolk calls out to open the door and the guests dispersed, except the novices who sleep in T's house.

Q-NA-Kiowaph E-5 (1922-1924) 1968
NEA Bellacoola NEA

192*

Sankiness: Guardian spirit of a Kiowaph woman.
sankiness: "This is a thing brought Your Road": Said when a call is answered, or has been seen a lie for the dead.
Sankiyis: "Place of Big Arrow to the River": Village at Kaowa.
Sankiskiy: Woman identified to a separation and hence become supernatural spirit[1]. Function without seeing seen by Death.
Sapkiskiy: Supernatural sore of Death.
spakiyi: Place and by which the Keeper is held during the house dance.
Sankiskan: Man resistance to an ancient enemy.
Sankiyan: "On the Ass On the River": Supernatural name of hump-back giant.
sankiyi: Sun-ring.
sankiyi: Shooting ring conjured for a chief and, apparently, the singing of [301] [538]
Sankiyan: Place on the northwest side of Deer Channel, about nine miles from [178] Sanqaiskiyi: Supernatural Dogs who conceal the supreme god of the Sacred Bible.
Sanskiskan: Supernatural Dog who rescues those killed by the receipt of an [illegible] from Sanqaiskiyi.
sanqan: Meaning of [illegible] [illegible].
sanqi: Person who excites [illegible] shelter to a hunt-out.
sanqiskiyi: Ancient [illegible] [illegible] to a lake near the headwaters of [illegible] Big Cedar. [226] [223] Sanqiskiyi: Supernatural Dog who regulates the height of tides in [illegible].
sanskiskan: To [illegible], especially a supernatural being.
Sanskiyan: One of the five [illegible] on Gaida.
Sanskiyan, "Place Only Road": Name created by Gaoaan to the beginning of time with reference to the [illegible] of [illegible].
sanqiyanqi: Other [illegible] to [illegible] before a Sacrifice dance.
Sanskiqanskiyi: Supernatural Dog who gives inspiration.
Sanskiskanskiyi: 1. Supernatural name of [illegible].
2. Medical [illegible] prescribed for [illegible].
Sanskiskanqiskiyi: Place of a Bella Coola shaman.
Sin-Sanskiyan: Name of a Sanqaiskiyi woman.
sanqi-Sanskiyi: The [illegible] of changing from Sanskiyi to sanqi [illegible] on [illegible] [424] Sanskiyan, "The Sanqan": Son of Sanqaiskiyi's [illegible] and hence a [illegible] [illegible] [illegible].
Sanqanskiyi: One of the five [illegible] to settle on Gaida in the beginning of time.
sanskiyanqi: Spirits [illegible] by a Sanqan [illegible].
sanqanqiyi: Name [illegible] to Kiowaph [illegible].
Sanqi: Place on north side of Sanqi Sanskiyi Arm, about one-quarter mile from [illegible] sanqiskiyi: "The Cut-Off": In the language of ghosts. Identified with [illegible] [illegible]. [198] Sanskiyi: One of the five [illegible] to settle on Gaida in the beginning of time.
Sanskiskanqiyi: One of the [illegible] of Sanqi Sanskiyi Sanqi on Gaida. sanqiyi: 1. Supernatural [illegible] Gaidaan with support platforms for guests.
2. Village in Kaowa. [342]

[102*]

[224]

[787]

[601]

[614]

[211]

[764]

[776]

[775]

[825]

[301]

[327]

[825]

[827]

[152]

[illegible]: Leaf of whitebark.

[illegible]: 1.—Class of medicines, such as prescribed the methods of medicine, herbs.

2.—Medicine.

[illegible]: Type of sun-going canoe with raised prow and small stern.

[illegible], [illegible], [illegible]: Child.

[illegible]: Supreme god when addressed in prayer.

[illegible]: Tassels.

[illegible], [illegible], [illegible]: Deceased family practically equivalent to children when used by an old person.

[illegible]: The commemoration of a chief's ancestors and other major ceremonies by means of place posts erected near his grave.

[illegible], [illegible]: A supernatural being.

[illegible]: Was mentioned to a man.

[illegible]: Supernatural being who gives powers to small fish.

[illegible]: Constituent expression used by the Indians with reference to the way in which supernatural beings govern the length of human lives.

[illegible]: 1.—The condition of being within range of speech and vision. The term is used to describe relations formerly existing between the dead and the living.

2.—Its root, term used with reference to the meaning of a medical representation of a dead person, the significance is similar to that expressed in the first meaning.

[illegible]: Provided, dried cedar-bark used to decorate ceremonial objects.

[illegible]: Weaving of cedar-bark mats by Indian women in the upper Bella Coola valley.

[illegible]: Lake.

[illegible]: Kitkatla creek.

[illegible]: Blue grouse.

[illegible]: Dancing-shaft ceremony worn by adolescent girls during initiation.

[illegible]: Hard sun for smoking shelters.

[illegible]: Yellow cedar worn decorated with crest feathers such as in carvings for a Wyanoke dance.

[illegible]: Wrestling.

[illegible]: Brown bear seen living in the last century.

G

[illegible]: One of the first men to guide an Haida town in the beginning of time.

[illegible]: Bella Bella village, the highest town in Vancouver.

[illegible]: Grizzly bear.

[illegible]: Person received from Grizzly Bear for a Kitsumpt man in the beginning of time.

[illegible]: Earlier name of a Tlingit man.

[illegible]: One of the first men to guide an Haida town in the beginning of time.

[illegible]: One of the names of Wasco Tlingit as child.

[illegible]: Non-existent weighing, usually individual, and always with real being.

[illegible]: Indeterminate healing in the dance mat.

[illegible] ai'ala: Whatever copper ornaments were by children girls during ordeals.
Ya'ao: Bella Bella man living in the beginning of time.
ameyk: To dance.
[illegible]: Those who dance at marriage.
[illegible]: Mallard duck.
[illegible]: Right of publicity on which court witness appear for a short time.
[illegible]: Bureau of Canadian Indian Affairs.
[illegible]: Thimble-like wooden disk.
[illegible]: Ceremonial seating of chiefs according to their ceremonial phrase in a house.
Pishagyim: Name acquired by a Bella Coola man from an Haisla in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Professional name of a Bella Coola [illegible].
[illegible]: Proper name of a Bella Coola foreman, the designation was derived from Bella Coola.
[illegible]: Ceremonial [illegible] chief.
[illegible]: Influential Bella Coola chief.
[illegible]: "The Resident": Government [illegible] living [illegible] under [illegible] who gives [illegible] information of [illegible] concerning them.
[illegible]: 1.—Fourth day of a [illegible], on the evening of which [illegible] figures appear.
2.—[illegible] [illegible] to [illegible].
[illegible]: Old woman resident in [illegible]'s house in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: "Little Dance": Form of [illegible] [illegible].
[illegible]: Gathering of the people for a [illegible] [illegible] after the [illegible].
[illegible]: 1.—"The Dance Near the Fire": One of Thunderbird's [illegible], and hence a designation given to [illegible].
2.—Proper name of a Bella Coola man.
[illegible]: Proper name of a Bella Coola man.
[illegible]: One who has [illegible] a [illegible] song.
[illegible]: The [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] in a [illegible] of the [illegible] of the [illegible] [illegible] giving of [illegible] to the [illegible] relatives when they [illegible] [illegible] on the [illegible] day.
[illegible]: Daughter of the first people who come down to [illegible] [illegible] to the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Wooden [illegible] used in a game.
[illegible]: Place on [illegible] where [illegible] [illegible] from the [illegible], where [illegible] [illegible] a [illegible] [illegible] after the beginning of time.
[illegible]: [illegible].
[illegible]: Name of a [illegible] upon which [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible].
[illegible]: 1.—"The Runner": One of Thunderbird's [illegible] and hence a designation given to [illegible].
2.—One of the first men to settle in the upper Bella Coola valley in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: "Bought in [illegible]": Term applied to a copper bought back from a [illegible] and [illegible].
[illegible]: Shaman's name derived from Thunderbird.
[illegible]: "I have [illegible] you."

[illegible] §775

[illegible] §776

[illegible] §777

[illegible] §778

[illegible] §779

[illegible] §780

[illegible] §781

[illegible] §782

[illegible] §783

[illegible] §784

[illegible] §785

[illegible] §786

[illegible] §787

[illegible] §788

[illegible] §789

[illegible] §790

[illegible] §791

[illegible] §792

[illegible] §793

[illegible] §794

[illegible]

go with the mother and part with the father. The decision is left to the parents and children.

When a person has died the corpse is washed, the face painted red, the hair pomaded and the corpse folded over the breast. The nearest relatives of the deceased in past time the wives, the child to put on the back part covering the breast and the front part turned backward. The body is placed in a box and the father is often laid on the bier. Sometimes of a tree or placed in a little house, which is set on posts above the level of the ground. The face of the deceased is turned outwards. Part of his property and gifts from his friends are deposited near the grave. The tombs of the deceased are level. The tomb is covered in a demented [illegible] which also shows how many [illegible] supply food, drinking, and there be had given some of [illegible]. These objects are painted or carved on the [illegible]. Frequently there are [illegible] of the dead. The number of these tombs may also indicate to an [illegible] figure in the [illegible]. When burial took place [illegible] of the deceased is known [illegible]. This is [illegible] frequently having a prolonged period after the death has occurred. Whenever the friends of the deceased partake of a meal a little food is thrown down a place between the fire and the door, which the relatives to the [illegible] with the [illegible] of the dead is believed to be.

The fall of a meteor must be protected against the ghost of the deceased. He will otherwise visit a [illegible] and the ground of each [illegible] of their [illegible]. When two [illegible] are thrown into the [illegible] Whenever such the [illegible] and go into the woods where they [illegible] down [illegible] into the ground of the [illegible] of a [illegible] to which they [illegible] themselves by [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] to live and taken him up to the sky, where he is initiated. Early one morning he returns and is immediately the heaven. He has lost all his hair, which, it is believed, has been torn out by the strong breeze blowing in the higher regions. He is quite naked, and bites everyone whom he can lay hold of. If he is not catch anyone he will bite his own arm. It is believed that he has lost his soul, which fell from the body when the spirit came to him. Therefore the shamans must try for four days to recapture his soul. The night after they have recovered it the shaman's dance, clad in a bearskin and wearing a large head ring, heavy bracelets and skirts, all made of red cedar bark, transformed by spirit power, wearing a mask of the Wi'ngata (fig. 200), the spirit which initiated him. Its mask corresponds exactly to that of the [illegible] (fig. [illegible]).

Scanned 2-3 (2005-06, 07)297
NEB Bellevue NEB

Fig. 200.
[illegible]

Some Gitsi'n do not bite people, but merely devour raw salmon or bear dogs to pieces and devour them. Those who bite people will also devour corpses. The Gitsi'n has to observe a number of regulations. For four years after his initiation he must not [illegible]. He must stay away from his wife for one year, but has good to bring ordinary to one month. [illegible] he must not leave his house.

The [illegible] (the eagles) and the Ki'ts (the ravens) do not go into a woods to be initiated, but both dance their dances before their front doors. The [illegible] "everything" and sometimes people with his [illegible]. The Ki'ts carries stones and [illegible] goods and canoes. If he [illegible] an object during the day, he pays for it at night when it dances. The [illegible] and the Ki'ts, after they have danced, [illegible] their houses for one month.

If a person transgresses the law of the [illegible], for instance, when the shaman [illegible], or when a [illegible] a dance to which he has no right, the [illegible] a person other than the [illegible] or makes a mistake in handling his [illegible] death. The chief assembles the council and the shaman is called then the court. After his offense has been proved, he is asked whether he is willing to suffer the penalty of death. If he is not willing and if all his relatives is found willing to take the penalty on himself, the city party is spared and the [illegible] is killed. The execution of the judgment is intrusted to the shaman, who furnishes the condemned person by throwing the [illegible] by pulling him [illegible] way. The object thrown by the shaman is shell, bone, or finger nail, around

S-96 Dorsey H. S 1922-1924 [illegible]
NEA Bellwoods NEA

MARRIAGE RITES

T's family decide when the period of engagement shall be announced. Although it is considered undignified for X or his relatives to hurry them in this matter, there is always a certain amount of urging. T's father has strong reasons for procrastination. A long engagement strengthens the status of the children whom his daughter may bear, and besides, he frequently receives presents from X's relatives. As T's relatives will have to bear the heavier part of the expenses of the wedding, it may be necessary for them to delay it for years while saving the requisite goods. The ceremony may take place at any time of the year. Foreign guests are occasionally invited, but usually only the members of X's and T's villages are present. If the marriage should be with the child of a foreign chief his relatives and friends are present to take part. When T's relatives decide that they are ready, they choose the actual day after consultation with X's family, though the assumption is that T's father merely informs X's father of the date.

It is incumbent on X's family to proclaim the event on the day preceding the ceremony. In the late afternoon his father sends a herald through the village calling out:

"Ipiwap, ye chiefs! Ipiwap, ye wives of chiefs! Ipiwap, ye commoners!"

The actual meaning of ipiwap is unknown, though it is well understood to be an invitation to gather for the announcement of a wedding. In conjunction with the announcement, X's ancestral name is used, although all in the village are probably well aware of where it alone is to take place. It is noteworthy that at a marriage the guests, as well as the participants, are called by the ancestral names, as opposed to the kwiw names by which individuals who are such are generally known. But coloring is much in evidence at weddings; heralds arrive dressed in red paint and the guests similarly dye themselves. They wear collars, wristlets, and anklets of analyed cedar bark, and cover themselves with eagle down.

[illegible] to incorporate as many of them as possible, so that the rite soon became a chorus of discussion. The songs were sung and sung until all present were familiar with them, then the dance of the rite described food and all departed.

The following afternoon everyone, including those unincised into either society, was invited to the dancer's house. Probably the only absentees from the village were the dancing wife and her lover, while guests from neighbouring settlements were also in attendance. On this occasion, for the first time, the dancer's husband used to take the leading part. When the singers struck up the tune of the first song, he used to appear, supported by four or five assistants. His face was blackened with soot, he wore a lynx-skin belt, and above his head was fastened some insulting object, usually a representation of the female organs made of wood, cedar-bark and feathers, as realistic as possible. As the singers sang, aided by those who had learnt the songs on the previous day, the husband danced, moving his body so that the ornament on top of his head was shaken suggestively. Meanwhile the spectators kept calling out filthy epithets of any kind to his ex-wife and her lover. Sometimes the dancer was able to inspire some obscene remarks into the display. On one occasion, for example, he pulled some lynx fur from his belt and threw it in the face of a Tlé'ra man who happened to be present, and who had once seduced a married woman and accordingly bore the face of a similar rite, with the remark:

"All Tlé'ra women have hairy pubends like that."

The guests were invited to suggest foul sub-names for the man with whom the dancer's wife had eloped. One of them was adopted by general agreement of opinion, and the man was commonly called by it henceforth. Two names so created were:

Sialim, "The One Whose Face is Wrinkled like a Woman's Organs," and, Tsaiiwik, "The One Who Cohabited Publicly."

[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [

place in the manner already described. After passing through the fourth hole, or for the fourth time through the single opening, the two go to some lonely spot in the house where the mourner resides. They light a fire and deposit on it some of his clothing, placing the rice in a strong or hollow vessel. The friend always takes with him a supply of new clothing which the person being purified puts on and returns home, cleansed from the immediate taint of death. 764 783

The above rite presents evidence or widow, but does not allow the fact that for one year they are commonly "unclean" and must obey sundry taboos. They must not go to the bank of the river, or even appear at the front door of a house facing it. To do so is displeasing to the ancestors, for the same reason they cannot eat fish unless it has been smoked. If they wish to travel on the ocean, they cannot embark at the village but must go through the woods to a point on the shore and there be picked up by the canoe. There is a regular "Widows and Widowers Rock" about a mile on either side of every village on the ocean. The one near Kitsumgallum is called Sqlaw'k, and there is thought to be blood on it. A person mourning a consort must wear a hat decorated with miniature copper, of which the bottoms are here upwards; should this be omitted when the offender converses, the new husband or wife will know the 785 [illegible] 785 [illegible] 785 [illegible] 292 761

In addition to these taboos, there are numerous laws of behaviour, an infraction of which renders the offender liable to social disapproval. Widows and widowers should not their front doors, and the former should not show on the face. Sexual intercourse is prohibited to both sexes. If the rule is broken, the relatives of the deceased are insulted. Remarriage should not take place for at least a year, although among poor people it sometimes occurs after only six months, in which case all taboos and restrictions automatically cease. There is no law on this point, but it is considered fitting to allow this period to elapse. These requirements clearly indicate that bereavement is not merely an individual affair, but awakes social and 621 [illegible] 621 [illegible] 621 [illegible] 587 [illegible] 587 [illegible] 587 [illegible] 786

Libr/Derrotts R-1 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA
Bellabella, NES

Bc
* 534
* 787

hunter and round it lightly, even further than Grizzly Bear himself had been able to do.

"Now," said Grizzly Bear, "go home. But don't display your powers immediately. If they seem to handle you roughly as before, just pretend still to be weak, and watch who are your chief tormentors. Then, if they anger you too much, exert your strength."

When the youth returned to his village his companions, who knew of his search for supernatural aid, came running out.

"Here comes wa-ach-an," they said, "who went away to get power."

They were all eager to know whether or not he had succeeded, but the lad did not gratify their curiosity. After a time they began their usual sport of wrestling, nor was it long before they had begun to throw their playmates to and fro, as they had often done. He allowed them to believe him a wrestling until the whole crowd jumped on him, forcing him to the ground, and derriding him for his failure to obtain supernatural help. Then he exerted his strength. Catching one of his persecutors by the neck he squeezed him until his head was separated from his body; seizing another, one in each hand, and crushed them together with such a shock that they were killed. Grizzly Bear had endowed him with the strength of a bear, which he used to slay all who had ridiculed him. Once avenged, he assumed the form of a grizzly bear and ran away, never to return.

BB
534
Bc
* 534
* 787

THE DOG'S WIFE[42]

A chief and his wife had a daughter who, not having reached the age of puberty, always slept beside her father. One night she was startled by finding a man holding intercourse with her, but she could not tell who it was. The same thing happened repeatedly just before dawn, her unknown always fleeing so rapidly that she could not identify him. Greatly puzzled, she at last hit on a plan to find her lover. Like all women she carried a small bag containing the paint used to decorate herself; she took this to bed with her, unclosed, and determined to throw it at the person who was visiting her. Towards dawn she was awakened as usual, hurled her pouch in the darkness, and heard the thud as it struck someone. In the morning everyone noticed that an ugly old dog living in the house had a smear of paint over its face and there was considerable discussion as to how this could have happened. The girl was terrified, suspecting, as was the case, that the dog had heard her make some unkind remark about its face and had become her lover in revenge.

The girl soon felt that she was pregnant. The time of delivery arrived with unprecedented rapidity, and she gave birth to four puppies, three [42] Bella Bella story.

PLATE I

115
142
241
308

Photograph by H. J. Harris, National Museum of Canada

Indian Woody

[p 26 (B)]

1:McDowell: E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NES Bellacoola NES

PLATE 8

115
142
302
291

Photograph by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

Cognate Schooner

[g 26 (R)]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

PLATE 4

115
142
241
302

Photograph by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

Jim Pollard

[p 46 (2)]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

ability are always seeking to lend goods to those who are planning potlatches or other rites, knowing that the investment is safe and lucrative. 556* [426]

X uses his own discretion as to how much wealth is necessary. He knows how much he owes for presents received on previous occasions, and would not dream of giving a potlatch until able to repay these. Failure to do so would hold him up to the derision of the whole countryside. But he acts upon his own judgment with regard to interest. If he continues to hoard goods until he is able to repay with great increase, he gains prestige from his generous returns, but meanwhile he does not enjoy the distinction which would have followed a smaller affair at an earlier period. Further, there is the uncertainty about how much his wife's family will contribute, though that can be estimated with a fair degree of accuracy; in Bella Coola every transaction is made publicly, so each man knows the wealth of his neighbour. The favourite month for a potlatch is October, before the kusiut dances, when there is abundance of food. At this season there is plenty of salmon roe, berries, and crabapples, all of which might be ruined by frost. Occasionally, a potlatch takes place after the kusiut period, but in that case the only foods available are olachen grease, smoked meat, smoked fish, dried hemlock-bark, and dried berries. If several men in one village decide to give potlatches in the same year there may be rivalry and dispute as to which shall be first. There is no satisfactory method of settling this point. [626] [796] [262] [578]

When all is ready X tells a herald (I, p. 244) to summon his fellow villagers to his house the following day for xlāxtem. It is customary for all to accept, but no social obligation is broken should a man or woman fail to do so. [203]

The next morning no one eats in his own house, knowing that free food will be distributed. While his expected guests are adorning themselves by washing and painting, X, aided by his family and others, prepares large quantities of food, borrows boxes, and makes other necessary arrangements. Pre- [302] [426]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

203 nature will try to bestow a valuable present. If a man is too
* 556 poor to give anything, he can avoid the obligation by not [535] dancing when his tune is beaten out. The presents are piled [537] together, and then the host, aided by several important chiefs, distributes them to the messengers, at the same time making laudatory speeches. The chief of the envoys receives more than the members of his crew.

Then the messenger-chief stands up and announces the names of those whom X has invited to his potlatch, using in each case the ancestral designation of the person summoned. Then the envoys, in a body, go to every house in the village. Probably all to be invited are present in the house of the chief, yet the messenger-chief must call out in the doorway of each house:

"Chief So-and-so, prepare your paddles and leave tomorrow."

Early next morning the messengers rouse those whom they have invited and, as a mark of respect, help them to carry their goods to the canoes. There is an attitude of shaming com-[558] bined with that of deference, since those assisted will have been placed under obligations. They also take to their canoes their own recently acquired goods. Envoys and guests set out together in their respective craft, and only separate as they near Bella Coola.

ARRIVAL OF THE GUESTS

* 556 While the canoes containing the first party of guests remain 575 at anchor to wait for high tide, the envoys proceed at once to X's house, now completely redecorated if not entirely rebuilt. Here a huge fire is blazing, and members of the nusk society are passing in and out, making ready for the ceremony. Both [302] men and women beautify themselves by painting their faces in any designs they fancy, and by combing their hair and placing eagle down upon it. The guests at anchor lay planks [535] across their canoes so as to form a dancing platform. Then, as the tide rises, the singers in the house beat out the tune of

[Kusiut Society Initiation]

575 203 796 call is that something strange has happened to the "moral." At intervals throughout the day he repeats this announcement, and towards nightfall goes around calling:

Skinap, skinap, kukuciut, "Care, care, ye members of the kuciut society, power has come to the son of the chief (or to the moral)."

The kukuciut assemble in X's house, taking their places around the fire; the uninitiated crowd near the doorway. X is seated among his relatives and some of the senior members of the society behind the fire. A herald calls out:

"I want a siki to help X."

575 791 796 [424] [773] In every village there are at least two kukuciut who have, embodied with their kuciut names, the professional prerogative of acting as healer to every novice; it is believed that the ancestor of each obtained a name and this right through a revelation from some supernatural healer. Since that time the owner of the name has been able to insert some of his own ever-present power into a neophyte to enable him to sustain the dangers of admission to the society. This is the fiction taught to the uninitiated. The profession of siki can be trans-[425] mitted by willing like any other prerogative and it occasionally happens that the same individual is siki for both kuciut and nusuk. In answer to the herald's call, the two siki come forward and crouch behind the fire, one on either side of it. [302] Their faces are blackened with soot, and each wears a blanket, [292] decorated with dyed cedar-bark, thrown loosely over his [237] shoulders, leaving the chest and stomach bare except for an apron of deer hooves or puffin beaks. Meanwhile beating sticks are distributed among most of the kukuciut who strike furiously on the floor with them, without any attempt to keep time; the sole object is to produce the greatest din possible.

One of the siki contorts himself in an amazing manner, presses his hands against his stomach as if to force something from it, and rolls from side to side on his haunches, until at length he produces, as if from his body, a rock crystal (see Plate 3). He waves this to and fro in his hands, then goes

[see category 116, p.84(c)- ANALYST]

[Kwiot Society Initiation]

*575 individual, other than an indefinite recollection of the amount 796 of goods used for his dyed cedar-bark. People always have 556 sufficient goods to validate kwiot prerogatives; in fact, if a proud person gives too lavishly to confirm the initiation of a relative, the marshals sometimes burn the goods, giving no explanation other than that the uninitiated must not be led to believe that a kwiot ceremony is an affair of wealth like a potlatch. Formerly, goods were given only at initiation ceremonies, but between 1880 and 1890 a chief gave presents, instead of food, at a dance. His example was followed, once none was willing to be outdone, although such gifts are still called "food." The name of the donor is always announced, whether he is the dancer himself or one of his relatives.

*575 X, though now a member of the kwiot society, is still a 984 novice and cannot give a dance[2] until the next ceremonial
[796] season, that is, until one year has elapsed. The marshals instruct him about his costume, and about the manner in which he must deport himself during this period, matters which depend to a considerable extent upon his prerogative. If he [265] is a Cannibal, Screech, or Breaker dancer he must not eat smoked salmon, nor must he enter a house in which either a potlatch or a memorial potlatch is taking place.[1] Failure to obey this injunction would warrant punishment from a foreign [302] tribe. Unless his prerogative is to give one of these, or the [292] Ghost dance, he must keep his face constantly blackened. Every novice must wear a collar of dyed cedar-bark. The marshals warn him to be circumspect in dealing with uninitiated persons; he can talk to them, but it is most improper [524] for him to engage in any familiarity or frivolous play. Above [525] all, he must neither gamble nor take part in non-athletic games,

[1] A Cannibal novice, however, begins to exercise his prerogative immediately, although he must also perform a complete dance the following year.

[2] This prohibition was once broken at Qemqemi. A skilled leader was required to arrange the taste at a memorial potlatch and the only man fit for the purpose, a resident of Bond, was a Cannibal novice. After much deliberation he was called upon, but great care was taken to hide his identity and it was years before the infraction became known.

by K is called. Having dined, the gamers depart while the craftsmen continue their labours. Towards dusk the house is cleared up, the chips thrown on the fire and everything made ready. On this night the uninitiated are invited, but there is a wide and important difference in ritual between Bella Coola and Kimsquit. In the former the masks are carefully concealed, whereas in Kimsquit one or two, or sometimes all, are suspended behind the fire by the carpenters. It is accordingly difficult for an observer to understand why this practice does not at once remove all secrecy from the rite. The explanation appears to lie in the fact that the uninitiated, ignorant of how they have been made, see in these strange objects evidence of the power of the Sacrist. In Kimsquit, moreover, members of the society emphasize the fact that the dancers are supernaturally endowed representations of what the beings above are doing and performing, and it is only at certain rites that they are actually supposed to be present. One old Bella Coola remembered having heard from his grandfather that long before his time the carpenters used to make the masks in their own houses where the uninitiated could see them; the dancer would come in, wave his arm over the craftsman's head and cry hoip if the workmanship was excellent. The man who described this expressed his own scepticism, and added that it would have destroyed the key-note of secrecy. A possible explanation of this important difference in ritual will be given at the end of this chapter; for the present it will be enough to point out that the masks are left suspended in Kimsquit, and concealed in Bella Coola.

Towards dusk the herald goes to every house to summon the Sacrist, who have adorned themselves for the ceremony by washing and painting, as the uninitiated have also done. The members assemble slowly, in fact an observer finds the interminable delays of every Sacrist dance most provoking. At last all have appeared and taken their places around the fire, while the uninitiated eagerly wait near the door for the invitation which they know will soon be given. One of the mar-

[The Dance of Nincenim]

* 575 * 746 184

since a certain factor has the definite prerogative of throwing them on the fire. As each is round into the flames he calls out:

"Please return directly to the supernatural room."

The only exception is for the mask of Ana'kimskuate for which he cry is:

"Please return directly to your repository."

* 575 * 746 187

Before X can again take his normal place in the community it is necessary to remove from him the call, which is conceived as being something physical that has entered his body. This is the belief taught to the uninitiated so emphatically that the Indacint themselves appear to believe it, at any rate, whenever their inward thoughts, they act as if the call had substance. As soon as the masks have been burnt one of the Indacint suggests that it is time to expel the call. All the Indacint in the house crowd around X, as many as can reach his body pressing against his stomach with their hands, always in an upward direction. Higher and higher they go, from stomach to chest, from chest to neck, as if massaging some object. At last it is thought to have been expelled, and X brings his hands together, as if holding something with great care. Suddenly he throws them up in the air, opening them as he does so, and calling out:

Ana'kilimat ala ilmimapen, "Go back to your ancient home."

These ritual words have been handed down from ancient times and are used by every Indacint to dismiss his call. Whither it is sent is problematical. Some say to X's repository, others to Nacpalmcinte; the Bella Coola do not know. Often one of his songs has been sung on the sidewalk outside X's house; the call may be returned from there.

This rite ends the ceremony and the Indacint disperse. It is obvious that every nakcum must vary according to the person of the dancer, but the above is typical of the ritual. A call can now come to any Indacint, and one often descends at this time, so that X's nakcum is Indacint for another dancer.

* 575 * 746 * 302 282

For the rest of the ceremonial season X has to observe certain rules. He must wear his collar of cedar-bark and around every Secret dance. Usually all kukuxiut do so in any case, but the attendance of all novices and those who have had calls is obligatory. If the dancer's face has been blackened, it must be kept so during this period. At every gathering he dances to his eight songs, and throughout the ceremonial season has the power of attracting to himself the spirit of an unattached person. He sleeps in whatever house a dance is taking place, but is forbidden to hold sexual intercourse except in his own, which, of course, is possible only when a call comes to another housemate. Failure to obey this injunction was formerly punished by the marshals with death. These rules apply to every dance.

Bellacoola 65 (1922-1924) 1948
Bella Bella/Heiltsuk 1924

Mgwanim serves Yaqalwaxiste at the winter solstice, and on their nine calls come to those kukuxiut of whom he is patron. It is uncertain whether or not this entails the regular ceremony of four nights' duration. On the entry of the supreme being, Nuáknum arises his paddle (or pole?), returns to Smaiso, and then descends the Bella Coola River. It is believed by the uninitiated that X can see him as he passes, and the singers compose a ninth song for him. The words describe how the departing Nuáknum empties a large number of eulachon into the river.* X dances to it, but no call comes to him. This final episode of the complicated ritual occurs, of course, after calls have come to other kukuxiut.

It sometimes happens that no kuxiut of whom Nuáknum is patron has enough food to give the lengthy dance just described, but some type of ritual is necessary to inaugurate the ceremonial season. Accordingly, someone with the proper prerogative is asked by the marshals to see Nuáknum when at the mouth of the river; then, when he passes upstream four days later, a call can come to any kuxiut. This abbreviated ceremony, termed Smáhudjuqwisan, is carried out in the manner described above, except that it is completed in four days with only two songs.

*Nuáknum is accordingly often called Nuáknum.

[The Dance of Wila]

"Path Clearers" are to it that no one passes between him and the fire. The uninitiated are not expelled from the house and their curiosity is aroused. Meanwhile the singers prepare songs for X, describing his supernatural persons, and some tsakwiar carpenters are instructed to make in secret ten small pieces of wood, about six feet in length and six inches wide, sometimes half-moon shaped. They cover these with dyed cedar-bark on which they paint the designs appropriate to each being.* On the morning of the fourth day,* X blackens his face with soot or charcoal, obtained by pouring water on a fire, and dons the usual tsaxiar costume. A herald then invites the tsakwiar to assemble in X's house. Promptly they proceed to the lowest house of the village, where the singers beat out the tunes of the "Path Clearers," remembered from a previous year. They dance, while X stands, shifting his feet and moving his apron as if he also wished to perform but was too weary to do so. This is repeated at every house of the village, except that in which the potlatch was held; most of the tsakwiar follow the procession, as do some of the uninitiated. Finally, with X last of all, they enter the potlatch house, where foreign guests and many uninitiated have assembled.

In Kimsquit the preliminary four days of watching are omitted, but from this point on, the rites of the two areas are practically identical.* As X enters, all the tsakwiar who have pounding sticks begin to beat on the floor and the women drone. Without delay, and without attention to the timeless thumping, X begins to dance, sunwise, around the fire, at intervals casting on it particles of eagle down which have the effect of making the supernatural ones above take their places. He calls out intermittently that he can see the beings above sitting down, and a herald repeats his remarks loudly. In Bella Coola the four "Path Clearers" walk close behind X.

*The distinctive designs are given by Boas, to whom the reader is referred.

*It is probable that X must first lie down when Nuxtpam's dancer reports that the canoe is at the mouth of the river.

*It is uncertain whether the differences in ritual are typical of Bella Coola and Kimsquit, or merely represent variations in individual prerogatives.

*[375] *[176] hours. The night's ceremony concludes with a meal and the admonitions of the marshals.

No further description is needed of the rites taking place the next day, that of nuxnuxlaqs, when a second song is composed, again dealing with X's persons, and wood for masks is cut. The evening's ceremonial does not last so long as that of hamatsa.

[338] The next day, qaiam, the carpenters work on the masks, some of which must be finished by nightfall. Late in the evening both kukusiut and uninitiated prepare themselves [302] by painting and washing; at this time the young men provide [375] pots of warm water for their female friends. As already described, the kukusiut are the first to come, followed by the uninitiated when all is ready. In Kimsquit they use the masks [184] of at least some of X's supernatural persons suspended by cords of dyed cedar-bark from a sloping pole that crosses from the floor at the base of the back-room to the cross-beam behind the fire. It is said, although the informant could not guarantee the truth of the statement, that long ago masks had to be displayed at this dance, though it was optional at others. It is a serious and sacred time, one at which frivolity is quite out of place, and the marshals are in readiness to punish any [488] offender. One very old informant told of having seen a marshal strike down and kill a kusiut from another house for holding intercourse with a woman on this night. The heralds [209] stay near the door, repeating and enlarging on the remarks of [537] the marshals; the fluency of these functionaries always adds appreciably to the success of any Bella Coola rite. On this occasion X and the dancer of Noŧŧqnum must perform, followed by those who have danced in former years, according to the desire of the singers; later in the season, when many kukusiut have performed, the rite may continue almost till dawn, for all must dance. After the departure of the uninitiated the kukusiut eat leisurely, while a marshal addresses them, commenting on the ritual and, perhaps, asking a man society have recovered from the shock of X's disappearance. Thereafter the hamatsa dances continue night after night, but the Cannibal remains hidden. Sometimes he is carried to a dance, concealed within a drum; more often he remains within the back room of his own house or hides in some lonely part of the mountains. Throughout this period he eats little or nothing, and formerly used to devour a bowl of roots that produced emaciation. The length of concealment depends entirely on X. If he desires to impress the uninitiated with the dangers which he has survived, he remains hidden for a long time; consequently, the period varies from a week to two months or even more. On every occasion that a marshal addresses the hahamatsa he warns them to watch for X's return, and garbled accounts of this reach the uninitiated.

When X's relatives and the marshals have decided that the Cannibal has been long enough absent, they make arrangements for him to reappear. The time selected is always the night of a nakamu, and after the departure of the uninitiated on the preceding evening the marshals discuss arrangements with the hahamatsa and also talk to various individuals. Several hahamatsa shave X's head, except a small patch above the forehead, to support the story which he will tell of the high winds prevailing in the land above, which blew the hair from his head.*

After the dismissal of the uninitiated on the following night of nakamu, the hahamatsa make their final arrangements. When they judge from the passage of the stars or the state of the tide that dawn is at hand, several members of the society climb to the roof of the previously selected house. First they sound a whistle, then thump on the roof with their feet, and call out:

Xwe, xwe, xwe: this is a cry used by Cannibals returned from above which is supposed to indicate a longing for meat.

The hahamatsa sleeping within, knowing that their house has been selected, are ready as soon as they are awakened. The

*One old man mentioned that in his youth this was done with a sharpened piece of iron; he was unable to state what was used in earlier times.

[The Scratch Dance]

They do not blacken their faces on receipt of a call as do most Dancers.

The dance of their songs is of the land above, instead of their powers.

On visiting a house where a potlatch or ceremony is taking place they sit with the Cannibals in one of the back corners; this group is given food before any of the other guests.

They do not exercise their prerogative on fellow Scratchers, Cannibals, or Breakers.

They are liable to heavy luck when the call is upon them and after its departure. In such cases they are lazy, apparently guarded and neglected by other Dancers, and rush into every house to frighten the uninitiated.

They must recompense those whom they have scratched.

They act as peace-makers among the Dancers, since the necessity of accompanying a Scratcher who proceeds to be danced overrules all petty causes of strife.

Though any definite concept of graded rank in the Dancer society is quite foreign to the Bella Coola, it is generally felt that Scratchers and Breakers are only slightly less important than Cannibals. The patron of every Scratcher is Sna'ulnda Alpanaw, one of the sons of Alpanaw; this supernatural being scratches the supernatural ones in the land above, and his father alone can restrain him. The prerogative is fairly common, and it is probable that in early days there was at least one Scratcher in every village.

The following account of the ritual was obtained from one of the Bella Coola marshals and describes the manner in which the dance should have been performed by the Scratcher, Alachnaic, his daughter's daughter's son, who had recently obtained the prerogative formerly possessed by his deceased mother's father. It will be convenient to refer to Alachnaic as X and use the present tense in recording the proper ritual, though it was largely omitted on the last occasion the dance was given.

X arranges a suitable day with the marshals for receiving

[i.e. - the Scratchers - ANALYST]

[illegible] 575* 796*

Like a Cannibal, X is liable to forays for the rest of the [834] ceremonial season. During this period he remains secluded within his house, and the uninitiated allingly avoid him, [828] believing him to be mentally deranged. He attends every Sarsi dance, where his brown medicine bags to frighten the uninitiated. If strangers from Kimsquit or Tal'ia visit Bella Coola, he at once becomes frenzied, rushes to the beach and scratches them, precisely as a Cannibal would do; in this case he must be pacified in the same manner. A Scratcher always gives goods to recompense scratched foreigners. If it is the first time that X has danced, he must remain secluded for the following summer, and give his ceremony the next winter. During the warm months he remains within the back-room of his house, and though some of the uninitiated know of his presence, still believing him mad they do not intrude upon his privacy. The coming of foreigners during this period excites him to frenzy and he scratches them, irrespective of the time of year.

It might be mentioned that some Scratcher names are indi- [551] cative of the dancer's function, and others, such as "The Cook of Fear," have reference to his prowess.

THE BREAKER DANCE

When a Bella Coola speaks of the four which kusiut dances 575* 796* from the uninitiated, he almost invariably cites in order the Cannibal, Scratch, and Breaker dances. Kukusiut with these 424 three prerogatives have no more privileges than other members [781] of the society, nor are they considered superior in rank, but [554] similarity in their functions leads to an almost automatic association. If questioned further, a Bella Coola will usually say that he regards the Cannibal dance to be first, with the Scratch and Breaker equal, but less important. Breakers share [302] with Cannibals and Scratchers the prerogatives of not black- [533] ening their faces; of having as theme for their songs the land [264]

[The Dance of the Tally Posts]

By THE BELLA COOLA INDIANS

975
976

Slowly and steadily the rope is lowered to the carpenters who coil it in a loop near the foot of the ladder. It seems an endless climb, so this part of the ceremony is expected to take quite as long as X's ascent, and must not be finished until just before dawn. At last the faint sound of the cattle is heard and presently the ladder itself begins to shake. Two or more senior members of the society climb up through the roof and return, amid the drowing of the kukusiut women, with the traveller. The uninitiated gaze at him with fear and awe:

"He is indeed wonderful," they say to one another.

[302]
[772]

X's face was painted black and white when he started his climb, but it is now clean and the uninitiated hardly need to be reminded by the kaxiat orator that the strong wind in Sway has blown all paint from his skin. He sits down beside an eloquent kaxiat to whom he talks at length and who excites the curiosity of the audience by telling them that they will soon hear all about it. When the tale is finished, the orator stands up and tells what the traveller has seen in the land above. He states that X found a certain number of tally posts leaning and straightened them, but he never mentions whose lives have thus been preserved. The uninitiated assume without question that X has just given the orator these details, though in point of fact he has done nothing of the kind, his apparent confidant having been chosen for his skill in inventing interesting items. As soon as the story is over, the uninitiated are told to leave. While the usual meal is being prepared the carpenters haul down the ladder and cast it into the fire without ceremony. The kukusiut listen to the usual admonitions of the marshals as they eat, and then disperse in the early dawn, wearied from the all-night session.

Most of the village sleeps through the day, but in the late afternoon the heralds summon the kukusiut to X's house. The dance of the Tally Posts resembles a kusiatem to the extent that four days of ceremonial follow the four days just described. The evening following X's ascent is lsustämem, the

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

they sit in silence, awaiting his arrival. Presently word is sent to him, for he is always hiding near, and he comes through the door and sits near the fire. But he does not resemble the man who left the village. His face and body have been painted green with crushed leaves, in imitation of the colour of the dead; in his hand he carries a bone, said to be part of the leg of a dead man, though in reality it is from a deer. After him the ghosts enter one by one. They are a number of kakasiut who have been painted black and green to give them an unearthly appearance; there is no fixed pattern, each following his own, or the carpenter's idea of the uncanny, though the body colour on which the other tints are smeared is usually white. Each dead man has a special name and each acts accordingly in an eccentric way. One enters walking backwards, another hops on one leg, and a third walks on his hands—because ghosts always act in the opposite manner to mortals. Each trills in a peculiar way and performs something like a dance, waving his arms to and fro, up and down, constantly pointing with one finger, before lying down close to the central fire. With them enters a woman with painted face, clad in a blanket and carrying a basket on her back; she is Alpwakar, who gathers berries in the land of the dead. She begins to go around picking up any small articles that she sees and depositing them in her basket, from which anyone picks them out at will and returns them to the places whence they had been taken. One of the first actors to appear carries a stick for time beating, and acts as leader of the ghost singers. Whenever a spark from the fire lights on one of the dead, causing the latter to jump, the leader pounds violently with his stick. When all are present, the leader beats time and they prepare to leave. Ghosts are feckless, however; consequently, instead of going straight to the door, some go in one direction, some in another, but all are at length shepherded outside. X and his visitors, with a large number of kakasiut, go to every house in the village repeating the same procedure, in silence, except for the trill of the dead men. The uninitiated do not gatlim. When the dance has ended, X gives presents, first to each spectator, and then to those who have assisted him, counting with the singers. This is the last event of the evening and the tukwiat disperse.

[The Ghost Dance]

The factor of doing things in the reverse order appears not only in actions, but in the order of the ceremonies. Those just described, although at the beginning of the rite, resemble a sequence in many respects. Consequently, it is not surprising that the next night is gatlim. The singers are the first to assemble and they compose a second song for X, with the same chorus but different words and tune to that already proposed. Meanwhile the tukwiat are gathering and when they have learnt the new song, the uninitiated are summoned. No enclosure has been built, and X is much in evidence. His body has been painted green with a preparation of green rubbed in water, he wears the usual collar of dyed cedar-bark and a kind of head-dress with a triangular projection over his forehead. His two songs are sung, and X dances vigorously to each in the manner just described. This is followed by the customary gatlim ritual, tuwiat after tuwiat dancing as the singers beat out his two songs. Finally a Cannibal begins to growl fiercely in one of the rear corners and the uninitiated flee hurriedly. The tukwiat eat together, listening to the admonitions and remarks of the marshals, and then X dances once more. Among the peculiarities of the Ghost dance is the fact that the call may be returned at this point, or X may again become mad, according to the wishes of the marshals. If they desire a further display of his insanity, he rushes out as soon as he has finished dancing and proceeds to the lowest house of the village. A number of tukwiat follow him and appear to be trying to prevent him from picking up handfuls of dirt from the floor and throwing them in all directions in an aimless manner. As a matter of fact his guardians take care that X hurls approximately the same amount in each house, as none of them is willing to have more damage done in his own house than in others. After a visit to each dwelling, the party returns to

PLATE [illegible]

Photograph by the author

Mrs. Eudora Moody (left) and Mrs. Willie Mack, two Bella
Coola women

1P2
B41
B42
B42
516

[p 516 (A)]

Z: McDowell E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

PLATE 14

142
291
302

Photograph by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

Mrs. Jim Pollard, a Kimsquit woman

[p 516 (B)]

2:36:Dewalt: E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

PLATE II

142
291
302

Photograph by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

Mrs. Jim Pollard, profile

[p 516(c)]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

142
291
302
342

PLATE 16

Photograph by the author

Reuben Schooner, a Bella Coola man, and his children

[p 516 (D)]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

PLATE 17

142
291
302
342

Photograph by G. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

Lame Charlie, a Bella Coola man

[p 516 (E)]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

PLATE 10

142
241
302

Photograph by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

Captain Myers, an aged Bella Coola man

[p 516 (F)]

Z:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

PLATE 19

142
291
302

Photograph by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

Skookum Mary, a Kitsequecla woman

[p 516 (G)]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

PLATE 30

142
291
302

Photograph by the author

Alec Davis, a full-blooded Bella Coola

[p 516 (H)]

2:McIlwraith,E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

As they grow older the plainness of feature is more pronounced, accompanied by increasing heaviness of body (see Plate 16). Many of the adults are corpulent and move with slow, awkward gait. As a rule the men have great strength and are capable of prolonged and arduous exertion, particularly in paddling; in fact, constant use of canoes may have developed this powerful, ungainly build. Few are good walkers or packers; such, if they are found, usually belong to the lighter interior type. Among the grown people the face, though unbeautiful, often has a kindly expression, even becoming attractive in laughter or when a friendly grin spreads from ear to ear. With advancing age the prominent nose seems to grow larger, frequently becoming almost aquiline (see Plate 17). Many of the older people assert that this was even more common in former times. In time the face becomes lined with wrinkles and the body appears to shrink (see Plate 18). The teeth are in many cases worn down to the gums; this seems to cause no discomfort, though an old person cannot utter the glottal stops and velar sounds with which the language abounds without emitting a fine spray of saliva. They are absolutely unable to pronounce several of the Bella Coola words, while the constant spitting is a disagreeable feature of their conversation, particularly to an investigator striving, often vainly, to record sounds accurately. The deep wrinkles of old women give them a benign "grandmotherly" expression, which makes them more attractive in extreme age than in youth (see Plate 19). Senile decay is so frequent that the return to infancy in mind as well as in physical powers is regarded as normal.

Among the coastal tribes hair on the face is not uncommon, but in this characteristic the Bella Coola are pre-eminent. Nearly all the men have sparse moustaches, at least; many have a heavy growth, and several are full-bearded. That this was due to white mixture was assumed at first, but no evidence could be found to support this view. There are a number of half-breeds in the community but they are no more hirsute than the full-blooded Indians. Razors are now univer-

142 sally used but the older people state that beards were by no
144 means rare in former times. Careful inquiries were made [302] concerning the ancestry of a man, about seventy years of age in 1922, whose curly beard suggests that he must be a half-breed, as indeed he is assumed to be by the white settlers of the valley. His father was Potlas, the most influential chief of recent years, his mother was herself the daughter of an important chief. None of the older men had ever heard the slightest rumour of faithlessness on her part. There were white [648] traders on the coast at the time of his birth, and intercourse with [567] slave women and others of low family was not uncommon, but [622] it would have been difficult for a chief's wife to misconduct herself, and still more difficult for her to conceal all knowledge of it in view of the open life which prevailed at that period. Moreover, it is said that Potlas himself had a similar beard, as did also the parents of several men who in 1922 were fifty or sixty years of age.

142 Although the possibility of white mixture cannot be over-144 looked in the case of this one individual, one must not dis-826 regard the opinion of the people themselves on hairiness in [302] general. They are proud of it and regard beards and moustaches as marks of virility given to them by Ālquntām; baldness and lack of facial hair are considered a sign of weakness. They aver that their fathers and grandfathers were even more hirsute than they. Furthermore, they point out with pride [186] that this is a difference between themselves and the tribes of the interior, who are, as they say in scorn, "hairless like Chinamen." Finally, it is noteworthy that the hair on the head of many Bella Coola is wavy, or even curly (see Plate 20), instead of straight as among the majority of Indian tribes.[2]

Character

181 It is an almost impossible task to describe briefly the characteristics of a people. Those of the Bella Coola have

[2] This characteristic has led the writer to wonder if it could possibly have been caused by Ainu mixture.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

287 thrown in, and hot stones lifted in to heat the mixture. Even at the 386 present time dye is never made on a stove, as it is thought that the gradual heating by means of stones is essential. As it becomes warm, the woman thoroughly stirs the ingredients with her hands, then, when it boils, some of the bark is lifted out and more added. This process is continued until the brew is deep red in colour. It is allowed to stand for a few minutes before the pounded cedar-bark is placed in it. The operator gently works it around until it is saturated, then lifts it out and hangs it up to dry. Several pieces of bark can be dyed in one solution, though it is necessary to add more alder-bark and more stones to maintain the proper strength and heat.

[285] Although red cedar-bark is the kind most commonly used, the Bella
[177] Coola sometimes use the yellow cedar for mats and blankets, an art learnt from the Bella Bella.

THE MANUFACTURE OF PAINT

386 Paint, such as was used both for decorating the body and for por-[302] traying designs on wood, was obtained from a kind of rock found near [532] the head of a creek entering the Bella Coola from the south near Sunst.
[317] Fragments of the red stone were broken off, thrown into a vessel containing water, and brought to a boil by the insertion of hot stones. Under the action of heat the rock became soft so that the manufacturer was able to pulverize it and run off the semi-liquid mixture into a small box. He would then chew cedar-bark and salmon roe, and spit into the paint, thoroughly mixing his saliva with it. When dry, the mixture was ready for use, and could be kept indefinitely.

[532] Anyone could paint who had the artistic skill, and it was chiefly artists [177] who used to make this kind of paint. Since the introduction of the white man's brilliant colours, there has been no demand for the duller native shade, and the making of paint has been discontinued.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEó Bellacoola NEó

 192*

Ináhaxa: One of the first men to settle on the upper Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.

Ináxmi: Unidentified town on the outer coast mentioned in a Sisaa story of the beginning of time.

Ináhlémdimut: Name acquired by one of the first settlers at Ínalidi in the beginning of time.

Ináxmaxa: Ínaxma's son in the beginning of time.

Ináxi: Small portable canoe.

Ináxum: Desertion of a spouse. [586]

Ináxumai: 1—"The Copper One."
2—"Snow," in the language of Deer.

Ináxumaiyaxa: Imitation potlatch carried out by nuxatamp.

Ináxus: Bella Bella Cannibal living in the beginning of time.

Ináxwnimut, "The Scatterer of Eagle Down": Name created by Ínaxma for his son in the beginning of time.

Ináxa: To lost.

Ináxlakáka: Bella Bella supernatural being who brings food.

Ináxnimut: Person of placid disposition.

Ináka: Bull-roarer.

Ináx: To excise rot; the word for potlatch, ínx, is supposedly derived from this. [556]

Ínx: Potlatch.

Ínxmait: The binding down of a Cannibal with rope.

Ínxulim: Unidentified autumn moon, probably the fourth after the summer solstice. [821]

Ínxulis di Nuxatamp, "The Potlatch of the nuxatamp": Second moon after winter solstice. [805]

Ínxmáxis, "First of All": One of the first men to settle at Nuxáli in the beginning of time.

Ínxlwnijat: Shaman's ritual error, such as the curing of one who is ceremonially unclean. [756]

Ínxwáxsta: Miniature totem-pole such as is used in mourning ceremony.

Ínxwkmm: Partnership of a poor man with a chief about to give a potlatch, so that the former may repay debts, for which his poverty required no compensation, and thus start himself on the path towards greatness. [556]

Ínxxaxinim: The turning over of a mountain.

Ín'yo: Professional name of a female berry-picker.

Ípmbáxta: Stick decorated with copper bangles used in mourning rites by one of the first settlers at Qwiyai in the beginning of time. [765]

Íqa: The painting of the face as a sign of mourning. [302]

'Íxmdimut: Cannibal Xaxiut name used by the first settlers at Ínalis in the beginning of time.

Ísiqwam: Kaxiut name of a Bella Coola male Scratcher.

Ískisi: Aversion.

Íslwala: 1—Kaxiut name of a Tsimisi man.
2—Shamanistic power.

Íslhámut: Visitation from the life of a recently dead friend, notification of which is conveyed by a start or other feeling of discomfort. [775] [787]

Íslyaxa-i: Kaxiut name of a Kimsquit man. The first to use this designation was a relative of the earliest settlers in the beginning of time.

Íslwlmalamm, "The Giver of Shamanistic Power": One of the names of Tlinqlitsawa, and hence a designation given to shamans.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

#192

Nuwatsqymm: Woman endowed supernaturally by Awa'kiwulaix and serving as patron (?) to a kusiut dancer. [789] nuwalitsi: Omen of death.

Nuwitsmkhum, "The One Who Is Thought Of": One of Thicaplilán-a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.

Nuwumlaix: 1—Man dwelling in Kymayne's house.
2—Kusiut name of a Kimsquit woman.

nuwapin: The cry of hi, hi, uttered by Cannibals.

Nuwumsp: Kusiut name assumed by a Sisaa woman in the beginning of time.

nuwyawum: Kusiut with right to display a puppet-patron. The difference, if any, between this and quiatem is obscure. [424]

Nu'uwuthmaxis, "The Widower": One of Raven's names as chief.

nuqkuxlal-um: Synonym for ptaxtum: Payments made by the wife's relatives to those of the bridegroom on first arrival outside his house on the wedding day. They are said to be in return for "Food" received from them on many occasions. [535]

Nuqhuxlaxten, "Hoodlously Deaf": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.

nuqw-uxte: The binding, by a warrior, of his hair into a top-knot. [302] nuqxlém-i: Medicine brewed in a skull.

Nuqtymsis, "Place of Much Rapids": Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.

Nuqwatsis: Nuqwal name of a Kimsquit man.

Nuqilaqulim-a: One of the first women to settle at Rivers Inlet in the beginning of time.

nuqwumsp-al ne xmp"ale: One year. [105]

nuqum: Envy, in the sense of desire for something from which one is debarred by lack of prerogative. [828] nuqxil, "Empty House": House in which a kusiut dance is taking place.

nuqxlat: The throwing of grease on a fire to heat, both literally and figuratively, a rival.

Nuqxly": 1—Supernatural beings responsible for an eclipse. [821] 2—Eclipse.

nuqxlitsu: Physical strength of the body running down the sides from little finger to little toe. [827] nuqwaxis: Hoot-like cry uttered at the coming of a call for kusiutem and other important kusiut rites.

nuq"xwxilim: Unexpected stroke of good fortune. [777]

Nuqwihmlaix: Sisaa name of a Kimsquit man.

Nuqwilim: Site of an ancient town on Schooner Pass. [772]

Nuqwlisi: The upper heaven.

nuqwu: Woman with thick pubic hair.

Nuqwulilqlém-i: A Sisaa repository.

Nuxlqwatmuxte, "Where Alqwatew Speaks": One of the names of the supreme god's house. [824] nuxtqwtw-uqi: Cottonwood buds.

Nuxtqwxi'ste, "The Place for Catching Salmon": Name assumed by Smaoan in the beginning of time.

nuxlimp: Canoe-maker.

Nuxlum: River entering the Bella Coola from the south near Nuxlalst.

nuxlxlmp: Children's dance which serves as training for kusiut rites and to provide entertainment. [535] [869]

5: Smith E-5 (1920-1923) 1929 NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Carrier NE7
Tsimshian NE15
Sekani NE14
Chilcotin NE8

Ca
I
S 137
757

Southern Carrier: New shoots boiled, and the decoction taken internally for pain in the stomach. Resembled the decoction made from the bark of the aspen (page 54), or from the new shoots and bark of the tideland spruce (page 51), but the last-mentioned considered most efficacious.

Northern Carrier: Needle tips mixed with large needle tips of the "British Columbia pine" (Pinus sp.?), the inside bark of the wild gooseberry (Ribes sp.?), bark of the red-osier dogwood (Cornus stolonifera Michx.), the inside pulp of raspberry canes (Rubus sp.), stems of the "bearberry" (?black twin-berry, Lonicera involucrata Banks?), and the inner bark of the wild rose (Rosa sp.), placed in a vessel holding four gallons of water, boiled down to a thick decoction, strained, and bottled. About two tablespoonfuls taken, at sunrise and sunset, for constitutional weakness or paralysis, or if the body were covered with sores.

Gum obtained by heating a green piece of pine (sp.?) painted on the eye to remove white scum and to cure snow-blindness.

T

Sikani: Pitch chewed and the saliva swallowed for a cough.

[912]
[262]

Gitksan: Inner bark (scraped from the trunk with a bone scraper after the outer bark had been removed) eaten both for food and as a blood purifier. Purged the body in from half an hour to an hour.

Shavings of the yellow resinous timber found after removal of the bark boiled, the decoction placed in oil, and taken internally as a purgative and diuretic for many serious ailments, including gonorrhoea. Said to produce beneficial results in "consumption."

T
[164]

Young needles plucked in June and eaten as a purgative and diuretic.

For use with a fern, see page 48.

B
Ca

Abies grandis Lindl., White Fir, Balsam Fir

137
757
[164]

Bella Coola: Bark of root or of stem boiled, and the decoction taken internally every day for tuberculosis and stomach trouble. Said to have cured many cases of tuberculosis.

Gum from bark blisters found on young trees warmed, mixed with mountain goat tallow, and taken internally for sore throat; also drawn on a hair across sore eyes.

Young, green leaves baked, mixed with fruit of skunk cabbage (Lysichiton kamtschatcense Schott.) gathered in October, or the buds gathered in April, split, dried on top of the house, roasted, mixed with a small quantity of slightly roasted roots of the cow parsnip (Heracleum lanatum Michx.), one or two cupfuls of the gummy buds of the black cottonwood (Populus trichocarpa T. and G.), and four or five cupfuls of fresh eulachon oil, allowed to stand one day, then boiled and kept in a box in a hair perfume. Kitimat Indians said to be more expert in its preparation.

B [302]
[171]

Cn
[759]

Southern Carrier: Tree used for medicine, but details not obtained.
Chilcotin: Not used.

B 137
757

Ripe cones boiled, and the decoction taken internally for a pain. Neither an emetic nor a laxative. A bed consisting of a sack of ripe cones, placed on top of hot stones, used by rheumatics. Cones also burned to fumigate rheumatics.

A piece of the bark 5 feet long by 2 feet wide used as a mat in a hot bath for rheumatism. Many stones were heated, a little sand strewn over them, the bark spread above with the inside uppermost, and the patient, naked, lay on the bark, covering himself with one or more blankets. A similar bed, but with the bark covered with a few leaves of devil's club (Fatsia horrida Sm. B. and H.), used for chronic backache.

B
[752]

Gum applied to small cuts, broken skin, and suppurating sores.

Branches used to whip a burned arm or leg until the blood came.

Gum boiled and taken internally while hot as a diuretic for gonorrhoea.

See also scrub pine (page 49).

For use with fern. See page 48.

C
T 137
757

The buds or new shoots, with the gum sometimes found around the outside when they are about half an inch long, boiled in water, and the decoction taken internally for tuberculosis.

Southern Carrier: New shoots and bark of small branches boiled for about two hours, and the decoction taken internally, one or two cupfuls at a time, for pain in the stomach, but not for vomiting, diarrhoea, or constipation. Said to effect a cure in one day, and preferred to the decoction made of scrub pine (page 49) or aspen (page 54).

Gum from new shoots and small branches, scraped out with a little stick, placed in the eyes for snow-blindness.

S
[757]

Sikani: Inside bark scraped and chewed for a cough.

Needles chewed, and the saliva applied to external sores.

Gum, obtained by splitting the tops, applied with a stick to white spots on the eye.

The "flower" boiled and the decoction taken internally for pain in the chest.

T [237]
[164]

Gitksan: Gum extracted from the wood by boiling in water, added to eulachon oil, salmon oil, bear grease, ground-hog fat, lard, etc., and taken internally before meals for consumption.

Twigs bearing both leaves and bark boiled with entire roots of soapolallie (Shepherdia canadensis Nutt.); one cupful of the strong decoction taken internally three times a day for rheumatism.

ARACEAE, ARUM FAMILY

B
T

Lysichiton kamtschatcense Schott., Skunk Cabbage, Yellow Arum

137
757

Bella Coola: Roots used with oil as a hair tonic.

Roots boiled, and the sweet decoction taken internally for stomach trouble.

B [302]

See also white fir (page 50).

Gitksan: Root well mashed with water and applied externally for blood poison and boils. Said to bring boils to a head. For use with a fern (see page 48).

5: Smith E-5 (1920-1923) 1929 NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Carrier NE7
Tsimshian NE15
Sekani NE14

T
S
B
C

137
157
B [158]

Salix Scouleriana Hook., WILLOW

Bella Coola: Folded inner bark used like that of Salix lasiandra Benth. for cuts; but charcoal from the stick not used for diarrhoea.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Gitksan: Not used.

Salix sp., WILLOW

Sikani: Young willow chewed and the saliva applied to external sores.

White powdery tops chewed for a cough.

Populus tremuloides Michx., ASPEN, TREMBLING POPLAR

Bella Coola: A quantity of bark from the roots boiled, and the decoction taken internally from seven to ten times a day for gonorrhoea with hemorrhage from the urethra. A very bitter decoction, said to be a good remedy that stopped the hemorrhage.

Southern Carrier: Bark used instead of tideland spruce bark (page 51) to make a decoction for pain in the stomach. Considered inferior to the spruce bark.

Sikani: Bark pulverized by pounding, moistened with water, and applied as a paste to wounds.

Bark scraped, scrapings steeped in hot water, and the decoction taken internally for worms. Caused a stool immediately.

Gitksan: Bark of roots chewed or mashed and put on cuts.

Bark alone boiled, and the decoction taken internally as a purgative. Not an emetic.

B
C 137
157
B [302]

Populus trichocarpa T. and G., BLACK COTTONWOOD

Bella Coola: Leaves, ten to fifteen years old, from the lower layers lying rotting on the ground, boiled, and the decoction used as a bath, the patient sitting in it up to his neck for about two hours to cure pain in the body, not rheumatism. A hot stone added from time to time, and the bath repeated the next day.

The buds with their resin boiled and the decoction used as a hair wash. See also white fir (page 50).

Half a cupful of buds, picked some time between December and March, mixed with two roots of cow parsnip (Heracleum lanatum Michx.), a half cupful of buds of mountain alder (Alnus tenuifolia Nutt.), and a little water, mashed, and applied warm, but uncooked, as a poultice for pains in the lungs or hips like rheumatism. Said to effect a cure in two days, but harmful if left on longer.

See also western dock (page 56).

Southern Carrier: Buds with their resin boiled for one or two hours, and the decoction taken internally for coughs and lung affections.

C [302]
[825]

Resin from the buds applied to the face as a cosmetic, or, with the addition of oil, to repel mosquitoes, black flies, and gadflies.

Roots and bark not used; buds not boiled to make a hair wash.

C
[152]

Northern Carrier: Green roots chewed to a pulp and applied to wounds to stop bleeding.

T [302]

Inside bark boiled and the decoction used as an eye-wash.

Gitksan: Gummy buds boiled and the resin mixed with bear grease for a hair perfume.

I
[157]

Roots, leaves, and seeds not used.

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

844 fessional midwives. The child is washed in warm water. For ten days [846] the mother must remain in this hut. Father and mother must not go [825] near the room for a year (according to Nusk'slu'sta, for ten days), else the salmon would take offence.

553 The child is soon given its first name. On this occasion the whole [852] tribe is invited to a feast, the name is made public, and the guests receive small presents. The child retains this name until it becomes a member [556] of the Kû'siût, when it is given its Kû'siût name. This ceremony takes place after puberty has been reached. About this period the young man gives his first potlatch and assumes the Qû'mtsiua name.

881 When a girl reaches puberty she must stay in the shed which serves as her bedroom, where she has a separate fireplace. She is not allowed to descend to the main part of the house, and must not sit by the fire of the family. For four days she must remain motionless in a sitting posture. She fasts during the daytime, but is allowed a little food and drink at a very early hour in the morning. After this term she may leave her room, but only through a separate opening. She must not yet [292] come to the main room. When leaving the house she wears a large hat, [821] which protects her face against the rays of the sun. It is believed that if the sun should shine on her face her eyes would suffer. She may pick berries on the hills, but must not come near the river or sea for a whole year. She must not eat fresh salmon, else she would lose [262] her senses, or her mouth would be transformed into a long beak. She [261] must not chew gum or eat snow (see Fifth Report of Committee, 1889, p. 838).

584 If a young man wishes to marry a girl he goes, surrounded by his [431] friends, to the house of the girl's father and states his intention. His friends carry food and presents, and if the father accepts the suit he sends out a young man, who receives the food and presents and carries them into the house. Sometimes the father does not accept the offer at once. In such cases the young man may repeat the same ceremony until [527] he is finally rejected or accepted. After the time of the marriage has been agreed upon between the contracting parties, and the day preceding the marriage has arrived, the young man invites all the people to a feast, during which he states that he is to be married on the following day. He asks a number of men, generally from twenty to thirty, and four [302] women to assist him. On the following forenoon they assemble, and accompany the bridegroom to the girl's house. They sing outside, and 585 four of the men dance. All of them have their faces painted red. Finally they enter, and the bridegroom gives a large amount of property to the girl's father. Then the girl leaves her parents and goes to the bridegroom, bringing him also a large amount of property which has been [431] given to her for this purpose by her parents and relatives. He in turn gives her blankets and other apparel of the best quality, and distributes presents among her relatives. This is repeated after some time. All he has given to his bride and her relatives is repaid to him with interest. A rich girl will repay twice or three times the amount given by the man. At the time of the marriage the bride's father may promise the groom to give him his Siaa'kn secrets as soon as the pair have their first child.
[851] The children may belong to the father's or mother's gens, as the parents may choose.

586 In case of a separation the wife refunds the amount of purchase-money. The children may stay with either parent, or part of them may

6:Boas E 5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892

NE6 Bellacoola NE6

go with the mother and part with the father. The decision is left to the parents and children. 586

When a person has died the corpse is washed, the face painted red, the legs are doubled up, and the arms folded over the breast. The nose-ornament of the deceased is put into his nose; his shirt is put on, the back part covering the breast and the front part turned backward. The body is placed in a box and the latter is either fastened on the lower branches of a tree or placed in a little house, which is set on posts, above the level of the ground. The face of the deceased is turned eastward. Part of his property and gifts from his friends are deposited near the grave. The masks of the deceased are buried. His crest is carved on a memorial column, which also shows how many canoes, coppers, head-dresses, and slaves he had given away at potlatches. These objects are painted or carved on the columns. Formerly slaves were killed at the burial of chiefs. The number of slaves killed was also indicated by as many human figures on the memorial column. After burial food for the use of the deceased is thrown into the fire. This is repeated frequently during a prolonged period after the death has occurred. Whenever the friends of the deceased partake of a meal a little food is thrown down at a place between the fire and the door, where the entrance to the lower world, the home of the dead, is believed to be.

764 [301] [323] [766] [567] [775]

The bed of a mourner must be protected against the ghost of the deceased. His male relatives stick a thorn-bush into the ground at each corner of their beds. After four days these are thrown into the water. Mourners must rise early and go into the woods, where they stick four thorn-bushes into the ground, at the corners of a square, in which they cleanse themselves by rubbing their bodies with cedar-branches. They also swim in ponds. After swimming they cleave four small trees and creep through the clefts, following the course of the sun. This they do on four subsequent mornings, cleaving new trees every day. Mourners cut their hair short. The hair that has been cut off is buried. If they should not observe these regulations it is believed that they would dream of the deceased. Women when mourning scratch their cheeks with shells or stones.

765 783 [795] 765 [302]

The mourning regulations for a widower or a widow are especially strict. For four days he (or she) must fast, and must not speak a word, else the dead wife or husband would lay a hand on the mouth of the offender, who would then die. They must not go near water, and are forbidden to catch or eat salmon for a whole year. For the same length of time they must not eat fresh herring or eulachon. Widow and widower cleanse themselves in the same way as other mourners. Their shadows are considered unlucky, and must not fall on any person.

[262] [828] [822]

Some time after the death of a rich or influential person his nearest relative invites the whole tribe to a potlatch. On this occasion he sings a mourning song for the deceased and gives away presents to his guests. It was explained to me that this ended the mourning, and that it was 'the same as giving away the house of the deceased.'

765 556

Religion and Shamanism.

The mythology of the Bilqula differs greatly from the mythologies of the other tribes of the North Pacific coast. It is impossible to say to

773 171

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

424 nearest answer to the question replied that his crest was the
779 Raven. The Kitkatla was a Raven man, too, and to the 825 narrator's surprise, treated him as a brother for the rest of his stay in Victoria. He shook with laughter as he recalled the experience, and added that though he was quite willing to accept favours of this kind he would never dream of returning them. It can be stated unhesitatingly that the Bella Coola have no totemic beliefs concerning their crests. There is not [582] the slightest trace of respect towards the animal, nor yet of exogamy.

211 Although crests are not objects of religious veneration, yet 424 they have some importance in the realm of social life. The 773 portrayal of one serves to indicate ownership of an ancestral myth describing that particular bird or animal. A wealthy 825 chief is proud to display his crest on a totem-pole, or as a painting on the front wall of his house. Anyone seeing such a [532] design is impressed with the glories of the family history of [556] the owner, to the latter's gratification. A living specimen of the bird or animal is treated with no respect, but its delinea- [304] tion is a memento of family history. For that reason a man is often tattooed[11] with his crest, that derived from his father's first ancestor on the right breast, that from his mother, on the left; and the owner of a canoe often carves his crest on its bow. After the death of a chief a memorial-post is erected near his grave, decorated with a painting or carving of one or more crests to remind observers not only of the deceased, but of his
000 family history, his most treasured possession. It is said, half

[171] [184] [11]It is said that tattooing was formerly customary not only among all the coastal tribes but also the Carriers. Both Bella Coola men and women decorated themselves in this way, but the custom was not universal, and is said never to have been common. It is believed that Haida chiefs tattooed themselves in connection with potlatches; in Bella Coola this was not the case although the operation was performed within the back-room of the patient's house. Two methods were employed. The first was by puncturing the skin with a needle smeared with colouring material; the second and less common, by passing a string coated with the substance beneath [386] the skin. The dye was obtained from river stones which were baked for a long time and then ground into a powder. This keeps indefinitely and can be made ready for use by mixing with water. As far as could be learnt, any skilled craftsman might perform the operation.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Raven, blinded by his grief, did not believe him, and responded angrily: 539 776*

"No, youare not my son. Why do you lie to me? Get out of this house." 761

Disgusted at this reception, O·mistlmai obeyed. Juft as he was passing through the doorway, Raven noticed the tatoo marks on his legs, and realized that, in spite of the change in his appearance, the visitor was really his son. He called on him to return, but O·mistlmai paid no attention to his father's entreaties and sped far away. Raven's grief was beyond expression, but he could do nothing to repair the damage he had done. If it had not been for Raven's mistake, all mortals would return to life four days after death. [304]

The above myth is widely known among the Bella Coola, and is supposed to be historically accurate. At the same time, few people allow it to influence their thoughts with regard to death or its causes. It is a fact, but one that belongs to the realm of ancient history rather than to everyday experience. When a Bella Coola dies, his relatives, though they know that his death is due to the folly of Raven, tacitly overlook this, and do not feel bitterly towards Raven. Bella Coola beliefs and theology are not systematized, hence it is quite possible for a person to realize a certain fact, such as the cause of death, and yet disregard it entirely. Considering that absolute contradictions can be believed simultaneously, it is not difficult to picture the mental attitude of people who believe, and at the same time disregard their belief. 771 761 776*

One of Raven's spectacular, and at the same time, beneficial exploits was the bringing of sockeye salmon to the Bella Coola River.[17] 539 825

In the beginning of time, no sockeye salmon inhabited the rivers, and Raven determined to supply them. First he tried making wooden fish and throwing them into the water, but though he could animate them, they always died after jumping a few times. The reason for his failure, though he did not know it, was because he had omitted the small bone [774]

[17]This is an example of conflicting beliefs. In addition to assuming that salmon were sent down by Alqantun to furnish food for mankind, and that Raven supplied them in the beginning of time, the Bella Coola also believe that they are brought each year both by Nuklqum and Wiwuine. [771]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

533 In the beginning of time it used to sing.

789 "I shall use a spoon and eat when the Bella Coola River has burst its bounds on account of the teeming salmon in it."

825 The people used to laugh as it repeated this song year after year,

856 until the bird changed its note:

[539] "I shall use a spoon and eat when all is cold and clear. Then there will be Death instead of salmon in Bella Coola."

The next year the streams were so clear that no fish could be caught and the starving people asked the bird to return to its first song. When it did so, the water became murky so that it was possible to catch salmon once more.

The Bella Bella, not the Bella Coola, use the body of a blue jay to cause an infant to grow up with the ability to master difficult tunes in the same way that the bird has a variety of notes. The method of applying this medicine could not be learnt.

789 Most of the above medicines are well known and can be applied by any parent. If, however, a man has employed one 856 of them successfully on a number of occasions, he is often requested to use his ability for others. In such a case, the father of the benefited child is expected to reimburse his friend.

[184] The application or non-application of such medicines is purely the concern of the child's family; they can use as many as they like, or none at all, according to their discretion.

The following medicines are used during the first year of life:

● 304 To Cause Beauty

Bandages of the softest undyed cedar-bark are prepared for 789 infants of both sexes soon after birth. A woman who is a good

856 artist is requested to draw with charcoal two pictures on one

532 of the pieces of bark—of handsome men if the child is a boy, or of lovely women if a girl. An unmarked wrapping is fastened round the infant's head, then the painted one so arranged that one picture is over the forehead, the other over the occiput, and finally other plain bandages to cover the whole. These [826] are left in place for about one year. They flatten the forehead

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

and back of the head, preventing a bulging appearance which is considered ugly, while the paintings ensure beauty of countenance. Cranial deformation has no supernatural sanction, though it is believed to have been carried out for generations. 304 789 856 [532] [826]

To Cause Leanness

Place pieces of caribou skin on an infant's wrists and ankles and leave them in position for several months. He will grow up lean and wiry, like the animal. 789 856 [825]

To Cause Left-handedness

Shake the left hand of an infant while lying in the cradle and he will be left-handed throughout life. To do this is considered a malevolent action.

To Cause the Hair to Grow (two means)

(1) Rub the infant's scalp with the eye of a Hakulk (red cod?), freshly removed from the fish's head. [825]

(2) Boil stems of the swamp gooseberry in water and rub the mixture over the infant's scalp. [824]

Wise mothers always apply one or other of these remedies to their children.

To Cause Ability in Singing (two means)

(1) When an infant is a few months old, the parents frequently request a good singer to impart to him ability similar to his own. He takes his beating-stick, spits on it, and rubs it over the child's heart, saying: 533 789 856

"Please be a singer."

This is done only for male children. [532]

(2) Boil together herbs and a bear's bladder and smear the decoction on the infant's back. He must thenceforth wear around his neck for several months a small sack containing four blue grouse gall-bladders (possibly stones from the crop were meant). This gives the child the singing ability of the bird, but the significance of the bear bladder is unknown. [825]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

To Cause Ability in Understanding the Speech of Ravens 825

It is well known that when ravens croak, they are really 856 speaking, but their language is unintelligible except to one who 789 has learnt it by means of a medicine. One of these is the following:

Catch a raven alive and cut a small piece of flesh from its body, beneath the left wing, taking care not to kill the bird. Release it, after having fed the morsel to the child. An infant so treated will grow up able to learn from ravens of the approach of raiding parties, storms, visitors, and all other news which they constantly circulate in their loud calling. It is said that the last person so endowed was the father of a Kimsquit man about forty years of age in 1922. His ability lasted throughout childhood but he lost it through infraction of a taboo.

The following medicines are used between the ages of one and two: 304

To Cause Long Life 789

One year after birth, holes are pierced through the lobes of 856 the ears and the nasal septum. In the beginning of time, 886 Älquntäm told the forefathers of the Bella Coola that if this were not done, the boy or girl would die young.

To Cause Ability in Hunting

When the umbilical cord of a female infant falls, her father 846 places it within the knot-hole of a tree, where it is protected 856 from rain but where it rots and is forgotten. A boy's is pre- 789 served with care. The parents wrap it in soft goat's wool and [858] place it in the box where the father keeps his most cherished possessions; this causes the child to be careful, and to grow up with a tendency to treasure his acquisitions rather than to dispose heedlessly of them. As the first anniversary of his [785] son's birth approaches, his father begins to observe ceremonial chastity, endeavouring to estimate the time so that its culmin-

[The Dance of Nuakxnim]

any uninitiated from their path. The kukusiut also call hoip repeatedly, a further deterrent to the inquisitive. Alder and birch trees are selected and the hewers start to work. Whenever a tree falls, one of the party calls out:

Xuw...

This meaningless ejaculation, spoken as if by X, has the virtue of causing the tree to fall gently. The logs are cut into sections and as many provided as will be needed, since it is contrary to kusiut custom for more than one trip to be made for wood. Towards dusk the cutters return, each carrying a burden by means of a tump-line across the forehead. The wood is laid softly on the floor, for it would be a gross insult to throw it down roughly. Meanwhile heralds are summoning the kukusiut with a call of:

Nusiutálup kukusiaat.

X has long since consulted his relatives on the one hand and the marshals on the other, concerning the number of masks to be used, and the beings to be portrayed. A mask of Awlikwolosis is prepared for every kusiut dance, but with this exception there is no uniformity in the representations. A man always shows his patron, as well as any beings intimately connected with him. Thus X must have a mask of Noákpnum, many of his passengers, and the supernatural beings who meet him at the mouth of the river. A present must be given to the carver of every mask, hence their actual number depends upon the expenditure X and his relatives are willing to make.

At dusk the kukusiut are summoned by the heralds. X is with the marshals behind the fire and he heeds their advice as to the best carpenter for any special mask. When all have assembled X holds up one of the blocks of wood, calls on one of the kukusiut by name and says:

"For Noákpnum," or whatever may be the figure required.

As the carpenter comes forward to take the billet the heralds call out:

"Pay attention to him," and as the carpenter takes the wood, X calls out at the top of his voice, xuw...

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEB

"I will give my necklace of dentalium to whoever will recover my foot." 534*

First Gull tried, but he could not stay under water long enough to find it; Loon, however, dived down and brought the foot back to Qaiaxt. She tied it to a stick which she carried over her shoulder, and paraded the village singing merrily:[19]

Xwalpinin	wexaitwaxtsiyin	yuwakila	diniawaxiyin
Has cut off my leg	now	Nawakila[20];	Yes, he did it.[21]

Ximilaqa	dilalxpaxidi:	qaiaxlaxixi
What is that	is carrying	Qaiaxl?[22]

Dipxtalaqa	dixpilxa:	qaiaxlaxixi
It is her leg that	is carrying	Qaiaxl.[23]

Axaxilqual	axaxilqual
She will gum it on;	she will gum it on.

Then she went into the forest at one end of the village and collected a large quantity of hemlock gum with which she fastened her foot in its proper place, reinforcing the junction with pliant sticks. Once more she paraded up and down the town, singing. This time her theme was:

"Qaiaxl's foot is now gum."

For ten days she kept it embedded in the gum, and when she removed the covering, the foot had regrown to her leg.[24] Raven was amazed, but said nothing; in fact, the two avoided one another as much as possible. However, when Raven once more invited Qaiaxl to accompany him, this time berry-picking, she refused to go, saying that she was afraid.

---

[19]This was recorded as song VII D 13b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. The same method of recording has been used as for dance songs, although the vertical lines indicate only word clusters, not grouped forms to be called out by an announcer. [533]

[20]That is: Nawakila [Raven's name as chief] has just cut off my leg.

[21]This song is divided into four parts, although they are not so clearly separated as dance songs. [533]

[22]That is: What is Qaiaxl carrying? The man from whom the song was obtained used this form of the woman's name; the narrator of the story called her Qaiaxl.

[23]That is: Qaiaxl is carrying her leg.

[24]The Bella Coola, who still use hemlock gum to fasten splints and for swollen wounds, affirm that they learnt the practice from Qaiaxl. [314] [752]

d: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

501 of the older people remember seeing in their youth another type, lakan, with a high raised prow; this may have been identical with the mdka which others describe as having an elevated bow and a low stern. An entirely different craft was the tamkwl·i, named from one of the geese, [525] probably the white-fronted goose. A strip of maple fastened along each side caught the water in moving, with a sound like that of the peculiar rustling flight of the bird. The bow was often carved in the form of a [532] bird's head and the stern in that of a tail to further the resemblance. No living Bella Coola claims to have seen one of these canoes, though some had heard of them from their grandparents. The large, open type of canoe made by the Haida was known to the Bella Coola, but not constructed by them. Sails were used on all ocean-going canoes; they were usually of matting, though skins sewn together were occasionally employed.

501 Canoes are occasionally lashed together. In several kusiut dances a 535 wide platform for dancing is required, and the need is met by lashing planks crosswise over two canoes, near the bow and stern, thus fastening them together. Planking is laid on the two supports and a platform so constructed. Careful inquiries showed that this fastening was merely a temporary arrangement; the booms were not bound in any particular manner, nor was there any fixed distance between the craft. Sometimes 501 the same expedient was used for transport when the load was too heavy [171] for two canoes separately, a device which is said to have been used more commonly by the tribes of the outer coast than the Bella Coola. Canoes lashed together are termed ás·awanäx.

Rafts, satskwl·a, consisting of rough logs fastened together with cross-pieces, were commonly used on the lakes of the interior, and occasionally for river work when canoes were unavailable and there was no time to make them. Another expedient in similar emergencies was to [177] make bark canoes, such as are still constructed by the Carriers. The Bella Coola regard the construction of these as definite copying, and do not profess to have as much skill as their teachers whose canoes, it is said, can be folded for portaging. There is a tradition that, many generations ago, a few clever Bella Coola knew how to make skin canoes.

THE PREPARATION OF CEDAR-BARK

314 Early spring is the time to susukumls, that is, to gather the inner bark of the cedar. Men occasionally assist in the task, though this is really [221] woman's work. The worker selects a small cedar, choosing one about six inches in diameter, with smooth trunk and relatively free from knots. [462] With a knife she makes a horizontal incision in the bark, two or three feet [412] from the ground, sometimes girdling the sapling. Then she inserts her

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

luta, a tool consisting of a slightly bent stick with sharpened point, into the cut, and runs it upwards to make a vertical incision as high as she can reach. Going around to the other side of the tree, the woman makes another cutting of the same kind. Finally, she inserts her fingers at the bottom and pulls gently outwards, so that the bark is drawn off in a long streamer which tapers to a point at the top. The other half section of the tree is similarly stripped; this treatment frequently kills saplings which can then be used for fire-wood. Although small trees are preferred, a woman sometimes collects her bark from a large one by means of many vertical incisions. 314 [412]

The bark is taken home without further preparation. The woman carefully peels off and throws away the rough outer bark, leaving the smooth inner covering, luqai, which alone is valuable. If the weather is fine, this is dried in the sun for two or three days; otherwise, it is placed over a fire within the house. When all moisture has been removed, it is rolled up and kept for future use. The bark can be used for making baskets with no further treatment except splitting into bands of the proper width. [285]

When pounded bark, such as is widely used for ceremonial purposes, is required, the woman prepares the necessary tools. Two small sticks, each about six inches in length and one-half inch in diameter, are used as tweezers, kipla, though the bark can, if necessary, be held in the hand. Two beating sticks are required, each about two feet in length, six inches wide, and half an inch thick; one edge of each is rounded off, though not sharpened to a cutting surface. When all is ready, the woman crouches on the floor, with the lower beater, lqanq, held stationary before her on a box or other raised rest, and lays an end of the bark over the rounded edge. Taking the other, the upper beater, spikta, in her right hand, she strikes downwards so that its edge slides down the side of the stationary stick, bruising the fragment of bark. With her left hand she pushes the piece slightly further over the edge, and again the upper beater falls. This is repeated time after time until the whole length is pulverized and softened. It is tiring work, but a woman accomplishes more in an hour than seems possible as her muscles become accustomed to the shearing motion. The bark becomes broken and frayed but its tensile strength is sufficient to prevent it from falling apart. Then the woman brushes it with shavings to remove loose fragments and the work is done. This type of pounded cedar-bark is called ikw'. 287

Ikw' is usually dyed red before being used for ceremonial purposes and is then termed mok'. In winter the dye is made from alder-bark with pieces of the wood attached, but in summer only scrapings from the inner bark are used. Water is placed in a vessel, urine added, pieces of alder 287 386 [824]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

was probably deserted not many years ago. Probably a large town since it was a good fishing place. 361

(16) Ṫsilkt, "Bald Eagle": also on the north shore of the river, a little above the last-named. Probably washed away by a flood long ago, although traces of the salmon-weir were still visible recently. [226]

(17) Nuqāxmāts, "The Place of Much qāxmāts" (the fern Asplenium cyclosorum): on the north side of the river about one mile above the preceding. This large town is believed to have been deserted long ago, though, in apparent contradiction, traces of it are said to be still visible. [137]

*(18) Snuləli, "The Place of Dog Salmon": on the south bank, above the last-named, at a place where a small stream enters the Bella Coola River; this divided the town into two sections. It was long deserted and the river has carried away that part of the village below the creek. The name is derived from an enormous dog salmon which is believed to have been seen at long intervals in a waterfall near this spot, always with a water ouzel perched on its back. [825]

(19) Oḑmikumx: on the lower end of the island near Hagenburg post office, eleven miles from the ocean. Although long deserted, traces of this village can still be seen. The meaning of the name is unknown.

*(20) Nukils, "The Place of the Whirlpool": on the south side of the river, eleven and a quarter miles from the sea. It was a village of moderate size, recently abandoned. The first occupant was said to have been Łkamkila, which means, "The First of All." [173]

*(21) Ásān·ān·i, "The Concave Town," so called because it spread around the shore of a bay scooped out by the Bella Coola: south side, slightly above the influx of the Nusālsum River, thirteen and a quarter miles from the sea. It was deserted about 1880.

*(22) Nusḑalst, "The Place of Sḑalstutl": on the north side of the river, opposite the mountain of the same name. It also was deserted about 1880. Sḑalstutl is a kind of stone suit- [316]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

361 able for axes, which occurs in the valley of a small stream on [316] the slope of the mountain.

*(23) Nulteax, "The Place Where There Are No Falls": an affluent from the north enters the main Bella Coola about thirty-one miles from the sea and the town was located on this creek about two hundred yards above its junction with the Bella Coola. The ruins of this moderately large town were still [175] standing about 1870. Mackenzie reached the Bella Coola River at this place. At the time of his arrival the population was [166] larger than usual, because the salmon-weir had withstood
[226] some heavy freshets which had destroyed several weirs on the Bella Coola, and driven the inhabitants of other villages to Nulteax.

[133] It is said that the affluent at Nulteax, the stream Xaiqts, is the only one in the whole Bella Coola valley that does not drop precipitously into a ravine leading to the main river. Its source is a spring at the end of a pocket-like valley, at the base of steep cliffs, but it does not fall down these. The town is named from this circumstance. The area around the spring is called Nusnäxıŋxkt, and it is said that some families living on the Skeena sing of it as the spot where their first ancestors came to earth, although their descendants do not know where it is located.

*(24) Stuux: on the point between the La'xılx (Atnarko) and Sla·kl (Whitewater) rivers which join to form the Bella Coola. This, the most populous of the upper river towns, was deserted not long ago. The meaning of the name is unknown.

(25) Qwliutl, "The Place of Herbage": on the north side of the Atnarko River, a few hundred yards above the forks. This small town was deserted many years ago. The name was [137] given on account of the hill behind the village being covered with a rank growth of plants and small bushes, but no trees.

[133] (26) Snuhla·tl, "The Place of Falls," so called from the strong rapids of the Atnarko at this point: on the north side [173] of the river about ten miles from the forks. This large town was long ago deserted when a large rock in the midst of the

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

obtained two wives, the name of one being Ťlisla. He returned to Bella Coola with them. 778 530

Nänalskwitl knew that presently he was fated to become immobile, a seat of petrified power. Since he was able to select where this was to be, he chose the site of Mount Nusqalst, midway in the Bella Coola valley, as a convenient place to overlook the doings of men. Before he transformed himself into this mountain, he determined that he would have people visit him; accordingly he changed his axe, Nuskmidjusta, which he carried concealed beneath his blanket, into sqalst, a stone much used for axes and adzes. Until the introduction of white man's tools his wish was gratified; people came from far and near to obtain the necessary material. 823 103 [316]

The human origin of the mountain is still remembered, since it is often spoken of by its chiefly names, Nänalskwitl and Ťlisla, relics of its existence as a man. This story is regarded as an origin myth, and as such might have been included in vol. I, chap. VI.

This mountain is regarded with awe by the Bella Coola on account of its great height, but it seems to lack most of the characteristics ascribed to other places where power has been petrified.

(10) On one of the mountains above Cascade Inlet there used to be a stone eagle with outstretched wings which came to this earth with the first people, but was petrified one day when drying its wings after fishing. About 1860 part of its beak fell away. A change in the condition of any of these places had long been regarded as an omen of misfortune, so the epidemic of smallpox that soon after ravaged the coast was not unexpected. 778 [164] [787] *

(11) Ällssmos: An unidentified spot where a snuiq of the mountain was petrified. At this place there is a small pool which is the repository (II, p. 8) of a certain kusiut dancer.

(12) uxwekam, "The Walker," the name both of a supernatural being and the spot where it is localized. This is not far from the glacier that lies near the junction of the trails from Snuhsli and Täl·io; it is the largest one in the vicinity of Bella Coola and is said to move its position. The being is in some way connected with it, hence the name. [776]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 192*

Sonx̣ʷmai: Kusiut name of a Stuax man.
Soptos: Kusiut name of a Tsmoot man.
sofoteäxwum: Scalp. [824]
soqwalätk': Gnarled projection of wood from a birch knot.
Spaixpaxynuman·a: Supernatural being who wakens his fellows in the morning.
Spänbätlinaix: One of the first women to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
späniesta: Temporary camping-place.
Spätcaldt, "The First Born": Name brought from Kitlobe to Kimsquit by a marriage in the beginning of time.
spälki: Star.
spekm, "A Washing of the Hands": Term used to describe a marriage arranged by the offending party to settle a feud. [581]
spependouts: The forcing upwards of water at high tide, through openings in the rocks at sea-level. [823] spikpikmm: Person who pounds cedar-bark.
spikta: Tools for pounding cedar-bark, specifically the upper beater.
Spipixinän·i: Region on the east side of Dean Channel, about one mile from its head, where supernatural power is localized. [778] Spi'xnunsta: Island west of Namu.
spkx: 1—Pudenda.
2—Variety of smnq with female organs. [824]
spoxälicua: Unidentified berry. [821]
S'ps', Cold Wind: A supernatural being.
Spskunsta: Meeting place of chiefs on rock ledge behind Qomqo·ts; the term is probably applied to any meeting place of chiefs.
spla: War-knife used by Raven in the beginning of time.
sputq: Olachen. [825]
spux: Eagle down.
spuxdjut, "Eagle Down-ness": Rhetorical reference to a present for which no return is expected. [431] spuxpux: Long, delicate feathers on an eagle's breast. [825]
Spuxpuxhailaix: Kusiut name of a woman sent down near Nusqalst in the beginning of time.
Spuxpuxqä'mpdimut: Sisaok name of Xuxais origin.
Spuxspuxta: Sisaok name of a Kimsquit woman.
sqäl·a: Unidentified berry. [824] sqoolt: Alder wood, dead and dried. [825] sqäpts: Spring salmon which have spawned.
sqali: Hunting ability. The term usually refers to the ability of the supernatural artisans to hunt, i.e., to kill, human beings.
sqalst or sqalstut: Stone, suitable for axes, found on Mount Nusqalst. The name of the mountain is said to be derived from this. [316] [103]
sqama: 1—Chest.
2—Smoke cure for diseases of the chest.
Sqaml: Land of Ashes. [584] sqasusts: First proposal of marriage if made by relatives of the man.
sqals: River sand mixed with small pebbles. [823] Sqatsdx: Mountain on north side of the lower Bella Coola River.
sqaxm: Flood.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

287 thrown in, and hot stones lifted in to heat the mixture. Even at the 386 present time dye is never made on a stove, as it is thought that the gradual heating by means of stones is essential. As it becomes warm, the woman thoroughly stirs the ingredients with her hands, then, when it boils, some of the bark is lifted out and more added. This process is continued until the brew is deep red in colour. It is allowed to stand for a few minutes before the pounded cedar-bark is placed in it. The operator gently works it around until it is saturated, then lifts it out and hangs it up to dry. Several pieces of bark can be dyed in one solution, though it is necessary to add more alder-bark and more stones to maintain the proper strength and heat.

[285 Although red cedar-bark is the kind most commonly used, the Bella
177] Coola sometimes use the yellow cedar for mats and blankets, an art learnt from the Bella Bella.

THE MANUFACTURE OF PAINT

386 Paint, such as was used both for decorating the body and for por-[302 traying designs on wood, was obtained from a kind of rock found near 532 the head of a creek entering the Bella Coola from the south near Sunxl.
317] Fragments of the red stone were broken off, thrown into a vessel containing water, and brought to a boil by the insertion of hot stones. Under the action of heat the rock became soft so that the manufacturer was able to pulverize it and run off the semi-liquid mixture into a small box. He would then chew cedar-bark and salmon roe, and spit into the paint, thoroughly mixing his saliva with it. When dry, the mixture was ready for use, and could be kept indefinitely.

[532 Anyone could paint who had the artistic skill, and it was chiefly artists
177] who used to make this kind of paint. Since the introduction of the white man's brilliant colours, there has been no demand for the duller native shade, and the making of paint has been discontinued.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

quantities of ducks and geese, and the inhabitants of the inland villages sometimes made hunting expeditions to the nesting places of wild-fowl in the lakes of the interior uplands. Although numbers of birds were sometimes killed in this way, they were never a steady article of diet. The same is true of grouse. Always plentiful, these birds were commonly killed, but never in large numbers.

The basis of the food supply was fish. The river teemed with salmon, which enabled the country to support its relatively large population. Spring, sockeye, hump-back, dog, and cohoe salmon, all entered the river in thousands during the spring and summer, while the steel-head could be caught throughout the year. They were taken in weirs and their flesh smoked for winter use. Throughout the year, salmon was the principal article of diet. Second in importance was the olachen, a fish somewhat resembling a herring, which entered the river in great numbers during April or May. They were taken in purse-like nets,[6] allowed to rot for ten days or two weeks, and then boiled. The grease was skimmed off and kept indefinitely to be used as a relish for other foods. It was always a sign of poverty if a person were obliged to eat berries without olachen grease. Trout and bull-heads were found in the river, but were not sufficiently plentiful to be of importance.

Although no form of agriculture was practised, the Bella Coola used vegetable food to a considerable extent. Berries were abundant; some were eaten raw, but many more were pounded into a pulpy mass and dried in the sun. Cakes prepared in this way kept indefinitely and formed one of the regular winter foods. The bark of the hemlock and cottonwood was eaten, as well as the roots of many plants. In recent years many of these have not been used, so that an investigator is apt to overlook their great importance in early times. Although useless for food, the cedar was the corner-stone of Bella Coola material culture. From its trunk were split out, with wedges, the wide planks which formed

[6] See Appendix A for a description of olachen fishing.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

824 their houses. Dishes, benches, cooking-boxes, cradles, totem-[322] poles, canoes, all were carved from this wood. The bark was 285 woven into baskets, and when dyed formed the most common [531] ceremonial decoration.

Even within the forty miles of the river valley formerly 132 occupied by the Bella Coola there are considerable variations in climate. At the mouth of the river the typical Pacific coast type is found, without great extremes of temperature and with much rain, especially in winter time. During winter, the moisture is precipitated as snow a few hundred feet above the valley, and the limit of the snow can be watched on the mountain slopes, rising or falling a few feet from day to day. Farther up the valley, the winters are colder and in many cases snow lies for weeks on the ground, and in the upper part of the Bella Coola area the winters are severe, although much more moderate than on the upper regions immediately to the east.

173 What has been the history of the inhabitants of this land?
[776] They believe that long, long ago, Älquntäm, the supreme god, caused their first ancestors to be created in his house, Nusmät·a, in the land above, and sent them down to populate the Bella Coola valley. These first people came in groups of two or three, brothers and sisters, or occasionally man and wife, each group descending, in many cases in animal form, to a certain mountain and then making their home at its foot. They brought with them animals and fish, tools and houses, also the knowledge of ceremonial dances. In fact, they differed from the Bella Coola of the recent past only in having greater supernatural power. These first people increased with extraordinary rapidity, until each group grew into a village, bound together by a knowledge of their first ancestor. In
173 course of time the occupants of certain villages combined, as 361 some increased more rapidly than others, but on the whole each settlement maintained its character of being the descendants of one group of the first settlers of this world.

[175] This mythological belief is a fair picture of Bella Coola life as it was when the first white man visited the valley. Mac-

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

322
532
776

PLATE 10

Photograph by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

Mask of Qomoqua showing his huge hat. Notice the adze marks on the planks in the background.

[+ 186 (B)]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

"Someone is calling your name." 827
If a man stumbles without due cause, it is said: 481
"Someone has food ready for you."

When a man partly closes his hand, if a wrinkle-like fold 787 runs straight across the palm it indicates that he is a good 322 carpenter.

If a mouse nibbles even a single smoked salmon, the whole 825 boxful is thrown away immediately in case dung has been dropped within. It is believed that inadvertent chewing of [826] this is responsible for wearing down the teeth.

If a man throws a stone at a pregnant snake, the young ones may rush forth and enter the thrower's stomach. They remain [761] invisible, and no one knows how they enter, but death always results. Snakes are regarded with scorn and aversion, and the [752] only men who dare to handle them are shamans.

When a milk tooth is lost, anyone who happens to be pre- 856 sent should pick it up, pass it four times around the child's 827 head, sunwise, and throw it away. No explanation of this custom is known.[19]

[19]This is not the only custom practised at the loss of a tooth, cf. vol. I, p. 500.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

115 Schooner lacked the mental acumen of Joshua and Jim, but 177 he revealed himself as a tribal patriarch, proud of his family's [153] history and eager to assist his grandchildren and great-grandchildren, but feeling himself lost and helpless in the struggle before them. With sadness, but without bitterness, he used to speak of the approaching end of Bella Coola culture, and his words brought home the tragedy which the spread of civilization brings to so many, and the responsibility resting upon the white people as a whole.

153 Until an intelligence test is devised to correlate the mental 115 ability of the white man with that of the native, it is impossible to compare the two scientifically. None the less, the writer deliberately expresses the opinion that Joshua Moody and Jim Pollard are two of the most brilliant men he has met in any walk of life. They are undoubtedly the most able of the Bella Coola; others have only slightly less ability, while the mass of the population compares favourably with an 178 average white community. Their ability, however, is definitely conditioned by their conservatism. Absolute trust in the traditions of their ancestors has checked speculation, as the established explanation is never questioned; new inventions, unauthorized by custom, have been regarded as almost sacri-
[626] legious; the force of public opinion, while valuable as a deterrent to anti-social practices, has effectively restrained innovations. The Bella Coola are a good example of a community where development has been atrophied by extreme conservatism fostered by religious beliefs.

105 Taking into account the material obstacles, the achievements of these people have not been insignificant. In former [322] times, provided only with tools of stone and untempered copper, they built graceful canoes, made watertight boxes, hewed planks from mighty cedars, and erected large houses which called for considerable engineering skill. Judged by [532] white standards, their carving and painting lacked artistic deli-[535] cacy, but it required no mean ability to portray crest designs to meet their own standards. Passing from the purely mechanical

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

177 their earning ability and a man can satisfy his wants by working 182 for a few months each summer. The decline of ceremonials has left a blank in their lives, too easily filled, alas, with drinking, idleness, and vice. It is inevitable that the old rites and old ambitions should pass, but the prohibition of these before new ones had taken their place, has been disastrous. The Bella Coola have lost their pride, a calamity as fatal to a people as to an individual.

They have shown undoubted ability in developing such of their own talents as fit the needs and requirements of the white man. Expert carpenters for generations, they have readily [322] learnt the use of new tools and now build houses and boats of considerable constructional skill. They have proved them- [464] selves valuable employees of the canneries which rely to a large extent upon Indian labour. Under instruction from a [533] white teacher, a number of the younger men have formed a band which gives creditable performances with wind and percussion instruments. One can only deplore the fact that the skill of the Bella Coola in carving, painting, acting, singing, composing, and story-telling could not have been guided into channels where it would have developed and added lustre to the new world in which they find themselves.

The white man's civilization presses forward as an overwhelming flood, blotting out the cultures of lesser peoples in all parts of the world. This is inevitable, probably it is well that it should be so, but it offers little consolation to a tribe like the Bella Coola. Their life has been destroyed; and, wonderingly, half-proudly, half-plaintively, the survivors watch the downfall of all that their ancestors cherished. Too often the white man fails to understand this; too often he fails to realize that progress, as he sees it, is wiping out valuable elements of civilizations other than his own instead of seeking the good in them and preserving it for the benefit of himself and the native alike. The Bella Coola culture is dying, and with it will pass forever something created by a Canadian people, not great perhaps, but ineffably stamped with their personality.

556 to a complicated figure such as a whale, and in that case an 769 expert dancer among the guests is called upon to perform. It [575] is announced that this is, "to make clean the road for the [535] dead."

After each masked figure has disappeared, the sound of whistling from without grows gradually weaker, as the apparition returns whence it came. In solemn silence X takes a copper* which he has had in readiness, breaks it across his knee,* and throws it either into the fire or down on the ground in the track that the figure has taken. Then the announcer calls out loudly:

"It is for his crest.* It has 'made bone for the dead.'" Then he continues, speaking for X and using the first person:

"My heart is glad at seeing my father.* At death he returned back on the path of my family's ancestors and donned our ancient crest. He now lives in Nuxwáit-a, whence he came to visit us and whither he has now gone back."

[171] The significance of the throwing down of a copper is entirely unknown to the modern Bella Coola, although they still perform the ritual. In some vague way it is felt that "bone," which may imply stability, has been provided for the deceased. The act thus appears in the light of an offering to the dead, but this sentiment is not clearly appreciated by the participants in the rite; the present has been made for, rather than to, the one being mourned.

The copper, now valueless, is picked up by any chief and given to a poor man.

After a short interval a number of youths begin to distribute presents, provided by X, which have been placed in readi-[562] ness. Gifts of equal value are given to all foreign male guests;
[431] while the women receive ones less valuable. These presents

[325] *One of the glamour of native copper, such as were formerly known not sold [434] and used as tokens of value by the coast tribes of British Columbia. Their employment by the Bella Coola will be described later in greater detail (I, p. 218).

*The breaking is sometimes omitted.

*That is: "For the dead man, now in form of his crest."

*Or whatever relative the deceased may have been.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

of metal obtained from the white man, if not actually machine-made for trading purposes. They resemble the familiar shape found in all parts of the British Columbia coast and vary in length from about six inches to as much as three feet. There is considerable difference in thickness; some of the newer ones are thin plates, others are heavy and appear to be old. The early white traders realized the value placed by the Indians on their coppers and these were soon imitated and became important articles of barter. The Bella Coola state that many of the early Hudson's Bay Company's coppers were made of drawn wire, but this type seems to have passed out of existence, since all the specimens seen in Bella Coola consisted of flat metal plaques. 556* 177 439

The Bella Coola maintain that their ancestors have, ever since the beginning of time, used two kinds of coppers. One variety, known as fália, resembled the plaques produced by white men. This is the term in common usage for all kinds of coppers at the present time. The other variety, taitaimy, is said to have been thicker and heavier and was made by heating the metal in a fire, beating it into the required shape. Long, long ago, coppers of this kind were sometimes found in the forest by hunters who were thus rewarded for observance of ceremonial chastity, but most were obtained in trade from the northern tribes. One of these is said to be preserved at Kimsquit, but none is said to have been owned by a Bella Coola within the last few years. 556* [325] [439]

The Bella Coola believe that taitaimy can only be manufactured in one district, far to the north, at the mouth of an unknown river. There, it is said, the chiefs range themselves along the river bank, each armed with a spear, and each with a number of slaves behind him. When the tide is highest, salmon of some peculiar kind appear at the surface of the water. If one comes within reach of a spearman, he lunges at it, but invariably misses; then the chief drops his spear, seizes one of his slaves and kills him by cutting his throat. A small piece of 552* 773

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE5

556 773 flesh cut from the body is fastened to the point of the spear, making it so potent that when next the chief lunges at a salmon he transfixes it and brings it ashore. He warms the fish at a fire and then pounds it on a stone until it becomes a copper.

No Bella Coola has visited this distant river for many generations and the belief concerning the manufacture of taitaimy appears to have been handed down from dim antiquity. Coppers of this kind are said to have been considered much more valuable than the usual łália, but were always uncommon. In addition to their ordinary uses, they had a certain curative value. If the owner of one was ill, he used to clean it [755] with a rough stone and water; then he would drink four cupfuls of the liquid which contained minute fragments of metal. In almost every case a speedy recovery followed. In all other respects łália or taitaimy could be used indiscriminately.

Łália are likewise said to have a supernatural origin. When found in the forest, they are due to the supernatural salmon-[996] like being, nsiatl, having changed itself into one. None has been found in recent years because the nsiatl have moved away owing to their dislike of the smell of human footsteps and the taint of smoke.

These stories serve to emphasize the complete ignorance of [325] the Bella Coola concerning the methods of manufacturing coppers. It is possible that long ago they were able to make their own by pounding the native metal, but if so it is surprising that some traditions to this effect were not preserved. On the other hand, there is little reason to doubt their use of [177] coppers, obtained from the northern tribes, antedating the coming of the whites. All informants agreed on this point, and the frequent references to coppers in mythology likewise point to considerable age. In many of the ancestral myths there are accounts of the obtaining of coppers by some of the [551] first people, and many ancestral names, both of men and women, are derived from them.

[237] The Bella Coola attribute the value of coppers to the fact

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

of their occurrence in most ancestral myths.[4] There seems to be no mythological explanation for the casting of a copper into the fire after the passing of the representation of a deceased relative, but the desire of chiefs to use them at potlatches is the result of their use under similar circumstances by their ancestors. Some ancestral myths lack reference to coppers, but their use is common to all, whether or not embodied in such. It is said to be easier for a chief to acquire coppers if they had been used by his ancestors, but this is not essential. 556* 773 [769]

When arranging for the appearance of a dead relative, the donor of a potlatch is careful either to possess a copper, or to be able to borrow one at the right moment. As soon as the masked figure has disappeared, the donor stands up, breaks or bends his copper, and throws it into the fire "to make bone for the deceased." No matter how valuable a copper may have been, it is now worthless; its value has been expended on the purpose for which it has just been employed. It lies unheeded in the flames, a valueless article belonging to no one. 556* 769

At some convenient time, either hours or days later, any chief may remove the copper and give it to a poor man, only taking care to choose an individual who has not recently received one. It is said that the gift is "to patch his canoe." It is now the poor man's property, but it has no value, since no goods have been expended for it. The new owner straightens and repairs it, if necessary by riveting on the broken piece, thus making it ready for further use. The poor man may keep the copper for years, or it may be only a few weeks before some chief, preparing for a potlatch, offers, perhaps, $20, for it. In the old days, values were computed in slaves, canoes, salmon, and other commodities, but now in dollars. If two chiefs should happen to want it, the poor man may haggle about the price, though in such a case the two rivals would probably agree amicably rather than lower their dignity by seeming to be interested in a matter of money. It is to the advantage of a 556* [735] [325] 435 556* 437

[4]Abalone-shells and moosehides are treasured for the same reason; the former are mentioned in several origin myths, the latter in two at least. [237]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

of his village, hence they will not feel it incumbent upon them to intervene. But news travels, and in course of time the sisaok members of some other tribe will decide to send a raiding party against X's village. All informants agreed most emphatically that this custom prevailed among the coast people from the Tsimshian country to Alert Bay, but specific examples could not be obtained. The Bella Coola regard such a raid as the proper course to pursue, and belligerent tribes may have used an irregularity in the potlatch rites as an excuse for an assault. It is clear, however, that this custom never attained such prominence that it could be called a law. 556* 688 628

The following is an instance of the Bella Coola outlook on the question: 556* 688

The father of an informant had had such success in giving potlatches that his neighbours were jealous. On one occasion he prepared a representation of a whale, an elaborate wooden frame, fifteen feet long, operated by men concealed within and carrying passengers; this was a figure which entered into his ancestral myth. One of the carpenters who made it, bribed by a jealous rival of the donor of the potlatch, arranged that the lower jaw of the whale should fall to the floor during the proceedings. This revealed the mechanism of the structure. White influence on the coast prevented an incursion of foreign raiders, but according to this informant, the chiefs determined that his father should die, and they employed a sorcerer for this purpose. His father and eleven other relatives died soon afterwards. This man, the sole survivor, ascribes his escape to his adoption of Christianity. [578] [532] [578] [177] [754]

Another instance of the penalty which follows errors in potlatch ritual occurred a few years ago, when a number of young men used the cone-shaped whistles openly, as if they had been toys. The presence of the white man prevented any open steps towards punishment, but before long all the youths died. No one knows what caused their deaths, though probably they were due to an expert in black magic acting on the instructions of a senior sisaok. [534] [177] [754]

After the prayer, X and his family give more food to their guests, whose boxes containing what they are to carry away are increasing in number. By his lavishness, X increases his prestige in the eyes of his fellow-villagers. 556*

If he can afford to build a new house embodying the form [335]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

335 of one in his ancestral myth, he will do so; if not, it will suffice
* 556 to decorate the old house; but in either case the tasks connected with the construction must be allotted. X gives to one man the work of making new beams; to another, the two front upright posts; to a third, the two rear upright posts; to another, the planks along one side of the house; to a skilled carpenter, the totem-pole bearing whatever design X has decided upon; to a painter, one of the designs for the back wall of the house; to another painter, another design near it; to still another, part of the painting of the front of the house; to another, more of the same; and so on until he has allotted work for every part of the edifice. In some cases there are 342 peculiarities of house construction dependent upon their occur-
424 rence in the builder's ancestral myth, which are jealously
* 556 guarded prerogatives. One man, for instance, enjoys the right [773] to build five peaks above the front of his house. These represent the five peaks of Mount Nusqalst where his first ancestor came to earth (see Plate 13). Another has a series of spool- or disk-like indentations in his upright posts (see Plate 14) to support the beams, a prerogative established by his ancestor Qeil in the beginning of time. Another chief's posts are carved to represent a mythical creature. Still another prerogative is that of building a sloping board, resembling a gang-plank, from the door of the house to the ground, with a representation of a mythological sea monster at the bottom. In that case the theme of the grandiloquent potlatch song is how chiefs are attracted to X's house, as canoes are irresistibly drawn to the sea monster.

Each of the above-mentioned prerogatives belongs to one family alone; whereas several have the right to build semi-subterranean houses. The artisans excavate a rectangular hole, about six feet deep, equal in size to the central part of the dwelling. A platform is then erected round the sides of this, about three feet from the bottom. The walls of the house itself are raised sufficiently far back from the central pit to allow an unencumbered passageway, off which the bedrooms are built. The central fire is laid in the bottom of the pit, a few feet above that is the platform where the guests are seated, and the ground-level is a few feet above that again. A few instances are remembered of houses having been built with two, and even three, of these tiers, or platforms. In those cases it appears certain that this type of construction was embodied in a myth derived from Bella Bella or Rivers Inlet people, where, according to the Bella Coola, large houses, of five or six tiers, were not unknown. 342 424 556* [177]

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

X uses his own discretion in choosing his workmen,[1] avoiding only his own relatives and those of his wife. The question of pay is never broached, but it is understood that X will recompense those who have worked for him. The scale on which he does so will depend entirely on his generosity. This is one of the ways in which a chief helps the poor people of his village. More food is distributed to "sharpen the wedges." 335 556* 465

While a man is engaged on his allotted task any food or other articles which he or his family may obtain belongs to X. If a man who hews the planks takes his wife with him and she chances to pick berries while he is at work, these must be given to X who will distribute them with his other food at the potlatch, and it will be announced from whom he has received them. If a man's friends should help him to complete his task and then all go hunting, any skins acquired will belong to X; but when he repays his indebtedness he is expected to reward the worker, not only for his carpentry, but also for the berries or pelts. As X must give lavishly to prove his chief-like generosity, the collection of foods or skins by his workmen is profitable for them.

The guests have been passing in and out of X's house all day and towards dusk all again assemble within. Suddenly the door is burst open by a number of young men carrying a large log, like a battering-ram. The majority of the bearers are sisaok, though they may obtain assistance from those who are not members of the society. The people within the house spring up to eject the ram, and a sham battle ensues. Back- 556* [575]

1 [ie. to build a new house for a potlatch. -ANALYST]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

THE PROFESSION OF CARPENTER

As with singers, there are many carpenters who ply their trade without the advantage of an ancestral prerogative. They, also, may be expert and receive credit for their skill, but they can never achieve quite the distinction that comes to a man who has been made a carpenter by the distribution of presents. The latter may be so clumsy with tools that no one would ever trust him to make a canoe, or even a mask; but he is, socially, a carpenter, whereas a skilled artisan lacking a prerogative is admired for his ability but has no foundation of social esteem. In transmitting a professional carpenter's name, however, an effort is always made to give it to a youth with a bent in that direction.

The most esteemed carpenters are those who can make canoes, a trade which requires no special prerogative. In the beginning of time, Yulätimut was the canoe-maker par excellence; he assisted many of the first people, and no one can have a professional prerogative as carpenter unless this supernatural being appears in his ancestral myth. The Bella Coola ascribe the skill of the Bella Bella in carpentry to the fact that Yulätimut married a Bella Bella woman in the early period of the world and that many of that tribe are his descendants. In the old days, before the coming of the white men, carpenters were always respected as esteemed members of the community. Chiefs always cared for them, and they received abundant food at every ceremonial. None the less, they were not wealthy, and only in recent years, since the Bella Coola have realized the value put upon good craftsmanship by the white men, has it become customary to give valuable presents to carpenters. Ceremonially, they have considerable influence, since the carpenter who makes a mask usually decides who shall wear it and takes charge of the fitting and adjustment. He is also held responsible for any accident such as its falling when in use or for mechanical defects.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

174 reliable traditions of Carrier settlements there. The probable explanation is that the Bella Coola formerly extended over the area, either in actual fact or according to mythology, but were supplanted by the Carriers.

175 The Dean River is called Nuhəl, and the generic name for the people of the Dean valley is Sutslimx. About eighty years [101] ago a smallpox epidemic so reduced the villages on the Kims- [164] quit that the survivors abandoned them and moved to the [731] Dean. At that time a certain Kimsquit man is believed to have said: "We will take their places and kill even their dogs."

Since that time, the joint settlement has suffered one [164] epidemic after another, until a mere handful of the people [731] survive, and they are almost entirely descended from the Kimsquit River immigrants. Within the last few years, these have requested permission from the Bella Coola to abandon Kimsquit entirely and live among them. The two groups have [628] always been on the best of terms, but the Bella Coola have not forgotten the fate of the Dean River people and have been unwilling to admit the Kimsquit survivors.

Villages on the Kimsquit River, Sä·tsk'

361 *(44) Sä·tsk': this large and important town, at the mouth of the river, was deserted at the time of the smallpox epidemic.

*(45) Nuxwlst: this settlement can be grouped with the last-mentioned, although situated on the shore of Dean Channel, at the site of the present Manitou Cannery, six miles away. No meaning of the name is known.

Tribal Organization

619 The subject of this monograph is the people of the above forty-five villages. They will be referred to as a tribe, and as this term is customarily limited to a political unit, a brief justification for its use is necessary.

342 Each Bella Coola village consisted of a single row of houses, 361 built along the shore of a river or the ocean. The front doors

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

opened out on to a wooden platform, which served as sidewalk and extended from one end of the settlement to the other. The outer side of this structure was always supported on piles; in fact, in many cases, the houses as well as the whole sidewalk were thus raised from the ground. This type of construction was necessitated by the sloping sites of the villages, but had the added advantage of being a protection against attack. The villages differed in size from insignificant settlements of three to four houses, to ones with twenty or thirty, each containing several families. The ease with which the red cedar could be split and worked into large planks made possible the construction of these large, rectangular houses which, with their horizontally laid walls and sloping roofs, presented a picture of stability and relative comfort superior to that of most Indian habitations. 342 361

Each village was practically an independent political unit. Neighbouring settlements had many common interests which threw them into contact with one another, but there was no organized cohesion between the towns of the Bella Coola valley, or between those of Täl·io and Kimsquit. There was still less to draw these three groups together. There was no supreme chief and no governmental meeting of the tribe as a whole. Not only were the three divisions not bound to support one another in war, they were often at loggerheads among themselves. Indeed, bloodshed between towns of the Bella Coola valley itself was not uncommon. Moreover, each group tended to merge with its neighbours. The Täl·io people frequently married with the Rivers Inlet and the Bella Bella; the Kimsquit with the ʇstämx[16] of Dean Channel and the Kitlobe of Gardner Canal; and the Bella Coola of the upper valley with the Carriers. 631 628 563 648

In spite of these inconsistencies, the application of the word tribe is justifiable for the following reasons: 619

A. Linguistic. All spoke the same language. There were dialectical differences among the people of Bella Coola, Täl·io, and Kimsquit, but each group could understand the [197]

[16] To avoid unnecessary symbols, capital ʇ has not been used.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

621 623 ters, and the village constitutes a unit for all dances; in fact [535] this ceremonial unity is its most important function.

[796] With the exception of a few villages built on the seashore, each Bella Coola settlement consists of a row of houses on the 361 river bank. These are of the usual rectangular, plank-built [184] type typical of the North-West Coast. In front of them stretches a sidewalk, usually supported by piles on the side 342 nearest the river to make it level. The houses, too, in many [171] cases have piles beneath their front ends, made necessary by the steep slope of the bank. In large villages there may be two rows of houses, behind and above one another. Usually there [487] is a rough path parallel to the row of houses at the very edge of the river. The number of houses varies; before the smallpox [164] epidemic some villages contained as many as thirty or forty, others, only two or three. There is no definite arrangement of the houses; anyone may build where there is a vacant space. [433] Much the same arrangement occurs in the sea-coast villages, each of which depends for its main sustenance on an ocean fish-trap, as the river villages depend on a salmon-weir.

342 The central part of each house is occupied by a large fire, [354] often sunk a considerable distance below the level of the floor, and around this is an open space free to all. Toward the side-walls are raised the partitions, forming bedrooms for the different families, or for different members of one. In many cases the flooring is removed in three or four parts of the house for small fires on which different groups cook, the central fire being used for heating and for more important meals. The [592] number of families occupying a house depends on its size; an [622] important chief, with many relatives, often builds an enormous house which is occupied by ten or more families; smaller houses contain only two or three. Life in the larger houses is free and open; people are constantly passing in and out, and any- [261] one present when food is being distributed is given a share as a matter of course. Most of the houses are decorated with [353] carved upright posts and paintings on the beams and back-wall. [535] A door through the latter leads to the back-room, so important in dances.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

342

in dances. In front of most houses rises a short totem-pole,[9] either pierced for the doorway, or standing on the opposite side of the sidewalk. [211] [778]

The Family

It is probably no exaggeration to say that in every part of the world the most important social unit is the family. It certainly is among the Bella Coola, yet its lack of definite social obligations makes it difficult to define. Reduced to minimum size, the family consists of a man, his wife, or wives, and his children. Such a unit occupies one of the bedrooms of a large house, and it is to such a family that an infant automatically belongs at birth. Disregarding for the moment ceremonial obligations, which are shared by others, it is the father and mother who are responsible largely for the upbringing of the child. Such education as he receives comes from them, with the assistance of members of the ancestral family. This is chiefly imitative; a boy, as he increases in strength, follows his father on hunting expeditions or fishing. The mother teaches her daughters how to make baskets, and they follow her when she gathers berries, or when she cooks and performs household duties. The Bella Coola are fond of children, in many cases to the extent of over-indulging them, and they grow up amid the open life of the large houses, absorbing information of all kinds without being aware of so doing.

594 [851] 594 868 855 861

Only two kinds of functional training need be mentioned. A wise father carefully trains his sons to remember their debts (I, p. 369), and the method of teaching ancient myths has already been described; otherwise there is little direct instruction. On the other hand, parents devote great care to furnishing their children with every possible means of strengthening their supernatural elements on which success depends. These can

594 869

[9]Since the Bella Coola believe that totem-poles were used by their ancestors in early times, they are included in this description of a village, without reference to their development in post-European times. This account is compiled from descriptions given by elderly informants; it is inevitable, therefore, that changes due to European contact may be included. [177]

133
342
361

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

PLATE 9

[P 186 (A)]

Photograph by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

The site of Q̓omqo-ts, with the remains of the old village

Photo by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

Five-peaked house representing Mount Nusdalst

[4 186 (E)]

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

342
424

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

342
424

PLATE 14

Photograph by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

Framework of an old house, displaying the owner's prerogative of spool-like indentations in the front posts

[f 186 (F)]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

335 of one in his ancestral myth, he will do so; if not, it will suffice
* 556 to decorate the old house; but in either case the tasks connected with the construction must be allotted. X gives to one man the work of making new beams; to another, the two front upright posts; to a third, the two rear upright posts; to another, the planks along one side of the house; to a skilled carpenter, the totem-pole bearing whatever design X has decided upon; to a painter, one of the designs for the back wall of the house; to another painter, another design near it; to still another, part of the painting of the front of the house; to another, more of the same; and so on until he has allotted work for every part of the edifice. In some cases there are 342 peculiarities of house construction dependent upon their occur-
424 rence in the builder's ancestral myth, which are jealously
* 556 guarded prerogatives. One man, for instance, enjoys the right [773] to build five peaks above the front of his house. These represent the five peaks of Mount Nasqalst where his first ancestor came to earth (see Plate 13). Another has a series of spool- or disk-like indentations in his upright posts (see Plate 14) to support the beams, a prerogative established by his ancestor Qril in the beginning of time. Another chief's posts are carved to represent a mythical creature. Still another prerogative is that of building a sloping board, resembling a gang-plank, from the door of the house to the ground, with a representation of a mythological sea monster at the bottom. In that case the theme of the grandiloquent potlatch song is how chiefs are attracted to X's house, as canoes are irresistibly drawn to the sea monster.

Each of the above-mentioned prerogatives belongs to one family alone; whereas several have the right to build semi-subterranean houses. The artisans excavate a rectangular hole, about six feet deep, equal in size to the central part of the dwelling. A platform is then erected round the sides of this, about three feet from the bottom. The walls of the house itself are raised sufficiently far back from the central pit to allow an unencumbered passageway, off which the bedrooms are built. The central fire is laid in the bottom of the pit, a few feet above that is the platform where the guests are seated, and the ground-level is a few feet above that again. A few instances are remembered of houses having been built with two, and even three, of these tiers, or platforms. In those cases it appears certain that this type of construction was embodied in a myth derived from Bella Bella or Rivers Inlet people, where, according to the Bella Coola, large houses, of five or six tiers, were not unknown. 342 424 556* [177]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

X uses his own discretion in choosing his workmen, avoiding only his own relatives and those of his wife. The question of pay is never broached, but it is understood that X will recompense those who have worked for him. The scale on which he does so will depend entirely on his generosity. This is one of the ways in which a chief helps the poor people of his village. More food is distributed to "sharpen the workers." 335 556* 465

While a man is engaged on his allotted task any food or other articles which he or his family may obtain belongs to X. If a man who hews the planks takes his wife with him and she chances to pick berries while he is at work, these must be given to X who will distribute them with his other food at the potlatch, and it will be announced from whom he has received them. If a man's friends should help him to complete his task and then all go hunting, any skins acquired will belong to X; but when he repays his indebtedness he is expected to reward the worker, not only for his carpentry, but also for the berries or pelts. As X must give lavishly to prove his chief-like generosity, the collection of foods or skins by his workmen is profitable for them.

The guests have been passing in and out of X's house all day and towards dusk all again assemble within. Suddenly the door is burst open by a number of young men carrying a large log, like a battering-ram. The majority of the beavers are naked, though they may obtain assistance from those who are not members of the society. The people within the house spring up to eject the ram, and a sham battle ensues. Back- 552* [575]

[i.e. to build a new house for a potlatch. —Analyst]

292
342
532
535
575

PLATE 14

Photograph by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

Eagle dance being blown over a sacred dancer

[going P219]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 532 skill shown by those who assisted, as well as the generosity of 465 X, regulates the disbursements.

The following presents of money were given at a potlatch held about 1890, and were considered reasonable.

For painting two designs* on the front outside wall of the house	$ 40.00
For the erection of four upright posts, supporting the walls and roof of the house	30.00
For each longitudinal beam with painting	20.00
For each cross-beam, without painting	10.00
For the planking of the side walls*	100.00
For painting the rear wall of house, which is also the outside wall of the back-room*	40.00

[485] An average totem-pole would cost perhaps $150, but the prices varied greatly with size, complexity of design, and skill displayed.

426 The next distribution is of goods to repay debts which X
*556 has incurred at previous potlatches, that is, to return "investment presents" then received (I, p. 232). This is known as lisdjat, "repay," and the word is applied to all kinds of repayments, including revenge. One of a chief's difficulties is to remember his indebtedness. He may have been a guest at twenty potlatches, and at each has received presents varying in value, not only from different donors, but from other people [867] associated with them. To keep these accurately in mind is hard but essential, and parents carefully train their children to do so.

As previously mentioned, the Bella Coola have no fixed scale of interest on debts. Careful inquiries made on that point disclosed the idea to be entirely foreign. The greater the interest, the greater does the donor show himself to be. If, for example, X received an investment present of one hundred blankets from a Bella Bella chief ten years previously, [532] *When two are painted, that on the left of the central door on entering purveys X's father's crest, that on the right his mother's.

[342] *Four men would work together on this task.
*Two men would work together at this, the choice of designs corresponding to those of the outside front.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

556 performance of rites of this kind. But sociological and ethical [182] concepts, shown at their highest development in the potlatch, are not limited to a few weeks of the year, or to any class of the community. Generosity on a large scale can be publicly [577] displayed by chiefs alone, but to a lesser degree this virtue must be practised by everyone, since avarice is considered a 576 major sin. Anyone who happens to pass a house in which a 574 meal is taking place must be invited to share it; to do otherwise would be considered rude. The person summoned must take at least a trifle to show that he is not churlish and too proud to eat with his host, while if he is hungry, he shares [177] whatever is being served as a matter of course. The head of the family should be the first to taste any wine[16] as proof that [273] it is not poisoned, but otherwise he fares little, if any, better
[342] than his guests. This custom is now rapidly falling into disuse [414] through the construction of individual family houses with doors and locks. The fisherman who has exclusive rights to a suit-
476 able place for netting olachen or salmon must give some of his [226] catch to anyone who asks him. If he has landed four salmon, the first solicitor is given one, later comers, none at all. When a net is set in the river, anyone passing is allowed to raise it and take some of the contents; if there are two fish, he may remove one, if many, three or four. To take all would be a [685] despicable theft, sufficient to brand the transgressor as greedy;
[624] hence public opinion prevents the system from being carried [224] to excess. A hunter who brings back several mountain goats or other large game is expected to invite his neighbours to a feast, which virtually means that he must share his takings.

556 Presents of this kind increase the prestige of the donor who 431 has thus acted in accordance with Bella Coola ethics, and are advantageous investments since others must reciprocate. The system is carried to such lengths that, until recent years, it was more profitable to give away goods than to sell them. In the case of a sale, the purchaser endeavours to give as little as possible, whereas the recipient of a gift returns as much as [16] This is a modern practice, dating from the introduction of home-brew.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

PLATE 24

342
532
556
211

Photograph by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

Painted sign showing the wealth distributed at a potlatch. The animal figures above represent mountain goats.

[p 442 (H)]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

PLATE 3

575*
796*
142
342
292
791

Photograph by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

Siki producing a crystal from his stomach

[p. 84 (c)]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

PLATE 5

575*
796*
142
342
292
787

Photograph by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

Cannibal with incubus in form of a bear

[p. 84 (E)]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

PLATE 13

142
291
302
342
516

Photograph by the author

Mrs. Joshua Moody (left) and Mrs. Willie Mack, two Bella Coola women

[p 516 (A)]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

142
291
302
342

PLATE 16

Photograph by the author

Reuben Schooner, a Bella Coola man, and his children

[p 516 (D)]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

PLATE 17

142
291
302
342

Photograph by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

Lame Charlie, a Bella Coola man

[p 516 (E)]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

177 fathers. Inherited beliefs are too deep-rooted to pass away 771 entirely within a few generations. Even those who claim to have adopted the new faith remain convinced of the potency [181] of magic, and of the existence of those supernatural creatures which do not actively conflict with the white man's creed. Such lack of consistency is a world-wide trait, particularly intelligible among the Bella Coola whose philosophy abounds in contradictions, dependent upon statements handed down in the origin myths of different families.

626 The Bella Coola are constrained not only by the omnipresence of supernatural beings; they are constantly subjected [181] to the influence of their fellows. They are far less individualistic than white people. A chief may boast that he can do as [625] he pleases, that he can disregard the restrictions of lesser men; he often does so, but only because public opinion recognizes that he has reached a position of eminence by giving many potlatches. The duly validated warrior is brave because he [703] feels that everyone is aware of his valour. The man who performs some ceremony in accordance with an ancestral myth [769] incorporates himself with his forbears, and is strengthened by the conviction that he has gained their support and approbation. In every phase of life, a person is profoundly affected 177 by the approval or disapproval of his neighbours. At present 626 the construction of small houses, each occupied by a single ●342 family, makes it possible for a man to hide himself, or to do work unknown to the rest of the community. This lessens the force of public opinion, although it is even now more potent than conscience in checking anti-social acts. Formerly, in communal houses, every action was fully known, making individual freedom of thought and act virtually impossible. A man [602] is chiefly influenced by his relatives who take a great share in what the white man would consider purely family affairs. The effect of the group upon the individual must not be overlooked, nor can it be over-stressed in a study of these people.

177 The education and conversion of the younger men have 626 enormously lessened their reliance upon their fellows. In former 182
561

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

Anudkānuts: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit woman.
ānukāldimut, "This Is to Make Straight Your Road": Said when a call is returned, or food thrown upon a fire for the dead.
Ānukao·lst, "Place of Big Stones in the River": Village at Kwatna.
Ānukalulslaix: Woman immolated in a repository and hence become supernatural.
ayukihlk'ı: Rainbow-coloured nose-ring worn by Death.
Ānukiqaksaix: Supernatural name of Hawk. [825] ayukitnk': Short cord by which the fungus is held during the kānān·i dance.
Ānukkālnam: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Ānukpmaix, "The One that Fills the Rivers": Supernatural name of hump-back salmon.
anulkutl: Nose-ring. [301]
ānultnānk: Mourning song composed for a chief and, apparently, the singing of one. [533]
Ānulxwam: Place on the north-west side of Dean Channel, about nine miles from its head, where curative power is petrified. [778] Anumntskmm: Supernatural beings who remind the supreme god of his kusiut duties.
Ānunitsktnm: Supernatural being who restores those killed by the receipt of too much power from Ṫlitcāplilān·a.
ānunuqwn: Meeting of chiefs, archaic.
annonai: Person who catches early olachen in a hand-net. [226] anupospsam: Buoyant stones such as are found in a lake near the headwaters of the Bella Coola. [823] Anuputsadilk: Supernatural being who regulates the height of tides in rivers.
anuqpatlnam: To await, especially a supernatural being.
Ānuqpmlaix: Son of the first settlers at Sātlia.
Ānuqpālaix, "What Fills People": Name created by Smaoan in the beginning of time with reference to his stores of salmon.
anuqunusam: Silent waiting in darkness before a kusiotem dance.
Ānuqwntnikmm: Supernatural being who gives inspiration.
Anusaikaiutslaix: 1—Supernatural name of sisiutl.
2—Method of killing practised by sisiutl.
Ānusaiksaixsaix·als: Name of a Bella Coola shaman.
Anu·shuxātlnm: Name of a Kimsquit woman.
anusks'alxākmus: The rare prerogative of changing from kusiut to sisaok rites on alternate nights. [424] Ānuskiskmm, "The Saviour": One of Ṫlitcāplilān·a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.
Ānuskumethm: One of the first men to settle at Tāl·io in the beginning of time.
ānuskāmnus: Peculiar cry uttered by a kusiut scratcher.
Ānuspunm·aix: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man.
Ānusy: Place on north side of North Bentinck Arm, about one-quarter mile from its head.
anuspaixotsaix, "The Left Side," in the language of ghosts: Identical with sxlaxink, q.v. [198] Ānusyalaix: One of the first women to settle at Slskistl in the beginning of time.
Ānuteklāmdimut: One of the names of Great Blue Heron as chief.
ānutsu: 1—Excavated house furnished with stepped platforms for guests.
2—Village at Kwatna. [342]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

+192

Nukapankam: An influential Kwakiutl chief.

Nukátco: Bella Coola pronunciation of a Carrier village; the Anglicized form is Ulkatcho.

nuḳaxem: To lose something through faulty concealment; the term is used to describe a kusiut who is alleged to have suffered loss through the discovery of his repository by an uninitiated person.

nukolomskł': Grease extracted from sockeye salmon heads.

[825] Nukiadji: Ancestral name of a Stuix chief; the designation is of Kwakiutl origin.

[778] nukila·xta: 1—Spider.
2—Place on the east side of South Bentinck Arm where cures are effected; the power is derived from a spider petrified there.

Nukils, "Place of the Whirlpool": Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.

Nukokwixodjax, "The One Whose Seat is Dusty": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.

[552] Nuliḳumutl di mink', "The Rolling Down of Excrement": Dog's name.

Nulalumtnam: 1—Supernatural being who leaves his home at the time of Noakymm's departure to warn kukusiut to tidy their houses for the ceremonial season.

[356] 2—To tidy the houses preparatory to the ceremonial season.

Nulalulaks, "The One Whose Eyes Are Hungry": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.

[431] nulexum: Presents given by a chief to his fellow-villagers prior to a potlatch.

Nulilıqolank, "Place of Many Boulders": Ancient village on the Kwatna River.

Nulixwemankta: One of the first women to settle at Tāl·io in the beginning of time.

nulumkmankdās: Fastenings, especially those of plumage or skins worn by the first settlers when coming down to earth in the beginning of time.

Nulkitl: Poverty-stricken chief mentioned in a song.

nulkmākdas: Bonds used to fasten a Cannibal; the word is etymologically connected with nulumkmankdās.

[428] nulmāxtmax: Succession, as applied to the assumption of a marshal's prerogative by a son or other relative.

nulolostnik·osta, "Forehead Thing": Small mask worn on a ts.ēsek head-dress.

nulł: Landslide, such as is caused by Twalałit or ts.iutl.

Nulqānlaix: Name given to their sister by the first settlers at Nutsqualt in the beginning of time.

nulqunta, "To Have Become Nothing For": Said of a poultice which is thrown away after serving its purpose.

nulqwtāns: House-posts nearest to front door.

nulunikta: Posts extending from this world to the land above down which swarmed some of the first settlers in the beginning of time.

[426] nulismāmmtnum, "Belt Gooda": Goods borrowed during a potlatch by a donor who finds himself deficient. The implication is that he will have to fasten up his clothing and work industriously to repay his indebtedness with heavy interest.

[556] nulxodjim: Cry uttered by a ts.ēsek official to free a house from the intangible influence of the supernatural after the initiation of ts.ēsek novices.

[342] nulxinqailaix: The alleged entrance of a supernatural being into a ts.ēsek novice.

nulxwālkāls: Semi-subterranean house with two levels for seats.

numālkāls: Semi-subterranean house with a single level for seats.

Numām·u, "Place of Flies": Place on north side of North Bentinck Arm, about one mile from its head.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192

Taqwalaisla: Bella Bella chief mentioned in a semi-historical account.

[825] Taxakl: Northern tribe, possibly Haida.

łąli: Dog salmon.

Tsałłimx, "Whose Feet Are Shortened": Village on shore of North Bentinck Arm west and north of the Necleetsconnay River.

tąpnąin·i: Owl.

[601] łsai: 1—Daughter, in direct address. As a courtesy title this is often used for girls unrelated to the speaker.
2—Feminine suffix.

Teakwaaks: 1—One of the names of Mount Nusąlst as chief.
2—Man who descended to Mount Nusąlst in the beginning of time.

Teakwak: Supernatural name of bald eagle.

teakwalotl: 1—Type of expansible house brought down from above by several of the first settlers in the beginning of time.
2—One of the names of the supreme god's house.

[825] teakwliwa: White slug with black and red face.

[824] teałteałaksum: Pleasure walk.

[411] teałt": Cedar-bark.

teá·n: Sealing spear.

[825] łsan: Snake.

Teaqołekx': Mountain near the Dean River.

Teaqos: One of the first men to settle on the upper Dean River in the beginning of time.

[824] teałstaolp: Red cedar tree.

Teawat: Locality on mainland opposite the north end of Vancouver Island, probably Knight Inlet.

teaxwanał·aia: Unidentified grape-like tuber.

Teaikwap: Man mentioned in an ancient story.

[342] teiba: Underground house with entrance and flue combined.

Teika: Bella Coola sorcerer living in the last century.

[825] Teiknutl: One of the first men to settle at Alqałaxl in the beginning of time.

teiman·i: Large clam-shell.

Teimlaix: Sisaok name of a Sinxl man.

Teimtliax: Lad mentioned in an ancient story.

teipix: Fisher.

[601] Teitomiłlaix, "The Sleep Giver": Name of a female shaman.

tei gnes di emts: Nephew's wife, term of indirect address.

tei gnes di sisi: Uncle's wife, term of indirect address.

Teixwotl: Man mentioned in an ancient story of the upper Bella Coola valley.

Teksa: Celebrated Kitkatla chief living in the last century.

Teal'laiyu, "He of the Penis": Nickname given to a lad mentioned in an ancient story.

temałk: Valley.

Temotl, "Where the River Covers the Stones": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.

Temqałk: Locality on Fitzhugh Sound.

[824] Tenlisi: Mountain in the Carrier country.

łnałkwałp: Unidentified hollow-stemmed plant.

Tenłkwałpa·ts, "Where There Is Much łnałkwałp": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

614 582 [551] The evidence which I can present regarding the laws of intermarriage is the following: I inquired of Nusk'zla'sta (=cold water in face), a member of the Ialo'stimôt gens, whether he might marry a Spatsâ'ilt woman; this suggestion he rejected with the greatest indignation.

FIG. 1.—House-front of the gens Tok-ôt'ia.

[342] [532]

Members of the first two gentes, he explained later on, are not allowed to intermarry, neither are members of the last two gentes, while the first and second may marry among the third and fourth. He accounted for this by stating that Ialo'stimôt's son married Spatsâ'ilt's daughter, and that consequently the two gentes were related to each other.

FIG. 2.—House-front of the gens Tl'ak-anmô'ot, representing the moon.

[342] [532]

614 The gentes have crests similar to those of the neighbouring coast

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

tribes. The crest is represented in paintings on the house-front and on dancing implements.

The gens Tōk·oā'is has a killer-whale (Delphinus orca) painted on the house-front (fig. 1). The tradition says that the ancestor of this gens one day, when hunting in the mountains, found a house on which a killer was painted. The chief who lived in the house invited him and presented him with his crest for himself and for his descendants. The crest consists of the killer-whale, eagle, swan, and heron.

FIG. 3.—Crest of the gens Smō'kn, showing the mountain Sewā'kHH, with two clouds near its summit; above a mackerel sky.

The crests of all gentes were obtained in like manner.

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

614 The gens Spatsā'tlt have breakers painted on the house-front, and use 532 in dances the mask of a large kind of whale (k·'xuts), of the crow, and of the black bear.

342 The gens Tumqoā'akyas use the mask of Ōnestaitō'ma (=the sleeper) and the eagle.

The gens Tl'ak·aumō'ot of the Nusk·'x'lstemh use the moon (fig. 2).

The gens Ialo'stimōt of the Tālio'mh use the raven, robin (sist'a'qmd), eagle, whale, the bird t'ēutlala (genus?), and s'allsā'ets, the flood-tide. They have sun, moon, and stars painted on the house-front, and the nusq·'mts suspended from the beams of the roof (see p. 420).

The highest gens of Nūtl'x'l has the name Smō'xn (=the north wind). He has the mountain Suwā'khh surmounted by a mackerel sky, and with clouds on its sides, painted on his house-front (fig. 3). Another object 614 belonging to his crest represents waves.

The children belong to the gens of either father or mother, the deci-851 sion being left to the choice of the parents.

Secret Societies and the Potlatch.

171 The social organisation, festivals, and secret societies of the Bilqula are still more closely interrelated than they are among the Kwakiutl, and 575 must be considered in connection. We have to describe here the potlatch, the Sisau'kh, and the Kū'siūt. The Sisau'kh corresponds to the Tlōela'qa of the northern Kwakiutl tribes, the Kū'siūt to the Ts'ētsā'ēk·a. The 556 Bilqula believe that the potlatch has been instituted by ten deities, nine 773 brothers and one sister, the foremost among whom is Qē'mtsioa, to whose care the sunrise is intrusted. He resides with the others in a beautiful 776 Fig. 4.—Mask representing Qē'mtsioa.

Fig. 5.—Mask representing Qēmqēmalā'otla.

[532
575]

house in the far east, and cries ō! ō! every morning when the sun rises. He has to take care that the sun rises properly. The first six of these deities inhabited by Salish tribes refer to the early separation of the Bella Coola tribe from the related tribes of the Gulf of Georgia, and that in their traditions they have retained the memory of the emigration of part of the tribe from the southern territory. It seems also probable that the allusion to the origin of one family of the tribe on Skeena River refers to a mixture with the tribes inhabiting northern British Columbia. 174

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NEA Bellacoola NEA

The traditions of the tribes also describe the style of house used by the ancestors of certain village communities; and it is interesting to note that some of these houses correspond to the subterranean lodges that were in use among the Chilcotin, while others correspond to the tents that were in use among the Carriers. It is said that the ancestor of the Nuxa'lx used the subterranean lodge which is called to'pa (see p. 87), while the ancestor of the Nuxq'a'lat used the skin lodge which is called sk'ma (see p. 64). 171 174 177 342

Since the Bella Coola retain the fundamental traits of the social organization of their congeners in the south, and since their traditions bear evidence of an emigration from that region, and since, furthermore, the linguistic evidence proves that the Bella Coola and the Coast Salish at one time inhabited contiguous areas on the coast, we are justified in assuming that the general culture of the Bella Coola at the time of their emigration must have resembled that of the Coast Salish. The question then arises, How did the peculiar endogamic system and the remarkable mythology of the Bella Coola originate from the much simpler forms that we find among the Coast Salish? 174

One of the most remarkable features in the inner life of the tribes of the northern coast of British Columbia is the great importance of the clan legend, which is considered one of the most valuable properties of each clan or family. It is carefully guarded in the same way as material property, and an attempt on the part of a person not a member of the clan to tell the tradition as his own is considered one of the gravest offences against property rights. The possession of a clan tradition is felt by the Indian to be one of his most important prerogatives. When, therefore, the Bella Coola settled on Bella Coola River, and were thrown into contact with the northern Coast tribes, the lack of a well-developed clan tradition must have been felt as a serious drawback. The physical appearance of the Bella Coola proves that at one time they must have intermarried to a great extent with the Bella Bella. Through these marriages the peculiar customs of the Coast tribes were first introduced among them. This is shown by the fact that a great many of the mythological names can be proved to be of Kwakiutl origin, of which stock the Bella Bella are a branch. Thus the name for their supreme deity, Smai'yakila, is a Kwakiutl word meaning "the one who must be worshipped." The name Ö'mq'omkilik·a is also of Kwakiutl origin, and may be translated as "the wealthiest one." The great frequency of 174 177 424 614 [144] 174 177 776

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

This type of smoke-house, which can be used by anyone, is usually built in the forest. The Bella Coola have great confidence in the use of one as a means of curing all types of internal ailments, especially from the bad effects of water which is believed to have entered the blood. In former years many patients were blinded by the steam affecting their eyes, so that a recent improvement has been the construction of a door-like opening through which the head projects. Many stories are told of people being cured in this way after a white doctor had abandoned hope. 757

No Bella Coola had heard of a smoke-house large enough to contain more than a single individual, and a question whether they were ever used as meeting-places was regarded as highly humorous and absurd. [343]

For Ailments of the Heart

The patient must eat some of his own excrement mixed with certain herbs, of which it was impossible to learn the species. This remedy can be used only by the members of certain ancestral families. [424]

For the Blood

The following medicine is the property of certain families; consequently, anyone else who wishes to use it must obtain the services of an owner to apply it, and must recompense him for so doing. [424]

The man who is to apply the remedy locates a pond where water-lilies are growing and then searches for four spruce saplings growing in line, approximately east to west. He cuts four branches from the east side of each tree and lays these beside the pond with a small space between each bunch. Then he pulls up some lily roots, lays them in the three gaps between the boughs, and wraps the whole into a bundle with a cord consisting of alternate strands of dyed and undyed cedar-bark which he winds around, clock-wise. On returning home, the practitioner must not carry his burden through the door but since each fisherman provided one when his box was filled. 226

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE5

No one is allowed to drink water immediately after eating the first olachen of the spring, since to do so would cause a flood. It is considered most improper for a child to cry soon after partaking of this food; if he does so, he is quieted by having nettles stuffed into his mouth. As already described, if a person dies before the first fish have passed through his bowels, a shaman must wipe his lips with cedar-bark. 796 574 [865]

After the first meal of olachen, stakes for the nets can be driven, and the restrictions become less exacting. Women are not allowed to assist in fishing, but the men devote their full time to the task, working with zest and energy.[1] An abundant supply of olachen is a source of joy, and all listen eagerly for the singing of the thrush, smamaxaxi, which signifies that the nets are full to bursting. Half jocularly, people invite the bird to come and eat, but his melody is interpreted as: 226 [562] [825]

"I shall eat when the river is full."

RITES CONNECTED WITH THE FIRST SPRING SALMON[2]

Salmon is the most important article of Bella Coola diet and the rites which accompany the earliest taking of the fish are relatively complicated. 226 796 [262]

When the first spring salmon have been caught, they are laid in the canoe with their heads all pointing eastward, upstream. The fisherman poles to shore, but instead of landing his catch, he fastens the salmon to a stake driven at the edge of the bank so that they remain in the water. A number of posts are usually placed in readiness, each decorated with alternate spirals of dyed and undyed cedar-bark and crowned with an eagle's tail. Each day one or two more fish may be caught, but all are left in the water until the first have become soft, thus giving sufficient time for the necessary preparations on shore. It is the duty of every owner of a salmon-weir to build near its end a so-called Spring Salmon House, a shed-like [343]

[1] For a description of olachen fishing, see Appendix A.
[2] Cf. Boas, p. 78.

1:McGowatik E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

structure with a roof but without side walls. To this the successful fisherman brings long strings of dyed and undyed cedar-bark, eagle down, and spoons made of maple-bark; in this task he is assisted by his relatives as well as by anyone else willing to help.

When all has been prepared, the fisherman asks the men of the village to gather on the bank to assist him. No one is compelled to do so, but in actual fact everyone is glad to be present unless prevented by some valid reason. A friend takes a canoe pole and points at the head of the first salmon, while all call in unison, xal'ki, a word for which no meaning is known, and which is said to have been used unintelligibly for many generations. If he is standing on the south bank of the stream, the fisherman passes his left hand outside his right, seizes the fish behind the neck with the former, and by the tail with the latter; then he turns around sunwise, uncrossing his arms, so that his catch is still pointing upstream. If the village is on the north side of the river, the position of the hands is reversed. He carries the salmon to the Spring Salmon House and places it on a layer of fresh cottonwood and willow leaves spread over the ground. A young assistant, who is decorated with bands of dyed and undyed cedar-bark, lifts from his left arm one of a number of two-foot strips of the same material carried there and lays it over the salmon's head so that part of the string is within its mouth. As he does this he says:

Ijkwalkai, gwaxalilas,[1] "Accept, O Salmon."

Ijkwalkai is not the usual word for salmon, but signifies rather, "Food"; it is the designation used by supernatural beings for these fish and is hence applied by xwaq to their prey, human beings.

After this has been done, eagle down is blown over the fish. A second salmon is likewise taken from the river, with the same cry of xal'ki, laid with its head on its predecessor's tail, and the same rite carried out. This is repeated till all are arranged in line, with their heads pointing upstream. The 764 159 [209] 764 4 554 older Bella Coola, asking him to announce that he, Schooner, with Dan and George, was going to hold a memorial potlatch that evening to which all were invited. Robert is not a herald but undertook this duty owing to the absence of qualified heralds. Meanwhile the grave had been filled in and the people began to drift away as it rose to ground level. Their attitude throughout had resembled that of white people at a funeral, and the hilariousness that characterizes so many Bella Coola gatherings was entirely absent except among the playing children. By 4.30 p.m. all had left the scene.

[1] The emotive form of the word.

764 4 554 [344] [354] [355] In view of the large number of guests expected it had been decided to hold the memorial potlatch, not in one of the old-fashioned houses, but in the village hall, built according to the white man's style of architecture and illuminated with swinging gasoline lamps. This is a large, rectangular building, undivided by partitions, with a stage at one end and a door at the other. About 6.30 p.m. the singers, Nehuchadnezzar, Jim Pollard, Billy Pollard, Alec Davis, Kimsquit Alec, and Robert Hood, gathered at the hall and seated themselves below the stage. Billy Pollard had prepared a mourning song during the day, Kimsquit Alec another, and it was decided to use two others that were well known to all. The singers sat and practised these four for some time, while at intervals various Bella Coola strolled in, listened for a few minutes, then walked out again. Anyone was allowed to do so, but few availed themselves of the opportunity. Meanwhile Captain Schooner had brought 264 $10 worth of rice, raisins, and condensed milk which he placed 764 beside a large iron cauldron outside the front door. Jim Tu- 4 554 Morrow, a Bella Coola of no great intelligence, volunteered to act as cook and soon had a fire blazing and the food boiling.

About 8.00 p.m. the people began to assemble, bringing their own plates and other utensils. After considerable delay and chatter, the guests took their places in the hall, seating themselves regardless of rank on benches ranged along the two side walls and ranged at the rear. By mutual consent a portion of the single row of benches along the left wall was reserved to the aesthetic, their skill in dancing and dramatics is note- 105 worthy: no one who has witnessed a native dance can fail to [535] have been impressed by the performance of the participants and the stage-craft of the carpenters. The fact that no system [538] of writing had ever been devised has prevented the establish- [212] ment of a native literature, but the practice of passing down [153] an extensive folklore by word of mouth shows their narrative powers as well as their faculty for remembering details. At present it is difficult to appreciate what must have been their energy in earlier times when they faced the struggle for existence, armed with stone tools. Abundant salmon gave them [226] adequate food, but only when weirs had been built with great labour. Though game was plentiful, the hunter was equipped [224] with nothing more formidable than a bow and arrow. The simplest task required patience and skill undreamed of by the average white man. If the reader will allow his imagination to carry him backwards two hundred years, he will realize that the mere provision of food and clothing necessitated constant effort and ceaseless exertion.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Hand in hand with many admirable characteristics, the 356 Bella Coola display others which strike the white man as unprepossessing. A first impression is the untidiness of their houses. Externally, they are often fairly neat, but confusion reigns within. Clothing, instead of being hung up, is left lying on the floor; bed-coverings are piled carelessly; dirty dishes cover the tables; dogs and children swarm over the floor; flies abound; all is dirty and slovenly. The house itself may be uncompleted; a window lacks glass and has been boarded up; the roof leaks, or the steps are falling down. Nor are the surroundings more attractive. There is one struggling flower- [247] bed in the village, but elsewhere the houses are surrounded by [351] wastes of mud where horses and cattle wander, dogs prowl, and [231] children play. In the distance the mountain peaks rise in splendour, but near at hand all is squalid and unkempt.

They are only slightly more particular about their personal 515 appearance. Dirt does not distress them. They wash occa-

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

554 chief had thus obtained a seat for his daughter, as well as ones
* 556 for his two sons. But usually a woman continues to use the 562 ancestral name given to her in infancy until she is able to [553] assist her husband in a potlatch, when a name is validated for her (see I, p. 410). The ancestral names of the first women to occupy this earth are reserved for women and, like men's names, vary in prestige according to the prowess of their owners. Most names given to children, though embodied in [551] origin myths, are applicable to either sex; and these are the common designations of women. Cases are known in which a woman has assumed an ancestral name if her brother has allowed it to fall into ill-repute through failure to give potlatches.

554 With such a fluid system, no fixed line can be drawn be-
* 556 tween chief and commoner. But after his fourth potlatch a 622 man's influence in the community has become so great that he will usually feel justified in having the carpenters make for
● [352] him a material seat. There is nothing to prevent a person having one made for him before he has given the requisite number of potlatches, but too rapid assumption may render him liable to the scorn of the community through his failure to show himself sufficiently "strong." The contempt shown [626] to anyone attempting to usurp too lofty a place is a strong deterrent to a proud young man.

[532] On the material seat are carved the man's ancestral crests, [352] in other words the forms in which his first ancestors came to earth, or some of the beings with whom they came in contact. To show these is a matter of pride, but unless the display is fittingly validated, the man's own dignity will be lowered, as well as that of his ancestors. Construction of a seat is particularly common when a man is establishing himself in the central position behind the fire, and claims this to be where his first ancestor sat. Others among the first people may have chosen seats in other parts of the house, and in these, likewise, a man who is taking his ancestral name may have a material seat constructed. Establishment in such a position increases a chief's feeling of mental superiority, as if strength-

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

621 623 ters, and the village constitutes a unit for all dances; in fact [535] this ceremonial unity is its most important function.

[796] With the exception of a few villages built on the seashore, each Bella Coola settlement consists of a row of houses on the 361 river bank. These are of the usual rectangular, plank-built [184] type typical of the North-West Coast. In front of them [342] stretches a sidewalk, usually supported by piles on the side nearest the river to make it level. The houses, too, in many [171] cases have piles beneath their front ends, made necessary by the steep slope of the bank. In large villages there may be two rows of houses, behind and above one another. Usually there [487] is a rough path parallel to the row of houses at the very edge of the river. The number of houses varies; before the smallpox [164] epidemic some villages contained as many as thirty or forty, others, only two or three. There is no definite arrangement of the houses; anyone may build where there is a vacant space. [493] Much the same arrangement occurs in the sea-coast villages, each of which depends for its main sustenance on an ocean fish-trap, as the river villages depend on a salmon-weir.

342 The central part of each house is occupied by a large fire, [354] often sunk a considerable distance below the level of the floor, and around this is an open space free to all. Toward the side-walls are raised the partitions, forming bedrooms for the different families, or for different members of one. In many cases the flooring is removed in three or four parts of the house for small fires on which different groups cook, the central fire being used for heating and for more important meals. The [572] number of families occupying a house depends on its size; an [622] important chief, with many relatives, often builds an enormous house which is occupied by ten or more families; smaller houses contain only two or three. Life in the larger houses is free and open; people are constantly passing in and out, and any-[261] one present when food is being distributed is given a share as a matter of course. Most of the houses are decorated with [353] carved upright posts and paintings on the beams and back-wall. [535] A door through the latter leads to the back-room, so important in dances.

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

621 623 ters, and the village constitutes a unit for all dances; in fact [535] this ceremonial unity is its most important function.

[796] With the exception of a few villages built on the seashore, each Bella Coola settlement consists of a row of houses on the 361 river bank. These are of the usual rectangular, plank-built [184] type typical of the North-West Coast. In front of them stretches a sidewalk, usually supported by piles on the side [342] nearest the river to make it level. The houses, too, in many [171] cases have piles beneath their front ends, made necessary by the steep slope of the bank. In large villages there may be two rows of houses, behind and above one another. Usually there [401] is a rough path parallel to the row of houses at the very edge of the river. The number of houses varies; before the smallpox [164] epidemic some villages contained as many as thirty or forty, others, only two or three. There is no definite arrangement of the houses; anyone may build where there is a vacant space. [433] Much the same arrangement occurs in the sea-coast villages, each of which depends for its main sustenance on an ocean fish-trap, as the river villages depend on a salmon-weir.

342 The central part of each house is occupied by a large fire, [354] often sunk a considerable distance below the level of the floor, and around this is an open space free to all. Toward the side-walls are raised the partitions, forming bedrooms for the different families, or for different members of one. In many cases the flooring is removed in three or four parts of the house for small fires on which different groups cook, the central fire being used for heating and for more important meals. The [592] number of families occupying a house depends on its size; an [622] important chief, with many relatives, often builds an enormous house which is occupied by ten or more families; smaller houses contain only two or three. Life in the larger houses is free and open; people are constantly passing in and out, and any-[261] one present when food is being distributed is given a share as a matter of course. Most of the houses are decorated with [353] carved upright posts and paintings on the beams and back-wall. [535] A door through the latter leads to the back-room, so important in dances.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

764 older Bella Coola, asking him to announce that he, Schooner, 159 with Dan and George, was going to hold a memorial potlatch that evening to which all were invited. Robert is not a herald [203] but undertook this duty owing to the absence of qualified [769] heralds. Meanwhile the grave had been filled in and the *[556] people began to drift away as it rose to ground level. Their attitude throughout had resembled that of white people at a funeral, and the hilariousness that characterizes so many [852] Bella Coola gatherings was entirely absent except among the playing children. By 4.30 P.M. all had left the scene.

769 In view of the large number of guests expected it had been decided to hold the memorial potlatch, not in one of the old-*556 fashioned houses, but in the village hall, built according to the [344] white man's style of architecture and illuminated with swinging [354] gasoline lamps. This is a large, rectangular building, undivided by partitions, with a stage at one end and a door at the other.
[533] About 6.30 P.M. the singers, Nebuchadnezzar, Jim Pollard, Billy Pollard, Alec Davis, Kimsquit Alec, and Robert Hood, gathered at the hall and seated themselves below the stage.
Billy Pollard had prepared a mourning song during the day, Kimsquit Alec another, and it was decided to use two others that were well known to all. The singers sat and practised these four for some time, while at intervals various Bella Coola strolled in, listened for a few minutes, then walked out again.
Anyone was allowed to do so, but few availed themselves of the opportunity. Meanwhile Captain Schooner had brought 264 $10 worth of rice, raisins, and condensed milk which he placed 769 beside a huge iron cauldron outside the front door. Jim To-*556 Morrow, a Bella Coola of no great intelligence, volunteered to act as cook and soon had a fire blazing and the food boiling.

About 8.00 P.M. the people began to assemble, bringing their own plates and other utensils. After considerable delay and chatter, the guests took their places in the hall, seating themselves regardless of rank on benches ranged along the two side walls and massed at the rear. By mutual consent a portion of the single row of benches along the left wall was reserved

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Furthermore, throughout the ceremonial season, the uninitiated have ocular demonstrations of the powers with which the kukusiut are associated. At frequent intervals they are invited to the house of the dancer where, with wonder, fear, and awe, they see strange creatures. Although they may recognize that some of these are only their fellow-tribesmen in strange form, they have no idea how such transformations are produced, and ascribe them to supernatural assistance. They accept the strange designs of the figures as proof that the kukusiut have been in contact with unfamiliar beings. It seems clear that the uninitiated do not realize that the representations are produced by means of masks, the work of human hands; instead, they believe that the figures displayed are really those of supernatural patrons who have come to earth to assist their protégés. It must be remembered that these dances take place within large houses, only partially illuminated by a flickering central fire, which facilitates deception and conjuring tricks, quite apart from the credulity of the observers. 575* 796 781 [354]

The uninitiated may sometimes suspect that the performers are not real supernatural beings, but there is no question of their firm conviction concerning the changes which come over the kukusiut at this time. One member of the society, for example, may begin to act in a peculiar manner and at once the uninitiated are ejected from the house. From without they listen with mixed fear and excitement to the strange noises which they do not know are made by whistles, and presently the kusiut rushes forth in a frenzied state, biting those he meets. The uninitiated know that he is a Cannibal, doing as his patron above is doing, and that a call from the latter has caused him to become mad. When the kukusiut have subdued him and taken him back to his house, the non-membersh ear more strange and inexplicable sounds, which appear to go upwards, and presently the news is circulated that the Cannibal has been carried away to the land above. He is seen no more for several weeks, and when next he appears he is thin, wan, and bald, because the high winds of the land above have blown 575* 781 787 796

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

for treatment in other ways. Some are fried immediately, but the Bella Coola think they lack flavour, although most white men regard them as delicious. Many hundreds are dried for winter use in one of the following methods: 252 251

(A) Cedar-sticks, each about three feet in length, are split from the solid stem and smoothed down to a diameter of about one-half inch. One of these is passed through the gills and mouth of one fish after another until the rod is filled with a row of olachen, their tails hanging downwards. Dozens of these sticks are suspended horizontally over the central fire in a house, or, in brilliant sunshine, hung in the open. When dried to a certain extent, they are stored in the upper parts of the houses where the process continues whenever a fire is lit. When so treated they keep almost indefinitely.

(B) Narrow strips, each four to five feet in length, of flexible cedar-bark, are prepared by the women. The fisherman takes the ends of two of these, ties one around a fish's head, and the other around its tail. Another olachen is tied parallel to the first, and then others, until the two cords are supporting thirty to forty fish, each separated by about one inch. The middle of the strings is laid across a horizontal bar above a fire or in the open, and the process of drying continues as in the last method. The fish not infrequently catch fire if a large blaze is built up in a house, so careful people remove their olachen before a feast or other celebration.

Though dried olachen provide a useful article for winter diet, the fish are chiefly valued for their grease, slail', which is used as a condiment with all kinds of berries. It is sometimes extracted from the fresh fish, but the Bella Coola consider this to be tasteless and prefer to wait until the olachen have remained in the pits for ten days to two weeks. Warm weather hastens the process, but in any case nothing is done until the disgusting smell has penetrated for miles, proving that putrefaction is well advanced. In former times, all boiling was done with hot stones, but at present boxes with iron bottoms are used as kettles. These are of various shapes and sizes, an average being, perhaps, four feet long, three feet wide, and eighteen inches deep. These are set on fireplaces which vary according to the ingenuity of the refiner. Some are excavated in the river bank, lined with stones set in clay, and fitted at the inner end with an old stovepipe to provide draught for the miniature furnace. The box-kettle is placed on the ground over the excavation and the cook pours in water. Then his wife, children, and friends bring the putrid fish, which they ladle in until only a few inches of water are visible. A slow fire is built beneath, and, as the mixture begins to boil, the cook stirs it with a five-foot stick having a slightly flattened blade. Presently the grease begins to rise to the surface whence it is skimmed off and placed in recep-

258 [262] [263] [252] [415] [354] [415]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

to the aesthetic, their skill in dancing and dramatics is noteworthy: no one who has witnessed a native dance can fail to have been impressed by the performance of the participants and the stage-craft of the carpenters. The fact that no system of writing had ever been devised has prevented the establishment of a native literature, but the practice of passing down an extensive folklore by word of mouth shows their narrative powers as well as their faculty for remembering details. At present it is difficult to appreciate what must have been their energy in earlier times when they faced the struggle for existence, armed with stone tools. Abundant salmon gave them adequate food, but only when weirs had been built with great labour. Though game was plentiful, the hunter was equipped with nothing more formidable than a bow and arrow. The simplest task required patience and skill undreamed of by the average white man. If the reader will allow his imagination to carry him backwards two hundred years, he will realize that the mere provision of food and clothing necessitated constant effort and ceaseless exertion.

Hand in hand with many admirable characteristics, the Bella Coola display others which strike the white man as unprepossessing. A first impression is the untidiness of their houses. Exteriorly, they are often fairly neat, but confusion reigns within. Clothing, instead of being hung up, is left lying on the floor; bed-coverings are piled carelessly; dirty dishes cover the tables; dogs and children swarm over the floor; flies abound; all is dirty and slovenly. The house itself may be uncompleted; a window lacks glass and has been boarded up; the roof leaks, or the steps are falling down. Nor are the surroundings more attractive. There is one struggling flower-bed in the village, but elsewhere the houses are surrounded by wastes of mud where horses and cattle wander, dogs prowl, and children play. In the distance the mountain peaks rise in splendour, but near at hand all is squalid and unkempt.

They are only slightly more particular about their personal appearance. Dirt does not distress them. They wash occa-

515 sionally, in a half-hearted manner, but it is not unusual for a man to allow the basin of water in which he makes his ablutions to remain standing for two or three weeks. Not many [177] years ago the Carriers taught their neighbours to make a kind [296] of soap from the ashes of burnt cottonwood sticks thrown into [388] water; with this clothes are washed irregularly and in most cases from sheer necessity only. In former times bathing was [788] a semi-sacred rite, but this fell into disuse with the passing of [177] the old religion, and the use of soap and water merely for the sake of cleanliness has not become a daily habit. The women [291] have more vanity; the younger girls especially like to have new clothes, though they wear them carelessly, heedless of fit. [196] An effort is often made to clean up for ceremonial dances, but it entails little more than the removal of the more obvious dirt and the putting on, over unchanged undergarments, of a sweater. Pride in personal appearance, love of tidiness, delight in a clean house, are all quite foreign to the Bella Coola.

356 Probably the reason for lack of comforts in the houses is simply that the people do not feel the need for them. They [264] consider it no hardship to sit on a rickety chair, scoop up food [231] from a common dish and, if they think of it, throw morsels [152] down to the dog or the cat. The smell, the flies, the dirt, the chaos do not concern them. Capable of undergoing privations, hardships, and even sufferings, they think neither of the comfort of themselves nor of others. Their domestic animals are 231 often treated abominably, not through lack of affection or cruelty, but from callousness. More than once the writer has seen a favourite dog steal a piece of food from the table. Its master, after a furious blow or kick at it, would suddenly, as if by inspiration, throw a choice bit to the animal, saying:

"Why, he must have been hungry!"

Though the Bella Coola feel a kinship with animals unknown to the white man, it is not combined with any recognition of their feelings as living creatures. There are, of course, [577] many exceptions, but on the whole public opinion demands generosity and kindness only towards human members of the group. The moral code is not concerned with animals.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

#192

Nuxejuxlam: An influential Kwakiutl chief.

Nuxstra: Bella Coola pronunciation of a Carrier village; the Anglicized form is Ulkatcho.

nujaxm: To lose something through faulty concealment; the term is used to describe a kuxiut who is alleged to have suffered loss through the discovery of his repository by an uninitiated person.

nukalamskl': Grease extracted from sockeye salmon heads.

[825] Nukiadji: Ancestral name of a Stuax chief; the designation is of Kwakiutl origin.

[778] nukila xta: 1—Spider.
2—Place on the east side of South Bentinck Arm where cures are effected; the power is derived from a spider petrified there.

Nukii, "Place of the Whirlpool": Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.

Nukutwindjax, "The One Whose Seat is Dusty": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.

[552] Nukipumuil di mul', "The Rolling Down of Excrement": Dog's name.

Nulalumuum: 1—Supernatural being who leaves his home at the time of Nuskymm's departure to warn kukuxiut to tidy their houses for the ceremonial season.

[356] 2—To tidy the houses preparatory to the ceremonial season.

Nulalulu, "The One Whose Eyes Are Hungry": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.

[431] nulyum: Presents given by a chief to his fellow-villagers prior to a potlatch.

Nulilqulunk, "Place of Many Boulders": Ancient village on the Kwatna River.

Nulisymuukla: One of the first women to settle at Tal'is in the beginning of time.

nulmlmuukla: Fastenings, especially those of plumage or skins worn by the first settlers when coming down to earth in the beginning of time.

Nulbiil: Poverty-stricken chief mentioned in a song.

nulkmukla: Bonds used to fasten a Cannibal; the word is etymologically connected with nulmlmuukla.

[428] nulmuymu: Succession, as applied to the assumption of a marshal's prerogative by a son or other relative.

nululumul-ata, "Forehead Thing": Small mask worn on a nuxul head-drum.

nulj: Landslide, such as is caused by Tsuulaltx or xulmil.

Nulqumlaix: Name given to their sister by the first settlers at Nuiqwalt in the beginning of time.

nulqusa, "To Have Become Nothing For": Said of a poultice which is thrown away after serving its purpose.

nulqustm: House-posts nearest to front door.

nulsuxlu: Posts extending from this world to the land above down which swarmed some of the first settlers in the beginning of time.

[426] nulumumum, "Belt Goods": Goods borrowed during a potlatch by a donee who finds himself deficient. The implication is that he will have to fatten up his clothing and work industriously to repay his indebtedness with heavy interest.

[556] nulundjim: Cry uttered by a nuxul official to free a house from the intangible influence of the supernatural after the initiation of nuxul novices.

[342] nululqulaix: The alleged entrance of a supernatural being into a nuxul novice.

nulumilula: Semi-subterranean house with two levels for seats.

numilula: Semi-subterranean house with a single level for seats.

Numuwu, "Place of Fire": Place on north side of North Bentinck Arm, about one mile from its head.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

824 their houses. Dishes, benches, cooking-boxes, cradles, totem-[322] poles, canoes, all were carved from this wood. The bark was 285 woven into baskets, and when dyed formed the most common [531] ceremonial decoration.

Even within the forty miles of the river valley formerly 132 occupied by the Bella Coola there are considerable variations in climate. At the mouth of the river the typical Pacific coast type is found, without great extremes of temperature and with much rain, especially in winter time. During winter, the moisture is precipitated as snow a few hundred feet above the valley, and the limit of the snow can be watched on the mountain slopes, rising or falling a few feet from day to day. Farther up the valley, the winters are colder and in many cases snow lies for weeks on the ground, and in the upper part of the Bella Coola area the winters are severe, although much more moderate than on the upper regions immediately to the east.

173 What has been the history of the inhabitants of this land?
[176] They believe that long, long ago, Alqantăm, the supreme god, caused their first ancestors to be created in his house, Nasmăt-a, in the land above, and sent them down to populate the Bella Coola valley. These first people came in groups of two or three, brothers and sisters, or occasionally man and wife, each group descending, in many cases in animal form, to a certain mountain and then making their home at its foot. They brought with them animals and fish, tools and houses, also the knowledge of ceremonial dances. In fact, they differed from the Bella Coola of the recent past only in having greater supernatural power. These first people increased with extraordinary rapidity, until each group grew into a village, bound together by a knowledge of their first ancestor. In
173 course of time the occupants of certain villages combined, as
● 361 some increased more rapidly than others, but on the whole each settlement maintained its character of being the descendants of one group of the first settlers of this world.

This mythological belief is a fair picture of Bella Coola life
[175] as it was when the first white man visited the valley. Mackenzie, making his memorable overland trip to the Pacific, records coming upon Indian villages at every few miles of his course. Boas describes the way in which the inhabitants of each of these claim to be descended from one group of ancestors.

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Though it is impossible to estimate the former population of the Bella Coola valley with any degree of accuracy, it must have been in the thousands. In 1922 there were surviving rather more than three hundred individuals, who live in one village on an Indian reserve near the north bank of the Bella Coola River, about a quarter of a mile from the sea. In the last century the tribe was stricken with smallpox, and since then consumption, venereal disease, measles, and other diseases of the white man have taken their deadly toll. Changed conditions of life and decay of the rich ceremonial around which centred their interests in the old days are also contributory factors in their decline. Within the last few years, however, the population has begun to increase.

Bella Coola Villages

The following list of Bella Coola villages was obtained. In an effort to learn which had been deserted in recent years, the writer always asked whether or not a town was occupied at the time of Mackenzie's visit, an event of such great interest to the grandparents of the older people that the memory of it is still preserved. Villages said to have been occupied at that time are marked with an asterisk.

Three rivers empty into the head of South Bentinck Arm, which is about one mile in width (see Plate 7). The Bella Coola, flowing from the east, enters at the southern edge, and the Nulqustkwan-e winds in from the north to the opposite angle of the head of the fiord. This stream, "The Nearest River" of the Bella Coola, so-called because of its proximity to the sea, is shown on maps as the Neclectsoonnay. Between the mouths of these two is the Pe-esb, a small stream rising 133 on the northern side of the Bella Coola valley, east of the Nuletaconney. Before merging their waters with North Bentinck Arm the rivers flow more slowly and form up extensive tide-flats (see Plate 6). Several villages formerly clustered around their mouths.

● 96/ (c) Ijmaus: on the west bank of the Nuletaconney about three-quarters of a mile from the sea. Nothing is known of this long-abandoned village of which even the name is uncertain. The mountain that rises behind its site is called Ijmaus, and it is supposed that the village had the same designation. Some of the older people state that there was no town, only a temporary hunting station, at this spot.

(c) Tsuklaay, "Short Foot": on the very shore of North Bentinck Arm, west and north of the mouth of the Nuletaconney. The land terminates in a tolerably square end, running north and south, and this town was at the northern edge. It was built on piles and the inhabitants could step to the ground only at low tide. This is the explanation given of the peculiar name, a reference to the curtailed walking space. Long ago it was a large town, but was probably occupied only [166] during the winter. In summer the people are believed to have moved to Nawdaw-u, "The Place of Fish," on the north side of North Bentinck Arm, about one mile from its head.

[912] *(3) Ilqelitel, "The Fenced Town," so called because it was stockaded: near the south bank of the Fy-ook, about a quarter of a mile from the sea, near the site of the present mission church. It was inhabited until about 1891. According to one informant this village was founded by a certain Tindowan, a descendant of Tsutsmain, who decided to move close to the river.

(a) Thqo-ol, "Small Mound," so called from the knoll on which it was situated: above Ilqelitel, and about one-half mile to the north of the present Bella Coola River. Its site is crossed by the road connecting the Indian village of Bella Coola with the white settlement of the same name.

(y) Bonaqua ooli, "Lakeside": the mature continuation of the last mentioned.* The name is explained as follows:

One of the people who came to the north in the beginning of time, Tsoohonde by name, travelled to the Stone River, and there saw women wearing labrets. On his return to Bella Coola he settled at Bonaqua ooli and carved on his totem-pole* the figure of a woman with an abalone-shell labret as a memorial of his voyage. Visitors coming to his potlatches named the town from this figure.

This was one of the largest towns in the valley.

*(z) Ainsh ts, a small town to the north of the last, not far from the Pa-nib. It is assumed that it was founded by a Snootsilum of Tsoohonde named Ainsh. The consensus of opinion is that it has not been occupied for many years, but one informant recently dug up a clay pipe on the alleged site.

*(aa) Sebich, "When Blue Bears Divided": on the south shore of the Bella Coola River about a quarter of a mile from the sea. This village was founded by a certain Sebi.

*(bb) Sunqa ts, meaning doubtful, perhaps "Salty": this, the most populous village of the valley in the recent past, is still inhabited by one or two families. The inhabitants of other towns explain its large population by marriages with slaves. This is the upper, or eastern, continuation of the preceding, and the two in continuation formed a row of houses extending for three-quarters of a mile (see Plate x).

(cc) Ooxalqoma, "The Trading Place": on the north side of the Bella Coola, apparently about half a mile above Ainsh ts. This village was long ago deserted.

(dd) Tsoohonmilqa ts, "Where There Is Much Isolicoolq," a kind of hollow-stemmed plant: some distance from * Several towns, each consisting of a single row of houses, are regarded as forming one village. In such cases there is no visible boundary mark.

---

* The Bella Coola believe that their early totem-poles and totem-poles represented animals in detail (if at all), even though the work of Barbeau and others on the totem origin of totem-poles in the North-West Coast indicates that the Bella Coola examples are not historically accurate.

the north bank of the Bella Coola,* near the lower slope of the mountain, and about three miles from the sea. It is probable that there was a town on this spot very long ago, according to the statement of one old man, and the numerous repetitions (II, p.4) in the vicinity support this view.

*(xx) Sawl, "Sunset," or "Fallen Sun": on the south side of the Bella Coola opposite the preceding. It was discovered about 1907. This was a fairly large town, though never as big as Sunqa-a. The name is derived from Sun, sawl, and there are two explanations given for it. One informant states that the name came from the many revolutions of the Sun to the first people there; another that the first chief, said to have been named Sallhma, erected a large totem-pole, decorated with the figure of a sun. This time down, in consequence of which the people called that town Sawl, "Fallen Sun."

*(xxi) Sqemult: on the south side of the Bella Coola about three miles from the sea, and a short distance below the end of the present bridge. The meaning of the name is unknown.

*(xxii) Tsemal, "Where the River Is Sufficiently Deep to Cover the Stones, but Shallow Enough for Rapids": the upper continuation of the last-named. It was deserted during the smallpox epidemic. The name of the chief who came down at the beginning of time was given as Tsemalkal.

(xxi) Sna'sqemulc, "On the Point": on a curving promontory on the south bank of the river about four miles from the sea. It was long ago swept away when the river changed its course.

(xxi) Pa'qemulc, "The Place of Foul Water": on the north bank of the Bella Coola a little above the preceding, at a place where there were a number of stagnant pools between the river and the mountains. No one knows how long ago this town was abandoned, but as the names of people living there figure in stories which are said to be of no great antiquity, it was probably deserted not many years ago. Probably a large town since is was a good fishing place.

*The river frequently changes its course, so that village sites are at a considerable distance from it; many sites have been on its banks.

(vii) Tsalu, "Bald Eagle": also on the north shore of the river, a little above the last-named. Probably washed away by a flood long ago, although traces of the salmon-weir were still visible recently.

(viii) Naqlemulk, "The Place of Much gilmulk" (the fern Aspidium (polystichum)): on the north side of the river about one mile above the preceding. This large town is believed to have been deserted long ago, though, in apparent contradiction, traces of it are said to be still visible.

"(ix) Sualeh, "The Place of Dog Salmon": on the south bank, above the last-named, at a place where a small stream enters the Bulkley Creek River; this divided the town into two sections. It was long deserted and the river has carried away that part of the village below the creek. The name is derived from an uncommon dog salmon which is believed to have been seen at long intervals in a waterfall near this spot, always with a water-ouzel perched on its back.

(x) Gyeskum: on the lower end of the island near Hagwilget post office, about miles from the ocean. Although long deserted, traces of this village can still be seen. The meaning of the name is unknown.

"(xi) Stalek, "The Place of the Whirlpool": on the south side of the river, about one a quarter miles from the sea. It was a village of moderate size, recently abandoned. The first occupant was said to have been Ghumlelk, which means, "The Place of Ali."

"(xii) Kitselas, "The Canoe Town," so called because it spread around the shore of a bay occupied not by the Bulkley Creek: south side, slightly above the inflow of the Skeena River, distant one a quarter miles from the sea. It was deserted about 1880.

"(xiii) Tsaqalet, "The Place of Spikenel": on the north side of the river, opposite the remnants of the same name. It also was deserted about 1880. Spikenel is a kind of snow-axle.

side for one, which occurs in the valley of a small stream on the slope of the mountain.

(15) Nalkun, "The Place Where There Are No Falls": an affluent from the north enters the main Bella Coola about thirty-one miles from the sea and the town was located on this creek about two hundred yards above its junction with the Bella Coola. The ruins of this moderately large town were still standing when Mackenzie reached the Bella Coola River on this place. At the time of his arrival the population was larger than usual, because the salmon-weir had withstood some heavy freshets which had destroyed several weirs on the Bella Coola, and given the inhabitants of other villages to Nalkun.

It is said that the affluent at Nalkun, the stream Xeiqts, is the only one in the whole Bella Coola valley that does not drop precipitously into a ravine leading to the main river. Its source is a spring on the end of a pocket-like valley, at the base of some cliffs, but it does not fall down these. The town is named from this circumstance. The area around the spring is called Nicomaxqtq, and it is said that some families living on the Skowen stop at it as the spot where their first ancestors came to earth, although their descendants do not know where it is located.

(16) Sisaq: on the point between the Lo'ode (Atnarko) and the Ai (Nascopmuc) rivers which join to form the Bella Coola. This, the most populous of the upper river towns, was deserted not long ago. The meaning of the name is unknown.

(17) Sinkuk, "The Place of Herbage": on the north side of the Atnarko River, a few hundred yards above the forks. This small town was deserted many years ago. The name was given on account of the hill behind the village being covered with a rank growth of plants and small bushes, but no trees.

(18) Sinaik-ti, "The Place of Falls," so called from the strong rapids of the Atnarko at this point: on the north side of the river about six miles from the forks. This large town was long ago deserted when a large rock in the midst of the stream, on which the salmon-weir rested, was carried away."* 361

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

The following village may be included with the above: [173]

(17) Nuxsay: on the shore of North Bentinck Arm, to the east of the creek that flows into it at Green Bay. This long-deserted village was built so close to the ocean that high tides reached almost to the houses. According to one informant, the name was derived from that of the first chief sent down from above to that spot; while another connected it, etymologically, with Nuxe, the name of the barren district some four and a half miles up the valley of the creek. In recent years this village site has been used only as a summer camp. [173]

The name given to the Bella Coola valley is Nuxálk; that given to the inhabitants of the valley, excluding those of village no. 17, is Nuxálkmp. 101 103

Two points must be considered with regard to the above list of towns: In the first place, can it be regarded as an accurate list, or do the towns belong to the realm of mythology? In the second place, are the customs and beliefs of the inhabitants of the different towns sufficiently similar to be described without reference to local differences? 128 173 361

The first question is difficult to answer. The Bella Coola undoubtedly consider the existence of these towns to be an historical fact, but so do they regard the peopling of the earth by men created in the land above. Nevertheless, the above list appears to be substantially correct. The Bella Coola, although now collected into a single village, still remember their ancient homes. One man, for example, stated as a matter of course that he was a man of Swáldi. Further inquiry elicited the information that he had been born at Sawd, where his father had moved at the time of the smallpox epidemic. It later appeared that my informant's father was born at Tsemsil, had married there, and that it was his father who had moved [164] [166]

*This explanation may be only legendary.

Boas, p. 40, states that Nuxalk is only applied to the lower villages of the valley. All the writer's information was contrary to this view. [114]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bella Coola NEA

128 from Swadé. My informant's grandchildren regard them-
173 selves as Swadé boys, and their names are embedded in myths
361 of that village, although their forbears have not lived there 166 for five generations. There is no reason to suppose this case exceptional. Other instances were obtained of movements of people from one village to another at earlier times, and there seems no cause to doubt the general accuracy of these. Names [554] embodied in the origin myths of different towns are used as prerogatives and have been potent factors in keeping their memory alive. Uncertainties and inaccuracies there must be in the foregoing list, but on the whole it appears to be fairly reliable, since few contradictions were received from different informants.

128 Accounts obtained of the same ceremonies from the descen-184 dants of people of different villages were found in most cases to [190] be identical. There were a few differences in custom between the people of Ilsaa and those of the other upper valley towns on the one hand, and the inhabitants of the lower valley on [101] the other. These will be mentioned when necessary, but on the whole the inhabitants of the Bella Coola valley can be considered as a tribal entity.

114 Boas (p. 48) gives a list of Bella Coola towns which agrees 361 fairly well with the above. Among his villages are included Pe-ode (no. 4), Nalqaqdzaux-e (no. 7), and Nactlum (no. 18).* All the older people agreed that these are the names of streams, though settlements located on them may have been known by the same designations. Names of the five villages recorded by Boas, nos. 6, 8, 9, 13, and 14, were not known by several old men questioned on the subject.

101 The villages of the Bella Coola valley did not form a political 614 unit; each was independent. A common language was spoken [631] throughout and the inhabitants of the different towns recog-[191] nized that their origin and customs were similar. This was also recognized to be the case with regard to the people living on South Bentinck Arm, and at the head of Dean Channel,

*Owing to such case the spelling of this ensemble.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

Indians from both of these areas were interviewed and it was found that, except for minor details in certain beliefs, their customs were identical with those of the Bella Coola proper. Accordingly, in this monograph, the term "Bella Coola" will be taken to include the inhabitants, not only of that valley, but of South Bentinck Arm and the head of Dean Channel. Those living on South Bentinck Arm will be referred to as Talio people, the Bella Coola term for them; those of Dean Channel as Kimsquit, the name by which they are generally known. It is an anglicized form of the word Kemsquat, meaning "Canyon," by which the Bella Bella designate the people of Dean River.

VILLAGES ON SOUTH BENTINCK ARM

(18) Talio: on the east side of South Bentinck Arm, about a quarter of a mile from the point that marks its junction with North Bentinck Arm. Food was obtained from an ocean fish-trap.* Long deserted except as a summer camp.

(19) Bentalis, "Island": east side of South Bentinck Arm, slightly north of the island opposite the Hot Springs on the west side of the fiord. The town took its name from this island. In summer the numerous inhabitants lived immediately opposite it, at a place where they had an ocean salmon-trap; in winter they moved to a fortified spot at the base of a mountain slightly further to the north. This village was blotted out by a landslide one spring long ago, and the few survivors were unable to re-establish it.

(20) Tsaulnem: on the east side of the fiord about four miles above the last-named. A small town, whose inhabitants lived on the catch from their ocean fish-trap; it was recently deserted.

*Ocean fish-traps work as follows:—A pass is made for a series of stakes, into which the salmon move at high tide. It is then closed and, as the falling tide leaves the trap, the imprisoned fish can be scooped out by hand or in hand-nets.

*Mackenzie did not visit either South Bentinck Arm, or Kimsquit, but it will be convenient to continue the use of materials in such these towns which are used to have been inhabited at that time.

(31) Kodis, "Ocean Fish-Trap": on the east side of South Bentinck Arm, about a quarter of a mile from the Nuxl" River. It is doubtful whether this was a town, or merely a camping place of the people of Nuxl" when using their salmon-trap.

"(32) Nuxl": on a raised mound at the south side of the mouth of the Nuxl" River, which enters the head of South Bentinck Arm from the east. The meaning is unknown. This was a populous town until the inhabitants were decimated by an epidemic of smallpox.

"(33) Tilio: on the west side of the mouth of the river of the same name which flows into South Bentinck Arm from the south. The location of this village was constantly changed, owing to destructive variations in the course of the river. It was formerly a large town, and has been deserted only since 1900. This village had another name, Tpemulio, "Tuning," so called because its houses faced those of the town of Nuxl".

"(34) Ai-ai", "At the Head": at the head of South Bentinck Arm there is a bay running south-west, into the upper end of which a small stream empties. The trail leading to the lake at the head of Bivens Inlet follows this valley. Ai-ai" was located on this creek, at some little distance from the ocean; the name was derived from the geographical location of the town. It has not long been deserted and must have been a populous place to judge from the numerous cemeteries (III, p. 6).

(35) Kmqo: on the east side of the mouth of a creek flowing into the bay at the head of South Bentinck Arm, from the south. This town was of moderate size. The meaning of the name is unknown. It is thought to be in the Bivens Inlet language.

VILLAGES AT KIMSQUIT

Two rivers, the Dean from the east, and the Kimsquit from the north, flow into the head of Dean Channel, and the villages of this area can be grouped according to the two rivers.

1:Mc:Dewatch E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NES Bellacoola NE6

Villages near the Dean River 361

"(48) Awatlala: the present site of the Kimsquit Indian village near the mouth of Dean River. The meaning of the name could not be learned.

"(49) Nadel, "Canyon": on the shore of Dean River at the bottom of the canyon. This large town was not recently deserted.

(50) Ayat'a, "Occupied Mound": on the south side of Dean River about one mile from the sea. This small town was deserted many years ago. The name is derived from the small mound on which it was built.

"(51) Nacopmuk, "Many Spawning Sockeye Salmon": on south side of Dean River, about one and a quarter miles from the sea. A large town recently deserted.

"(52) Nacqilpic, "Place of Many Spring Salmon" on south bank about twenty-five miles from the sea. This spot was not settled when people first occupied this world, but Alqan-[173] ciow (2, p. 330) took possession of it.

(53) Synuck: east side of river twenty-eight miles from the sea. There is doubt about this town. It is said to be been a colony of the Kimsquit River settlement, a statement difficult to understand.

(54) Sinuk'ex, "Where Canoes Are Left": on the north side of the river about thirty-five miles from the sea. Immediately opposite was Sulkulin, "Water Trail." These two are considered as forming one town, but were probably near more than camping grounds at the spot where the women [187]
[173]
[173]

"(55) Kitlin: at Salmon House on the upper Dean River.

The history of the villages on the upper Dean [illegible] founding 174 Mythological accounts of their founding were [illegible] and some of the older people stated that they had been occupied until recent years. On the other hand, there are [illegible] recently

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

174 reliable traditions of Carrier settlements there. The probable explanation is that the Bella Coola formerly extended over the area, either in actual fact or according to mythology, but were supplanted by the Carriers.

175 The Dean River is called Nalsl, and the generic name for the people of the Dean valley is Satolmp. About eighty years [101] ago a smallpox epidemic so reduced the villages on the Kimsquit that the survivors abandoned them and moved to the [164] Dean. At that time a certain Kimsquit man is believed to [731] have said: "We will take their places and kill even their dogs."

Since that time, the joint settlement has suffered one [164] epidemic after another, until a mere handful of the people [731] survive, and they are almost entirely descended from the Kimsquit River immigrants. Within the last few years, these have requested permission from the Bella Coola to abandon Kimsquit entirely and live among them. The two groups have [628] always been on the best of terms, but the Bella Coola have not forgotten the fate of the Dean River people and have been unwilling to admit the Kimsquit survivors.

Villages on the Kimsquit River, Ła ɬoł'

361 "(44) Ła ɬoł': this large and important town, at the mouth of the river, was deserted at the time of the smallpox epidemic.

"(45) Nawulc: this settlement can be grouped with the last-mentioned, although situated on the shore of Dean Channel, at the site of the present Mazieux Cannery, six miles away. No meaning of the name is known.

Tribal Organization

0-1 The subject of this paragraph is the tribe of the about forty-five villages. They will be referred to as a tribe, and as this term is customarily limited to a political unit, a brief justification for its use is necessary.

342 Each Bella Coola village consisted of a single row of houses, 361 built along the shore of a river or the ocean. The front doors

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

opened out on to a wooden platform, which served as sidewalk and extended from one end of the settlement to the other. The outer side of this structure was always supported on piles; in fact, in many cases, the houses as well as the whole sidewalk were thus raised from the ground. This type of construction was necessitated by the sloping sites of the villages, but had the added advantage of being a protection against attack. The villages differed in size from insignificant settlements of three to four houses, to ones with twenty or thirty, each containing several families. The ease with which the red cedar could be split and worked into large planks made possible the construction of these large, rectangular houses which, with their horizontally laid walls and sloping roofs, presented a picture of stability and relative comfort superior to that of most Indian habitations.

Each village was practically an independent political unit. Neighbouring settlements had many common interests which threw them into contact with one another, but there was no organized cohesion between the towns of the Bella Coola valley, or between those of Tâl'ts and Kimsquit. There was still less to draw these three groups together. There was no supreme chief and no governmental meeting of the tribe as a whole. Not only were the three divisions not bound to support one another in war, they were often at loggerheads among themselves. Indeed, bloodshed between towns of the Bella Coola valley itself was not uncommon. Moreover, each group tended to merge with its neighbours. The Tâl'ts people frequently married with the Rivers Inlet and the Bella Bella; the Kimsquit with the xûsq'ît of Dean Channel and the Kitlope of Gardner Canal; and the Bella Coola of the upper valley with the Carriers.

In spite of these inconsistencies, the application of the word

A. Lowrerers. All spoke the same language. There were dialectical differences among the people of Bella Coola, Tâl'ts, and Kimsquit, but each group could understand the *Pls avoid unnecessary symbols, capital ' has not been used.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NEs Bellacoola NEs
Bellabella NES

THE ootshay[1]

Before the smallpox epidemic, about 1862, there were towns on the fords and villages of Dean Channel between Kimsquit and Bella Bella. The inhabitants were called ootshay by the Bella Coola, and oosity by the Bella Bella. Their settlements were at Elcho Harbour, Green River, Cascade Inlet, and at several unidentified places. Their language is said to have differed slightly from that of the Bella Bella, but the people themselves married freely with both Kimsquit and Bella Bella, thus forming a connecting link between these tribes.

A list of ootshay towns was obtained from one old man, who claimed to be a descendant of the people. It was impossible to verify this information, and since he himself was not an ideal informant, the following can be regarded only as approximately correct.

(1) Elko: at Elcho Harbour.

(2) Kilde: on a ford one mile above the last-named.

(3) Ellit or Tajow: on a river three miles above the preceding.

(4) Nemaid: on a river two miles above the preceding.

(5) Nequit: on a ford three miles above the preceding.

(6) Omlem: on a ford three miles above the preceding.

(7) Sarnult: on a river two miles above the last-named and thirty miles below Kimsquit.

According to the old man from whom the above list was obtained, Nemaid, at Kimsquit, recorded earlier as village no. 45, was also populated by ootshay people. There was so much intermarriage between the two groups that it is now impossible to ascertain whether the inhabitants not only of Nemaid, but of Sarnult as well, were predominantly Kimsquit or ootshay.

The open plateau in which the Bella Coola River rises has always made travel possible for long distances, so that not only

1 ["Bellacoola" term for the people of mixed "Bellabella-Kimsquit stock who inhabited the shores of "Dean Channel" - See R. McIlwraith, op. cit., p.28 - Analyst]

Libbie Dowsett E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

have been many changes. Raven, the culture hero, taught the early settlers many useful arts, and they were themselves so powerful that they were able to create ceremonial and other prerogatives in a manner impossible to their descendants. Moreover, the people realize that they have been influenced by neighbouring tribes since that time, but in spite of these additions, they believe that their life is patterned on that of their earliest forbears.

As a group, the Bella Coola are philosophers. They demand a reason for everything, though once a reason has been given, and accepted, they think no more about the matter. The elaboration of Bella Coola mythology may be due in part to their desire to explain their social organization; but without question these myths, now accepted as facts, have had a great influence on the lives of the people. In fact the social structure of the tribe has tended to conform to the myths.

It is believed that each group of first people formed a village community, and pre-empted hunting-grounds in the vicinity. These usually consisted of small valleys opening from the main Bella Coola River, tracts which could thus be easily defined. Each group also took possession of a suitable part of the river for a salmon-weir, or, if located on the coast, a convenient place for an ocean fish-trap. In course of time the first people married, of necessity with members of other villages. According to mythology, and equally according to modern practice, the women usually moved to the villages of their husbands. When a child was born, it naturally grew up to share in the hunting-grounds of its father's village. Moreover, the father was able to bestow on his child various ceremonial devices, the concepts formulated on this earth. It is assumed that all the first people were mighty chiefs, able to initiate rites in a way that few modern men have been able to equal. But the mothers of these children, the first born on this earth, did not surrender the privileges of their own villages at marriage. Consequently, their children were of almost as much interest to the brethren

1:McDougall E-5 (1922-1924)948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

124
425
[177]
428
614
773
[361]

tions on this subject always excited them, but every effort was made to verify the following statements.

As with names, the easiest way to understand the rights of the ancestral family in land is by first considering the mythological explanation, which mirrors conditions as they existed at the coming of white men. On reaching this earth the first people are believed to have prospected for suitable settlement sites, places where salmon and eulachon could be caught, and if possible, near side valleys where berries were abundant. There they released the animals and plants which they had brought with them, on which they thenceforth subsisted, in accordance with the supreme deity's instructions. The members of the group pre-empted these areas for themselves. Waste land, far from any village was, and still is, free to anyone. A few years after the first settlements had been made, according to the myths, the supreme god sent down to Kimsquit a certain Ilgamim who allotted and marked the territory which was the property of each community; at that time a village consisted merely of a group of the first settlers. No similar myth was recounted for either Bella Coola or Tal'ts, although their concepts with regard to land are identical with those of the Kimsquit. This really gave a sacred sanction to the possession of land, an importance matter to a people so religiously inclined as the Bella Coola.

425
614

The system of land tenure follows the same somewhat obscure principles that govern the possession of names in an ancestral family. Hunting and collecting grounds appropriated by the first people, or by their immediate descendants, are the property of their offspring, the ancestral family. The Bella Coola term for such an area is ut'lum, also called, ancestrale, which means "Food Supply."

It will thus be seen that land does not belong to any single individual, but belongs to a group of persons, most of whom live in a single town. The relatives of a man who intends to give a potlatch usually give him, temporarily, exclusive rights to the hunting-ground. As with names, there

[234]
[251]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

614 621 is a more obvious social grouping than the ancestral family, though it is of the latter that a man is most proud. The member of a small, unimportant village often describes himself as a native of a neighbouring, larger one when at a distance from his home, simply as a matter of convenience.

Even before the coming of the white man, village sites were abandoned and people took up their residence with friends or relatives elsewhere. In fact, mythology contains instances of [973] such migrations at the very beginning of time. In cases of this [361] kind, memory of the earlier home has been preserved for many generations, and may perhaps be the explanation of the many villages which are described as two, and which have two names. In the early days immigrants seem always to have been welcome; they added to the numerical strength of the village, and the original inhabitants enjoyed boasting to the newcomers of their descent from the first settlers. Since any group forced to abandon their own homes naturally moved to those of relatives, there is no difficulty in understanding the process by [582] which they continued to intermarry with their new neighbours. Thus two, or even more ancestral families, inhabiting one village tended to form a closely inter-related stock. In rare instances, two unrelated ancestral families may have become inhabitants of the same village, which would unquestionably lead to intermarriage.

In most cases the endogamic tendencies already described cause the village community to be largely members of one ancestral family. In addition there are always other occu- [563] pants; strangers who have fled from their homes and sought [567] refuge among the Bella Coola; the offspring of illicit intercourse [554] with slaves; guests; foreigners, especially Carriers temporarily resident in Bella Coola; and finally slaves, without status in the community. The real inhabitants, those whose power is firmly planted in the village, are the reputed descendants of the first group of settlers, and accordingly a relative coming to [553] dwell in a village usually endeavours to obtain a name from the origin myth of the ancestral family occupying it, and thus

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

621 623 ters, and the village constitutes a unit for all dances; in fact [535] this ceremonial unity is its most important function.
[996] With the exception of a few villages built on the seashore, each Bella Coola settlement consists of a row of houses on the 361 river bank. These are of the usual rectangular, plank-built [184] type typical of the North-West Coast. In front of them
[342] stretches a sidewalk, usually supported by piles on the side [171] nearest the river to make it level. The houses, too, in many cases have piles beneath their front ends, made necessary by the steep slope of the bank. In large villages there may be two rows of houses, behind and above one another. Usually there [487] is a rough path parallel to the row of houses at the very edge of the river. The number of houses varies; before the smallpox [164] epidemic some villages contained as many as thirty or forty, others, only two or three. There is no definite arrangement of the houses; anyone may build where there is a vacant space.
[433] Much the same arrangement occurs in the sea-coast villages, each of which depends for its main sustenance on an ocean fish-trap, as the river villages depend on a salmon-weir.

342 The central part of each house is occupied by a large fire, [354] often sunk a considerable distance below the level of the floor, and around this is an open space free to all. Toward the sidewalls are raised the partitions, forming bedrooms for the different families, or for different members of one. In many cases the flooring is removed in three or four parts of the house for small fires on which different groups cook, the central fire being used for heating and for more important meals. The [572] number of families occupying a house depends on its size; an [223] important chief, with many relatives, often builds an enormous house which is occupied by ten or more families; smaller houses contain only two or three. Life in the larger houses is free and open; people are constantly passing in and out, and any-[261] one present when food is being distributed is given a share as a matter of course. Most of the houses are decorated with [353] carved upright posts and paintings on the beams and back-wall.
[535] A door through the latter leads to the back-room, so important in dances.

1:McDowell E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

133
342
261

PLATE 9

Photograph by G. T. Emmons, Courtesy Museum of Natural History

The site of Gingolx, with the remains of the old village

[P 186 (A)]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

721 to attack. It is said that the Fort Rupert people once raided 648 it, but their hair became entangled in the thorns growing near the tide-flats and they were easily slain while struggling to free themselves. Two warriors escaped and hid in the branches
[727] of a huge spruce tree. They used to slip down at night and steal food, thus supporting themselves for several weeks, but [628] were at last discovered and enslaved. On such occasions the villages of the lower and central valley usually rallied to the help of Xemqo-ti, the most exposed one, although there was no mechanism to enforce such assistance. The inhabitants of [774] this town attributed their protection to Alqantăm, and used to claim that he had decreed that they should be immune [361] owing to their close association with him. Though Bella Coola [162] itself was comparatively free from molestation, Kimsquit and Tal-io, with smaller populations and less strategic positions, were subject to frequent attacks. At least one of the villages at 712 the head of South Bentinck Arm was defended with a stockade of cedar trunks, set upright in a double row and entered by a water-gate with a drop-door.[3] This water-gate protected the [648] residents on many occasions, and it is remembered that one [724] Fort Rupert raiding-party was annihilated while endeavouring to batter down the door with a huge ram. The defenders, armed with muskets, picked off the attackers as they struggled in the open.

721 All the older men were emphatic in stating that most of their raids were in revenge for such attacks. Although such statements were partisan, they were confirmed in every way [642] and were probably tolerably correct. Lack of a strong govern-[623] ment was a serious handicap to the Bella Coola. After being assailed, the members of the town would discuss retaliation, [622] and if unanimity of opinion was reached, that course was de-[701] cided upon. Public opinion alone selected the leader, usually a man who had given a number of potlatches, especially one whose position had been made stronger by previous validation

[3] It is said that such stockades surrounded other villages, but definite information on this point was unavailable.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

105 of their omnipresence; the guiding force of public opinion is 182 seen as a check on individual licence, fostered or inculcated by [626] the ties which hold together ancestral families and make it impossible for a man to lead an isolated life where others will not be affected by his actions. If the white man is willing to receive new ideas, he will learn much from the comments of the Bella Coola on his own customs. Many have been to [556] Victoria or Vancouver, and they feel that the contrasts of wealth observable in such big cities are atrocious; they ask how this is compatible with Christianity. They feel that it is [602] unnatural for a man not to receive support from his cousins of [556] all degrees; that the hoarding of wealth for the mere gratification of personal desires is selfish; that the selling of land is extraordinary; and that failure to ascribe every incident to supernatural causes is sacrilegious. These differences of viewpoint on so many matters explain the first impression of strangeness. A careful investigator comes to realize that he is among a people who fundamentally differ but slightly from his compatriots, though outwardly they have little in common. With respect to love, ambition, parental affection, sense of honour, pride, intelligence, even humour and vanity, the Bella Coola are essentially similar to ourselves. Unfortunately, these characteristics are expressed in ways unintelligible and often repellant to the casual traveller. If he will only look beneath the surface, he will find a people who are neither saints nor sinners, but essentially human, with the faults and follies as well as the elements of strength and wisdom which comprise, as Kipling puts it, "Men in a world of men."

177 The coming of the white civilization has been cataclysmic
[161] to the Bella Coola. Within two generations they have been reduced to a mere handful; instead of living in scattered vil-[361] lages, roaming the mountains for game and fishing at will, they now dwell in a single settlement and the taking of animals and fish is subject to law; the introduction of metal tools and mechanical appliances has revolutionized their mode of life; new foods, new clothing, new furniture has altered their living conditions; fermented drink has presented a factor unknown

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)892
NEA Bellacoola NEA

Status of the Cod of the Isle Courtney Bay have detailed down to numbers, and a few only of their three populous villages are still inhabited, namely, Gatsq, at the head of Dean Inlet; Kuil'e'l, at the mouth of Salmon River; Nagu'lus (which embraces five villages), at the mouth of Bella Coola River; Sis'in, twenty-eight miles up Bella Coola River; and Ts'lin, at the head of South Bentinck Arm. The dialect of Kuil'e'l and Gatsq differs slightly from that of the other villages. The following is a list of their ancient villages, most of which are still inhabited at certain seasons, although not regularly:—

1. Gatsq.
2. Kuil'e'l. The tribe of this place is called Kuil-ent.
3. Nagu'lus, embracing the villages K'nalq'ino and Sulq'ul on the north side, Ts'ololo and Nalas'ulakent on the south side of the river.
4. Sungil.
5. Tsimo'ul.
6. Sus'i'ik.
7. Ni'k'nin.
8. Ast'ment.
9. Nak'a'nqumts.
10. Tsqumk'i'ut.
11. Ni'ok'ulut.
12. Kulsk'ig.
13. Sis'in, twenty-eight miles from the sea.
14. Sus'i'ulell. Nos. 4 to 14 are situated along Bella Coola River, and are given as they are met with in ascending the river.
15. Sis'uqil, at the confluence of Bella Coola and Dean (?) Rivers.
16. Ts'lin, at the head of South Bentinck Arm, embracing K'ne'ps, Ts'lin, Sis'ik', A'ntq.
17. K'ni'ins, at the bay of that name in the southern extremity of Bentinck Arm. On the north extremity of Bentinck Arm were the Kilsi'ul, but it is doubtful whether they belonged to the Hilqula or to the Sis'ilmek. The latter call the people of Dean Inlet Ki'ulsetq.

Each of these tribes is subdivided into gentes, which appear to be arranged in exogamic groups. I insert the names of the following gentes, which bear the names of their ancestors:—

Gentes of the Nagu'lus:

1. Tsk'ul'a (echoing down on his family).
2. Sunqnqu'lung; Qi'nsinn name: Sis'ukqi'lull (see p. 411)
3. Sisilqil'ag.
4. Ki'kiqi'ass.
5. Ts'ilas.

Gentes of the Kuil'e'l-ent:

1. T'lak'ment'ut.
2. K'inqsis'ut.
3. ?

Gentes of the Tsis'ut:

1. Isis'ainsit (wanking good fire); Qi'nsinn name: T'ii'ts-lulit (see note pertaining from rain).
2. Sunki'ik.
3. Tsunqi'ukyas.
4. Sa'ainit.

[illegible] NAME AND DISTRIBUTION OF THE BELLA COOLA COMMUNITIES

The Thunderbird and his companions appear in the Grizzly ceremonial. When they enter the house, a dancer appears who carries an instrument in the shape of a bird-rattle (Plate XI, Fig. 2), which is provided with holes on both sides, and has a bone back. This instrument is filled with pebbles and eagle-down, and is shaken by the dancer. The eagle-down is then made to fly about in the house, symbolizing the wealth and power of the Thunderbird.

(A)

In the preceding pages I have commented the principal features of Bella Coola mythology, which are characteristic of the traditions of the whole tribe. Besides these there are other groups of traditions which are very conflicting. One reason for the existence of numerous contradictory traditions must be looked for in the peculiar social organization of the Bella Coola. In former times, when the tribe was populous, the Bella Coola inhabited a great many villages. The inhabitants of each village are considered the descendants of a number of mythical ancestors who lived and died there by them. Each of these village communities has traditions of its own, which are its property, and which are not well known to the rest of the tribe. Many of these traditions refer to the origin of our world, and for this reason a number of the most important myths differ in various villages. Indications of such conflicting ideas may be found in the traditions recorded in the preceding pages. To make this subject clear, it is necessary to describe somewhat fully the traditions belonging to a number of village communities. Before recording these traditions I shall enumerate the villages of the tribe. The following list is the result of repeated inquiries. In it the names and location of the villages are given in consecutive order from the mouth of Bentinck Arm upward along Bella Coola River, and the names of the mythical ancestors of the village communities have been added where these have been ascertained.

Villages	Situations	Ancestors
1. [illegible]	At the bay of the same.
2. [illegible]	At the entrance of Bella Bentinck Arm.	[illegible]
3. [illegible]	On Bella Bentinck Arm.	[illegible]
4. [illegible]	At the entrance of the valley opening on the north side of the upper end of Bella Coola River.	[illegible]
5. [illegible]	The present village on the north side of Bella Coola River, near its mouth.	[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

BC 776 * 776 one at Bentinck Bay. He had reached the point where he needed help to turn the craft over, and one day, returning to his work, he heard the sound of many voices. He turned for a few minutes, and when he reached his canoe it had been turned over as he desired.

On that occasion the beings who assisted the canoe-maker appear to have had definite form, and certainly to have displayed physical strength, but this extreme anthropomorphizing is unusual with respect to the assistance given to carpenters. The construction of a canoe is so arduous and difficult work, the person who has made one is regarded by his fellows with respect mixed with awe, and it is tacitly assumed that he must have received more than human assistance. Considering the number of anthropomorphic beings known to the Bella Coola, it is not surprising that some individuals should assume that the successful carpenter must have had assistance from one of them, but to other Bella Coola the explanation would be in the invisible help vouchsafed to him by some kind of supernatural power.

[55]

* 776 BB Similar invisible power is believed to be written in a person's thoughts. If a man receives either good or evil from a comrade it is his duty and privilege to repay. He intends to do so, but only a good man can carry out the resolution. What a white man would attribute to forgetfulness, procrastination, or laziness, the Bella Coola say is caused by the intervention of Tsnpamlhalaiten, who steals away his thoughts. It is doubtful whether this being is considered to have any definite form; rather he is a barrier, normally situated within the doorway of every house. The ideas of a strong man are able to surmount the obstacle, but Tsnpamlhalaiten obstructs those of a wandering, and directs him to matters of no importance.

● 902 * 776 Another invisible supernatural being is that which devours firewood. The Bella Coola say that no matter how well a fire may be provided with fuel when a person sits down to a meal, it is certain to be either out, or nearly so, when he has finished eating. The natural explanation does not satisfy the Bulla Coolu. No one knows the name of the fire devourer, and it may be that he lacks form. Though ignorant of the law of conservation of matter, the Bulla Coolu realizes that the wood must have gone somewhere, and postulates a land far across the western sea where lower wood lies in shadowy heaps, each billet retaining its original form though it lacks material substance. This region is peopled over by an evil being with a desire for human flesh (II, p. 460).

The above list by no means exhausts the anthropomorphic beings neither either in Narnilo or in this world. Those described are the most important, and suffice to make clear the religious attitude of the Bulla Coolu to beings of this type. Others appear in connection with lesser totems only, and a consideration of them can be deferred until vol. III, chap. 1, whereas some belong essentially to shamanism and allied subjects treated in vol. I, chap. vii.

[illegible]

The attitude of mingled hope and fear with which the Bulla Coolu regard their supernatural anthropomorphic beings is typical of their thoughts and actions concerning zoomorphic creatures as well. In the supernatural world the dividing line between human and animal beings is not clearly defined; totemic creatures have the mentality of superman, and can be appeased, brought, or cajoled precisely as are anthropomorphic beings. Like those of human form, supernatural animals can bestow good or evil on human beings with whom they come in contact. The division shown in this chapter must, therefore, be regarded as merely for convenience; it does not correspond to a distinction in the minds of the Bulla Coolu.

One of the most dreaded animals known to the Bulla Coolu is the ninny, a monster about the size of a large grizzly bear, with long, silky, beautiful hair, blue-gray in colour. It walks almost upright on short hind legs, so that its long fore-legs touch the ground as it travels; these are provided with sharp [illegible] small particles of food on a fire, these become large when they reach the land below and nourish the ghosts. An individual making an offering of this kind says:

"Snakkilhwat tachm," "This is to make straight your road, beloved one."

[illegible] The souls and desires of ghosts have been made known to mortals through visits paid by shamans to the land below, and by the coming of ghosts to this world. It is, therefore, evident that food placed on the ground does not reach the land below, but that morsels thrown on a fire rise through into the abode of ghosts. Offerings to the dead are not made with the hope of receiving favours from them, but rather to provide beloved relatives with necessary food and to prevent them from showing displeasure by causing stomach-aches and other ailments.

[illegible] Other customs, both of prayer and of sacrifice, will be recorded in connection with various myths. The salient fact is that the Bella Coola are able to gain, by such means, the favour of supernatural beings, a factor which plays an important part in their daily life. In addition, they have a large number of practices based on sympathetic magic. No absolutely rigid boundary line can be drawn between the latter and religious proper, but there is a fairly clear division between rites such as those just described, in which propitiation is the important element, and others in which the desired end follows the mere performance of a certain act. Customs of this last type will be reserved for later consideration (vol. 2, chap. vi).

THE ACQUISITION OF SUPERNATURAL POWERS

[illegible] In addition to prayer and sacrifice, the Bella Coola have yet another means of obtaining the goodwill of supernatural beings, and at the same time of strengthening their own supernatural attributes so that good fortune is likely to come. This is by the practice of certain ceremonial chastity, of which the basis is that a man must not hold intercourse except after certain periods of continence. To understand this, it is neces-this practice had been handed down with the name from the beginning of time, another man stated that it was no longer practiced and could be used by anyone. The last time for hunting was at the equinoxes, and Wazenby always observed ceremonial chastity in such a way that it continued on that date. Before setting out, the hunter prepared a net of the shape shown in the accompanying sketch (Fig. 1). The net was stretched over a wooden framework, about six feet long and four feet wide, connected and by a long and heavy handle. The whole affair was called, "The Thing-like Thing." Choosing a still night, the hunter used to set out in his canoe paddled by a number of assistants. Wazenby would place himself in the bow with his net, and in the middle of the craft a small fire was kept burning with [illegible] pitch handle in so that it could be kindled into bright flame at a moment's notice. As the canoe was slowly paddled along the shore, the green were half asleep, half startled by the light. Unwilling to take to flight, they used to swim around at the edge of the illumination and so were guided into some narrow opening of the shore. Then Wazenby would down his net so that the end farthest from the handle first touched the water and as the latter came crashing down it imprisoned a number of birds. Others, bewildered by the light and the falling net, tried to fly outwards and were [illegible] down by the paddles. These were retrieved at once and the necks of those caught in the net were wrung as before. It is said that this method of hunting was almost always successful.

Fig. 1

Another Botlick hunting device which, however, was not ceremonial and may have been merely an individual method of gaining, not an inherited prerogative, was employed in [illegible] This last to use this method was the father's father of an elderly Bula Cuda. This man used to go out at night in a manner, and was definitely stated to be the one by one will-informed old man. It is clear, however, at every spring salmon was landed with the cry of call-for, on to the Spring Salmon House, and not up by the men on the time when women were allowed near the river. Family old was stated that the feast took place on night and that by the heads and salmon of the first catch were eaten, the rest other being dried for the winter. Women of child-bearing age were not allowed on the river bank, and were apparently excluded from the Spring Salmon House until the time when to sun's shadow reached a diagonal row on the slope of one of the mountains on the north side of North Bentinck Arm. This occurs about August. From that time onwards, there no no calling of call-for, and women, except those who were salmon, could not salmon freely on the bank. It was even eat that salmon of salmon could be thrown into the river after time. No one knows the origin of this seasonal prohibition or why it should and when the sun reaches a certain point, it was faithfully observed in former times.

In Kwakiutl circles rites were carried on, the chief variation being that the bodies of four corpses are placed in the Spring Salmon House and the fish kept away these at intervals in the fire. Whenever the catch said to be the back of each salmon to be preserved is with the value for stream. The same regulations with regard to drinking water, and crying after eating, were enforced for spring salmon to for elachen.

Miscellaneous Beliefs

The following miscellaneous beliefs and taboos cannot be assigned to any special aspect of Bella Coola life:

If a speck from a fire jumps out and lies on a person's hand, it is said:

"The fire wants to give you (the person) where the brand has fallen (hot)."

If a man sneezes repeatedly, it is said:

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] THE BELLA COOLA INDIANS

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

THE BELLA COOLA INDIANS

[illegible] adhesive: Gum; commercial.
Bella: Bella Coola component living in the last century.
[illegible]: Ceremonial song.
[illegible] Frazer: Name of the last settlers on Dean in the beginning of time.
[illegible] [illegible]: Bella.
[illegible] [illegible]: The swelling back of a name in the cavity of the original mouth through a future marriage, in the proposal to do my work for the relatives of the girl, [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] THE [illegible] CODEX [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[

2: McDowell E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

[824] nuxlip: Cedar rope.
skut: Sing.
skutlaxlen: Try on a sing.
[578] xpik: Term of opprobrium applied to a woman, signifying slow woman.
[821] xpuqmu: Heavy cloud.
xpuk: Muscle-like power which binds the mouth of a Cannibal against ordinary food.
[412] skum: Wooden comb.
P'ax'i: Land of Salmon, alternative name for Xpaxi.
sla: Cannibal heroes.
[601] sqalqmu: Distant relative of female sex, often referred to by men.
sqalkuqmu: Long platter.
Sqaxadi: Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
sqaxu: Unconsumed portion of share of food carried away by guests from a meal.
sacqula: Food distributed for carrying away as sqaxu.
[815] sqali: Large, flat, soft basket of bread scraps of Tsilh.
[821] sqaxuqmu: Presents given by guests to the donor of a memorial potlatch.
squlk: Maple.
[824] skum: Sudden exact that regals the sports.
sqaqaxil: Clever phrase of valor, covers and lack-covered on one side.
sqaxil: Love song or other non-ceremonial competition.
squalam: Fern, probably one of the genus Aspidium.
[539] sqaxlaxulam: 1—Theme of a song dealing with current events, especially allusions to the faults of someone present.
2—Singers who use this type of competition.
[815] sqaxal ayu: Large, unidentified bird.
Sqaxlakuu: Ghost: A supernatural being.
[874] Sqaxi: Oyster name of a Bella Coola man.
[824] sqaxi yu: Lion.
sqaxik: Mountain goat mutton, a food which is said to have remarkable powers of preventing hunger.
[262] Sqaxlaxam, "The Increase of the Sun's Chest through the Addition of Five Skins": Ax'ik name obtained in the beginning of time.
sqalkuqmu, qalqmu, sqaxlaxu qalqmu, sqaxlaxqu.
1—Chief.
2—One of the first men to settle on Xpalkul in the beginning of time.
3—One of the first men to settle on Xaxil in the beginning of time.
4—Name created by Qaxam for a grandson.
5—Ancient name of a Kimsquit man.
[601] sqau: Mother, term commonly used by an adult for indirect address.
[815] sqaulakuu: Bat.
sqaulaxu: Step-mother; the term is also applied to other women of the generation older than the speaker and related to him by marriage.
[601] sqaxuqmu: Elderly female relatives of the same maternal family as the speaker.
[614] skuk: Whatever.
Sqaxu: Man mentioned in a story.
[412] Sqal: Mountain near Tsilx. sqalam, "What is Hidden": The secret selection of the Mystery dance.
sqaxamu: Ankle bone for clock, now used only theoretically.
[824] skuk: Cranberry.

Schl Oswald E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

424 777 825 swerest answer to the question replied that his crest was the Raven. The Kitkatla was a Raven man, too, and to the narrator's surprise, treated him as a brother for the rest of his stay in Victoria. He shook with laughter as he recalled the experience, and added that though he was quite willing to accept favours of this kind he would never dream of returning them. It can be stated unhesitatingly that the Bella Coola have no totemic beliefs concerning their crests. There is not [582] the slightest trace of respect towards the animal, nor yet of exogamy.

211 424 777 825 [532] [550] [304] Although crests are not objects of religious veneration, yet they have some importance in the realm of social life. The portrayal of one serves to indicate ownership of an ancestral myth describing that particular bird or animal. A wealthy chief is proud to display his crest on a totem-pole, or as a painting on the front wall of his house. Anyone seeing such a design is impressed with the glories of the family history of the owner, to the latter's gratification. A living specimen of the bird or animal is treated with no respect, but its delineation is a memento of family history. For that reason a man is often tattooed[1] with his crest, that derived from his father's first ancestor on the right breast, that from his mother, on the left; and the owner of a canoe often carves his crest on its bow. After the death of a chief a memorial-post is erected near his grave, decorated with a painting or carving of one or more crests to remind observers not only of the deceased, but of his 220 family history, his most treasured possession. It is said, half

[171] [184] [386]

[1] It is said that tattooing was formerly customary not only among all the coastal tribes but also the Carrier. Both Bella Coola men and women decorated themselves in this way, but the custom was not universal, and is said never to have been common. It is believed that Haida chiefs tattooed themselves in connection with potlatches, in Bella Coola this was not the case although the operation was performed within the back room of the patient's house. Two methods were employed. The first was by puncturing the skin with a needle smeared with colouring material, the second and less common, by passing a string soaked with the substance beneath the skin. The dye was obtained from river mussels which were baked for a long time and then ground into a powder. This lasts indefinitely and can be made ready for use by mixing with water. As far as could be learned, any skilled craftsman might perform the operation.

2:McDuralth E-3 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

APPENDIX A

MECHANICAL PROCESSES

NO attempt was made to study either the material culture of the Bella Coola, or their methods of manufacturing, but information on some points was obtained incidentally. All sociological and religious features mentioned throughout have already been described. 121

THE TAKING AND PREPARATION OF OLACHEN

227

The run of olachen, spring, comes about the end of April, and as many as possible are caught. In preparation, nets, ale'a', are brought out from the house where they have been stored during the winter, examined, and repaired. If necessary, new ones must be manufactured out of nettle (Urea.) fibre laid away by the women for this purpose. By rolling the material on their legs, they produce a thin twine; five strands of this are then interwoven, making a finished cord capable of resisting great strain. The nets are constructed by the men. The type used at the present time, which is said not to differ from that formerly employed, consists of a purse-like sack, oval in cross-section, open at the wider end and tapering very gradually to the other, which is closed. The total length is about thirty feet, the diameter at the open end about eight feet, and at the closed end about three feet. A new net is dipped in a mixture of boiled hemlock-bark to darken it, and then boiled in a solution of willow-bark to prevent the knots from slipping.

226 221 289 462 286 316

The setting out of a net is not an easy task, as two or three men agree to work as partners. In the present depressed days, property rights are not respected and each group selects a suitable spot. The best location is where the water is about three feet deep and runs rapidly, but without ripples, over a smooth piece of the bottom; such a place is called a ckitsy. When the fish begins to run plentifully, the partners paddle out to set their net, taking with them four stakes, each about ten feet in length. The weight of a full net is tremendous, as the poles have to be driven down at least six feet, a difficult task on account of the stony bottom. Selecting the exact spot, one of four posts, ckiptsin, is set upright and held in position by being tied to a cross-piece, nadiqaow, fastened to the canoe for the purpose. While his two partners hold the craft steady, the third man begins to pound down the stake; metal mauls are now commonly used, but in former times this work was always done with an unhafted stone maul, lemama. The fishermen relieve one another interminably until the top of the pole has been driven down to within 224 196 423 178

412

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

ḥata, a tool consisting of a slightly bent stick with sharpened point, into the cut, and runs it upwards to make a vertical incision as high as she can reach. Going around to the other side of the tree, the woman makes another cutting of the same kind. Finally, she inserts her fingers at the bottom and pulls gently outwards, so that the bark is drawn off in a long streamer which tapers to a point at the top. The other half section of the tree is similarly stripped; this treatment frequently kills saplings which can then be used for fire-wood. Although small trees are preferred, a woman sometimes collects her bark from a large one by means of many vertical incisions. 314 [412]

The bark is taken home without further preparation. The woman carefully peels off and throws away the rough outer bark, leaving the smooth inner covering, ḥapal, which alone is valuable. If the weather is fine, this is dried in the sun for two or three days; otherwise, it is placed over a fire within the house. When all moisture has been removed, it is rolled up and kept for future use. The bark can be used for making baskets with no further treatment except splitting into bands of the proper width. [285]

When pounded bark, such as is widely used for ceremonial purposes, is required, the woman prepares the necessary tools. Two small sticks, each about six inches in length and one-half inch in diameter, are used as tweezers, ḥiṗła, though the bark can, if necessary, be held in the hand. Two beating sticks are required, each about two feet in length, six inches wide, and half an inch thick; one edge of each is rounded off, though not sharpened to a cutting surface. When all is ready, the woman crouches on the floor, with the lower beater, ḥpaq̓, held stationary before her on a box or other raised rest, and lays an end of the bark over the rounded edge. Taking the other, the upper beater, ẓpiłła, in her right hand, she strokes downwards so that its edge slides down the side of the stationary stick, bruising the fragment of bark. With her left hand she pushes the piece slightly further over the edge, and again the upper beater falls. This is repeated time after time until the whole length is pulverized and softened. It is tiring work, but a woman accomplishes more in an hour than seems possible as her muscles become accustomed to the shearing motion. The bark becomes broken and frayed but its tensile strength is sufficient to prevent it from falling apart. Then the woman brushes it with shavings to remove loose fragments and the work is done. This type of pounded cedar-bark is called ẓkw'. 287

ẓkw' is usually dyed red before being used for ceremonial purposes and is then termed mał'. In winter the dye is made from alder-bark with pieces of the wood attached, but in summer only scrapings from the inner bark are used. Water is placed in a vessel, urine added, pieces of alder- 287 386 [824]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

287 thrown in, and hot stones lifted in to heat the mixture. Even at the 386 present time dye is never made on a stove, as it is thought that the gradual heating by means of stones is essential. As it becomes warm, the woman thoroughly stirs the ingredients with her hands, then, when it boils, some of the bark is lifted out and more added. This process is continued until the brew is deep red in colour. It is allowed to stand for a few minutes before the pounded cedar-bark is placed in it. The operator gently works it around until it is saturated, then lifts it out and hangs it up to dry. Several pieces of bark can be dyed in one solution, though it is necessary to add more alder-bark and more stones to maintain the proper strength and heat.

[285] Although red cedar-bark is the kind most commonly used, the Bella
[177] Coola sometimes use the yellow cedar for mats and blankets, an art learnt from the Bella Bella.

THE MANUFACTURE OF PAINT

386 Paint, such as was used both for decorating the body and for por-[302] traying designs on wood, was obtained from a kind of rock found near [532] the head of a creek entering the Bella Coola from the south near Snaef.
[317] Fragments of the red stone were broken off, thrown into a vessel containing water, and brought to a boil by the insertion of hot stones. Under the action of heat the rock became soft so that the manufacturer was able to pulverize it and run off the semi-liquid mixture into a small box. He would then chew cedar-bark and salmon roe, and spit into the paint, thoroughly mixing his saliva with it. When dry, the mixture was ready for use, and could be kept indefinitely.

[532] Anyone could paint who had the artistic skill, and it was chiefly artists
[177] who used to make this kind of paint. Since the introduction of the white man's brilliant colours, there has been no demand for the duller native shade, and the making of paint has been discontinued.

2:McDowell E-5 (1922-1924) 1968
NEA Bellacoola NEA

 192*

[illegible]: Goods collected by the relatives of a man when working on his commission as carpenter or other artisan in preparation for a potlatch.
[illegible]: A short-legged person who tries to cross a river; name of a string figure.
[illegible]: That part of a house on either side of the central fire.
[illegible]: 1—Sleep, a supernatural being. [518]
2—Sleep, intraglitic factor propagation.
[illegible]: Presents given to the man who leads a bride to her husband during a wedding. [585]
[illegible], "Dark-Shade": A supernatural being. [431]
[illegible]: Shadow.
[illegible]: Hammer, anchor. [412]
[illegible]: Brother-in-law or sister-in-law. [601]
[illegible]: Shaman's stick with power of life at one end and death at the other.
[illegible]: Bloody grease that rises to the surface of the water when a seal is cooked.
[illegible]: That on which a chief sits, that is, his economical prestige gained by the distribution of much wealth. [283] [illegible]: 1—Caribou hide.
2—Thong made of caribou hide. [825]
[illegible]: Chequer-work cedar-bark matting. [285]
[illegible]: Caribou. [832]
[illegible]: Love charm consisting of hair of the one desired mixed with other ingredients. [828]
[illegible]: Supernatural being who causes nightmares.
[illegible] or [illegible]: Mortals, in contradistinction to supernatural beings.
[illegible]: Body.
[illegible]: Assumption of human characteristics by mankind in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Professional name of a female berry-picker.
[illegible]: Professional female berry-picker. [825]
[illegible]: Mountain goat green. [824] [illegible]: Castor.
[illegible], "What Has Been Divided": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
[illegible]: Son of the first settlers at Green Bay in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Octopus. [825]
[illegible]: One of Raven's female Crow relatives.
[illegible]: Red rock paint. [386]
[illegible]: Singer's baton.
[illegible]: Test.
[illegible]: Part of a river where there are rapids and projecting stones. [823]
[illegible]: 1—Memorial-post, decorated with crest, erected near grave. [211]
2—Plain posts erected near grave to indicate major ceremonies performed by the deceased. [764]
[illegible]: 1—Village in the upper Bella Coola valley. [262]
2—Famous hunter mentioned in an ancient story.
[illegible]: Dried dog salmon soaked in water.
[illegible]: Masked representation of a dead person in crest form.
[illegible], "Rainwater-Dripping-through-the-Roof": A supernatural being.
[illegible]: Black raspberry. [824]
[illegible]: Ocean.

515 usually, in a half-hearted manner, but it is not unusual for a man to allow the basin of water in which he makes his ablutions on Monday morning for two or three weeks. Not many years ago the Carriers taught their neighbours to make a kind of soap from the ashes of burnt cottonwood sticks thrown into water; with this clothes are washed irregularly and in most cases from sheer necessity only. In former times bathing was a semi-sacred rite, but this fell into disuse with the passing of the old religion, and the use of soap and water merely for the sake of cleanliness has not become a daily habit. The women have more vanity; the younger girls especially like to have new clothes, though they wear them continually, heedless of tr. An effort is often made to clean up for ceremonial dances, but it usually lends more than the removal of the more obvious dirt and the putting on, over unchanged underganments, of a sweater. Pride in personal appearance, love of cleanness, delight in a clean house, are all quite foreign to the Bella Coola.

356 Probably the reason for lack of comforts in the houses is simply that the people do not feel the need for them. They consider it no hardship to sit on a rickety chair, scoop up food from a common dish and, if they think of it, throw morsels down to the dog or the cat. The smell, the flies, the dirt, the chaos do not concern them. Capable of undergoing privations, hardships, and even sufferings, they think neither of the comfort of themselves nor of others. Their domestic animals are often treated abominably, not through lack of affection or cruelty, but from callousness. More than once the writer has seen a favourite dog steal a piece of food from the table. Its master, after a furious blow or kick at it, would suddenly, as if by inspiration, throw a choice bit to the animal, saying:

"Why, he must have been hungry!"

Though the Bella Coola feel a kinship with animals unknown to the white man, it is not combined with any recognition of their feelings as living creatures. There are, of course, many exceptions, but on the whole public opinion demands generosity and kindness only towards human members of the group. The moral code is not concerned with animals.

The religious concepts of the Bella Coola are not limited to explanations of strange occurrences, nor to knowledge of a wide range of supernatural beings, anthropomorphic or zoomorphic. Many to whom they believe are invisible and intangible, though some do use powers. Almost every incident of life is considered to the help or hindrance of a supernatural agency. If a fisherman constructs a salmon-weir, with a considerable amount of work, the Bella Coola ascribe his success to the assistance of some supernatural being or supernatural power; such labour would never have sufficed. If a man has phenomenal success the hunting, it is because the supernatural has helped him in some way. It is not necessary that an anthropomorphic being should appear; they seldom do, but more likely that in some form or another supernatural aids have aided the occupation.

This attitude is clearly evident in Bella Coola beliefs concerning the construction of canoes. Many professions depend upon propagations without which a person cannot hope to succeed. This is not true of canoe-makers, although it is a great advantage to one of them if Yalàtiwat, the Master Carpenter, appeared to his ancestors in the beginning of time. Even without this in many cases a man can succeed in making a canoe if he is aided by a supernatural teacher, or Model Maker. No one knows much about this being, nor even whether there is more than one of them, but it is through his kindly intervention that a man is able to complete his complicated task. If carpenters who have left a half-finished canoe in the woods, hear adze beats, as they are returning to it, they remain a away from the spot, knowing that their work is being done wiith superhuman efficiency by a supernatural artisan. Under such circumstances even a military man can construct one of the large, ocean-going canoes. About 1880 an expert carpenter, named Yalàtiw, was making [illegible] that his mother had told him Mackenzie came down the Dean River when his uncle was a young man. As if to confirm this statement he added the inconsequential detail that Mackenzie, in, in dire straits for food, killed and ate a dog, and that he was given a marmot-skin by blanket.

one at Bamfield Bay. He had reached the point where he needed help to turn the craft over, and one day, returning to his work, he heard the sound of many voices. He waited for a few minutes, and when he reached his canoe it had been turned over as he desired.

On that occasion the beings who assisted the canoe-maker appear to have had definite form, and certainly to have displayed physical strength, but this extreme anthropomorphizing is unusual with respect to the assistance given to carpenters. The construction of a canoe is an arduous and difficult work; the person who has made one is regarded by his fellows with respect mixed with envy, and it is tacitly assumed that he must have received more than human assistance. Considering the number of anthropomorphic beings known to the Bella Coola, it is not surprising that some individuals should assume that the successful carpenter must have had assistance from one of them, but to other Bella Coola the explanation would be in the intangible help vouchsafed to him by some kind of supernatural power.

Similar intangible power is believed to be evident in a person's thoughts. If a man receive either good or evil from a comrade it is his duty and privilege to repay. He intends to do so, but only a good man can carry out the resolution. What a white man would attribute to forgetfulness, procrastination, or lassitude, the Bella Coola say is caused by the intervention of Swiyawlakaits, who steals away his thoughts. It is doubtful whether this being is considered to have any definite form; rather he is a barrier, normally situated within the doorway of every house. The ideas of a strong man are able to surmount the obstacle, but Swiyawlakaits abstracts those of a weakling, and directs him to matters of no importance.

Another intangible supernatural being is that which devours firewood. The Bella Coola say that no matter how well a fire may be provided with fuel when a person sits down to a meal, it is certain to be either out, or nearly so, when he has finished eating. The natural explanation does not satisfy the bow. The oars also face about at equal intervals forward, each ready to work on the opposite side from the man in front. Each is provided with a resting pole and also a paddle for use in open where the river is too deep for poling. The rivers of central British Columbia are shallow, fast swift, and their navigation requires considerable skill. Going upstream, the captain constantly seeks the smoothest water, where he knows the current will be least strong, and uses his pole to keep the craft headed in the right direction. Should it be caught in a violent eddy, he moves his full strength, and it is his voice that rallies the crew for a final exertion to drive the canoe through. Coming downstream is more dangerous though less exacting. The water is so cold and the current so swift that a capsizing usually causes the drowning of one or more of the occupants, and the captain must never miss. Spruce canoes are very stable, and cannot be upset by a fairly distribution of weight. This is essential in view of the rapids, but they are heavy and cumbersome, unsuited to carrying large loads.

When a carpenter wishes to make a canoe, he fells a cedar of suitable size and cuts off bark and branches to leave the natural form available. Slowly and laboriously he chips with his adze until he has followed out the mark to the proper shape, and at the same time has smoothed away the outer surface. Sometimes a small fire is built on the mark so that it will char the wood beneath and make it easier to remove, but the carpenter must be careful that the flames do not spread too far. Finally, as his work reaches completion, he becomes ever more painstaking than before. The sides and bottom are whittled to a thickness of no more than three inches, and at this stage a fairly awake may pierce the shell and ruin the toil of weeks. When completed, it is necessary to widen and harden the canoe. A fire is built beside it and stones thrown into the flames to heat; these lifted out and dropped into the water with which the craft has been partly filled. Steam rises, and the carpenter confirms it by covering the canoe with matting, at the same time endeavoring to pull and force the sides apart. Sometimes he can do so by mere muscular effort, more often it is necessary to lay crossbeams athwarts within and, by pounding them downwards, extend the sides. No great extension is possible, nor is it required, but the steaming process is considered to harden the wood as well as widen the canoe.

Until five or ten years ago, the Bella Coola made another type of canoe, ajina, for use on the ocean. A few examples of this style are still in existence (see Plate 22). Though approximately the same length as river canoes, they are proportionately much deeper and narrower, and an extension downwards near the stern serves in place of a keel. These craft are sufficiently sea-worthy to weather any ordinary storm. Several [illegible] to the land above whence, in course of time, it comes down to earth again to continue a new body.* Consequently, the bones of a hunter does not indicate his memory over as minimal as much as the hunter's good will in allowing itself to be slain by one who has planned him by commercial chastity (I, p. [illegible]), or by one who has been endowed with skill by some other supernatural being. Men are accordingly careful to obey the wishes of their quarry. Long ago, a mountain goat told a shaman that he and his friends liked one, as a hunter who has killed one always smears two bands of ochre across its face from the right eye to the left side of the mouth. Another shaman was told by a bear never to use red-feathered arrows since none of his fellows killed with such would return. Plumes of other birds have since been used, preferably those of mallard ducks. Sometimes the wishes of an animal require considerable ritual. For example, when a bear is killed, the carcass is stretched upon newly arranged evergreen boughs and skinned. The hunter removes the pelt so that the tail lies near the neck, with the whole hanging loosely over the body. He pats it four times, as if pressing the skin back into place, and says:

"Please don't linger. Go home and return," or,

"Please come to me tomorrow. Tell your brothers, your sisters, your uncles, your aunts and your other relations to come to me."

Should this be omitted, the animal is likely to stand up, shiver, shake itself, causing the pelt to return to its place, and run away. Yearling mountain goats are especially prone to do this, as already mentioned. Even if an animal does not show its resentment by escaping in this way, it often refuses to return to earth unless the proper rites have been performed over its carcass.

Bears have another aversion: they do not like to be eaten by men. So the hunter leaves the skinned body for wolves

*There are doubters in Bella Coola as in every other community, and several of the older men express doubtful in the immortality of animals.

[illegible] difficult to estimate the former influence of such warriors. The belief of all in their ability must heighten their social prestige, although the requirements of physical qualifications in fighting must often have prevented them from functioning as military leaders. In other words, a man may be, socially, a warrior, even though he lacks ability as a fighting man.

[72] The functions of warriors are not limited to fighting with members of other tribes. Each has the power to kill and must exercise it when requested. If a mistake is made in a ceremonial dance dance, the offender must be killed, and one way in which this is accomplished is by the senior members of the society requesting a professional warrior to act as executioner. [73] [74] One of these men, who lived at Ásán-án-i, always used a stone club which had been handed down from generation to generation, becoming the property of each new incumbent of the name and prerogative. [75] In other cases, the killing is said to have been done with the aid of magic. The power of the Ásán-án-i warrior had been confirmed with so much goods that he was the most powerful professional killer known to the Bella Coola. He acted on instructions from the senior members of the dancing society or when called upon by anyone. If, for example, a man found that his wife had been faithless and wished to kill her lover, it was only necessary to tell the professional warrior, who was bound to act in accordance with his prerogative. [76] He received no pay, since he was merely exercising his right. [77] The relatives of the murdered person never took revenge on the slayer, realizing that he was powerless in the matter, though they frequently requested him to slay the person who had asked him to kill the first victim. He could never refuse to do so, even if the victim were his own brother, or if he knew that the person he was to kill was guiltless. The underlying principle was that this man's power had been increased to such a pitch by the distribution of presents [78] that if he failed to exercise it on demand, it would react upon himself and cause his own death. This Ásán-án-i warrior began in time to have an aversion for his vocation, since he sons, of whom the eldest was about sixteen, though old enough to appreciate the slights put upon their father, could do nothing to defend him.

[584] [987] [556] [411]

On a winter day one of these lads felt impelled to follow a seal down the north side of the Bella Coola valley along the edge of salt water. The weather had been cold for some time, but on this day it was so warm that he lay down to doze on the warm rocks. Near his head was a small opening which connected with a long passage to the ocean, and through this he presently heard the heavy breathing of sleeping seals. His burning desires aroused, he went to the edge of the steep crag overlooking the sea and dived in. He bravely penetrated into a narrow passage which led him under the rocks, until with his last gasp he emerged into a cave where there were countless seals. Waiting only a moment, and without disturbing the animals, he dived back through the passage safely.

When he reached home the lad said nothing about what he had seen, but that evening he began to make a seal-spear of the usual type with a wooden handle and a bone point. He asked his father to help him with this carpentry task, and his mother to make a rope for the harpoon-head. Though surprised at their son's energy, the parents did as he requested, but the fellow-villagers mocked at his efforts, for the lad was no hunter.

Next morning he asked his father to accompany him, and the two set off in a canoe, carrying the spear which had been made the previous evening. Before starting, the lad requested one of his brothers to have a fire ready for cooking the spoil that night. Father and son paddled to the entrance of the subterranean passage, though the old man was, of course, ignorant of its existence. The son told him to wait, and dived overboard, armed only with a club, for the seal-spear had really been unnecessary. He penetrated through the passage and at once killed a seal pup, born that year, with which he returned to the canoe. The lad explained nothing to his father, so that it seemed to the latter as if his son had dived down into the depths and there slain a seal, after remaining below for an amazingly long time.

When the two returned to the village they were greeted with a shriek of laughter at the small size of their quarry. In derision, the villagers took the pup from them and threw it from hand to hand, as if it had been a ball.

[224] [225] [574] [556]

As already described, it is customary whenever a man kills a deer, a mountain goat, several seals, or any other large game, for him to invite his fellows to a feast. The number of guests depends on the size of the quarry, but in all cases the chiefs are the first to be invited and anyone who fails to do so is laughed at for his stinginess. On this occasion the seal-pup was obviously so small that any general invitation to partake of it was ludicrous. Nevertheless, the lad sent a herald to invite not only morning of Hesquiltlen, and joined with a young girl engaged on the same task. When he returned home his wife had vanished. The jealousy was so great that she had gone back to the land of the supernatural.

THE DEATH OF Nuxalkmalid[*]

One May day, sometime about 1870, a certain Nuxalkmalid was hunting at Sacmik, below Kimsquit. He had climbed far up a mountain when he saw a black bear in an open space. Creeping within range, the man fired at the animal with his Hudson's Bay Company musket, and apparently struck it, for it rolled around wildly before slowly moving away. The hunter followed, hoping for a second shot. When the bear had almost reached the further end of a log which spanned a chasm it turned round, and Nuxalkmalid saw, to his great amazement, that its face was identical with his own. Forgetting to fire, the hunter stood, stricken motionless with wonder, his musket in his hand. His quarry moved slowly off, then paused to look back, and again Nuxalkmalid saw that its face was the image of his own. He dared not fire, nor did he dare follow the animal. One of his ancestors had received power from a bear, so he should not have been surprised at this vision, and, if he had been brave, he would have followed the animal to its home where he would have been made a chamen. In any appearance of the supernatural, whether or not the beholder take advantage of it, he should not mention what he has seen, and for one year should remain close to his house. Nuxalkmalid obeyed only the first of these requirements.

Next March Nuxalkmalid, with a companion whose name was Ayimlaic, set out for the same hunting-ground. As they neared their destination Nuxalkmalid, who was watching for game while his friend paddled, saw a goat far up the slope of a mountain. It had long fur hanging from its throat, such a goat as the people of old said had the power to kill men. He suggested that they land and hunt the animal the following day. The two camped on the very spot used by Nuxalkmalid the previous year, and that night he told his friend about his earlier experience, saying that he had just remembered it. Ayimlaic, foolishly, did not dissuade him from his hunting venture.

Next morning Nuxalkmalid set off with his dog and his stick, leaving Ayimlaic in camp. After some time the latter heard a shot, and idly wondered how his companion was faring. Towards dusk the dog returned alone, and Ayimlaic at once feared that his friend had met with misforas a warrior. Such a chief had no command over his followers. If he were a man of great prestige, many would be willing to serve under him, but he could not compel the services of anyone except his own slaves. A few individuals often declined to follow their fellows to war, although the force of public opinion usually prevented a too individualistic course. Inhabitants of other towns used their own discretion whether or not to join the party. If some of their relations had been slain in the previous attack, revenge influenced them to share in the retaliation, otherwise only the prestige of a mighty chief could secure them. No case is known in which all the Bella Coola villages joined in a single expedition; there were often temporary alliances between neighbouring settlements, but complete lack of central organization. The course of events was similar when a chief wished to raid without the motive of avenging an attack. For example, if a Bella Coola had been enslaved by a foreign tribe and slain by his owner, a brother of the victim might decide on revenge. The usual course was to kill a slave belonging to the murderers, though sometimes he led a raiding party if he could gain the necessary support.

[*]Although this story does not describe the obtaining of supernatural power, nor the exploits of a person so endowed, it is inserted in this section to show a recent belief in the presence of the supernatural, from which ability might have been gained.

Each warrior provided his own weapons, frequently the same as those used for hunting. Bows with obsidian-tipped arrows were most relied upon for offence, though slings were also used from canoes. Every man carried a spear, pointed like an arrow, for hand-to-hand fighting, although there was relatively little of this, most of the combats being fought at a distance with much noise, boasting, and expletives, but few casualties. Spears were, however, useful if the attackers succeeded in surprising a village at night. Hostilities are a thing of the past, consequently it was impossible to obtain detailed information respecting offensive weapons. Armour consisted of maple or birch slats reinforced with moosehide and worn around the body and chest; this rendered quick movement difficult but was effective against arrows. Muskets were introduced many years ago and armour consequently became useless. Large shields of moosehide were carried in all canoes, *534 [23] [illegible] in the months mentioned, the men of the party returned, each bringing enough marrow skins for an hour-glass. Some had as many than three or four shells could be made, in addition to the large supplies of cooked goat meat and grass.

THE DUELLING OF A LAZY HUNTER

*534 [22] [177] [411] [434] In the early days, when the visit of a wading vessel to Bulla Coula was a rare event, it is remembered that an Ambo chief bought a musket from the captain of the Beaver. He paid for it a pile of beaver skins which, when stacked up, was equal in height to the length of the weapon. This was one of the first muskets owned by a Bulla Coula and the chief took great care of it, never venturing to roughly, and hanging it with ropes from the roof of his house whenever he was not actually using it. One day a certain Inkkah asked the owner to lend him the musket to hunt goats. This was an slight request, and it was surprising, since Inkkah was not a hunter, but mostly packed in meat killed by others. At first the chief was unwilling to allow his prized weapon out of his sight, but at last consented when Inkkah promised to give him half the goats that he might kill.

Inkkah probably thought that even temporary possession of the mysterious musket would make it possible for him to kill goats, but when he had climbed up into the mountains, and walked for hours, he had not succeeded even in approaching one. He knew that if he returned home, unsuccessful and without some plausible excuse, he would be laughed to scorn, so he determined to cover his failure. First he beat the musket on a boulder until it was bent and battered, then he took a sharp rock and pounded himself until he was covered with blood from head to foot, as if he had been caught in a land-slide. When near the village, he lay down on the ground and called faintly for help; at first the people could not hear the sound, but after a short search someone found the would-be hunter, apparently in the last stages of exhaustion. Help was called, and Inkkah carried home, moaning feebly and saying that he would die. He could just whisper that he had been caught in a slide on the other side of the mountain, this explanation being necessary since no one had heard one in the near vicinity. As the apparent sufferer was lying in his house, one man noticed that the patient's wounds were from gashes, not from bruises, and loudly proposed that Inkkah must have mutilated himself to conceal his lack of success. Everyone came crowding around and agreed that this must be the case; Inkkah finally admitted the deception and congratulated his discoverer on his powers of observation. After a few days, he was as well as ever, but the chief had lost his precious musket.

[182] [illegible]: Pyramids on hunting ground consisting two stones.
[illegible]: Kwagiutl Siberian.
[illegible]: Various bands.
[illegible]: Synonym for Sowaxmidzilla, one of the nine supernatural siblings.

P

[416] [illegible]: Small wooden disk.
[illegible]: Legitim messenger of the dead.
[illegible]: Place on mainland opposite south end of Pemberton Island.
[539] [43] [illegible]: Synonym for mythmidzilla. Payments made by the wife's relatives to those of the bridegroom on the arrival outside his house on the wedding day. They are said to be in return for "food" received from them on many occasions.
[416] [illegible]: Ancestral name of a Bella Coola man.
[illegible]: Bone needle.
[illegible]: Anything powerful and dreaded, the word is frequently applied, characteristically, to Cannibals.
[illegible]: Small grown ring-worth of the Bella Coola valley and one of the Nuxalk-[illegible], is from one the head of South Bentinck Arm between the Nuxalk-[illegible] and the Bella Coola.
[illegible]: Bella Coola man figuring in a story.
[illegible]: Hearing scales.
[illegible]: Dance-[illegible].
[825] [illegible]: One of the first men to settle on [illegible] to the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Mosquito.
[illegible]: Name assumed by [illegible] to the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Variety of [illegible].
[illegible]: Celebrated Bella Coola chief who died about 1880.
[illegible]: Mountain Man, the point between Labouchere Channel and North Bentinck Arm.
[824] [illegible]: False bulkhead.
[411] [illegible]: Bow, weapon.
[195] [illegible], "Falls Heavily with a Crash," an when a dead tree chandon to earth. The term is used characteristically when referring to the death of an old and influential chief.
[372] [illegible]: Tree, probably birch, used for torches.
[illegible]: Meeting of chiefs.
[825] [illegible]: Halibut.
[illegible]: Crabapple.
[824] [illegible]: Bunchberry.

Q

[525] Qa'ukla: Rivers Inlet man, living in the last century.
qai: King crab in a gambling game.
qaiwaqwalid: Women's dancing cry uttered at the appearance of a masked dancer.
qai-ways: Uncommon term for the second day of a [illegible] dance, applied to the rites taking place during the day itself only.
Qaiye: Name conferred on the grandson of [illegible] in the beginning of time.
Qal'ik: Man mentioned in a story.
Qalem: 1—One of the first women to settle on the Dean River in the beginning of time.
2—Celebrated Bella Bella chief.

E: McDowell E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

6 192

Tagwaiaide: Bella Bella chief mentioned in a semi-historical account.

[825] Tsaadi: Northern tribe, possibly Haida.

Lyi: Dog salmon.

Tsalbang, "Where Feet Are Shortened": Village on shore of North Bentinck Arm east and north of the Nuskumamoosy River.

tapayaa: Owl.

[601] kwi: 1—Daughter, in direct address. As a courtesy title this is often used for girls unrelated to the speaker.

2—Younger sister.

Tsalwaiko: 1—One of the names of Mount Nuqhalt as chief.

2—Man who descended to Mount Nuqhalt in the beginning of time.

Tsalwat: Supernatural name of bald eagle.

ashwalat: 1—Type of cooperative house brought down from above by several of the first settlers in the beginning of time.

2—One of the names of the supreme god's house.

[825] nakalaiwa: White dog with black and red face.

[824] nakhalakum: Pleasure walk.

nalt": Cedar-bark.

[411] nawa: Sealing spear.

[825] kaw: Snake.

Tsaqaldz': Mountain near the Dean River.

Tsaqa: One of the first men to settle on the upper Dean River in the beginning of time.

[824] nasiwalp: Red cedar tree.

Tsawat: Locality on mainland opposite the north end of Vancouver Island, probably Knight Inlet.

nasawaw ain: Unidentified grape-like tuber.

Tsaltsaqa: Man mentioned in an ancient story.

[342] tsiba: Underground house with entrance and flue combined.

Tsika: Bella Coola sorcerer living in the last century.

Tsikwat: One of the first men to settle at Alqalkat in the beginning of time.

[825] tsimen i: Large clam-shell.

Tsimlaia: Sisaak name of a Sisaak man.

Tsimtsim: Lad mentioned in an ancient story.

tsipsa: Fisher.

[601] Tsitsumdzlaig, "The Sleep Giver": Name of a female shaman.

tsi gwa: di ema: Nephew's wife, term of indirect address.

tsi gwa: di sisi: Uncle's wife, term of indirect address.

Tsiwaat: Man mentioned in an ancient story of the upper Bella Coola valley.

Tsiksa: Celebrated Kitkatla chief living in the last century.

Tsi'laiya, "He of the Penis": Nickname given to a lad mentioned in an ancient story.

tsmalt: Valley.

Tsmasl, "Where the River Covers the Stones": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.

Tsmqaia: Locality on Fitzhugh Sound.

[824] Tsnisi: Mountain in the Carrier country.

tsxlxwaalp: Unidentified hollow-stemmed plant.

Tsxlxwaalpa·ts, "Where There Is Much tsxlxwaalp": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.

Smithsonian R-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

 192*

Tsaiit: River on mainland opposite north end of Vancouver Island.
Tsapenaii: Mountain near Dean Channel.
Tsaqa-s: One of Raven's female Crow relatives.
tsilaa: To marry.
tsilaxum: 1—Marriage in which the women's relatives make the first proposal, especially one forced owing to bereavement or other financial accompany in the man's family. [584]
2—Marriage without lengthy engagement.
tsisis: One having a voice like an eagle's.
tsqawiimum, "A Holding": The arrangement by which a man's wife's in-law gives him as "wife" an infant female relative in repayment for his expenses in connection with the weddings of his own daughters. [583]
tsuxa: Clover. [824]
tsulala: Robin. [825]
tsuxuma: Game played with bows and arrows. [411] tsuxumu: Arrow. [412]
tsyin: Adze.
tsyuxum: Stone maul without handle for driving fish net stakes. [825] tu: Black bear.
tuiyakum: 1—One of the a'ulk dances. [586]
2—Ceremonial bold to shame a deserting husband or wife.
3—Name taken by an early tuiyakum dancer at Kitamaat. [825] tukka: Snail.
Tlakamit: Bella Bella woman married by Smaaa of Kitamaat in the beginning of time.
Tlakaskin: 1—One of the first women to settle at Kwiyai in the beginning of time.
2—Name acquired by one of the first men to settle at Stuaa in the beginning of time.
3—Ancestral name of a Kitamaat man.
Tlakaskiyaa^{m}: Woman dwelling on the coast south of Bella Coola in the beginning of time.
tlakawa-i: Knife of mountain goat bone. [412] tlakwak: Red rock cod. The difference between this and xaiay is problematical. [825] Tlakatli: One of the first men to settle at Smith Inlet in the beginning of time.
Tlakak'ak': 1—Supernatural woman known to the people of Smith Inlet.
2—One of the first women to settle at Smith Inlet in the beginning of time.
Tlas'kwa: Servant to the supernatural being Nuxkiapsh.
Tlawaka'ki: One of the first men to settle at Smith Inlet in the beginning of time.
Tlaqmai-ki: Supernatural woman resident in the land above. This word is said to be unrelated to Tlaqma-ki, although a common origin seems probable.
Tlaqma-ki: 1—Supernatural child resident in the land above.
2—Name acquired by a female child in the beginning of time. [824] tlaqhi: Fir-bark.
tlaqqa: Correct term, in the language of Raven, for skull-cap worn by adolescent girls. See alawaa.
tla'swala: The pouring, by a shaman, of grease from ten vessels on the fire as a means of curing the sick.
Tlawos: One of the first women to settle in the Dean valley in the beginning of time.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

This brought forth another denial. Then, becoming still more angry, she used her supernatural power to chill the house. It became colder and colder until everything was coated with ice, while a whirlwind carried the brothers up into the four corners of the house. At this the shaman used his heat-giving bladder to drive away the cold and the four dropped to earth, none the worse for their experience. Then they told the truth to the angry mother. 539* 756* 787*

"Yes," said the shaman, "we did meet your son. But do not be alarmed. We did not hurt him, only buried him in the sand up to his neck, as a prank."

The four brothers went back and unearthed their victim, with whom they returned to his mother. ushuman-i forgot her anger in the joy of having her son restored and they all had a pleasant time together.

The brothers now continued their journey until they came to a house with a man sitting inside. They did not realize that they had been ascending and that this was Ilpuxstw's abode. He invited them to enter and gave them his daughter as a joint wife. Soon the house began to grow unbearably hot. Ilpuxstw was conspiring to roast the mortals, and would have succeeded had not the shaman used the cold-producing bladder to lower the temperature. That night the four stayed with their father-in-law, sleeping in turn with their joint wife.

Ilpuxstw did not realize that his guests were too strong for him. In the morning he set them what he considered impossible tasks, such as hunting large numbers of goats on the mountains; thanks to the shaman's power, however, the four young men were able to accomplish them all. Their wife tried to injure her husbands by transforming herself into a ferocious bear, which attacked them, but before the arrows of the youngest brother, it fell dead. Again she changed herself into a goat and succeeded in butting the shaman over the edge of a precipice, but he merely assumed the form of eagle down and floated up again. They brought back to Ilpuxstw's house a vast amount of goat flesh. The shaman announced that he was proof against all Ilpuxstw's wiles, but the latter, not convinced, tried once more to roast the brothers by building a fire beneath the house; this time, as before, the heat was powerless against the cold-giving power of the bladder.

Next day Ilpuxstw asked the shaman, whom he rightly judged to be the cause of his failure to slay the four, to accompany him to cut firewood. The two went off in a canoe, while the three other brothers stayed in the house with their wife. Ilpuxstw guided the canoe to the very centre of the ocean, where he asked the shaman to drive in a post he had brought with him. He did this easily with a sledge hammer such as is used for [412]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

*539 *756 *787 [412]

driving stakes for olachen-nets, but at almost the last stroke it slipped from his grasp to the bottom of the sea. Then Ăyuxtĕw burst out angrily:

"I have had that hammer for a very long time. It is a favourite of mine. I hate to lose it."

"I am very sorry, but it was an accident," replied his son-in-law.

"Can you not recover it?" asked Ăyuxtĕw.

"I will try," answered the young man.

Accordingly, he dived into the sea. Ăyuxtĕw, who had been hoping for this, caused a thick coating of ice to form over the whole surface of the ocean, and went home, thinking he had seen the last of the troublesome young man. Such was not the case, for the shaman merely changed himself into a salmon, picked up the hammer in his mouth and swam away, looking for a crack in the ice. Finding one at last he crawled up on top, where he became human again and returned to his father-in-law's house, very angry. Ăyuxtĕw was sitting warming himself before the fire, but when the shaman threw the hammer on the ground before him he disintegrated into dust, dead. Then the four brothers returned home, leaving their evil wife behind them.

THE FOUR BROTHERS
(Second Version)

Ka'laitsts, the youngest of four brothers, lived on the Kimsquit River. He was a very powerful man, able, through his supernatural talents, to change at will into any animal or bird. In his box he kept the necessary appurtenances for his transformations. One day, when travelling upstream with his three brothers, he saw an old man spearing salmon from a river canoe. This was really Great Blue Heron in human form, and he was using a wonderful glass-like thing in his eye with the aid of which he was able to follow without difficulty the course of a fish beneath the water. Ka'laitsts desired to gain possession of this potent eye, so turned back, and in the guise of a magnificent salmon, swam upstream close to Great Blue Heron. The latter thrust at him with his spear, but missed. Ka'laitsts turned and swam down near the further bank, then again went up near the canoe, this time allowing the fisherman to spear him. Great Blue Heron tried in vain to haul in his catch, but succeeded only in being drenched with water; at last Ka'laitsts cut the cord with his knife and swam upstream, where he re-assumed human form, still carrying the harpoon-head. Great Blue Heron went home weeping bitterly, and bade his wife and children do likewise, because his means of support had vanished.

An hour or so later the four brothers arrived at Great Blue Heron's house. Following the universal custom he offered them food, and, as

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

women listening from the village are able to tell how many have been caught from the number of times the cry xak'lai is raised. 226 796

Then the salmon are cut up (only shell knives may be used for the purpose) and cooked. Everything must be used, heads, bones, and entrails, the only refuse being the blood which is scraped from the leaves and carried into the woods. The leaves themselves, and the strings of dyed and undyed cedar-bark are thrown into the river in accordance with a desire expressed by Nakkymm long ago. When everything is ready for a meal, the men take their places in two rows, facing each other across a coarse bark mat. Bark spoons have been provided, and when the heralds call for food, the fisherman brings the heads of the salmon and the guests make the motions of eating, though in reality these parts are dried and kept for winter. Boxes containing a liberal portion of the choice meat are next served and all eat freely. Each guest puts on one side what he has not consumed as if to carry it away, as is the custom at an ordinary feast, though his share is really left in the shelter until the following day. Finally, a third course is provided, the back of the fish cooked with the bone in position. Like the last, the guests eat as much as they desire and pack up the residue as if to take away. Then they leave the Spring Salmon House. [412] 226 796 574 [251]

All the fish are not cooked on the one occasion. The following day the fisherman again calls back the men of his village. The same type of meal is served, but this time the guests carry away what they do not eat for the benefit of their families. This portion may be eaten by the women without affronting the salmon. [562]

This rite has not been performed in full detail in Bella Coola for many years, and it was impossible to collect information on some points. It is uncertain, for example, whether this ceremony was carried out by every fisherman or whether there used to be certain individuals with the prerogative of dealing with the first catch. The latter appears to be the most logical 226 796 424

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575 "I will get my puppet-patron."

796 A whistle sounds, the kukusiut women drone and the uninitiated see one of the puppet figurines move across the back of the house, though they do not see the concealed ropes by which this is managed. The figure disappears as if it had entered its owner who goes to X and makes the motion of passing something into him. The other dwayer do likewise. Sometimes the dramatic effect is increased by sending a kusiut to the roof to strike one of the boards as if the puppet had landed from above with a thump; or the owner may come in from the back-room, walking backwards and drawing his puppet after him by means of a string matching the floor in colour and fastened to his foot. Another device is to have the puppets suspended from the roof by means of similar cords, invisible in the darkness. The owner of one of these takes it in his arms and revolves sunwise on himself as he moves to X, and at the same time conceals the figurine beneath his blanket. The last puppet is always the giant toad, the most potent of all.

575 When X has thus been strengthened for the perils which he is to undergo, a number of the uninitiated are invited to come forward to see him. As they step forth, one of the senior kukusiut kneads with his fingers against the back of the neck of each to strengthen his spirit so that it will not be drawn from him with fatal results. The uninitiated come forward, see X, without realizing that they are really gazing on two individuals, and shudder at a knife which is lying near. This was always of copper or obsidian in the old days.

796

[412]

The actual cutter is one of the uninitiated, though efforts are made to have as operator a son or other near relative of a prominent kusiut so that he may easily be initiated into the society if anything should go amiss. One informant, who was called upon to act when about fifteen years of age, vividly recalled the experience in the following manner:

He was sitting with ten or twelve lads of his own age, each of whom was asked by a marshal:

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

APPENDIX I

MECHANICAL PROCESSES

NO attempt was made to study either the material culture of the Bella Coola, or their methods of manufacturing, but information on some points was obtained incidentally. All sociological and religious features connected therewith have already been described. 121

THE TAKING AND PREPARATION OF OLACHEN

227

The run of olachen, spuiq, comes about the end of April, and as many as possible are caught. In preparation, nets, ähe'x", are brought out from the boxes where they have been stored during the winter, examined, and repaired. If necessary, new ones must be manufactured out of nettle-(lowa.) fibre laid away by the women for this purpose. By rolling the material on their legs, they produce a thin twine; five strands of this are then interwoven, making a finished cord capable of resisting great strain. The nets are constructed by the men. The type used at the present time, which is said not to differ from that formerly employed, consists of a purse-like sack, oval in cross-section, open at the wider end and tapering very gradually to the other, which is closed. The total length is about thirty feet, the diameter at the open end about eight feet, and at the closed end about three feet. A new net is dipped in a mixture of boiled hemlock-bark to darken it, and then boiled in a solution of willow-bark to prevent the knots from slipping. [226] [221] [283] [462] [286] [386]

The setting out of a net is not an easy task, so two or three men agree to work as partners. In the present degenerate days, property rights are not respected and each group selects a suitable spot. The best location is where the water is about three feet deep and runs rapidly, but without ripples, over a smooth piece of the bottom; such a place is called a ckläq. When the fish begin to run plentifully, the partners paddle out to set their net, taking with them four stakes, each about ten feet in length. The weight of a full net is tremendous, so the poles have to be driven down at least six feet, a difficult task on account of the stony bottom. Selecting the exact spot, one of four posts, älkdjäles, is set upright and held in position by being tied to a cross-piece, nudjiqosta, fastened to the canoe for the purpose. While his two partners hold the craft steady, the third must begin to pound down the stake; metal mauls are now commonly used, but in former times this work was always done with an unhafted stone maul, kowuma. The fishermen relieve one another intermittently until the top of the pole has been driven down to within 226 [476] [423] [178] [412]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

the bow. The crew take their places at equal intervals between, each 502 ready to work on the opposite side from the man in front. Each is provided with a ten-foot pole and also a paddle for use in spots where the river is too deep for poling. The rivers of central British Columbia are shallow, but swift, and their navigation requires considerable skill. Going upstream, the captain constantly seeks the smoothest water, where he knows the current will be least strong, and uses his pole to keep the craft headed in the right direction. Should it be caught in a violent eddy, he exerts his full strength, and it is his voice that rallies the crew for a final exertion to shove the canoe through. Coming downstream is more dangerous though less wearying. The water is so cold and the current so swift that a capsizing usually causes the drowning of one or more of the occupants, and the captain must never relax. Spoon canoes are very stable, and cannot be upset by a faulty distribution of weight. This is [501] essential in view of the rapids, but they are heavy and cumbersome, unsuited to carrying large loads.

When a carpenter wishes to make a canoe, he fells a cedar of suitable 396 size and trims off bark and branches to leave the central stem available. Slowly and laboriously he chips with his adze until he has hollowed out [412] the trunk to the proper shape, and at the same time has smoothed away the outer surface. Sometimes a small fire is built on the trunk so that it will char the wood beneath and make it easier to remove, but the carpenter must be careful that the flames do not spread too far. Finally, as his work reaches completion, he becomes even more painstaking than before. The sides and bottom are whittled to a thickness of no more than three inches, and at this stage a faulty stroke may pierce the shell and ruin the toil of weeks. When completed, it is necessary to widen and harden the canoe. A fire is built beside it and stones thrown into the flames to heat; then lifted out and dropped into the water with which the craft has been partly filled. Steam rises, and the carpenter confines it by covering the canoe with matting, at the same time endeavouring to pull and force the sides apart. Sometimes he can do so by mere muscular effort, more often it is necessary to lay transverse thwarts within and, by pounding them downwards, extend the sides. No great extension is possible, nor is it required, but the steaming process is considered to harden the wood as well as widen the canoe.

Until five or ten years ago, the Bella Coola made another type of 501 canoe, dana, for use on the ocean. A few examples of this style are still in existence (see Plate 22). Though approximately the same length as river canoes, they are proportionately much deeper and narrower, and an extension downwards near the stern serves in place of a keel. These craft are sufficiently sea-worthy to weather any ordinary storm. Several

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

501 of the older people remember seeing in their youth another type, lakaw, with a high raised prow; this may have been identical with the mdka which others describe as having an elevated bow and a low stern. An entirely different craft was the tamkwl-i, named from one of the geese, [825] probably the white-fronted goose. A strip of maple fastened along each side caught the water in moving, with a sound like that of the peculiar rustling flight of the bird. The bow was often carved in the form of a [532] bird's head and the stern in that of a tail to further the resemblance. No living Bella Coola claims to have seen one of these canoes, though some had heard of them from their grandparents. The large, open type of canoe made by the Haida was known to the Bella Coola, but not constructed by them. Sails were used on all ocean-going canoes; they were usually of matting, though skins sewn together were occasionally employed.

501 Canoes are occasionally lashed together. In several kusiut dances a wide platform for dancing is required, and the need is met by lashing 535 planks crosswise over two canoes, near the bow and stern, thus fastening them together. Planking is laid on the two supports and a platform so constructed. Careful inquiries showed that this fastening was merely a temporary arrangement; the booms were not bound in any particular manner, nor was there any fixed distance between the craft. Sometimes 501 the same expedient was used for transport when the load was too heavy [171] for two canoes separately, a device which is said to have been used more commonly by the tribes of the outer coast than the Bella Coola. Canoes lashed together are termed ds-awandg.

Rafts, satskwl-a, consisting of rough logs fastened together with cross-pieces, were commonly used on the lakes of the interior, and occasionally for river work when canoes were unavailable and there was no time to make them. Another expedient in similar emergencies was to [177] make bark canoes, such as are still constructed by the Carriers. The Bella Coola regard the construction of these as definite copying, and do not profess to have as much skill as their teachers whose canoes, it is said, can be folded for portaging. There is a tradition that, many generations ago, a few clever Bella Coola knew how to make skin canoes.

THE PREPARATION OF CEDAR-BARK

314 Early spring is the time to sasakmls, that is, to gather the inner bark of the cedar. Men occasionally assist in the task, though this is really [221] woman's work. The worker selects a small cedar, choosing one about [462] six inches in diameter, with smooth trunk and relatively free from knots. With a knife she makes a horizontal incision in the bark, two or three feet [412] from the ground, sometimes girdling the sapling. Then she inserts her

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

lata, a tool consisting of a slightly bent stick with sharpened point, into the cut, and runs it upwards to make a vertical incision as high as she can reach. Going around to the other side of the tree, the woman makes another cutting of the same kind. Finally, she inserts her fingers at the bottom and pulls gently outwards, so that the bark is drawn off in a long streamer which tapers to a point at the top. The other half section of the tree is similarly stripped; this treatment frequently kills saplings which can then be used for fire-wood. Although small trees are preferred, a woman sometimes collects her bark from a large one by means of many vertical incisions. 314 [412]

The bark is taken home without further preparation. The woman carefully peels off and throws away the rough outer bark, leaving the smooth inner covering, lxqal, which alone is valuable. If the weather is fine, this is dried in the sun for two or three days; otherwise, it is placed over a fire within the house. When all moisture has been removed, it is rolled up and kept for future use. The bark can be used for making baskets with no further treatment except splitting into bands of the proper width. [285]

When pounded bark, such as is widely used for ceremonial purposes, is required, the woman prepares the necessary tools. Two small sticks, each about six inches in length and one-half inch in diameter, are used as tweezers, kipla, though the bark can, if necessary, be held in the hand. Two beating sticks are required, each about two feet in length, six inches wide, and half an inch thick; one edge of each is rounded off, though not sharpened to a cutting surface. When all is ready, the woman crouches on the floor, with the lower beater, lqaq, held stationary before her on a box or other raised rest, and lays an end of the bark over the rounded edge. Taking the other, the upper beater, spikta, in her right hand, she strikes downwards so that its edge slides down the side of the stationary stick, bruising the fragment of bark. With her left hand she pushes the piece slightly further over the edge, and again the upper beater falls. This is repeated time after time until the whole length is pulverized and softened. It is tiring work, but a woman accomplishes more in an hour than seems possible as her muscles become accustomed to the shearing motion. The bark becomes broken and frayed but its tensile strength is sufficient to prevent it from falling apart. Then the woman brushes it with shavings to remove loose fragments and the work is done. This type of pounded cedar-bark is called ikw'. 287

Ikw' is usually dyed red before being used for ceremonial purposes and is then termed mak'. In winter the dye is made from alder-bark with pieces of the wood attached, but in summer only scrapings from the inner bark are used. Water is placed in a vessel, urine added, pieces of alder 287 386 [824]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

Ałałkalmun: Supernatural being sent by Smaiewa to meet Nałkpum.

ałałpwał, "One Who Is a Guest": The term applied to a youth whose father, a chief, will certainly give a potlatch to start him on the path to social importance though he has not yet done so. Such a lad is served ceremoniously at every feast. [556]

Ałałstawi: Abalone-shell covered stick used by one of the first settlers in the beginning of time.

Ałałstay-ałłilus: One of the first women to settle at Tałio in the beginning of time.

ałłłanałł: Word of uncertain meaning often appended to łnamtmem as complete term for the first night of a łnaiist dance. [575]

ałłłnałmum, "A Dragging Across" (as one does with a heavy log): The term applied to the transmission of a name from a wife to her husband either at marriage or later, when being repurchased. [425] [553]

ałłwis: Toasted food of any kind. [262]

Ałłłsmmmux: Ancestral name of a Stuax man.

ałłłq': Perforated, adjective. [252]

ałłmuxmm: Those who perform to assist marriage dancers.

Ałłmałtwałsis: Kwiist name of a Bella Coola man.

Ał-łmłmis: One of the first men to settle at Tałio in the beginning of time. [585] ałłpałis, "Weapons of War": The term applied to the presents distributed by the groom and his relatives to the bride and here prior to entering her house. [431]

ałłpałłm: Gifts given in secret, soon after betrothal, by the father of the future groom to the father of the future bride. [584] ałłpałłm: Marshal.

Ałłpmtw-i: Immoral supernatural woman; synonym for Łnimałłmał.

Ałłmmałmis: One of the men who came to earth at Mount Tsałał in the beginning of time.

Ał-łłłłał: Totem-pole erected by the first settlers at Stuax in the beginning of time.

ałłłłał: Lying position with legs close together such as is maintained for four days by an adolescent girl, and also by a widow or a widower. [516]

ałły: Sacred song in fast time. [533]

ał: Rapid beating of time during which a dancer does not try to move his feet in rhythm with it. [535]

Ał'pmtw-a: Daughter of the first settlers at Łałłe in the beginning of time.

ałmłus: Kwiist dancer whose disguise becomes apparent through an accident.

ałałła: Synonym for łnamłjist; one of the days of a potlatch, probably that following the appearance of a masked representation of the deceased. [556] ałałła: 1—Night-time.

2—That part of a Cannibal dance when songs are prepared in the middle of the night.

ała: Come, imperative singular.

Ałłmus: 1—One of Smaiewa's sons in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first women to settle at Nuwałł in the beginning of time.

ałłał-łłaix: Central seat behind the fire.

ałłłłałłus: Hammer with handle for pounding stakes for fish-nets. [412]

Ałłłmałłłłu: Mountain on north side of the lower Bella Coola.

ałłłłałłum: One who estimates the passage of time by watching the movements of the sun. [805]

Łłłu-łpmum, "The Devourer of Meat Killed by Another": Term used by hunters to Wolf. [825]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

hainw: Tail.
hankit: Ants.
hee: Black hawthorn.
Kaiw-i: Kwiat name of a Kimsquit man.
Kamilhen: Ancestral name of the wife of Tsaly who was changed to stone in the beginning of time.
hanli: Region.
Kapaskjat: Kitlobe chief living in the beginning of time.
hanaly: 1—Marriage, properly arranged and legalized.
2—The actual wedding day.
Kawaiw-i: Kwiat name of a Kimsquit woman.[1] hilai: Bark bucket for holding liquids.
hilawhkajat: The seeking of assistance from a man who owns a curing repository.
hilawhkanam: Investment-present, i.e., one for which a return is expected.
hihate: Back-room in which nasal initiates and others are concealed.
hilim: Woman during ceremonia.
hilha, "What Was Sent Down": Intangible possession, such as a myth or a prerogative, inherited from the distant past, usually from the coming to earth of the first settlers in the beginning of time.
himapsin: Wooden tongs such as are used for lifting hot stones.
hilamhkjat ale hwantpsin: Kwiatam rite in which the performer appears to be drowned.
hal-air or hal-ait, "The Gainer": One who has been initiated as a member of the hwiat society but has not yet danced, especially one admitted through unauthorized knowledge or through successful participation in either a hwiatam or a Mystery dance.
hilulu, "Rendered Incapable of Returning": Said of an uninitiated person who is alleged to have stumbled on a repository.
Kilaiap: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
hintsan: The dormant waiting for power by a shaman who, having had one visitation, awaits further manifestations before displaying his ability.
hipa, nanaiw, hipaas: Grandmother.
hiks-tsam-an-i: Ceremonial marriage of a female child to an adult man.
Ki'inimi: Name given to their canoe by the first settlers at Stuax in the beginning of time.
Kilalamamu, "The Wise One": One of Raven's names as chief.
Kimilhen: One of the first women to settle at Alpalai in the beginning of time.
Kina'o: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
kinam: 1—Crab.
2—Enormous crab-like creature, alleged to be found far in the forest.
Kipalu: Name of a shaman who received his power from ghosts.
kipi: Red elderberry.
kipin: Wooden tweezers used in the pounding of cedar-bark.
kis: Unidentified plant.
kisam: To toast dried salmon.
kisamanik: Supported, in the sense of held in place by physical assistance.
Kisipanai: Locality on Dean Channel, west of Farrell.
Kit-an: Place on south side of North Bentinck Arm, about one-quarter mile from its head.

[1]This name appears to be an entirely different word from Kaiw-i.

192*
825
824
585
415
426
431
424
412
575
756
601
825
824
413
252

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192

stsulia: Promontory on hunting ground extending into ocean.
Ovkān·i: Kimsquit fisherman.
Owiki: Calvert Island.
Oxḑoxem: Synonym for Xemxemālotla, one of the nine supernatural siblings.

P

[415] ḑai·s: Small wooden dish.
Ḑalwātl: Legless messenger of the dead.
Pa·s: Place on mainland opposite north end of Vancouver Island.
[585] [431] ḑāsutum: Synonym for nuḑāxsikel·um: Payments made by the wife's relatives to those of the bridegroom on first arrival outside his house on the wedding day. They are said to be in return for "Food" received from them on many occasions.
Pātcātcus: Ancestral name of a Nusḑalst man.
[412] ḑāsalia: Bone needle.
ḑāxotla: Anything powerful and dreaded; the word is frequently applied, rhetorically, to Cannibals.
Pe·slo: Small stream rising north of the Bella Coola valley and east of the Necleetsconnay; it flows into the head of South Bentinck Arm between the Necleetsconnay and the Bella Coola.
Piqotla: Bella Coola man figuring in a story.
pilstl: Herring scales.
punāxta: Dance-apron.
Punghi: One of the first men to settle at Snuhli in the beginning of time.
[825] ḑum·: Mosquito.
Ponpollotsdimut: Name assumed by Smaoan in the beginning of time.
po·qwais: Variety of snmq.
Potles: Celebrated Bella Coola chief who died about 1880.
Pe·isb: Mesatche Nose, the point between Labouchere Channel and North Bentinck Arm.
[824] potsqi: False hellebore.
[411] poisun: Bow, weapon.
ḑoyāy, "Fallen Heavily with a Crash," as when a dead tree thunders to earth: The term is used rhetorically when referring to the death of an old and influential chief.
[195] ḑsaixl: Tree, probably birch, used for torches.
[372] ḑskun: Meeting of chiefs.
[825] ḑwi: Halibut.
ḑx': Crabapple.
[824] ḑxolt: Bunchberry.

Q

[525] Qa'ātlis: Rivers Inlet man, living in the last century.
qai: King stick in a gambling game.
qainaxqualitl: Women's droning cry uttered at the appearance of a masked dancer.
qai·nugs: Uncommon term for the second day of a kusiut dance, applied to the rites taking place during the day itself only.
Qaiyu: Name conferred on the grandson of Smaoan in the beginning of time.
Qak'lis: Man mentioned in a story.
Qakmo: 1—One of the first women to settle on the Dean River in the beginning of time.
2—Celebrated Bella Bella chief.

APPENDIX D

qaxta, "Bed Covering": Term applied to the presents given as such to the party of a bridegroom when they enter the bride's house on a wedding day. [585]
q̓ámdjut, "A Shaking of the Fingers": Rhetorical allusion to presents regarded as "Dust." [431]
q̓ánliktnum: To revolve sunwise. [195]
Q̓ánq̓anliktnamlaix, "The One Who Revolves Sunwise to Give Strength": One of Tlitcaplilaw-a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.
Q̓ápkix: Place of petrified power near Kwatna. [778] Qixwan: Village on the Skeena River.
q̓uiust: Supernatural creature resembling a diminutive human being. [825] qukst: Salmon liver.
q̓uks: Co-wife in a polygynous household. [595] qulnas, vocative, qulnais: Wife's brother, or sister's husband, man speaking.
qulnaix: Gathering of the supernatural beings for the performance of dances in the land above. [601] qume: Unidentified salt water fish, said to be called "Lard-fish" by white men. [825] Q̓unqunum ul di dá Sqem, "The Unlooser of Light": One of Raven's names as chief.
q̓upstánm: 1—The ability of a chief to sit down ceremonially in virtue of the goods distributed for his seat, the ground over which he walks, and other requirements.
2—The initial establishment of a youth as chief.
q̓uputsáhts: Stone axe.
q̓us: Period of engagement. [412] ●
Q̓ushila: Q̓uqo-ts man.
Q̓uai-lis: 1—One of Raven's names as chief.
2—Kustut name of a Bella Coola man.
Q̓uaistamlaix: Stuax man mentioned in an ancient story.
Q̓uaixstáw-i: Shaman's name of a Stuax woman.
Q̓uaixwas, "Begrimed": Name of a copper often cast into fire.
quaks: Unidentified (and probably mythical) type of lizard, allegedly about four feet long, found near Dean Channel. [825]
q̓uakm, vocative, q̓uakm; plural, alq̓uakm: Eldest brother or sister. [601]
Q̓ua'kms: Name, in the Bella Bella language, given to a wooden woman made by one of the first settlers in the beginning of time.
quakik: Gull. [825]
q̓ual'ma'kis, "Eldest": Term of respectful address to Porcupine as senior of all animals.
Q̓uakwalelim, "The Mover": Name given to their house by one of the first groups of settlers at Tál-io in the beginning of time.
Q̓uakna: Term from which the Anglicized "Kwatna" is derived: Generic name for the villages at Kwatna Harbour, Burke Channel. [103]*
Q̓uamaxa'kis: Chief living on the upper Tsawat in the beginning of time.
quanó-usta: Large box used for boiling olachen. [415]
Q̓uapa: Village south-west of the head of South Bentinck Arm.
Q̓uaqmai: Place on Schooner Pass.
Q̓uaqwatila: Sisaok name of a Bella Coola man.
q̓uatlnalum: Marks made to commemorate an event, such as carvings at chiefs' meeting-place, virtually a memorial. [211]
q̓uatlnanm: Figure representing crest.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Saiutl: Thunder, anthropomorphized. 192*
Saiynäs: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man. [821] sätäisi: Historical account; the term does not include ancestral myths or other personal property. [173]
sä·lhälnmm: 1—Food distributed by the donor of a kusiut dance; the term is also applied to presents given instead of food. [431]
2—Food stored up for this purpose, or even for a meal.
sä·ljsta: Cannibalistic incubus. [251] sä·ljsnmm: Presents given as "Food" by a bridegroom and his relatives to the bride's kinsmen when the latter come to his house on the wedding day. [585] sällzhdimut: Profession of kusiut executioner. [431] sälukwäläs: Object obtained by a shaman from a supernatural being and displayed by him. [463]
sämł: Sockeye salmon. [825]
Sänäilpsmäläk Äläunsäm: One of the sons of the supreme god.
Sänunuzmmläix: Supernatural being who has the prerogative of scratching in the land above.
Sänuthäm or Sänuthämdimut: One of the names of Mount Nusłalst as chief.
Sänuximäxäs, "The Light Bringer": 1—One of Raven's names as chief.
2—Ancestral name of a Stuix man.
3—A celebrated Bella Coola hunter and chief.
sänx; vocative, sätäi; vocative plural, sänxmä·ks: Comrade, especially one engaged in an enterprise with the speaker.
sä·tla: Spoon-shaped river canoe.
Sätlia: Village at point between North and South Bentinck Arms.
Sätlyänuts: River flowing into the middle Bella Coola from the north.
Sä·lma: Death, anthropomorphized. [761] sälälts: Whetstone, archaic. [412]
Sä·tsk': 1—Kimsquit River.
2—Village near the mouth of the river. [101]
Sä·tshamp: Inhabitants of the Kimsquit River valley.
sätzkwäl·a: Raft.
Sä·shamänäw·i: Shaman's name acquired from Death.
sama: Pillow. [573]
samadjat, "Pillowness": Kusiut ceremonial at which no call is present.
sapi, vocative, sayinas: Brother or sister younger than speaker, especially the youngest of a family. [601]
Sayinas: Proper name of a youngest brother mentioned in an ancient story. [824] säskam: Bracken. [823]
säxwänas: Tide flats.
sähdjulk: Heart.
Sälwäläsam: That part of Senq' which did not fall in the crash at the beginning of time.
Sämhält: Village on Rivers Inlet.
Sämsläträ·i: Part of a peculiar repository.
sämsämhdimut, "Like Salmon": The so-called "Winter Salmon," probably steelhead salmon, obtained by Raven in the beginning of time.
sä'mäyäs, "Resting Place": Limit of the sun's course. The word for December is connected with this. [805] sänkwäläsäm: Leader of musicians. [821]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

shalt': Devil's-club.
shalemandit: To lament ceremonially, the term used to describe the reason for a memorial potlatch. [824] Shaml, "Ashes": Ancestral name created for a Swalali chief about 1910. [765] shamtsk: Supernatural creature dwelling in water.
shay: Anus.
shanm: Splinters projecting upwards from the bole of a broken tree-trunk. [824]
Shamolymanwa: One of the first women to settle at Swalali in the beginning of time.
Shapa: Chief of the spring salmon.
shatsmam: Narrow strips of goat skin with wool attached, distributed at marriage. [585]
shelintz: Merganser. [825] shelwadjat, "The Opening": Ceremony when the first public presents are given to the family of a future wife, following the announcement of betrothal. [584]
shi: To cure, especially with the aid of a frenzied beating of sticks. [431] Shimatsit: Stuax man mentioned in an ancient story.
shimp, "Cure Ye!": Call of invitation to a kusiut dance in the upper Bella Coola valley.
shiwatz: Cloud.
shma: Thick hide, either of moose or caribou. [825]
shma: Semi-circular knife used by women for cutting salmon. [412] shmaix, shmaal, or shmdjat: 1—Frenzied beating of sticks for curing purposes, especially when the patient is a member of a secret society. [755]
2—Final kusiut rite at end of the ceremonial season.
shmim: To cure by means of the frenzied pounding of sticks.
Shml, "The Charred Portion of a Half-Consumed Log": a'alt name obtained in the beginning of time.
Shmnal: House used by a group of first settlers near Stuax in the beginning of time.
Shmualaw-a: Daughter of the first settlers at Nuxalst in the beginning of time.
sha'tcalc: Fungus. [824]
shlemalasta: 1—Box made of strands of cedar-bark. [415]
2—Ancient name of nsaak head-dress.
shay: Ceremonial designs executed on the exterior front wall of a house.
shahl': Rose.
Shalikuaw-a: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man. [825] shal: Wasp.
Shalsemmasta: Rock on shore of North Bentinck Arm where war trophies were washed. [727]
Shymshal: Name of house brought down by first settlers at Slokhal in the beginning of time; the term was also applied by them to one of their female relatives.
shal, sematar, shasi: Parent-in-law or child-in-law. [601] shlay: Suitable place in the river for setting olachen nets.
shlia: Game played with throwing stones.
shaslat: Synonym for yaamax, the tangible or intangible prerogative possessed by some kukustat in addition to a dance rite. [424]
shawalsia: River sculpin. [825]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[824] xpeddp: Cedar roots.
xpist: Sling.
xpistpistem: To use a sling.
[578] xpitl: Term of opprobrium applied to a woman, signifying slave ancestry.
[821] xpimmus: Fleecy cloud.
xpinlu: Muzzle-like power which binds the mouth of a Cannibal against ordinary food.
[412] xpma: Wooden comb.
S'qa't: Land of Ashes, alternative term for Squmi.
xpo: Umbilical hernia.
[601] xpolymu: Distant relative of female sex, when referred to by man.
xpolkindjat: Long phallus.
Squmil: Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
xpoxo: Unconsumed portion of share of food carried away by guests from a meal.
xpoxoly: Food distributed for carrying away as xpoxo.
[415] xpuli: Large, flat, soft basket of broad strips of bark.
xpumuxy: Presents given by guests to the donor of a memorial potlatch.
[431] xpulp: Maple.
[824] xpum: Sudden start that expels the spirit.
xpupsit: Outer plank of cedar, convex and bark-covered on one side.
xpusal: Love song or other non-ceremonial composition.
xpuskm: Fern, probably one of the genus Aspidium.
[533] xpuslwuskm: 1—Theme of a song dealing with current events, especially allusions to the faults of someone present.
2—Singers who use this type of composition.
[825] xpusl ann: Large, unidentified bird.
[374] Sqalahua: Heat: A supernatural being.
Sqali: Kwiat name of a Bella Coola man.
[825] xpu'un: Loon.
xtal-ol: Mountain goat marrow, a food which is said to have remarkable powers of preventing hunger.
[262] Stalqalwum, "The Increase of the Sun's Heat through the Addition of Fire Sticks": A'alt name obtained in the beginning of time.
xtalhmy; plural, xtatlhmy; receiver plural, xtatlhmy:
1—Chief.
2—One of the first men to settle at Alqalxt in the beginning of time.
3—One of the first men to settle at Snaal in the beginning of time.
4—Name created by Smaaux for a grandson.
5—Sxaak name of a Kimsquit man.
[601] xtin: Mother, term commonly used by an adult in indirect address.
[825] xtindahlkm: Bat.
xtindimut: Step-mother; the term is also applied to other women of the generation older than the speaker and related to him by marriage.
[601] xtintumu: Elderly female relatives of the same ancestral family as the speaker.
[614] xtuk: Whetstone.
Stuxis: Man mentioned in a story.
[412] Stuy': Mountain near Tal'ia.
xtuqum, "What Is Hidden": The correct solution of the Mystery dance.
xtumuxu: Archaic term for chiefs, now used only rhetorically.
[824] xtuly: Cranberry.

sk̓aqaliku': Goods collected by the relatives of a man when working on his commission as carpenter or other artisan in preparation for a potlatch.
Skū·tsxom: A short-legged person who tries to cross a river; name of a string figure.
ṣcuq": That part of a house on either side of the central fire.
Sciteoma: 1—Sleep, a supernatural being. [573]
2—Sleep, intangible kusiut prerogative.
sciusnam: Presents given to the one who leads a bride to her husband during a wedding. [585] Ṣcqwastlustkwi, "Dark-Shade": A supernatural being. [431] sc·ptl: Shadow.
sctqwmas: Hammer, archaic. [412]
stekeo: Brother-in-law or sister-in-law.
shātmālṣ: Shaman's stick with power of life at one end and death at the other. [601]
stilwa: Bloody grease that rises to the surface of the water when a seal is cooked.
stiṗ: That on which a chief sits, that is, his ceremonial prestige gained by the distribution of much wealth. [283]
shikx: 1—Caribou hide. [825]
2—Thong made of caribou hide.
shxom: Chequer-work cedar-bark matting. [285]
shāxkt: Caribou.
shms: Love charm consisting of hair of the one desired mixed with other ingredients. [832] Shmsila: Supernatural being who causes nightmares. [828] shmstā or shmstānālos: Mortals, in contradistinction to supernatural beings.
shmstaliktsta: Body.
shmstānālosām: Assumption of human characteristics by mankind in the beginning of time.
Stxwaxwaknimān·a: Professional name of a female berry-picker.
Stxwaxwakanam: Professional female berry-picker. [825] sīska: Mountain goat grease. [824] sīskālaya: Castor.
Sīskiul, "What Has Been Divided": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
Slklo: Son of the first settlers at Green Bay in the beginning of time. [825] slmās: Octopus.
Slsoakhlx: One of Raven's female Crow relatives. [386] slqwasma: Red rock paint.
sīsla: Singer's baton.
ṣlsulk: Text. [823]
sīlla·qaxs: Part of a river where there are rapids and projecting stones.
stuin: 1—Memorial-post, decorated with crest, erected near grave. [211]
2—Plain posts erected near grave to indicate major ceremonies performed by the deceased. [764]
Stuxs: 1—Village in the upper Bella Coola valley. [262]
2—Famous hunter mentioned in an ancient story.
stutnm: Dried dog salmon soaked in water.
stutsaiks: Masked representation of a dead person in crest form.
Sly', "Rainwater-Dripping-through-the-Roof": A supernatural being.
sukwlit: Black raspberry. [824]
sulstu: Ocean.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Tcold: River on mainland opposite north end of Vancouver Island.
Tcopinstl: Mountain near Dean Channel.
Tcwe·st: One of Raven's female Crow relatives.
tslaos: To marry.
tslaosem: 1—Marriage in which the woman's relatives make the first proposal, especially one hurried owing to bereavement or other financial stringency in the man's family. [584]
2—Marriage without lengthy engagement.
titilit: One having a voice like an eagle's.
hqwaistmam, "A Holding": The arrangement by which a man's sons-in-law give him as "wife" an infant female relative in repayment for his expenses in connection with the weddings of his own daughters. [583]
hxcus: Clover. [824]
hxlala: Robin. [825]
hxnnsna: Game played with bows and arrows. [411]
hxmmla: Arrow.
ngia: Adze. [412]
hxwoma: Stone maul without handle for driving fish-net stakes.
lis: Black bear. [825]
ilaiyakam: 1—One of the a'alk dances.
2—Ceremonial held to shame a deserting husband or wife. [586]
3—Name taken by an early ilaiyakam dancer at Kimsquit.
ilakan: Snail. [825]
Ilakwaitl: Bella Bella woman married by Smaoan of Kimsquit in the beginning of time.
Ilakwakila: 1—One of the first women to settle at Qwiyai in the beginning of time.
2—Name acquired by one of the first men to settle at Stuix in the beginning of time.
3—Ancestral name of a Kimsquit man.
Ilakwakilayek[w]: Woman dwelling on the coast south of Bella Coola in the beginning of time.
ilakwan·i: Knife of mountain goat bone. [412] ilakwik: Red rock cod. The difference between this and xrix is problematical. [825] Ilaliatlis: One of the first men to settle at Smith Inlet in the beginning of time.
Ilaliaki'lak': 1—Supernatural woman known to the people of Smith Inlet.
2—One of the first women to settle at Smith Inlet in the beginning of time.
Ilao'kwoa: Servant to the supernatural being Nuskiayek.
Ilaowika'lis: One of the first men to settle at Smith Inlet in the beginning of time.
Ilaqmai·ks: Supernatural woman resident in the land above. This word is said to be unrelated to Ilaqma·ks, although a common origin seems probable.
Ilaqma·ks: 1—Supernatural child resident in the land above.
2—Name acquired by a female child in the beginning of time. [824] ilaqist: Fir-bark.
Haqaqs: Correct term, in the language of Raven, for skull-cap worn by adolescent girls. See ilqwam.
Ila'swala: The pouring, by a shaman, of grease from ten vessels on the fire as a means of curing the sick.
Ilawos: One of the first women to settle in the Dean valley in the beginning of time.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Xemlaix: One of the first men to settle at Ẋemqo·ts in the beginning of time.
Xemtmm: Kusiut name of a Slskisl man.
Xemxemālotla: 1—One of the nine supernatural siblings.
2—Ancestral name of a Bella Coola man.
Xemxemlaix: Sisook name brought from above in the beginning of time.
Xemxemtmm: 1—Supernatural beings who request the sun to appear.
2—One of the first men to settle at Nuṡpālāsl in the beginning of time.
[533] xe·tla: Boastful type of song used by chiefs on war expeditions and at potlatches.
Xedilkos: One of the first men to settle at Qotlnalos in the beginning of time.
Xelāsu: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit woman. The designation is of Bella Bella origin.
[825] 'gaga: Marten.
[412] xēls: Stone axe.
xlānl: Party of potlatch messengers and the invitation they bear.
[203] Ximpdimut: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Ximnmlaix: A'alk man mentioned in an ancient story.
Ximnmoslaix: Celebrated female shaman.
[821] gingānts-i, plural, gingānzeksi: Little girl.
[517] Xingines: 1—"Little Girls": Group of stars in the Great Bear.
2—Picnic, especially one on which fern root is gathered.
Xisais: Bella Coola term for the Carriers living near Ootsa Lake. This is said to be their own name for themselves.
Xisimān·a, "Right Foot": Stuix repository named from part of a supernatural creature.
Xiṡis: Mountain in the Carrier country.
xnmānoāx: Spirit, one of the supernatural elements in the human body.
xlāxtmm: Ceremony prior to a potlatch when tasks are allotted and the donor's house destroyed.
xlānl: The entrusting, before death, of a name for the benefit of a relative.
[586] Xlikwals: Mountain in the upper Bella Coola valley.
xlokn·imut: The irrevocable desertion of her husband by a wife.
[825] Xmaxets: Locality below Nusṡalst.
gmgmatsl: Minnows.
[601] gnas: Woman, or wife in indirect address (ti gnaslaix: My wife).
[614] gnaātsta: Female relatives of same ancestral family, term of indirect address.
[423] gnaidām or nugnaidām: The right by which a husband uses his wife's land, though it is not his own.
Xnutli: Bella Coola sorcerer living in the last century.
xokit: The forcible washing of a Cannibal.
Xolaxwosem: Name acquired by a man mentioned in an ancient story.
[785] xoldjut: Intercourse held during ceremonial chastity; the term has a sacred significance.
[831] Xomtsla: Male professional singer who came down to the Dean River in the beginning of time.
Xomxompa: Ancestral name of a Stuix man. The designation is said to have come from Smith Inlet.
Xongotem: Supernatural scoop-net fisherman, servant of the supreme god.
Xopatlis: Bella Coola man mentioned in an ancient story.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

hatsin: Tail.
hatskit: Ants.
hin: Black hawthorn.
Kalaw-i: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man.
Kamilkin: Ancestral name of the wife of Swaky who was changed to stone in the beginning of time.
hanki: Region.
Kapatalqut: Kitlobe chief living in the beginning of time.
hanaly: 1—Marriage, properly arranged and legalized.
2—The actual wedding day.
Kaswiw-i: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit woman.[1] hdai: Bark bucket for holding liquids.
hdamkdjut: The seeking of assistance from a man who owns a curing repository.
hdamkanam: Investment-present, i.e., one for which a return is expected.
hdhata: Back-room in which nasal initiates and others are concealed.
hdin: Woman during catamenia.
hdulu, "What Was Sent Down": Intangible possession, such as a myth or a prerogative, inherited from the distant past, usually from the coming to earth of the first settlers in the beginning of time.
hemqata: Wooden tongs such as are used for lifting hot stones.
hdamkdjut ala hwantqata: Kusiutem rite in which the performer appears to be drowned.
hal-aia or hal-ial, "The Gainer": One who has been initiated as a member of the hasiut society but has not yet danced, especially one admitted through unauthorized knowledge or through successful participation in either a hasiutem or a Mystery dance.
hahali, "Rendered Incapable of Returning": Said of an uninitiated person who is alleged to have stumbled on a repository.
Kaldaqa: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
hanawa: The dormant waiting for power by a shaman who, having had one visitation, awaits further manifestations before displaying his ability.
hipa, uwatia, hipaso: Grandmother.
hiht-tsum-um-i: Ceremonial marriage of a female child to an adult man.
Ki'hahal: Name given to their canoe by the first settlers at Sisaa in the beginning of time.
Kilalamaxu, "The Wise One": One of Raven's names as chief.
Kimilkin: One of the first women to settle at Alqalaf in the beginning of time.
Kina'o: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
kinaxu: 1—Crab.
2—Enormous crab-like creature, alleged to be found far in the forest.
Kipalu: Name of a shaman who received his power from ghosts.
kipi: Red elderberry.
kipla: Wooden tweezers used in the pounding of cedar-bark.
kis: Unidentified plant.
kisam: To toast dried salmon.
kislamuxla: Supported, in the sense of held in place by physical assistance.
Kislqaut: Locality on Dean Channel, west of Sarwalk.
Ki'ua: Place on south side of North Bentinck Arm, about one-quarter mile from its head.

[1] This name appears to be an entirely different word from Kalaw-i.

192*
825
824
585
415
426
431
424
412
575
756
601
825
824
413
252

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

556 performance of rites of this kind. But sociological and ethical [182] concepts, shown at their highest development in the potlatch, are not limited to a few weeks of the year, or to any class of the community. Generosity on a large scale can be publicly [577] displayed by chiefs alone, but to a lesser degree this virtue must be practised by everyone, since avarice is considered a 576 major sin. Anyone who happens to pass a house in which a meal is taking place must be invited to share it; to do other-574 wise would be considered rude. The person summoned must take at least a trifle to show that he is not churlish and too proud to eat with his host, while if he is hungry, he shares [177] whatever is being served as a matter of course. The head of the family should be the first to taste any wine* as proof that [273] it is not poisoned, but otherwise he fares little, if any, better [342] than his guests. This custom is now rapidly falling into disuse through the construction of individual family houses with doors [414] and locks. The fisherman who has exclusive rights to a suit-476 able place for netting olachen or salmon must give some of his catch to anyone who asks him. If he has landed four salmon, [226] the first solicitor is given one, later comers, none at all. When a net is set in the river, anyone passing is allowed to raise it and take some of the contents; if there are two fish, he may remove one, if many, three or four. To take all would be a [685] despicable theft, sufficient to brand the transgressor as greedy;
[626] hence public opinion prevents the system from being carried to excess. A hunter who brings back several mountain goats [224] or other large game is expected to invite his neighbours to a feast, which virtually means that he must share his takings.

556 Presents of this kind increase the prestige of the donor who has thus acted in accordance with Bella Coola ethics, and are 431 advantageous investments since others must reciprocate. The system is carried to such lengths that, until recent years, it was more profitable to give away goods than to sell them. In the case of a sale, the purchaser endeavours to give as little as possible, whereas the recipient of a gift returns as much as

*This is a modern practice, dating from the introduction of home-brew.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

grease have been placed in readiness. X selects as many youths as the number on whom he intends to confer the names which have already been announced and validated among the Bella Coola, but are now to be made known to the foreign guests. He seats the lads, who are to substitute for the initiates, on the various boxes. Everybody understands that these are merely representatives. X requests two chiefs to act as his announcers, choosing two with good voices and abundant self-confidence. To one of these X whispers the sisaok name of one of the initiates. 556* 575 553

"His name is now——" calls out the announcer, pointing to one of the substitutes, and the listeners readily recognize the initiate intended, from the use, in conjunction with his new designation, of his well-known ancestral name. The heralds repeat the new name with the usual badinage, so that it becomes well known to all present. In like manner the sisaok name given to each initiate is publicly announced. The substitutes receive no advantage from their part in the proceedings. [203]

Then the boxes are opened and red elderberries poured into the canoes in front of the guests. Stones are provided with which the visitors pound the fruit into pulp which they proceed to mix with their hands, as olachen grease and cranberries are added. Then X's helpers distribute spoons and the feast commences. All start to eat, but after an interval one of the leading Bella Coola chiefs strikes the side of his canoe with a spoon, as a signal that all must stop. X has several dishes in readiness. If he is wealthy some of these will be carved in the shape of beaver, eagle, or other form in which an ancestor appeared. These dishes are filled with the food which all have been eating and then placed before the principal chiefs, who thus have a second supply. At this point the singers begin to beat out an ancient song of the type known as xe-tla. Each of these has been handed down from the distant past, when some chief, ancestor of X, had it composed for himself at a potlatch. The theme is always about the form or fame of his 556* 264 [252] [415] [532] 533 556* [171]

Ickelwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NEb Bellacoola NEb

act as guide against his masters. The man led in the party under cover of a fog which lifted at an inopportune moment, but the slave deceived the Fort Rupert Indians into believing that his comrades were not hostile. *Kāmālsonx*ʷ rewarded the guide with a marten-skin coat and one of marmot-skins. 539*

When he gave a potlatch, *Kāmālsonx*ʷ had the back wall of his house decorated with pictures of sun and moon, while he himself wore a grizzly bear-skin with its head above his own. As he danced, there rose through the floor a large box on which was painted a raven. *Kāmālsonx*ʷ went to the receptacle and took from it sufficient presents to supply the requirements of the visitors from one tribe, the Bella Bella, for example. Then the box would sink from sight, only to reappear with gifts for another group; this was repeated as many times as there were parties of guests from outside places. This was the method of procedure decreed by Ālquntām.

These first Nusqalst people made a number of special objects for their potlatches. As a representation of the five-peaked mountain beneath which they lived, they erected five peaks over the front of their house, a custom which has been carried out until the present day. Projecting from one of them was a figure of a mountain goat, since that animal was brought to earth to serve as food by their first ancestors. They also made a number of large stone spoons, which, after being used for many generations, were buried with a certain Potlas about 1875. These utensils were of a type used by Nusqalst before he became a mountain, and were later copied by the carpenter-masons. [424] [415]

*Kāmālsonx*ʷ was so powerful that he altered a susook rite of his potlatch into a kusiut dance, changed Nusmāt-a to a kusiut name, and decreed that the repository should be under the spot where his house stood. For this ceremonial he always used a whistle with the voice of a raven.

ORIGIN MYTH OF Nusqalst
(Second version dealing with another settlement)[18]

Nusqalst is a chief among mountains. Like a human leader, it has several names, Teākwatkis, Sānutlkum, and others; these names belong to several persons now living. Like a person, too, the mountain was sent down from above at the beginning of the world to Teawat, Bute Inlet, whence it moved to its present position midway up the Bella Coola valley, a location which it had heard was a pleasant one. [551]

[18] Related by Captain Schooner.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

supernatural being Sä·lma in the forest, and from him had obtained shaman's power. Sä·lma usually is malevolent, but even this was not the only occasion on which he showed kindness. The shaman alone could see this supernatural being seated, as is his wont, upon the coffin. He bade his friend enter the house and ask the people to make an aisle for him. This he did, explaining the reason. He added that though he had known the poor boy for years there were periods for which he could not account, and that his friend now claimed to have gained power to restore the dead. The people listened eagerly and made an aisle up which he walked to the box. He thrust his shaman's stick, decorated with dangling shells, through Sä·lma's nose-ring, lifted him from the coffin, and carried him to the hole destined for its passage. As he threw out the supernatural being, groans were heard from the coffin. It was opened and the dead boy was found to be alive.

539*
756*
787*

Sä·lma himself had instructed the youth to remove him in this way at the time he had given him shaman's power. Even when he was carrying away the supernatural being, none of the other people in the house could see his burden.

After this auspicious proof of his power, the shaman was frequently called upon, until he became wealthy, and was able to reach a position of eminence equal to that of his father at the time of his murder by jealous rivals.

THE FOUR BROTHERS

Long ago, though long after the earth had first been peopled, four brothers, whose home was in the lower Bella Coola valley, went for an excursion upstream, planning to call on their friends in the various villages. After travelling a considerable distance they came to a solitary house, which they entered. Its occupant, an old woman, gave them food and help.

"There is great danger where you are going," she said, "but if you are brave you will come to no harm." Turning to the youngest brother she continued: "Take these two mountain goat bladders.[24] One will give you heat when you need it; the other cold. You are now a shaman."

The woman was a supernatural being.

Continuing their journey after leaving her house, the four presently saw Great Blue Heron, who, in the form of an old man, was spearing salmon. His face had the design of the rainbow, consisting of diagonal paintings from his right eye to his left jaw-bone. Great Blue Heron had the ability to assume this face at will.

The shaman now said to his brothers: "I will rob Great Blue Heron."

[24] These were commonly used as containers for liquids or grease.

[415]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

procession of supernatural beings according to X's choice. 575* The proceedings terminate in the same way as those described 796* in the Stomach-Cutting dance.

X must obey the customary restrictions on his movements for the rest of the ceremonial season, and also remain in partial concealment for the summer following. The fiction circulated is that he is still suffering from the after-effects of decapitation. He is legally entitled to perform any other kusiotem rite during the following winter, but it is most unusual for a man to do so [424] on successive seasons.

The Drowning Dance

In a third kusiotem dance the performer appears to drown. X carried out this ceremonial during the third winter after his decapitation, but as usual it will be convenient to describe the ritual in the present tense.

During the summer, as for the Beheading dance, he obtains permission from the marshals. With the latter present, he then arranges with the singers and the carpenters to compose songs of the usual kusiotem type and to prepare a mask. Since X had preserved the mask used at the time of his decapitation, it was not necessary to have one made. The intending dancer borrows from a kusiut friend one of the large boxes used for [415] boiling olachen and this is taken in secret to some lonely spot [252] in the forest. The carpenters cut a hole in the bottom and smear the edges with grease and dirt to conceal the aperture; skin hinges are fastened to one side of the movable section so that it can be opened easily and quickly. They also make a wooden framework the size and shape of X's body, to which the portrait-mask is attached to give a realistic representation of the man himself.

Nothing more can be done until near the winter solstice when the carpenters cut a hole in the floor of X's house, immediately behind the fire, and fasten the section removed with skin hinges to make a trap-door. Then the carpenters, marshals, singers, and other influential kukusiut meet some evening for treatment in other ways. Some are fried immediately, but the Bella Coola think they lack flavour, although most white men regard them as delicious. Many hundreds are dried for winter use in one of the following methods: 252 251

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

(A) Cedar-sticks, each about three feet in length, are split from the solid stem and smoothed down to a diameter of about one-half inch. One of these is passed through the gills and mouth of one fish after another until the rod is filled with a row of olachen, their tails hanging downwards. Dozens of these sticks are suspended horizontally over the central fire in a house, or, in brilliant sunshine, hung in the open. When dried to a certain extent, they are stored in the upper parts of the houses where the process continues whenever a fire is lit. When so treated they keep almost indefinitely.

(B) Narrow strips, each four to five feet in length, of flexible cedar-bark, are prepared by the women. The fisherman takes the ends of two of these, ties one around a fish's head, and the other around its tail. Another olachen is tied parallel to the first, and then others, until the two cords are supporting thirty to forty fish, each separated by about one inch. The middle of the strings is laid across a horizontal bar above a fire or in the open, and the process of drying continues as in the last method. The fish not infrequently catch fire if a large blaze is built up in a house, so careful people remove their olachen before a feast or other celebration.

Though dried olachen provide a useful article for winter diet, the fish are chiefly valued for their grease, sluk', whch is used as a condiment with all kinds of berries. It is sometimes extracted from the fresh fish, but the Bella Coola consider this to be tasteless and prefer to wait until the olachen have remained in the pits for ten days to two weeks. Warm weather hastens the process, but in any case nothing is done until the disgusting smell has penetrated for miles, proving that putrefaction is well advanced. In former times, all boiling was done with hot stones, but at present boxes with iron bottoms are used as kettles. These are of various shapes and sizes, an average being, perhaps, four feet long, three feet wide, and eighteen inches deep. These are set on fireplaces which vary according to the ingenuity of the refiner. Some are excavated in the river bank, lined with stones set in clay, and fitted at the inner end with an old stovepipe to provide draught for the miniature furnace. The box-kettle is placed on the ground over the excavation and the cook pours in water. Then his wife, children, and friends bring the putrid fish, which they ladle in until only a few inches of water are visible. A slow fire is built beneath, and, as the mixture begins to boil, the cook stirs it with a five-foot stick having a slightly flattened blade. Presently the grease begins to rise to the surface whence it is skimmed off and placed in recep- 258 [262] [263] [252] [415] [354] [415]

258 tacles; metal coal-oil cans are found convenient for this purpose and have [41.5] almost replaced watertight boxes. After repeated stirrings and skimmings, all that remains is a mass of putrid flesh, bearing no resemblance whatever to the fish from which it came. The Kitlobe are said to com-[171] press this into cakes for eating, but the Bella Coola throw it away. Some cooks bail out the dregs by hand, but many of the box-kettles have a [415] bung-hole at the bottom which, when opened, allows the semi-liquid remains to flow out into a rough trough leading to the river. As soon as one batch of olachen has thus been disposed of, another is boiled and [439] refined in the same way. The grease keeps indefinitely and is a useful article of barter with the Carriers as well as a staple of Bella Coola diet.
[262] Although the preparation removes much of its offensive odour, olachen grease has an unpleasant taste to the white man.

258 During the boiling, all other activities are suspended and the people 476 spend practically all their time on the river bank. If the fish are allowed to rot too long, much of the grease is lost, so men, women, and children are pressed into service to make the most of the short period. The men rise at dawn to start the fires on the bank, the women and children follow with food, and for several days the whole village camps, as if on a picnic, amid an indescribably foul smell that almost sickens anyone passing within hundreds of yards. There are tasks for everyone; the fish must be carried from the pits to the furnaces, wood must be brought, the fires stoked, the kettles stirred, the grease carried away, the fireplaces repaired, food cooked, and a hundred other chores. It is a scene of great activity, carried on with good humour and merriment, for the Bella Coola realize that they are storing up luxuries for the following winter. Even the dogs seem to share the general excitement, and do not disdain to eat the dregs from the kettles, which, when emptied into the river, attract numerous trout and gulls, to the joy of small boys with hunting desires.

BELLA COOLA CANOES

501 Although travel and transport by water is still as vital to the Bella [505] Coola as it was to their fathers, the motor-boat is fast replacing the canoe, and the science of manufacturing their own craft is being lost. In former times several types were constructed, but only one of these is still employed —the spoon canoe, sä·tla, used on rivers (see Plate 21). These vary from twenty to thirty feet or more in length, and are about four feet wide;
they are without keels, and there is no difference between the bow and stern. Although one man can handle such a craft in smooth water, at 502 least two are required for a journey of any length, and four is the usual crew. The captain, who is either the best waterman or the one most familiar with the route, stands in the stern, the second in command in

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192 Ālximān·a, "Left Foot": Stux repository named from part of a supernatural creature.

Ālximlaix: Kimsquit hunter living in the last century.

[825] ālymutl: Dentalium-shell.

ālywalc'ay, "Not Finished": Said concerning a kusiut who dies between initiation and his first complete dance.

[292] [881] ālxwam: Skull cap of grass and dentalium-shells worn by adolescent girls during seclusion.

ālxwola: Guest, especially from afar, to a kusiut dance.

Ālxwolāmm: 1—Supernatural herald.
2—Assemblage of the people for ceremonies of different kinds, especially shamans' dances and guessing competitions in connection with the Mystery dance.
3—Kimsquit term for the first night of a kusiut dance.

ālxwpaix, "A Surpassing": Said of cases where a wife's relatives have given more presents to the husband's than they have received in return.

[576] [601] āmāt: Place of concealment of a Mystery dancer's power.

ā'matālāykt: Old people, especially parents; this is a polite term for indirect address.

āmātax: Rightful location, especially the validated position of a chief in a house.

[415] āmātuti: Dishes carved with ancestral crest.

āmkpīs: 1—Mouse.
2—Daughter of the first settlers at Sātlia.

[825] āml: Spring salmon.

āmlia: Spring salmon house.

Āmlāklis: Professional name of a kusiut marshal.

Āmtāklis: Supernatural being resident at the mouth of the Bella Coola River.

āmlāmkm: 1—The allotment of work to kukusiut in the manufacture of masks and other requirements.
2—Hence, the time when such tasks are assigned, the second evening of a kusiut dance.

Ānābsullānāmlaix, "The Resident Maker": Name given to the daughter of the first settlers at Snuīsli.

[575] ānānusīx or siānusīx: That which serves as pattern, picture, or model for a kusiut ritual.

ānātsqtutl: Second night of a potlatch.

[226] ānāxwolatl: Artificial, pier-like structure built into a river for use in hand-net fishing.

Ānilxsaix, "Where People Go": A reflecting pool created by Raven at Kimsquit.

Ānokokwāls: Cave near Dean Channel.

Ānolymdimut, "The Dancer Whose Only Noise-Making Instrument Is His Body": One of Tlitcāplilān·a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.

Āno'likwolsaix: Supernatural woman who guards repositories.

Ānotlākmots: 1—"The Open-Mouthed" (in the sense of open to suck forth sickness): One of Tlitcāplilān·a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.
2—Name of a shaman whose powers are said to have been derived from ghosts.

[756] [823] ānuxm: Swift running water.

ānlkmstānām: 1—Ranks of ordinary inidviduals; this term is used to distinguish those who are being initiated into the sisaok society.
2—Something supernatural seen when awake.

2; McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

kaisàn: Tail. 192*
kaiskist: Ants. [825]
kax: Black hawthorn. [824]
Kalàn·i: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man.
Kamilkàn: Ancestral name of the wife of Swaky who was changed to stone in the beginning of time.
kanki: Region.
Kapsàlopst: Kitlobe chief living in the beginning of time.
kasàly: 1—Marriage, properly arranged and legalized. [585]
2—The actual wedding day.
Kaxwlàn·i: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit woman.[1]
kolai: Bark bucket for holding liquids. [415]
kolàmkodjut: The seeking of assistance from a man who owns a curing repository.
kolàmkusnàm: Investment-present, i.e., one for which a return is expected. [426] kolusta: Back-room in which sisaok initiates and others are concealed.
kolàn: Woman during catamenia. [431] kolelu, "What Was Sent Down": Intangible possession, such as a myth or a prerogative, inherited from the distant past, usually from the coming to earth of the first settlers in the beginning of time. [424]
komapsta: Wooden tongs such as are used for lifting hot stones. [412] kolsàmkdjot ola kwanàxsta: Kusiotem rite in which the performer appears to be drowned.
kel·aix or kel·àtl, "The Gainer": One who has been initiated as a member of the kusiut society but has not yet danced, especially one admitted through unauthorized knowledge or through successful participation in either a kusiotem or a Mystery dance. [575]
kelulx, "Rendered Incapable of Returning": Said of an uninitiated person who is alleged to have stumbled on a repository.
Keldcap: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
kestcao: The dormant waiting for power by a shaman who, having had one visitation, awaits further manifestations before displaying his ability. [756]
kiła, vocative, kiłaao: Grandmother. [601] kikà·tstam·im·i: Ceremonial marriage of a female child to an adult man.
Ki'laielotl: Name given to their canoe by the first settlers at Stuix in the beginning of time.
Kilalxamxwx, "The Wise One": One of Raven's names as chief.
Kimilkàn: One of the first women to settle at Alqàxl in the beginning of time.
Kina'o·: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
kinaxw: 1—Crab. [825]
2—Enormous crab-like creature, alleged to be found far in the forest.
Kipdxs: Name of a shaman who received his power from ghosts. [824] kipl: Red elderberry.
kipła: Wooden tweezers used in the pounding of cedar-bark. [413]
kis: Unidentified plant. [252]
kisàm: To toast dried salmon.
kisionmotla: Supported, in the sense of held in place by physical assistance.
Kisiqmatl: Locality on Dean Channel, west of Suxwdk.
Kit·co: Place on south side of North Bentinck Arm, about one-quarter mile from its head.

[1]This name appears to be an entirely different word from Kalàn·i.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192 nä'plu: Miniature copper ornament worn by adolescent girls during seclusion.
[301] Nä·tci: Bella Bella man living in the beginning of time.
näxam: To dance.
[825] näxamda: Those who dance at marriages.
näxnx: Mallard duck.
[824] näxmusmm: Night of potlatch on which sisaok initiates appear for a short dance naxski: Berries of Canadian buffalo berry.
[415] nabixakta: Thimble-like wooden dish.
'namiänkaix: Ceremonial seating of chiefs according to their validated places in a house.
Namutsta: Name acquired by a Rivers Inlet man from sea-lions in the beginning of time.
Namuista: Professional name of a kusiut marshal.
'Näx·wäm·a: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola Scratcher; the designation was derived from Rivers Inlet.
Ne·slo·s: Celebrated Kitkatla chief.
Ne·xwunkai: Influential Bella Coola chief.
*[776] Nebsullähaix, "The Resident": Supernatural being dwelling under rivers who punishes infractions of taboos concerning them.
[784] nbusam: 1—Fourth day of a kusiut dance, on the evening of which masked figures appear.
2—Something exposed to view.
Nqaqa: Old woman resident in Sea-lion's house in the beginning of time.
nexnk, "Little Dance": Term of grandiose humility.
nexnäxam: Gathering of the people for a non-sacred dance after the kusiut season.
Nexnäx·mälosaix: 1—"The Dancer Near the Fire": One of Ťitcäplilän·a's names, and hence a designation given to shamans.
2— Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
Nexnxtiwalaix: Kusiut name of a Nusqalst man.
niamlumtäm: One who has preserved a marriage song.
niaxwälemsk: The intangible strengthening that comes to a bridegroom as a result of the oration of his ancestral myths and the giving of presents to the bride's relatives when they first come to his house on the wedding day.
[585] [431] Niallellaix: Daughter of the first people who came down to Mount Tcunisi in the beginning of time.
[524] nielq'estl: Wooden ring used in a game.
Nihtcks: Place on Dean Channel, about three miles from the head, where the deer formed a colony soon after the beginning of time.
[825] nikqaya': Otter.
Ninilänk: Name of a certain spot where mountain goats are wont to congregate for mating.
Ninitsamlaix: 1—"The Restorer": One of Ťitcäplilän·a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.
2—One of the first men to settle in the upper Bella Coola valley in the beginning of time.
[556] nitsam, "Brought to Life": Term applied to a copper brought back from a cemetery and renamed.
Nitsmdimut: Shaman's name derived from Ťitcäplilän·a.
nitstominu: "I have saved you."

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

nusqa: The visit to every house in the village by a Mystery dancer on receipt of his call.
nusiuml, plural, nunusiuml: Singer.
nusikwkta: Quiver for carrying arrows. [415] Nusimusta: Mountain near Ásán·an·i.
nusiutáls or nusiutálsap: Second day of a kusiut dance.
Nusixilaixaikm: Synonym for Tutwai·es: Supernatural being who shamelessly begs food from his fellows.
nuskásiutsta: Repository.
nuskóli: Any unusual occurrence, regarded as an omen of death. [763] Nuskólámmsta, "Whence Things Came Down": One of the names of the supreme god's house.
nusqlusta: Wash-basin, especially the supernatural one that remains in the land above.
Nuskiayek: 1—Supernatural being presiding over the Land of Ashes.
2—Locality on the shore of North Bentinck Arm, not far from the head.
Nuskumata: Daughter of the group of settlers who came to Mount Tsnisi in the beginning of time.
Nuskumidjusta: Axe carried in the beginning of time by the man who was later turned to stone as Mount Nusqalst.
Nuskumnátl: Daughter of the group of settlers who came to Mount Tsnisi in the beginning of time.
Nu·skohkmmy: Kimsquit hunter mentioned in an ancient story.
nuskotla: Wasps' nest. [825]
Nuskwalnkánde: One of the first women to settle at Snukli in the beginning of time.
nuskwanátsta: House in which a memorial potlatch is being held.
Nus·lázum: Mountain on south side of lower Bella Coola.
Nuslexwgnuwulnm, "The Cherished One": Designation applied to one of the sons of Alquntám.
nushmsta: House in which a potlatch is taking place.
nushmy: One who has gone to give potlatches in a new sphere; this rhetorical expression is commonly used when referring to a dead chief. [195] nuslhákta: Wash-basin used by a shaman when curing.
Nuslkalstámidjut, "He Whose Wash-Basin Is in His Own Body": One of Tlitcaplilán·a's names and hence a designation given to shamans. [756] nuslhmosekta: Enclosure behind fire in which kusiut dancers are secluded.
nuslqwutsa: Cleansing rites in connection with death. [764] Nuslukwalámy: Tlsiyákam name acquired by a Kimsquit man as a result of a supernatural experience.
Nusmákwai: 1—Eagle that perched on a post supporting the sky in the beginning of time.
2—Name, derived from that of the eagle, of one of the first men to settle at Stuax in the beginning of time.
Nusmát·a: 1—"Place of Stories": One of the names of the supreme god's house.
2—One of the first men to settle at Nusqalst in the beginning of time.
Nusmát·alan·a, "Woman of Nusmát·a": Probably wife of Alquntám.
Nus·mátlaix: Mountain on north side of lower Bella Coola.
Nusmátlixwalx: Subterranean chamber in which rivers were confined in the beginning of time. [772]

APPENDIX D

192*

Nuxwin·ang, "The Warrior": Name acquired by a Kimsquit man long ago.
nuxwinasta: Women's verbal quarrels about prestige. [578] Nuxx: 1—Barren district above Green Bay.
2—Evil, adjective.
Nuxpalqiq: Tal·io bird hunter.
Nuxpenda: 1—One of the first men to settle at Tal·io in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Alqalaxl in the beginning of time.
3—Ball of the universe which, when broken, released the sun. [772]
Nuxpentaian·a: Daughter of the first settlers at Alqalaxl in the beginning of time.
Nuxxeq: 1—(Probably) "The Place of Barrenness": Village at Green Bay.
2—One of the first men to settle at Green Bay in the beginning of time.
nuxxi'ipsta: Repository, archaic term. [431] nuxxwar·at·nutnam: The assumption of a name upon earth. [585] nuxxwokmpalu, "Things to Sweep the Floor With": Presents given to a bride's relatives by a groom and his kinsmen on the actual day of marriage.
nuxxwo·ipsta: Wooden dish used for washing an infant. [415] nuxwultamtam: Abstinence from acts of an unclean nature after the taking of a powerful medicine. [785]
nulaikim: The power which a shaman brings forth from his own body and casts into a patient. [756]
Nulaodaxw': Name of a celebrated shaman.
Nulam: Bella Bella village and undefined area in the vicinity.
Nulal, "Canyon": 1—Dean River.
2—Village on the lower Dean River.
nulexgnam: Alteration of a dance from nsaok to kusint. [825] nulkalxita: Bone in the back of a salmon's neck. [586] nulalalnamam, "A Drying-Up with Fire": Expression used for the ceremony held on the return of a deserting wife to her husband. [431] nulalalnam: Goods given by a wife's relatives to her husband to validate her return to him after desertion.
Nullux, "Place Where There Are No Falls": Village in the upper Bella Coola valley.
Nuthafal: Totem-pole of the first settlers at Nusfalit in the beginning of time. [845] nuthanalt: Parents of twins. [825]
nutsaqmax: Wolf.
Nulsalmais: Mythical house in the sky.
Nulsaymalt: One of the names of the supreme god's house.
nutsiahem: Present, invisible to all but the owner, given by Thitsplilan·a to a shaman. The word may be etymologically connected with nulaikim. [756] nulsingnam: A creation of new kusiut names, such as is necessitated by a disaster, or at the will of a mighty chief. [553] nulsintalam: Kusiutem rite in which the performer pretends to swallow hot stones.
nulskawam: 1—"A Throwing Off": Term used with reference to presents given to heralds by a person splashed in Otter dance. [431] 2—Presents given by guests at a potlatch to their host and his associates.
nulqaxa, "The Face Maker": Name given to a woman who paints upon the bandages used to produce cranial deformation in an infant. [856] Nutsqmalt, "Place of Many Spawning Sockeye Salmon": Kimsquit village.
Nulsimia: Kusiut name of a Tsimsal man.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 192

atsulia: Promontory on hunting ground extending into ocean.
Oulxăn·i: Kimsquit fisherman.
Owiki: Calvert Island.
Oxḑoxem: Synonym for Xemxemălotla, one of the nine supernatural siblings.

P

● [415] ḑai·s: Small wooden dish.
Ḑăluăsl: Legless messenger of the dead.
Ḑa·s: Place on mainland opposite north end of Vancouver Island.
[585] [431] ḑăsutsm: Synonym for nuḑăxsikel·um: Payments made by the wife's relatives to those of the bridegroom on first arrival outside his house on the wedding day. They are said to be in return for "Food" received from them on many occasions.
[412] Ḑăcăcus: Ancestral name of a Nusḑalst man.
ḑăsalia: Bone needle.
ḑăxotla: Anything powerful and dreaded; the word is frequently applied, rhetorically, to Cannibals.
Ḑe·sḑo: Small stream rising north of the Bella Coola valley and east of the Necleetsconnay; it flows into the head of South Bentinck Arm between the Necleetsconnay and the Bella Coola.
Ḑiqotla: Bella Coola man figuring in a story.
ḑlstl: Herring scales.
ḑnăxta: Dance-apron.
Ḑnqkla: One of the first men to settle at Snuhli in the beginning of time.
[825] ḑkum·: Mosquito.
Ḑonḑoilotsdimut: Name assumed by Smaoan in the beginning of time.
ḑo·qwais: Variety of snmq.
Ḑoḑes: Celebrated Bella Coola chief who died about 1880.
Ḑo·isḑ: Mesatche Nose, the point between Labouchere Channel and North Bentinck Arm.
[824] ḑotsqi: False hellebore.
[411] ḑoistn: Bow, weapon.
ḑoyăx, "Fallen Heavily with a Crash," as when a dead tree thunders to earth: The term is used rhetorically when referring to the death of an old and influential chief.
[195] ḑsaixl: Tree, probably birch, used for torches.
[372] ḑskun: Meeting of chiefs.
[825] ḑwi: Halibut.
[824] ḑx': Crabapple.
ḑxolt: Bunchberry.

Q

[525] Qa'aklis: Rivers Inlet man, living in the last century.
qai: King stick in a gambling game.
qainaxqualitl: Women's droning cry uttered at the appearance of a masked dancer.
qai·nuqs: Uncommon term for the second day of a kusiut dance, applied to the rites taking place during the day itself only.
Qaiyu: Name conferred on the grandson of Smaoan in the beginning of time.
Qak'lis: Man mentioned in a story.
Qakmo: 1—One of the first women to settle on the Dean River in the beginning of time.
2—Celebrated Bella Bella chief.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

APPENDIX D

 192*

qaxta, "Bed Covering": Term applied to the presents given as such to the party of a bridegroom when they enter the bride's house on a wedding day. [585]

ḳ̓ämdjut, "A Shaking of the Fingers": Rhetorical allusion to presents regarded as "Dust." [431]

ḳ̓änliktmm: To revolve sunwise. [195]

Ḳ̓änḳ̓änliktmmlaix, "The One Who Revolves Sunwise to Give Strength": One of Tlitcäplitän·a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.

Ḳ̓ajäxs: Place of petrified power near Kwatna. [778]

Ḳ̓exman: Village on the Skeena River.

ḳ̓taisal: Supernatural creature resembling a diminutive human being. [825] ḳ̓ubtl: Salmon liver.

ḳ̓uks: Co-wife in a polygynous household. [595]

ḳ̓ulus, vocative, ḳ̓uluais: Wife's brother, or sister's husband, man speaking.

ḳ̓ulxwaix: Gathering of the supernatural beings for the performance of dances in the land above. [601]

ḳ̓uma: Unidentified salt water fish, said to be called "Lard-fish" by white men. [825]

Ḳ̓unqwnum ul di dä Sxem, "The Unlooser of Light": One of Raven's names as chief.

ḳ̓upstänm: 1—The ability of a chief to sit down ceremonially in virtue of the goods distributed for his seat, the ground over which he walks, and other requirements.
2—The initial establishment of a youth as chief.

ḳ̓uputsälets: Stone axe. [412]

ḳ̓us: Period of engagement.

Ḳ̓uahila: Ḳ̓omqo·ts man.

Ḳ̓uai·lils: 1—One of Raven's names as chief.
2—Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.

Ḳ̓uaiutsamlaix: Stuix man mentioned in an ancient story.

Ḳ̓uaixesän·i: Shaman's name of a Stuix woman.

Ḳ̓uaixwes, "Begrimed": Name of a copper often cast into fire.

ḳ̓ualäs: Unidentified (and probably mythical) type of lizard, allegedly about four feet long, found near Dean Channel. [825]

ḳ̓ualem, vocative, ḳ̓ualäm; plural, älḳ̓ualäm: Eldest brother or sister. [601]

Ḳ̓ua'lems: Name, in the Bella Bella language, given to a wooden woman made by one of the first settlers in the beginning of time.

ḳ̓ualilk: Gull. [825]

ḳ̓ual'ma'kus, "Eldest": Term of respectful address to Porcupine as senior of all animals.

Ḳ̓ualxwalelim, "The Mover": Name given to their house by one of the first groups of settlers at Täl·is in the beginning of time.

Ḳ̓ualna: Term from which the Anglicized "Kwatna" is derived: Generic name for the villages at Kwatna Harbour, Burke Channel. [103]*

Ḳ̓uamaxa'ks: Chief living on the upper Tcamat in the beginning of time.

ḳ̓uanä·usta: Large box used for boiling olachen. [415]●

Ḳ̓uapa: Village south-west of the head of South Bentinck Arm.

Ḳ̓uaqmai: Place on Schooner Pass.

Ḳ̓uaqnasila: Sisaok name of a Bella Coola man.

ḳ̓uathuhum: Marks made to commemorate an event, such as carvings at chiefs' meeting-place, virtually a memorial. [211]

ḳ̓uathusam: Figure representing crest.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

shalk': Devil's-club.
shalnamxdits: To lament ceremonially, the term used to describe the reason for a memorial potlatch. [824] Shami, "Ashes": Ancestral name created for a Snulsli chief about 1910. [765] shamtsk: Supernatural creature dwelling in water.
shay: Anus.
shanm: Splinters projecting upwards from the bole of a broken tree-trunk. [824]
Shamolsyman·a: One of the first women to settle at Snulsli in the beginning of time.
Shatpts: Chief of the spring salmon.
shatsamkm: Narrow strips of goat skin with wool attached, distributed at marriage. [585]
shelists: Merganser. [825]
shelwadjut, "The Opening": Ceremony when the first public presents are given to the family of a future wife, following the announcement of betrothal. [584]
shi: To cure, especially with the aid of a frenzied beating of sticks. [431] Shimutcitl: Stuax man mentioned in an ancient story.
shinap, "Cure Ye!": Call of invitation to a kusiut dance in the upper Bella Coola valley.
shinwas: Cloud.
shma: Thick hide, either of moose or caribou. [825]
shma: Semi-circular knife used by women for cutting salmon. [412]
shmaix, shmanl, or shmdjut: 1—Frenzied beating of sticks for curing purposes, especially when the patient is a member of a secret society. [755]
2—Final kusiut rite at end of the ceremonial season.
shmim: To cure by means of the frenzied pounding of sticks.
Shml, "The Charred Portion of a Half-Consumed Log": a'alk name obtained in the beginning of time.
Shmnanl: House used by a group of first settlers near Stuax in the beginning of time.
Shmnulsn·a: Daughter of the first settlers at Nusqalst in the beginning of time.
shs'tcalx: Fungus. [824]
shsmaiaxts: 1—Box made of strands of cedar-bark. [415]
2—Ancient name of ssaok head-dress.
shy: Ceremonial designs executed on the exterior front wall of a house.
shshk': Rose.
Shslikwan·a: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man. [825]
shsol: Wasp.
Shslsnmnsts: Rock on shore of North Bentinck Arm where war trophies were washed. [727] Shyalutl: Name of house brought down by first settlers at Slskistl in the beginning of time; the term was also applied by them to one of their female relatives.
sksi, sscatise, sksai: Parent-in-law or child-in-law. [601] sklay: Suitable place in the river for setting olachen nets.
sklsa: Game played with throwing stones.
skusiut: Synonym for yeaxmax, the tangible or intangible prerogative possessed by some kukusiut in addition to a dance rite. [424]
skwa-akwa: River sculpin. [825]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[824] sqedilp: Cedar roots.
sqetl: Sling.
[578] sqetlqathm: To use a sling.
sqili: Term of opprobrium applied to a woman, signifying slave ancestry.
[821] sqimawas: Fleecy cloud.
sqiols: Muzzle-like power which binds the mouth of a Cannibal against ordinary food.
[412] sqima: Wooden comb.
S'qas't: Land of Ashes, alternative term for Sqaml.
sqo: Umbilical hernia.
[601] sqolxmes: Distant relative of female sex, when referred to by man.
sqolkisdjot: Long phallus.
Sqomell: Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
sqosa: Unconsumed portion of share of food carried away by guests from a meal.
sqosalx: Food distributed for carrying away as sqosa.
[415] sqols: Large, flat, soft basket of broad strips of bark.
[431] sqpmeax: Presents given by guests to the donor of a memorial potlatch.
squlp: Maple.
[824] squm: Sudden start that expels the spirit.
squpaitl: Outer plank of cedar, convex and bark-covered on one side.
sqwal: Love song or other non-ceremonial composition.
sqwalem: Fern, probably one of the genus Aspidium.
[533] sqwalxwalem: 1—Theme of a song dealing with current events, especially allusions to the faults of someone present.
2—Singers who use this type of composition.
[825] sqwal·ätn: Large, unidentified bird.
[374] Sqwläkua: Heat: A supernatural being.
Sqwli: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
[825] sqwo'sn: Loon.
[262] stai·tl: Mountain goat marrow, a food which is said to have remarkable powers of preventing hunger.
Stalqalosam, "The Increase of the Sun's Heat through the Addition of Fire Sticks": A'alk name obtained in the beginning of time.
stälhmg; plural, statälhmg; vocative plural, stätälhmg:
1—Chief.
2—One of the first men to settle at Äiqäläxl in the beginning of time.
3—One of the first men to settle at Sinxl in the beginning of time.
4—Name created by Smaoan for a grandson.
5—Sisaok name of a Kimsquit man.
[601] stän: Mother, term commonly used by an adult in indirect address.
[825] ständabilam: Bat.
ständimut: Step-mother; the term is also applied to other women of the generation older than the speaker and related to him by marriage.
[601] stäntämamts: Elderly female relatives of the same ancestral family as the speaker.
[614] slaolt: Whetstone.
Steots: Man mentioned in a story.
[412] Step': Mountain near Tälio.
stojam, "What Is Hidden": The correct solution of the Mystery dance.
stämmmts: Archaic term for chiefs, now used only rhetorically.
[824] sluls: Cranberry.

Sẹnẹmsdas: Supernatural children guarded by the hermaphrodite in the land above.
Sẹsut: Name taken by a Stuax man in the beginning of time.
sxtsugmult: Place in stream or river where a salmon has just jumped.
sxwanăt·a: Name created upon earth.
sxwapănitl: Deer.
sxwat: Water-tight receptacle made from the internal organs of a mountain goat.
Sxwohmẹnam, "What Sweeps Away the Food": First moon after the winter solstice.
sẹwomẹqs, "Tears": Preliminary presents given to guests at a memorial potlatch.
sxw'ĭlămkis, "Short-lived": Rhetorical term used with reference to the death of a young chief.
sẹyexwi: An adolescent girl, not yet subject to the full taboos of womanhood.

[825] [415] [805] [431] [195]

T

ĭăbălst: Cave.
lai: 1—Son, in direct address. As a courtesy title this is often used for lads unrelated to the speaker.
2—Masculine suffix.
Ṭaiakwala: 1—One of the first men to settle at Schooner Pass in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Snuile·tl in the beginning of time.
taiămtmak: Desertion of husband by his wife.
lain: Dorsal fin of a fish.
taitaimẹ: Heavy kind of copper.
taiumax: Tournament between rival villages.
Tăl·ia: 1—Village at head of South Bentinck Arm.
2—Generic name applied to all villages on South Bentinck Arm.
Tăliokăn·a: Nusqual name embodied in a Snuĭsli origin myth.
Tămtămsle·psta, "The Breather": One of Ṭlitcăplilăn·a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.
Tamukus: Stuax man mentioned in an ancient story.
tăpănamtmm: The issuing abroad of invitations to a memorial potlatch.
ĭăqax: Forest consisting of dense underbrush between big trees.
ĭăqul: Blood-stained cedar-bark pad.
tă·s: 1—Bird arrow.
2—Weapon, invisible to mortals, with which a wolf kills its prey.
Tăss; vocative, Tăsso: 1—Designation of supreme god used in prayer.
2—Father, term used by child.
ĭaltăulp: Water-lily.
Ta·qa·xl: Land inhabited by the Kwakiutl.
Tăxlexwam: Leading chief of Ălqălăxl and reputed founder of the village.
Ṭăqlexam: Bella Coola chief living in the last century.
ialan: Type of sea-going canoe with bow and stern identical.
tamkwl·i: 1—White-fronted goose.
2—Type of sea-going canoe named from the bird.
iamst: Husband (di kwămstslai: My husband).
iamxw': River.
Tamxwăsks: Chief who came to Cape Mudge in the beginning of time and later moved to Bella Coola.

[601]

[586] [825] [628] [101]

[824]

[601] [824]

[825] [601]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Tlaxamymitl: Name acquired in the beginning of time by a Rivers Inlet man from a sea-lion.

[825] tlrakndltrtl: Sardine.

Tlikmaxotākka, "The Walking One": Supernatural name of the water ouzel.

Tlikmuts: Song sung during Cannibal dance while the performers run from house to house.

[825] tlima: Mountain goat sinew.

Tlisla: 1—One of the first men to settle at Stuax in the beginning of time.
2—Wife of Mount Nusḥalst, when in human form at the beginning of time.

Tlitcaplilān·a: One of the nine supernatural siblings, a woman who brings aid to those in sickness and is thus the initiator of shamans.

[825] tlixin: Sea-lion.

Tlmstadimut, "Be Like a Person": Instruction given to a stick in the beginning of time. This designation has since been used as an ancestral name.

[821] tlok': 1—Moon.
2—The zenith.

[825] tlokly: Virulent skin disease.

tlopān·i: Cormorant.

Tloṣo·tl, "Small Mound": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.

Tloqots, "Maligner" or "Defamer": A supernatural being.

tlpa: 1—Gaff.
2—To cut wood for masks.

[823] tlpanap: "Cut!" Call used on second day of kusiut dances.

tlpapalam: Small trickle that flows from rocks near the Hot Springs on Labouchere Channel. The term is probably applied to other similar rivulets.

[415] tlulai·: Water-tight basket.

[824] imiax: Water-washed stump with scoured, radiating roots.

Tniqo: Region on the upper Kitlobe River.

[482] inixotl: Tump-line.

toba: Navel.

[825] Tohnkl: Raven's canoe in the beginning of time.

ioḥa: Mink.

lomidjut, "He of the Big Family": Term used to describe a man with many descendants.

[583] lop·a: Synonym for ḷsāmāmmimm, the repurchase of a wife from her husband. This term is perhaps used in Kimsquit alone.

[825] lopiwac: 1—Fawn.
2—Nustrkāmg name of a Kimsquit woman.

[821] Tpiksia: Star in the Great Bear.

iqanḥ: Lower of the two beaters used in the preparation of cedar-bark.

Tqwantlos, "Facing": Village at head of South Bentinck Arm, synonymous with Tālio.

[291] lsaikotl: Hat with flat top and broad brim.

lsaix: Stonecrop.

Tsaixlitl: Kimsquit shaman mentioned in an ancient story.

Tsā·kmai: Bella Coola warrior living in the last century.

Tsalits: Kimsquit hunter mentioned in an ancient story.

Tsāl: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.

Tsaoltmem: Village on east side of South Bentinck Arm.

[825] isvāl: Green barnacles on water-covered stones.

lsiāx: Large woodpecker, species unidentified.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

Tsi-dis: Kitlobe River.
Tsihnakks: Eagle that perched on top of a post supporting the sky in the beginning of time. [825] Isima: Animal's entrails.
Isi-i: Note of the kwakwas, foretelling death. [763] Isitsowi: Cormorant, in Bella Bella language.
Inkkusnam: Goods taken to her husband by a deserting wife on her return to him. [586] Tsikwi: Restoration Bay.
Tsilit, bald eagle: 1—Village in the lower Bella Coola valley. [431]
2—Bald eagle.
3—Name created for himself by one of the first settlers at Kimsquit in the beginning of time. [825]
Inx: Novice, either kusiut or shaman.
Inxstimem or Inxstalsix: First night of a kusiut dance.
tshankdimut: 1—Heavy coppers in Xemoqua's house.
2—Name obtained from these by a Sattia man in the beginning of time.
Iski-kdimut: Kusiutem rite in which the performer's head appears to be pulled off. [415]
Isla: Closely woven basket of spruce roots.
Islaqwsaix: Any act of an unclean nature which prevents a supernatural being from seeing the perpetrator. [784]
Isila: Presents distributed when a nsask initiate dances. They are provided by the donor "To Shield Our Eyes" from the tutwinam and serve to recompense the carpenters and others who have assisted in the rite. [431]
Isma: Belt. [465]
[illegible]ettle. [824]
Tsomlinks: Woman resident in the far north in the beginning of time.
Ispadjut: The giving of presents to the servants and associates of the donor of a potlatch in return for being served with food in a rude manner. [431]
Ispatl: Small woodpecker, species unidentified.
Ispatka: Winter wren. [824]
Isqualt: Spawning sockeye salmon. [825]
Isubilta: Intangible kusiut prerogative consisting of the right to scratch the genitalia. [424] Isulhum: Prompter.
Tsumlinks: One of the first women to settle at Snubli in the beginning of time.
Tsuskilsk: One of the first men to settle at Tsmosl in the beginning of time. [824] Isuwatalp: Unidentified tree of which the bark was smoked. [825] tutulumq: To grasp firmly with both hands, archaic.
tutupin-i: Trout, plural.
tutus'ass'ahsulk: Ceremony resembling a potlatch given by a chief for the benefit of his fellow-villagers, especially during the year preceding his main rite.
tutsya, "What Is Good": Synonym for Ishamamstum, the repurchase of a wife from her husband. [583] Tutsal-as: Synonym for Nustelelsalhm: Supernatural being who shamelessly begs food from his fellows.
tutwinam: 1—Masked figure, usually in crest form, which appears to nsask and a'alk initiates.
2—An appearance, that is, the coming into sight of what is usually invisible.
Tualalit: Supernatural hunter of mountain goats.

5: Smith E-5 (1920-1923)1929 NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Carrier NE7
Tsimshian NE15

MYRICACAE

Myrica Gale L., SWEET GALE

Bella Coola: Branches, secured at any time of the year, pounded with their bark, boiled, and the decoction taken internally for gonorrhoea. A diuretic. The decoction, which was kept in a box made of red cedar wood with a little cover to keep out the dust, soured in two or three days and became useless.

Southern Carrier: Not used.

B C 137 757 B [415]

BETULACEAE, BIRCH FAMILY

Alnus sitchensis (Reg.) Sarg., GREEN ALDER

Bella Coola: Cones used as a remedy for some unspecified complaint.

Alnus tenuifolia Nutt., MOUNTAIN ALDER

Bella Coola: Cones used as a remedy for some unspecified complaint.

See also black cottonwood (page 54).

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Gitksan: Pistillate catkins crushed, and the mass eaten raw as a laxative.

Pistillate catkins and shavings eaten raw, or else boiled in water and the decoction taken internally three times a day, as a diuretic for gonorrhoea. Said to effect a cure in one week.[1]

B C T 137 757

Alnus rubra Bong., RED ALDER

Bella Coola: Bark boiled, and a cupful of the decoction taken internally as a purgative.

Southern Carrier: Sap applied to cuts. Not used for a medicinal decoction.

Northern Carrier: Inside bark ground, steeped in water, and injected with a syringe made from the crop of a bird, for biliousness.

Gitksan: Bark and roots boiled for about six hours and the decoction drunk in the morning for a cough.

Bark from the stem, but not from the roots, scraped, mixed with water, and the infusion taken internally, as an emetic and purgative, for headache and many other maladies.

C [752] C [825]

URTICACEAE, NETTLE FAMILY

Urtica Lyallii Wats., WESTERN NETTLE

Bella Coola: Used for a form of paralysis where the patient had been unable to walk for a long time. Limbs stung daily, causing sores and gradual revival of sensation. In one case said to have effected a cure in ten days.

See also western dock (page 56).

Southern Carrier: Not used.

Gitksan: Entire plant boiled, and the decoction taken internally for many illnesses, including hemorrhage and bladder troubles.

Stinging not used.

T [752]

[1] A Gitksan informant stated that the Tsimshian of the coast made a decoction of this tree which served as an emetic, purgative, and diuretic, and was used for poisoning enemies by mixing one cup-full.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 575 *796 realm above. The method of escape and the rites that occur during his absence do not differ from those previously described for other Cannibals, and the means taken to capture him on his return are likewise similar. But soon after dusk a rite occurs which has not been previously recorded. The [416] [824] kukusiut assemble on the sidewalk outside X's house, each carrying a torch made of resinous wood, liberally smeared with gum and rendered more inflammable with frayed cedar-bark. X himself, well guarded, is escorted to the middle of the group, while a herald calls out that he is going to make what he has consumed fly upward. In his arms he carries what appears to the uninitiated, watching from a distance, to be a dead dog; in reality, it is a dog skin, stuffed with eagle down. Four times he turns around, uttering his cry of xwa·, xwa·, xwa·, while his men call out i · · · · and the women drone. Then, in some way, the down-filled dog-skin is thrown upwards and disappears. One informant had seen this done in his youth, but was unaware of the method employed. The group then disperses and X is taken back to his own house.

About midnight a herald goes to every house, summoning the kukusiut, and especially the singers, to X's. They practise a new song for the Cannibal, and towards dawn it is sung as the "running song" previously described, accompanied by the weird xwa·, xwa·, xwa·. At day-break, a kusiut, chosen for the purpose because he is a fleet runner, pounds at the door of every house, and calls out:

"Come to eat dried salmon," and dashes on to the next.

Thus invited, the kukusiut duly assemble in X's house for a meal.

For four days X remains concealed on his platform, except when, aroused to fury, he makes a tour of the village; and except when making his nightly circuit, during which the frightened uninitiated cover their heads with blankets, fearing that he will smell their breath and devour them. On the fourth day X is carried to the river and washed, in spite of his struggles. While this is taking place a number of kukusiut visit

211
764
532
417

PLATE 23

Photograph by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

Memorial post with model canoe and figures representing slaves

[p442(G)]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Dance of the Tally Posts]

for the dance to start, and X suddenly cries out that he is feeling peculiar. The night selected is usually that of the nebusam of some other kusiut, and X is at once escorted to his own house from which the uninitiated are expelled. For that night and the two following he remains concealed within, leaving only when necessary and taking care that no uninitiated see him. During the afternoon following the third night of concealment, a large number of kukusiut gather in X's home and escort him to the lowest house of the village. He goes around the fire shaking a rattle violently and calling out: 575* 796*

"More! More! Please say exactly what you want and I will do it."

The uninitiated have been told that X has been unable to comprehend the impending call, hence they have no difficulty in realizing that this is a request to his supernatural patron to be more explicit.[80] This appeal is repeated in every house of the village in order from bottom to top. The rite is so important that X often summons kukusiut from neighbouring towns and, on the occasion described, the dancer proceeded to Sınxł with his escort and there entered every dwelling with the same request that he had made in his own village. [628]

In the evening X returns to his home where presently the kukusiut gather from the villages that he visited. The uninitiated from adjacent houses hear whistling so are not surprised when heralds enter to announce that a call has come to X. The ritual is of the regular lsuxtämem pattern and a song is composed and practised; the theme is of X's ability to visit the land above but the type is that of a shaman's song. The ritual concludes in the usual manner. [533]

The next day, nusiutälsap, the customary raised enclosure is erected and a number of kukusiut gather wood in the forest. In the evening the carpenters are requested to make a long ladder, the only paraphernalia required. The evening's ritual ends as usual. [417]

[80] The patron for this dance could not be learnt.

[The Dance of the Tally Posts]

*575 *796 [417] During qotlim and nebusam days the carpenters gather in X's house where they construct a long ladder. The uprights and rungs are of split cedar, and each of the latter is decorated with a tuft of dyed, and a tuft of undyed cedar-bark; two white eagle-tail feathers are fastened to the top. In the afternoon of nebusam, a kusiut who is also a chief blackens his face, dons a collar of dyed cedar-bark and sallies forth to invite guests from the adjacent villages. About the same time the smoke-vent in X's house is pushed back and the ladder is erected, projecting a considerable distance above the roof. The uninitiated see it clearly and wonder what it may portend. In the evening the kukusiut assemble and the singers beat out X's two songs for the benefit of the guest visitors. Then the uninitiated are called in. They see the lower part of the ladder, and gaze with wonder on X who keeps walking backwards and [292] forwards in his raised enclosure, clad in a dance-apron and a black blanket to which is tied one end of the long rope. Two kukusiut assistants hold a section of it as if to anchor him. The dancer carries a rattle which he keeps shaking violently. His two songs are sung and everything is now ready for the main performance. Still shaking his rattle, X climbs the ladder and disappears from sight through the roof, dragging the rope after him. The sound of the rattle grows gradually fainter and fainter, but the cable is steadily drawn up through the opening. It is so realistic that the uninitiated hardly require the explanation given by an eloquent kusiut that a strange power has come to X, enabling him to climb up a ladder which lengthens of its own accord until he will ultimately reach the land above. The orator explains how the dancer will be able to straighten the tally posts, and thus have it in his power to govern the life of an individual, though normally it is only the supernatural beings who can do so. In this connection he employs the term [192] mtlatsta, a word seldom used which has the significance of "A Measuring of the Span of Life."

As at kusiotem dances, spies guard the doorway and threaten death to the kukusiut unless X return in safety. No

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

601 Coola social organization, and of the absence of standardized obligations based upon specific relationships.

Slaves

567 Since a slave was[12] without status in the Bella Coola com-[554] munity, it is perhaps incorrect to include a description of slavery in a chapter on social organization; but as slaves lived in the Bella Coola villages, it seems reasonable to include them when dealing with the different units of the tribe. It was 162 impossible to obtain an accurate estimate of their number in 567 Bella Coola; slavery has been so long abandoned that the present natives could only hazard vague guesses. Judging from conversational remarks by elderly men, it seems probable that in the old days there was a considerable slave population in every Bella Coola village, comprising at times as much as thirty to forty per cent of the total population.

567 When a party raided a village most of the inhabitants were 727 slain, but some, especially children, young adults, or famous chiefs were captured. As far as could be learned, once a captive had reached Bella Coola he was in little danger, since torture or systematic slaying after the heat of battle had subsided was not a Bella Coola characteristic. The leader of the expedition retained many of the captives as his own slaves, and distributed others among his followers. Anyone, chief [422] or commoner, could own slaves in the same way that he could own any other type of goods.

567 Like any other commodity, slaves were bought and sold.
437 The Bella Coola were usually so well provided with salmon that they were able to exchange these fish with the members [622] of other tribes for slaves. Lack of strong chieftainship among [726] the Bella Coola hindered their success in war, so that most of [431] their slaves were obtained by trade. To the same category belong those obtained as presents at potlatches. If, however, [773] a member of one of the tribes on the lower Fraser River was

[648]

[12]One of the first effects of the white man's establishment in British Columbia was the freeing of all slaves. Consequently the past tense is used in this section.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

thus been slain about seventy years earlier. It appears that attempts were commonly made to kill chiefs by means of sympathetic magic, and it is quite possible that such attempts, becoming known, preyed upon the minds of the victims to such an extent that death resulted. 578 622 682 [754]

WEALTH

Since wealth is so important in chieftainship, it would be desirable at this point to consider the concepts of wealth. Unfortunately, it is impossible to give a satisfactory treatment of this subject. The coming of the white man altered the economic aspects of Bella Coola life so radically, and at such an early period, that concrete examples of economic interdependence, so useful in a thorough study, could not be obtained in the field. It is possible that greater attention to this subject might have produced more satisfactory results, but I am doubtful of this. 114 177 556*

In the old days, "wealth" was of two categories: (a) Prerogatives, tangible or intangible, which could be shown, pictorially or dramatically, or could be expounded in words; and (b) Goods which could be distributed for validating such prerogatives. Individual possessions, unsuited for distribution, were hardly considered as wealth; a sewing-machine, a bottle of whiskey, a bed, or some other luxury might give satisfaction to the owner, but did not increase his importance in the eyes of his fellows. The value of objects was only for their use in ceremonial distribution; indeed, prior to such distribution, they were only of potential value. This attitude controlled Bella Coola economics in the early days of contact, and still influences their behaviour. A native store-keeper once ruefully commented on the fact that he would gain no advantage from the goods on his shelves, since he hoped merely to sell them, not to give them away. 556* [422] [177]

A man's relatives were expected to help him in the acquisition of goods, but the extent of their contributions was never 184 476 556*

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

turns, clad in his ceremonial costume, including a long cape with pockets. With him come the four or five young men who have just finished dancing. The singers beat time furiously with their sticks, and the siki whirls round and round, working himself into a frenzy with twists and gyrations. Gradually, he approaches one of the initiates, and pretends to pluck something from his body. As he opens his hands the spectators see that there is something in them, what exactly, they cannot distinguish. Only those who are susaok understand that, whatever it is, it has been palmed from one of his cape pockets. He pretends to throw this object upwards, at the same time slipping it back into his cape. As the article is, theoretically, thrown aloft the sound of whistling is heard, which grows weaker and weaker till it finally ceases. Meanwhile the heralds discourse loudly with one another about how the "eagle" or whatever it is, has been extracted, and is now returning above. The same procedure is repeated for the other initiates. This concludes the night's ceremony. Food is distributed and the people disperse. 556* 575 789

The employment of a foreign siki to expel the power from the initiates is necessary since this particular prerogative is not native to Bella Coola. Formerly the expulsion was done in the back-room without any elaborate ceremony. This rite marks the admission of initiates into the susaok society although they cannot yet leave the back-room. It must be understood, however, that a youth may be initiated several times, on each occasion receiving new songs and perhaps a different mask. In this way his prestige as a susaok is increased, and the son of a powerful chief will often be initiated ten or more times. A mask so acquired is preserved in concealment as the personal property of the owner who may use it at potlatches on future occasions. It will be the guise in which a dead person returns to visit the living. After being used for this purpose, a mask may be burnt, or willed to a near relative of the deceased, who slightly alters the painting before using it himself. [424] [177] 556* 575 [422] [532] [428]

It is somewhat difficult to understand the attitude of those [781]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948

NE6 Bellacoola NE6

422
764

Photograph by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

Personal possessions laid on a grave

[p442(A)]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 not considered necessary. With few exceptions, hereafter to 796 be noted, kusiut masks are burnt at the conclusion of each 532 ceremony, a practice which probably originated in order to [171] avoid the possibility of their being seen by the uninitiated. The Bella Coola state that this is one of the most striking differences between their rites and those of the Bella Bella.

*575 Next in importance to masks are whistles (see Plate 2).[1] 796 The large, cone-shaped form used in sisaok ceremonial is re-534 placed in kusiut dances by a smaller type consisting of portions of wood glued together, which can be blown with ease from [237] beneath a concealing blanket. Another type has bellows consisting of a mountain goat bladder, which is held beneath the arm-pit so that it can be worked invisibly. During the summer the whistles are kept by one individual, usually a [422] marshal. Specific information concerning the ownership of these whistles could not be obtained; it appears that any kusiut can make one, or have one made for him by a skilled carpenter, and that their retention by one person during the [426] summer is merely for convenience. They are freely lent to anyone for use in a ceremony.

*575 In some dances special objects are used in connection with 796 dramatic performances, such as bull-roarers, wooden repre-
532 sentations of animals, birds, or miniature human beings. One old man described a pipe formerly used at Täl·io, which had [534] a carved bowl as large as a tea-cup with three radiating stems.
[824] It was carved from a knotty excrescence on a beech bole. Little could be learnt of its history, except that it was supposed to have been carved by a chief with the design of his patron and displayed through pride.

*575 The usual guests at a performance of the type just sum-
609 marized are the dancer's fellow-villagers and any strangers 796 who happen to be present in the town. Great as is the desire of the kukusiut to impress their uninitiated tribesmen, they [648] are still more eager to impress strangers, hence the presence [123] of Carriers adds piquancy to the rites. The writer believes that his presence and interest encouraged the Bella Coola to

1 [see category 116, p84(B) - ANALYST]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

726 cold sticks to sleep. Meanwhile, their wives at home were 784 required to be very careful, since a woman's heedless playing 722 would cause injury to her husband, and faithlessness, his death. These restrictions were obligatory during the absence of the expedition.

726 As the party neared the enemy's country, they would conceal the craft under projecting trees by day and travel only at night. When within striking distance, a scouting canoe was sent forward to learn the hostile dispositions, the best means of approach, and so forth. This was usually done at dusk, and when the scouts had returned, the party would steal quietly through the forest and hide behind the unsuspecting village. At dawn the leader would give the signal, and the attackers would rush forward with a fierce shout, killing all the men and [727] seizing women and children as slaves. When captives were taken by slave members of the expedition, they belonged to [422] the latter's masters. The victors would cut off the heads of their victims, seize what loot they could, set fire to the village [567] and rush home before support could arrive from neighbouring towns. At first, the slaughter was usually a somewhat unpleasant task, but as the warriors became inflamed with the heat of battle, they began to delight in killing, and even women and children frequently suffered.

727 The exulting victors sped homewards, rejoicing at their success but somewhat fearful that they might be cut off by overwhelming reinforcements. During the journey, each warrior who had taken a head removed the scalp by cutting the skin around the cranium close above the eyebrows and ears. These trophies were washed at the rock Skolsexumnsta on the fiord below Bella Coola. When within sight of home, the [533] captain stood up in the canoe and sang again his xe·tla song, a symbol of victory as the bloody scalps were held aloft. Women and children would rush forth to greet the conquerors who landed amid scenes of wild enthusiasm and rejoicing.

[422] Prisoners of war became the property of those who had [567] taken them, with the exception of those captured by slaves.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

If the war had not been of long duration in which extremely bitter feelings had been aroused, captives were often ransomed by their relatives, who came unmolested for the purpose when the heat of battle had subsided. Failing this, prisoners remained as slaves, the children especially growing up virtually as members of their owner's family as far as food and clothing were concerned, though never sharing in the prowess of his ancestral family. Torture or killing of prisoners seems to have been a rare practice. One extremely old Kimsquit woman related that in her childhood she had seen a captive stretched out on the hot rocks at the side of the ocean, fastened there, his testes crushed with stones, and allowed to die. No other similar traditions could be obtained and it seems probable that this must have been an unusual case. It is true that hostilities have long ceased, but the Bella Coola have clear recollections of other long-abandoned customs, and it is unlikely that torture was ever a common occurrence. It is, of course, one about which reticence is to be expected, but information would have been obtainable if the custom had been common or if it had been one which played an important part in the lives of the Bella Coola.

Scalps were hung on a cord and dried like salmon, then suspended as valuable trophies in the taker's house. When setting out on a war expedition, he would often cover his head with one, holding it in position by weaving its hair into his own. At a man's death, they were either inherited by his heirs or, more often, burnt with his other possessions. It is said that the Fort Rupert people used to tie scalps in bundles to their masks. When the Bella Coola went to war to retaliate for a murder, instead of scalping a victim, they sometimes brought back his whole head and impaled it on a stake over the grave of the person avenged.

At this late period it is virtually impossible to form any opinion as to the amount of bloodshed in wars waged by the Bella Coola. Several of the older people spoke in gloating terms of the slaughter accomplished by their ancestors, but all

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575 773 776 796 trails of ermine skins, and to swing carved rattles. The man, later on, returned to the sun. Ever since that time the Bilqula dance the Sisau'kH. Besides this it is stated that the Raven gave each gens its secrets.

FIG. 8.—Mask representing K'ômk'ômkt'likya.

FIG. 9.—Mask representing K'ula'qawa.

532 575 776

614 532 422 Each gens has its peculiar carvings, which are used in the Sisau'kH only, and are otherwise kept a deep secret, i.e., they are the sacred posses-

FIG. 10.—Mask representing Kulê'lias.

FIG. 11.—Mask representing Tl'êtsâ'aplêtlans.

[575] [776]

[534] [292] sions of each gens. All gentes, however, wear the beautiful carved headdresses and use the raven rattles, regardless of the carving they represent.

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

represent. Every time the sacred objects of a gens are shown to the people a potlatch is given. The sacred objects, although the property of the various gentes, must nevertheless be acquired by each individual. That is to say, every free person has the right to acquire a certain group of carvings and names, according to the gens to which he or she belongs. Slaves and slaves' children, also illegitimate children, could not become Sisau'kH. A person cannot take a new carving, but must wait until it is given to him by his relatives—father, mother, or elder brother. Nusk'Elu'sta, to whom I owe my information regarding the gentes, and who is a member of the gens Ialo'stimôt of the Talio'mH, stated that he had received the raven when he gave his first potlatch. At his second potlatch he received the eagle. He hopes that his mother will give him the whale at his next potlatch, and will at the same time divulge to him the secrets connected with it. In course of time, he said, he might get even others from his brother; but if the latter's children should prove to be very good, and develop very rapidly, his brother would probably give his secrets to his children. At festivals, when a person acquires a new secret, he changes his name. Each person has two names, a Kû'siût name, which remains the same throughout life; and a Qē'mtsiōn name, which is changed at these festivals. Thus, Nusk'Elu'sta's (which is his Kû'siût name) present Qē'mtsiōn name is Atl'iNEmnE'lus'siH, but at his next potlatch he intends to take the name of Kaliā'kis. These names are also the property of the various gentes, each gens having its own names. In the list of gentes given above, the names enumerated are the Kû'siût names of the ancestors. In two cases only the Qē'mtsiōn names have been ascertained (see p. 409). When a man possesses several Sisau'kH secrets he will distribute them among his children. When a girl marries, her father or mother may, after a child has been born to her, give one or several of their Sisau'kH secrets to her husband, as his children make him a member of the gens. When a person gets to be old he gives away all his Sisau'kH secrets. After any secret has been given away the giver must not use it any more. The crest and the Sisau'kH carvings must not be loaned to others, but each person must keep his own carvings. The only exceptions are the carved headdresses and the raven rattles, which are not the property of any particular gens.

The laws regarding the potlatch are similar to those of the Kwakiutl. The receiver of a present becomes the debtor of the person who gave the potlatch. If the latter should die the debts become due to his heirs. If the debtor should die his heirs become responsible for the debt. Property is also destroyed at potlatches. This is not returned, and serves only to enhance the social position of the individual who performed this act. It is not necessary that all the property given by a person in a potlatch should be owned by him. He may borrow part of it from his friends, and has to repay it with interest. I was told, for instance, that a man borrowed a large copper-plate and burnt it at a potlatch. When doing so he had to name the price which he was going to pay to the owner in its stead. Since that feast he died, and his heirs are now responsible for the amount named at the potlatch.

The Kû'siût is presided over by a female spirit, called Anaûlikûtsai'H. Her abode is a cave in the woods, which she keeps shut from February till October, remaining all the while inside. In October she opens the door of her cave and sits in front of it. A woman is said to have been the first to find her. Anaûlikûtsai'H invited her into her cave and taught

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

614 extinct, are unusual; normally, the group is largely centred in
621. one village, but with members scattered in other localities. There is no central organization. It is generally recognized that such a unit belongs in the village where its first ancestors settled, and the leading chief of that village is, therefore, an important person in the family, though without status of [622] "head" of it. His advice may be appealed to in cases of dis-[553] putes concerning names, but he lacks judicial authority. Theoretically, the descendants of the elder of two first people are considered as "elder brothers and elder sisters" of those descended from a younger brother or sister; but this is nothing more than an accepted fact; it plays no part in the social life of the community.

552 In addition to human names, the origin myths include those 614 applied to dogs. The first ancestral group had dogs, and these animals had names, or were given them by their powerful 773 masters. Ever since that time their descendants can apply these designations to their own dogs. It is unnecessary to validate such names, but no two canines can be given the same one at the same time, according to the rule which governs the bestowal of human names. This matter was not investigated [539] in detail, and the only dog's name collected was one for which the origin myth is as follows:

> When Tăl·ie was first settled in the beginning of time, the houses were built in parallel rows, one above the other, up the side of a steep [514] knoll. At the very top was a toilet-house, built over such a steep incline that excrement rolled down the hillside. In consequence, one of the early chiefs living there gave to his dog the name, Nuliqumuil di mink', "Rolling excrement," which has since been preserved in the ancestral family of his descendants.

LAND

124 Great difficulty was experienced in obtaining information
● 423 about land tenure. The Bella Coola resent keenly the way in which their land has been occupied by white settlers without, 177 according to their standpoint, proper compensation. Questions on this subject always excited them, but every effort was made to verify the following statements.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

As with names, the easiest way to understand the rights of the ancestral family in land is by first considering the mythological explanation, which mirrors conditions as they existed at the coming of white men. On reaching this earth the first people are believed to have prospected for suitable settlement sites, places where salmon and olachen could be caught, and if possible, near side valleys where berries were abundant. Here they released the animals and plants which they had brought with them, on which they thenceforth subsisted, in accordance with the supreme deity's instructions. The members of the group pre-empted these areas for themselves. Waste land, far from any village was, and still is, free to anyone. A few years after the first settlements had been made, according to the myths, the supreme god sent down to Kimsquit a certain Alquntām who allotted and marked the territory which was the property of each community; at that time a village consisted merely of a group of the first settlers. No similar myth was recounted for either Bella Coola or Tāl-io, although their concepts with regard to land are identical with those of the Kimsquit. This really gave a sacred sanction to the possession of land, an important matter to a people so religiously inclined as the Bella Coola.

The system of land tenure follows the same somewhat abstruse principles that govern the possession of names in an ancestral family. Hunting and collecting grounds appropriated by the first people, or by their immediate descendants, are the property of their offspring, the ancestral family. The Bella Coola term for such an area is sel'loam, also called, nxnumsta, which means "Food Supply."

It will thus be seen that a hunting-area is not the property of any single individual, but belongs to a group of persons, most of whom live in a single town. The relatives of a man who intends to give a potlatch usually give him, temporarily, exclusive rights to the hunting-ground. As with names, there

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

●423 614 is no doubt that a man tends to lose those rights in property which are strictly his, if they are located at a distance. Thus several men claim that they are legally entitled to hunt at Kitlobe, but from mere difficulty of access neither they nor their fathers have exercised the right, and it would have been lost in the course of a few generations, even without the utter decay of custom which has followed the advent of the white man. Practically, a man hunts only in the grounds of those ancestral families in whose origin myths he has names, though, theoretically, he is entitled to hunt on any hunting-ground of any ancestral family of which he is a member whether or not he holds a duly validated name from its origin myth. It is not necessary to confirm the right to property as with a name, [illegible] right to that area of the ancestral family to which that designation belongs. Although the ownership of land in distant regions is of little practical importance, it is, none the less, a [554] matter of great pride to a man to feel that he has rights in many places. The efforts of an individual to make good those [721] claims has often led to bloodshed; in fact, one intelligent old man stated that property disputes were the principal cause for [554] war in British Columbia. A person who lacks hunting-grounds is little better than a slave, whereas one who has much land is important.

The Bella Coola regard land as almost inalienable. Though a man does not own the land of his wife's ancestral family, he can use it and his children have full rights to it. Conversely, a wife can gather berries on her husband's land, though it is not here. A guest at a village may be allowed to use the [574] territory of his hosts, but it does not become his. In the old 727 days wars between the coastal tribes were common, but though slaves were taken freely, land was never seized; such is un- 423 thinkable to a Bella Coola. In fact, several of the older people [567] inquired how it had been possible, in the first world war, for the allies, whose cause they believed to be righteous, to annex territory from Germany. If the victors had killed or enslaved

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

the Germans it would have been moral and proper according to Bella Coola ethics, but to take land was unheard of. 423 [727]

Since land is only valued for hunting or collecting purposes, it is not divided into small areas. Any man can build his house at will near the village. It is said that at Kitlobe the crab-apple trees are the property of different ancestral families, themselves members of different tribes, but this is unknown in Bella Coola. It may be mentioned that the Bella Coola [829] somewhat naïvely assume that all other coastal tribes have ancestral families similar to their own, although they recognize that some of them also have a clan system which has no counterpart in their social organization. Since the concentration of the tribe on a small reserve and the beginning of [177] agriculture, a system of individual ownership of cultivated land has sprung up. It is realized that if a man clears and [428] cultivates a field, the produce is his own, and he can sell the land to whomsoever he pleases. Likewise a man who rings a tree to kill it for firewood is the sole owner. The Bella Coola regard uncultivated land in the reserve as being at the disposal of anyone, a concept which appears not to have been taught them by any white administrator. Its origin seems rather to lie in the old belief that any unpreëmpted land, far removed from a village, can be used by anyone. It is recognized that the reserve cannot be considered as a sel'elam belonging to any ancestral group, hence it is free to all. One corner of it, however, includes the lower part of a side-valley formerly used by the people of Tsmatl. An old man, whose ancestral family [614] lived in that village for generations, has set his bear-traps in this corner of the reserve for a number of years without interference from other hunters, who go far afield with their traps. Even within the limits of the reserve it is felt that this man has the prime right to that area for the use of himself and his family.

Theoretically an ancestral family may die out. Several accounts were received of old men who, believing themselves to be the sole survivors of their family, bequeathed their names 614 428 721

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Bella bella NE5

BC 614 428 721 and hunting-grounds to those who had helped them in their old age. But in every case the gift turned out to be of doubtful value, since young men grew up who claimed membership in the supposedly defunct ancestral family and combatted the right of those to whom it had been given. This always led to war.

BB BC The following is an instance of a feud which arose from the bestowal of a hunting-area.

423 648 It is said that about 1850 the people of Tcawat (probably Bute Inlet) captured a Bella Bella woman as a slave. She escaped and fled up the Tcawat River, hoping to come in contact with the Bella Coola, who often hunted in that area. The woman was found by the mother's father of an informant who carefully looked after her while he was hunting beaver and brought her back to Bella Coola, thence sending her to Bella Bella. In gratitude her father, a Bella Bella chief, gave her rescuer the hunting-area known as Nulam, near Kwatna Inlet, with the consent of the members of his ancestral family. BB [425] The land so alienated should have remained permanently in possession of the Bella Coola ancestral family, but was too far removed from Bella Coola to be used regularly by the new owners. After the death of the Bella Bella chief, a number of individuals who claimed membership in his ancestral family asserted their rights to it. Many years later, after white traders had made their appearance on the coast, a Bella Coola went to Nulam and killed a large number of beaver. As he was leaving with their pelts he was murdered by some Bella Bella, ostensibly as a trespasser. But for the restraining influence of the white man this incident would undoubtedly have led to war. The informant still feels that he is entitled to hunt at Nulam, and did so several times when he was a young man; but his sons have never exercised the right, and it has practically lapsed.

BB BC 423 622 It is unfortunate that the above incident is drawn from Bella Bella, where the power of chiefs is much greater than among the Bella Coola. Consequently it is impossible to say

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Bella bella NE5

BB
BC
423
[622]

exactly what right the Bella Bella chief had to dispose of the land. The informant assumed that he must have been powerful enough to dictate to his followers, an unknown possibility in Bella Coola. However, the informant regards the case as typical of what would likely happen should a Bella Coola try to give away land. Out of generosity or gratitude old men have sometimes done so, but always they have forgotten someone, perhaps a mere infant, who on growing up lays claim to the sol'olam.

BC
423
614
[226]
[773]

Hunting-grounds are not the only valuable parts of the country. Even more important are stretches of river suitable for salmon-weirs. Of the same type are good places for olachen-nets, and rocks from which these fish can be caught with scoop-nets. Like hunting-grounds, these are said to have been pre-empted by the first people[1] and have passed into the ownership of the ancestral families descended from them. It is needless to repeat the gradual lapsing of rights to property of this kind in distant areas, since the principle is the same as that already described for land.

[773]
[226]

In one respect, salmon-weirs differ from hunting-areas, since the latter can be used by any number of individuals, whereas the number of salmon-traps possible at any one weir is limited. Again the mythological origin must be given to explain the customary usage. If, for example, a salmon-weir supposedly built by one of the first groups of people was fully manned in the third generation by ten individuals, it is as

[1]Several Bella Coola myths describe how the first-comers brought with them from above stone hammers for the construction of fish-dams, and how others were provided with miniature dams which grew larger when placed in position. Mr. H. I. Smith kindly gave the writer the following account, received from an elderly Bella Coola:

Long, long ago a certain Tamakus lived with his father, the Sun, who decided to send his child to earth. He came down to Stuix, carrying a stone beneath his arm-pit, and accompanied by a Wolf. Tamakus made the stone into a pile-driver with a face sculptured upon it, and with this tool drove piles to make a fish-weir. After a while a number of human beings came paddling up the Bella Coola River. In course of time the Wolf returned above, but Tamakus remained on earth catching salmon, and teaching the people the method which was in use until the last few years.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

423 614 [773] [226] sumed that ten is the largest number of traps possible at that weir. Those who have the right to that weir are the members of the ancestral family with the names of those first users. At this point the logic of the Bella Coola fails to uphold the mythological pattern. No salmon-weir has remained in existence since the beginning of time; when one broke, owners were sometimes infants, and those who repaired the break became regarded as the rightful possessors. The system of ownership prevailing at the time of abandoning the weirs, was that individuals, not groups, had rights to certain sections of the weir [428] which were willable like other personal property. In most [431] cases this right was transmitted with a name, marking the section of weir, which had to be duly validated by presents. [428] In other cases, the intangible ownership was willed without any mark whatever.[8] Unless bequeathed in this way, disputes were frequent. Rights of this kind were never sold although [427] an owner often leased his section for a night, or longer period, receiving goods in return, and not forfeiting his ownership [431] thereby. This was particularly common when the renter was planning to give a potlatch. No case was heard of in which the right to a certain section of salmon-weir was given to a non-member of the ancestral family. Theoretically, this was possible, but practically it would be so inconvenient that it is most unlikely ever to have occurred, since the Bella Coola is [671] never such a slave to legal privileges that he fails to be guided by common sense.

226 Although individual ownership is thus recognized with [423] regard to sections of salmon-weirs and suitable places for olachen-nets, the owner is bound to share his haul. When he [577] catches a large number of fish, anyone, whether related to him [626] or not, can demand some. He cannot refuse, since to do so would brand him as selfish. The effective check on this system

[128] [8]Great difficulty was experienced in learning about the distribution of rights to sections of salmon-weirs. The evidence is conflicting, and though every effort was made to verify and check the above, there may be further regulations which were not learnt.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

764 friends of the deceased, pick up the coffin and carry it through [766] the hole. In former times it was frequently difficult to obtain [784] pall-bearers for a slave or friendless person on account of the [761] taboos to which a person performing this service was subject. If a dead person should be taken through a doorway, others using it would soon follow the corpse to the next world. For the same reason, a body must never be moved across the central line of a house; the passage is, therefore, made from the side where it happens to be lying. As soon as the corpse has been taken through, the removed planks are quickly replaced. Mourners and guests stream out through the doorway and follow the coffin, some of them carrying the bundles containing part of the goods of the deceased. Meanwhile the pall-bearers follow the woman with the torch to the cemetery, taking care to carry their burden so that it faces the direction [761] in which they are going; if a dead person is allowed to look backwards, he will beckon some relative to accompany him and the one so summoned will soon die.

There is a cemetery near every village, usually fifty to a hundred yards behind the row of houses in a place from which the heavy timber has been cleared. On arrival, the pall-bearers set down their burden close to the spot where the guide has placed her flaming bark on the ground. The personal possessions of the deceased are likewise deposited near the fire, which is kept alight by female relatives throwing on it small quantities of the dead person's clothing and utensils. The near kinsmen of the deceased choose the exact site of the grave, which must never be dug before the bringing of the corpse.
[423] There is no ownership of plots within the cemetery, so that the hole can be made wherever desired. A favourite location is close to the grave of a mother, father, or other near relative, but this is optional; bones are sometimes uncovered when digging, and in that case earth is thrown in once more and a new site selected. There are no professional grave-diggers, [767] nor are arrangements made in advance for men to perform this duty, but friends, especially strong young men, are willing to

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

APPENDIX A

MECHANICAL PROCESSES

NO attempt was made to study either the material culture of the Bella Coola, or their methods of manufacturing, but information on some points was obtained incidentally. All sociological and religious features connected therewith have already been described. 121

THE TAKING AND PREPARATION OF OLACHEN

227

The run of olachen, sputx, comes about the end of April, and as many as possible are caught. In preparation, nets, *älte'x*ᵘ, are brought out from the boxes where they have been stored during the winter, examined, and repaired. If necessary, new ones must be manufactured out of nettle-(lsna-) fibre laid away by the women for this purpose. By rolling the material on their legs, they produce a thin twine; five strands of this are then interwoven, making a finished cord capable of resisting great strain. The nets are constructed by the men. The type used at the present time, which is said not to differ from that formerly employed, consists of a purse-like sack, oval in cross-section, open at the wider end and tapering very gradually to the other, which is closed. The total length is about thirty feet, the diameter at the open end about eight feet, and at the closed end about three feet. A new net is dipped in a mixture of boiled hemlock-bark to darken it, and then boiled in a solution of willow-bark to prevent the knots from slipping. [226] [221] [283] [462] [286] [386]

The setting out of a net is not an easy task, so two or three men agree to work as partners. In the present degenerate days, property rights are not respected and each group selects a suitable spot. The best location is where the water is about three feet deep and runs rapidly, but without ripples, over a smooth piece of the bottom; such a place is called a sklläx. When the fish begin to run plentifully, the partners paddle out to set their net, taking with them four stakes, each about ten feet in length. The weight of a full net is tremendous, so the poles have to be driven down at least six feet, a difficult task on account of the stony bottom. Selecting the exact spot, one of four posts, nudjäles, is set upright and held in position by being tied to a cross-piece, nudjiqosta, fastened to the canoe for the purpose. While his two partners hold the craft steady, the third man begins to pound down the stake; metal mauls are now commonly used, but in former times this work was always done with an unhafted stone maul, luxwoma. The fishermen relieve one another intermittently until the top of the pole has been driven down to within 226 [476] [423] [178] [412]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Xemlaix: One of the first men to settle at Ḷomqo·ts in the beginning of time.
Xemtmm: Kusiut name of a Sl̓iskistl man.
Xemxemälotla: 1—One of the nine supernatural siblings.
2—Ancestral name of a Bella Coola man.
Xemxemlaix: Susook name brought from above in the beginning of time.
Xemxemtmm: 1—Supernatural beings who request the sun to appear.
2—One of the first men to settle at Alqälaxl in the beginning of time.
[533] xe·tla: Boastful type of song used by chiefs on war expeditions and at potlatches.
Xedilkos: One of the first men to settle at Ḷotlnelos in the beginning of time.
Xelässu: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit woman. The designation is of Bella Bella origin.
[825] ṣuxe: Marten.
[412] ṣiis: Stone axe.
xulxel: Party of potlatch messengers and the invitation they bear.
[203] Ximpdimut: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Ximximlaix: A'alk man mentioned in an ancient story.
Ximximoslaix: Celebrated female shaman.
[821] ṣunṣunäs·i, plural, ṣunṣunäsoksi: Little girl.
[517] Xinṣnes: 1—"Little Girls": Group of stars in the Great Bear.
2—Picnic, especially one on which fern root is gathered.
Xixais: Bella Coola term for the Carriers living near Ootsa Lake. This is said to be their own name for themselves.
Xiximän·a, "Right Foot": Stuix repository named from part of a supernatural creature.
Xuṣis: Mountain in the Carrier country.
xuxmänoäs: Spirit, one of the supernatural elements in the human body.
xläxtmm: Ceremony prior to a potlatch when tasks are allotted and the donor's house destroyed.
xläni: The entrusting, before death, of a name for the benefit of a relative.
Xlikwals: Mountain in the upper Bella Coola valley.
[586] xlokun·imut: The irrevocable desertion of her husband by a wife.
Xmaxots: Locality below Nusḵalst.
[825] ṣmṣmatsl: Minnows.
[601] ṣmes: Woman, or wife in indirect address (kei ṣmeslaix: My wife).
[614] ṣmesäxta: Female relatives of same ancestral family, term of indirect address.
[423] ṣmesdäm or nuṣmesdäm: The right by which a husband uses his wife's land, though it is not his own.
Xnutli: Bella Coola sorcerer living in the last century.
xokli: The forcible washing of a Cannibal.
Xoläxwosem: Name acquired by a man mentioned in an ancient story.
[785] xoldjut: Intercourse held during ceremonial chastity; the term has a sacred significance.
[831] Xomtsla: Male professional singer who came down to the Dean River in the beginning of time.
Xomxomqa: Ancestral name of a Stuix man. The designation is said to have come from Smith Inlet.
Xonṣotäm: Supernatural scoop-net fisherman, servant of the supreme god.
Xoqutlis: Bella Coola man mentioned in an ancient story.

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

772 *sonx*ʷ. If the Bella Coola were strictly logical, one should expect them to conceive the upper surface of *sonx*ʷ as being convex. Instead, it is considered a flat surface, very similar to the earth, and no explanation is given of what fills in the spaces between the dome, concave as viewed from this world, and the upper plane which could rest only on the peak of the [811] dome. But logical accuracy is not a Bella Coola characteristic. This flat land is called *dāsonx*ʷ*dä* or *wasonx*ʷ wawitk-ltlqosil. It is illumined by a second sun, shining on it as the sun does on the earth. Far in the east of this upper region are extensive tide-flats. This land above is the home of many supernatural beings, who will be described in due course. The [821] relative position of the sun to this upper world is ill-defined. According to some accounts, it travels by clearly marked trails on the surface, and a transparent dome is postulated to explain how its light reaches this earth. Others state that it moves like a bird or flying canoe through the space between the world [538] and the dome-sky above. On many of these points there is a striking difference of opinion, which the Bella Coola explain [424] by saying that their information is derived from ancient stories, which are personal possessions, and that no one knows the beliefs of his fellows. A co-ordinated theology, as Boas points out, has not evolved among the Bella Coola.

772 The sky, as it may be called if the reader will bear in mind 773 that it is the underside of a flat land, was not always in its present condition. The Bella Coola say that long ago the [776] supreme god instructed his Carpenters (I, p. 39) to make a sky. They started from the eastern extremity of the earth, but after a considerable part of the dome had been erected, it fell with a thunderous crash, because no supporting posts had been set up. The part that escaped this calamity is called Salwalosam. Undiscouraged, the Carpenters continued their work with the assistance of posts and so built the sky as it is seen today. Then the supports were taken away.

772 As already stated, a sun shines on the land above. As that 821 seen by mortals is attached to the land above, so is this upper sun attached to another land above the one of which our sky is the underside. Boas (p. 28) has described this upper land in some detail. A number of Bella Coola were questioned on this subject, but for some time no one could be found with knowledge of its existence. At length one of the older people remembered that a man who had died some thirty years ago had a personal story connected with it, and later a Kimsquit man was able to furnish definite information. He explained that in his family there was a myth dealing with this matter; others might have heard this myth, but since it was not their property, of course they would not be able to impart the facts contained in it, nor would they necessarily believe it. Consequently, an upper land, superimposed above that which is immediately over the earth, cannot be described as a Bella Coola belief; it is shared, so far as could be ascertained, by only two families.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

The chief feature of this uppermost world is its distance and unapproachableness. To the supernatural beings living in the intermediate land it is a far-off place; in fact, their attitude towards it corresponds to that with which mortals regard the land above their own. The supernatural ones can, when they wish, visit this upper world, which is called Nuqwliäls. A sun shines there, but it is a different kind of sun from that known to mortals. On the whole it appears that this upper sky-land does not differ materially from either the earth or the land immediately above. No human being has ever reached this distant land, so what little is known about it was brought down in the beginning of time by the first people.

In addition to these two upper worlds, the Bella Coola know of one, or perhaps two, below. One of these is inhabited by ghosts.[1] It somewhat resembles the earth, but is unsubstantial and ethereal. It is considered to be immediately

[1]At the present time the Bella Coola are in a state of transition between the old beliefs and the new. This concept is held only by the older people, so it might be more accurate to describe it as one which they, the tribe as a whole, used to know. It has been thought advisable to use the present tense throughout in recording customs and beliefs which are now rapidly passing away.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

not systematized; if a man is asked about the powers or functions of a certain supernatural being, he will usually answer by recounting a story in which that being appears. What is known respecting many of the lesser supernatural beings depends upon information contained in stories, and as many of these are personal possessions, it follows that there is tremendous variation in individual knowledge. Psychologically, this is of little importance; there are enough supernatural beings for everyone to know some of them, and to expect to meet or hear them in the forests. To insert many of the stories contained in later chapters would break the sequence of description; all that is here attempted is to give a general summary, in a way foreign to Bella Coola thought.

Supernatural beings are by no means all-powerful. It is true that they have miraculous powers and can work weal or woe to human beings who chance to come in contact with them, but likewise they may sometimes be overwhelmed by mortals armed with objects steeped in human essence, such as a blanket which has been worn until it is impregnated not only with the smell, but the physical being of its owner. In particular, shamans or other mortals of great strength have been able to conquer the supernatural ones. Consequently, it may be said that although supernatural beings live on a plane different from that of mortals, they are not omnipotent. Long, long ago, man was able to come in contact with them more frequently, but that golden age when the semi-mythical ancestors of the Bella Coola were living has long since passed away, though it is only within the last few years that such beings, particularly supernatural animals, have become comparatively rare. The Bella Coola give three main reasons for this:

(1) Supernatural animals do not like the sound of muskets and have moved far away.

(2) With increasing dependence on the canning industry, fewer hunters penetrate into their haunts in the distant parts of the mountains.

(3) The younger Bella Coola no longer take pains to purify themselves as a means of placating supernatural beings.

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

rate most of them, are carefully used in accordance with the functions of this supreme deity. As a Bella Coola has many names, corresponding to his membership in various societies, his professional prerogatives, his ancestral myths, and mere nicknames, so has Ałquntäm, who is a superman, many names, according to his special functions. It would be unthinkable for a Bella Coola to pray to Ałquntäm, yet it is common for him to pray to Mınakais or Tätä, other names for the same being. The multiplicity of functions and designations approaches the point of obscuring the unity of Ałquntäm, which in fact, some Bella Coola even deny. They state that Sınxälotla, Mınakais, Smaialotla, and Nuxekmälsaix are one, but that Ałquntäm, Snusılkäls, and Nonodjonostem are three distinct supernatural beings. This seeming confusion presents no difficulties to the Indian, since each family has its own myths in which such facts are recorded. He believes these, without questioning those of his neighbour, and it is even possible for an individual to believe two contradictory statements, if he happens to become the owner of two contradictory myths. Evidence collected in the field does not make clear whether the beliefs of the Bella Coola illustrate an incomplete transformation of a single deity into a number of minor ones, or whether they represent the almost complete fusion of a number of beings into one. Following the practice of the great majority of the Bella Coola, the supreme deity will be referred to as Ałquntäm.

776* [551] [782] [424] [184] [771]

The most obvious attribute of Ałquntäm is connected with the sun. He can enter it and use it as if it were his canoe. In form he resembles a man, and when he takes charge of the sun it appears as if the latter were a large, self-propelling, radiant boat with windows through which he looks forth. It is said that long ago he allowed mink to take charge of the sun, but the malicious animal ran it so close to earth that the intense heat killed almost all living creatures. When Ałquntäm enters the sun he wears a cloak, on the lining of which are salmon; reversing this causes the rivers on earth to teem with salmon.

776* 821 [825]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

773 hanging a number of bird and animal cloaks, representing ravens, eagles, whales, grizzly bears, black bears, and a few others. Ālquntäm asked each individual which of these cloaks he preferred to wear. One selected a raven, another an eagle, and so on. Each donned his choice from the wall and immediately became the bird or animal chosen. Ālquntäm gave each man or woman one or more names, and some food in compressed form; then sent him down in avian or mammal form. Even the animals could travel through the air like birds, and each landed on the peak of a mountain in the Bella Coola country, took off his cloak, and reassumed human form. The discarded coverings floated back up to Nusmät·a. A few individuals, instead of coming to earth in animal form, swarmed down posts which stretched between the worlds.

177 This myth is fervently believed by the Bella Coola. Even 773 Christian Indians, though they readily admit the biblical creation as applied to the white race, remain convinced of the manner in which their own ancestors came into being. At the present time, though most ancient beliefs are rapidly passing away, few, if any, Bella Coola doubt this account of the creation of their forefathers. Their conviction rests not only on the religious aspect of their life, but on the sociological. A man's [551] most treasured possessions are the name brought down from [424] above by his ancestor in the beginning of time, the knowledge of the form taken by that ancestor, and information about the place where he landed. A collection of myths of this kind is given in vol. I, chap. VI. Lacking knowledge of his first an-[622] cestor's form, a Bella Coola has slight chance of becoming a [554] chief; such lore is the birthright of every descendant of one of [561] these first people, and those without it are almost certain to be the offspring of slaves. The social aspects of creation myths will be described later; at this point a broad outline must suffice. Nusmät·a, "The House of Myths," is the place in which these myths were made, and are now stored, two reasons for its importance in the eyes of the Bella Coola.

[775] Nusmät·a is not only connected with the history of an indi-

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

the rescue of Łxwumxwumlaix they saw him being carried downstream to a salmon-weir about three hundred yards below. The trap was raised at once, but it was too late; the rash fisherman was dead. No one could give a name to the supernatural being who had caused his death; it was merely one of those dwelling under the river. 776* [539] [761]

Whales, too, are sometimes observed in the rivers, but though they appear to resemble those of the ocean they are really their supernatural prototypes. [825]

These human-like dwellers beneath the water can, as in this case, cause death, but they are usually regarded as uncanny rather than dangerous. [761] But there is one undersea being whom the Bella Coola regard with unmixed awe; he is Ṣomoqwa (see Plate 10), lord of the supernatural ones beneath the ocean, as Ätquntäm is lord of those dwelling above. He lives in an enormous house under the sea wherein the fish, the sea-mammals, and the sea-plants have their home. The Bella Coola believe that these beings can take human form at will,[14] and assume that their behaviour in Ṣomoqwa's dwelling corresponds to that of human beings in the house of an earthly chief. In the beginning of time, when men were more powerful than in recent years, this house sometimes rose to the surface of the water and adventurous Bella Coola entered it on various occasions, leaving to their descendants tales of the wonders it contained. 773 776* These accounts have become family myths and are described with others of similar type in Chap. VI, vol. I. [424] [184] Records of this kind vary greatly in detail; in fact, few agree more than in broad outline. Sometimes it is stated that denizens of the sea appear in Ṣomoqwa's house in the flesh; other myths describe paintings of sea creatures around the walls and the manner in which these are brought to life by Ṣomoqwa. Irrespective of the exact details, it is clear that he is chief of the undersea beings who serve him and hunt for him, the blackfish being especially proficient in this respect. Ṣomoqwa resents any slight to his protégés and punishes any mortal who is unkind to them.

[14] Bella Coola concepts concerning the transformability of men and animals will be described in the next section of this chapter.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

000 Coola throw pieces of it and eagle down on the water.

424 773 825 Before leaving the subject of supernatural animals, a word must be said concerning the attitude of the Bella Coola to those in whose forms their first ancestors came to earth. If, for example, a man's first ancestor descended as a raven, this knowledge is a valuable possession of himself and his family. [556] Indeed, the most treasured possessions of a Bella Coola are not the material objects collected by him through life, but the intangible rights wrapped up in his ancestral history. These are referred to under four names:

(1) Smaiusta, "Preserved Story"; the myth describing the coming to earth of a man's first ancestors in the beginning of time.

(2) Kəlelta, "What Was Sent Down"; the names and other possessions given by Ałquntām to a man's first ancestors in the beginning of time.

(3) Tχämätł, "Whence We Came"; the place to which a man's first ancestors came in the beginning of time, and the one from which they have since spread.

(4) Q̓watłunta.

Various smaiusta are recorded in vol. I, chap. VI, and the second and third terms are really part of the first, although to the Bella Coola they are psychologically distinct. Q̓watłunta is the word used for both the birds or animals chosen as cloaks by the first settlers, and also for creatures with which the early people came in contact. The nearest interpretation appears to be, "Crest." When a Bella Coola whose first ancestor came to earth as a raven portrays that bird, it serves as a visible mark of his intangible possession. In former days, if a man carved on stone so that his work and his name would never be forgotten, it was a q̓watłnekam, a constant reminder of his greatness to generations then unborn. A q̓watłunta, therefore, combines the concept of memorial with that of crest, so that Bella Coola speak of the white man's memorials as q̓watłunta. In brief, a man regards the form assumed by his ancestor when coming to this earth as an emblem of the ancient history and fame of his family. It is a matter connected with the past, a matter of the mind, a source of pride to him to have such a possession, but a matter that does not affect his daily life. 211 424 773

424 773 825 211

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

So far as could be learnt, the Bella Coola crests consist of the following birds and animals: raven, bald eagle, grizzly bear, black bear, wolf, whale, blackfish, merganser, loon, skämtsk, possibly deer, and the mythical double-headed snake, susiutl. To these must be added the sun, because some of the original people came to earth in human form by sliding down his eye-lashes, the sun-beams; and nultnikta, the posts which stretched from earth to the land above, down which a number of the first ancestors of mankind swarmed in human form. The Bella Coola believe that these posts are particularly common memorials among the tribes of the outer coast. According to some accounts it was these posts which supported the first sky until it fell. 825 [776] * [772] [829] [772]

A crest is connected almost exclusively with the distant past. A Bella Coola whose ancestor came to earth as a raven pays no attention to the ravens of the present time. The matter was approached from every possible angle and not the slightest sign of respect toward living specimens of a man's crest could be noticed. A query as to whether or not a man refrained from eating his crest was regarded as highly humorous. Nor is there any trace of fellowship between unrelated families even if they happen to have the same crest. The subject was broached repeatedly, until at last one informant smiled broadly and said: 424 779 825

"I know now what you want to find out, I can tell you all about it."

He recounted how the Kitkatla are, in his opinion, stupid enough to regard as brothers all those who have the same animal story even if they are members of different tribes. He said that when he was a young man at Victoria, where Indians from all parts of the coast used to meet, a Kitkatla had once asked him what was his animal. He was puzzled, but as the [648]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

424 nearest answer to the question replied that his crest was the
779 Raven. The Kitkatla was a Raven man, too, and to the 825 narrator's surprise, treated him as a brother for the rest of his stay in Victoria. He shook with laughter as he recalled the experience, and added that though he was quite willing to accept favours of this kind he would never dream of returning them. It can be stated unhesitatingly that the Bella Coola have no totemic beliefs concerning their crests. There is not [582] the slightest trace of respect towards the animal, nor yet of exogamy.

211 Although crests are not objects of religious veneration, yet 424 they have some importance in the realm of social life. The 773 portrayal of one serves to indicate ownership of an ancestral myth describing that particular bird or animal. A wealthy 825 chief is proud to display his crest on a totem-pole, or as a painting on the front wall of his house. Anyone seeing such a [532] design is impressed with the glories of the family history of [556] the owner, to the latter's gratification. A living specimen of [304] the bird or animal is treated with no respect, but its delineation is a memento of family history. For that reason a man is often tattooed[a] with his crest, that derived from his father's first ancestor on the right breast, that from his mother, on the left; and the owner of a canoe often carves his crest on its bow. After the death of a chief a memorial-post is erected near his grave, decorated with a painting or carving of one or more crests to remind observers not only of the deceased, but of his
000 family history, his most treasured possession. It is said, half

[a] It is said that tattooing was formerly customary not only among all the coastal [171] tribes but also the Carriers. Both Bella Coola men and women decorated them-
[184] selves in this way, but the custom was not universal, and is said never to have been common. It is believed that Haida chiefs tattooed themselves in connection with potlatches; in Bella Coola this was not the case although the operation was performed within the back-room of the patient's house. Two methods were employed. The first was by puncturing the skin with a needle smeared with colouring material; the second and less common, by passing a string coated with the substance beneath [386] the skin. The dye was obtained from river stones which were baked for a long time and then ground into a powder. This keeps indefinitely and can be made ready for use by mixing with water. As far as could be learnt, any skilled craftsman might perform the operation.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

It is said, half jocularly, that a man grows to resemble his ancestral cloak; 424 if, for example, one man's is the eagle, his hair turns white 773 early, whereas that of another with raven crest long preserves its blackness. More definite, is the use as a signal for attack, of 825 a whistle imitating the cry of the leader's bird or animal. [726] Finally, when a man whose crest is the raven hears one of these birds calling, he cries out:

"Hello, ḳwatlintao [the vocative form], it is as you say."

This custom is probably due to a belief in the ability of ravens to bear news.

On the whole the attitude of the Bella Coola towards living examples of their crests does not differ from that of mingled respect and superiority with which they regard other birds and animals.

THE RAVEN

The beliefs of the Bella Coola concerning Raven differ so 773 fundamentally from those respecting other birds and animals, 776* that the subject must be treated separately. In the beginning 825 of time, when Ałquntām sent down the ancestors of the Bella Coola to this earth, he despatched Raven to be their guide and teacher. For this purpose Raven was given greater power than that granted to any other animal. He came to earth in avian form, then changed to a man, but his cloak did not float back to the land above as did those of the other first-comers. Instead, it remained in the world below where he could resume it at will. Ałquntām had instructed him to travel to all parts of the world, meaning the coast of British Columbia, in order to study the arts and crafts of the inhabitants and bring back to Bella Coola those which seemed desirable. On these explorations he used to assume raven form and set off in his canoe, Tohuki, which travelled without visible motive power at phenomenal speed. Owing to the power that Ałquntām had given him, he could talk to the trees and the mountains, the birds, the animals, and the insects, as well as to the human beings he encountered on the coast.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

782 party. Canoes always start soon after dawn, and each mem-
224 ber of the expedition is careful to pray before leaving, and also 726 to avoid eating in case food should in any way interfere [785] with the success of the venture. Before reaching their destination, a chief in each canoe draws from a pouch some eagle down brought for the purpose, holds it before his mouth, and blows a little towards each of the four cardinal points, at the same time asking Minakais to smile on the enterprise and grant a safe return. This does not guarantee success, but it is felt that any disaster which may occur would have been more serious if assistance had not been thus requested.

782 Although Alquntăm, under the name of Minakais, is the 776 one to whom prayers are most often addressed, petitions are sometimes made to other beings. In the beginning of time, when Raven had superabundant power, mortals frequently sought his assistance. At the present time, he is sometimes asked for aid, in the belief that he may still have some shreds of his former power, or be in a better position than men to intercede with Minakais. If ravens croak when it is raining, 782 people may ask them to request the supreme being to stop the 776 rain; in such cases, a petitioner is careful to address a raven
825 as Nowakila, his title as chief, rather than as Qwax. In cold 821 winter weather, a raven is sometimes caught alive, its head smeared with grease, and as it is released, the captor says:

"Please end the cold wind, Nowakila."

782 Prayers are also said half humorously, half seriously, on [291] many occasions. When, for example, clothing has become too ragged for further use, it is thrown on a fire with the remark:

"Please come to me again, new."

The thrower does not actually believe that in so doing he is asking help from his clothing, but it gives him a certain sense of satisfaction thus to have expressed his desires.

782 The prayers above described can be said by anyone, at any ●424 time; they are means of propitiation known to the whole community. In addition, information was obtained about 821 two prayers, each of which is the jealously guarded prerogative

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

of a single family. Either is considered an almost certain means of stopping rain, but no one, even though aware of the method, can practise it with success unless he is a member of the family to which the method belongs. 782 424 821

One of these prayers, the property of a Kimsquit family, is addressed to Xemxemälotla. If the petitioner wishes to stop heavy rain, he goes to a quiet place in the woods and calls in a loud voice:

Aiya Xemxemälotlaä,[m]	nuqwikdit	llok	di tong"nuda
Hail, Xemxemälotla,	open	the loftiest	of your heaven
shäxyusamdu	dji sliexwniqua		tsim nanadja.
so that may look down	the cherished one		your child.

That is, "Expose the upper heaven so that your cherished child may look down."

It will be remembered that Xemxemälotla is the being who takes care of Ttäqmä·ks in the upper skyland. It is said that [776] this prayer was learnt by the ancestors of an informant in the beginning of time and that a repetition of the exact words is enough to drive away the rain clouds between earth and the upper heaven. For many generations care was taken to teach some intelligent member of the family the correct formula, and the person so entrusted was expected to use his knowledge for the benefit of any of his relatives desiring fine weather.

Another prayer prerogative of similar type was recorded from an old man who related what he had seen his grandfather do many years before. The two were once hunting when heavy rain threatened their success and drove them to the shelter of a projecting ledge. The grandfather, not having any cedar-bark with him, cut and dried some evergreen boughs which he [824] gave to his grandson, telling him to light them and wave them over his, the grandfather's, head. When this had been done, the old man rushed out into the rain and in a loud voice asked some supernatural being, whose name was forgotten, to throw his eyes upon the rain clouds in order to dispel them. That night the petitioner neither drank water nor urinated, and the [715]

[m]The vocative form.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

782 next day the weather was fine. This particular method of 424 praying had been learnt by one of his ancestors in the begin-821 ning of time, and was afterwards transmitted in his family.
[785] With the coming of the white man and consequent decay of [177] customs, it has not been exercised since the death of the grand-father of the man from whom the information was obtained.

SACRIFICE

782 It might be expected that a clear division should be made between the subjects of prayer and sacrifice, but in practice they merge into one another. A mountain goat hunter, when camped near a glacier which he knows to be the haunt of some dreaded supernatural being, asks help from him. He wears [824] dyed and undyed cedar-bark decorations to make his request more ceremonious, and after the prayer throws them into the fire, saying:

"Please accept these, supernatural one," thus making an offering to supplement his verbal petition.

If he is even more cautious, or eager not to offend any [824] supernatural being in the vicinity, he throws on the fire tufts [825] of cedar-bark, eagle down, and scraps of food as well. Whether [26] or not the objects thus destroyed by the flames reach the being to whom the request has been made, is a matter upon which the Bella Coola do not theorize; but the generosity and self-denial of the donor is appreciated, and a favour is often granted in return. A man who frequently hears in his dreams the voice of some supernatural being, knows that it is taking an interest in his doings and endeavours to propitiate it, by placing on a few tithes of any food he has obtained, saying at the same time:

"Wai, wai, wai," "More, more, more," that is, "May I receive more of the same."

A foolish person fails to show his appreciation of favours received, but a wise man never forgets to do so.

Likewise a person is careful to propitiate supernatural [502] powers when in peril. Both at Kwatna and at Masmichs Nose, [138]
[756]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6-Bellacoola NE6

614 553 178 773 The converse of this process of loss is the assimilation to an origin myth of names originally brought into the ancestral family by a woman from abroad. Unless intercourse and friendly relations were maintained by "return marriages," in a few generations no tradition would be remembered to account for the name, and this, if used at all, would be interwoven into the well-known ancestral myth. Hence a myth is not static with regard to the names embedded in it. These change from generation to generation; it is probable that elements of the story itself suffer like additions and alterations, even though the people do not consider this to be the case.

611 614 The Bella Coola regard the ancestral family as a social unit, not only in terms of the present, but as stretching back to the first settlement of the earth. Viewed from this angle, it is in fact, though not admitted to be so by the Bella Coola, a unilateral grouping with patrilineal descent, which may, in both the most recent and most ancient generations, be marked by matrilineal descent instead. A man frequently uses prerogatives obtained through his mother, her mother, or even her mother's mother, but it is tacitly assumed that for many previous generations such rights passed in the patrilineal line. Sometimes this succession extended back to the beginning of time; in other cases, prerogatives were transmitted matrilineally for a considerable period after the settlement of the earth, before gradually becoming patrilineal.

614 429 551 It has been thus far assumed that the only prerogative wrapped up in an ancestral name is a knowledge of the myth in which it is embedded. But there are others. For example, several of the first inhabitants of the world are said to have owned totem-poles, each of which was displayed by its owner at the gathering when he took for himself a name. Thereafter, the only person entitled to use that particular totem-pole design was the person with the legal right to the name in question. The same principle governs all dance names; each entitles its owner to perform a certain ceremonial. Thus it is possible to enlarge the previous definition by saying that:

[532] [536]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

The ancestral family consists of those whose ancestral names, embodying definite prerogatives, are embodied in a single origin myth. 614 424 551

A stranger finds it easier to understand why names are so carefully maintained within the ancestral family by thinking of them as symbols of prerogatives, but it must be emphasized that the Bella Coola preserve with equal jealousy those designations of which the only prerogative is the marking of this actual membership. [554]

If, then, the ancestral family be regarded as a group possessing a large number of name-prerogatives, it may well be asked how these are distributed among the members. The first point to be emphasized is that the ancestral family is a unit held together without definite social mechanism. There is no accepted "head" of the family, nor are there any clearly formulated laws governing the transmission of the name-prerogatives. Before death a man usually calls together his relatives and bequeaths,[4] according to his desire, his personal property in slaves and canoes, and his intangible property in names. Such a designation does not become the property of the new owner unless he is able to validate his ownership by a distribution of presents; meanwhile the name is "dead." If, during this period, some other member of the ancestral family should desire it for a child, or for himself, he can take possession of it by the customary distribution of presents. In doing so he would anger the legatee, but the latter cannot himself use the appellation since it is already in use. Even at the present time there are bitter quarrels over the assumption of names, and such have certainly occurred for many generations. If a man can validate fairly promptly a name willed to him, it is most unusual for anyone else to try to forestall him. 614 553 428 553 481 [578]

If a man dies intestate, his sons consider themselves his normal heirs, and the most respected of them validates for himself as many names as he desires or is able to assume. Disputes are not as common as might be expected since the 428 553 [578]

[4] In cases of sudden death or failure to make a will confusion sometimes occurs.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[567] friends, a further cause for their preferential treatment. A [727] Bella Coola who had been enslaved and ransomed had to [783] undergo a cleansing ceremony to remove the taint of slavery before he could take part in the ceremonies of the community. It was impossible to learn the details of this rite.

[624] A master had complete power over a slave, unaffected by the force of public opinion, since the affairs of a slave, being without relatives, were of no consequence to anyone. Accordingly, the lot of a slave depended on the character of his master, and on his own ability and industry. An industrious slave was valued; such an one would not be traded or sold except through dire necessity, and in course of years he became, as far as actual treatment was concerned, one of the [424] family. Many masters gave their slaves kwiat[14] dance pre-[491] rogatives, expending large sums for the purpose. In such a case the slave might become an influential member of the community, though the fact that he was not free was never forgotten. On the other hand, a master had not the slightest compunction about beating a lazy slave, and could kill him if he so desired. None of the present Bella Coola has heard of such a case; it was considered more sensible to sell or give away an unsatisfactory slave. It was accepted as a matter of course that a master should provide his slaves with food and clothing, since anything produced or obtained by one belonged to him. A slave-owner had full rights to his female slaves, [837] and unquestionably exercised them. The only restraints were the jealousy of his own wife, or wives, and the feeling that it was undignified for a free man to demean himself. It was impossible to learn with even approximate accuracy to what extent intercourse took place between masters and slaves. Probably not a great deal, though there was considerable freedom of relations between slave women and the young men of the community, unrestrained by the pride of chieftainship. When a slave had been faithful for a number of years and had [582] become almost a member of the family, his master would try

[14] [illegible] privileges (I, p. 180) were more rarely given.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

CHAPTER IV

RANK

Chieftainship—Sisaok Society—The Potlatch

Chieftainship

IN the previous chapter have been described the beliefs of the Bella Coola concerning the origin of names, and the attitude of pride with which they regard those embodied in ancestral myths, which carry with them prized prerogatives. But the unsystematic method by which ancestral names are inherited is sufficient to show that their possession, though valued for sentimental reasons, is not enough to make the owner a chief. On what, then, is Bella Coola chieftainship based? Expressed briefly, it depends on the number and value of presents distributed at any kind of ceremonial. To the Bella Coola, every rite, whether it be a marriage, the bestowal of a name, a dance, a type of funeral, or admission into a secret society, is a prerogative intimately associated with the myth by which the performance is authorized. Accordingly, the host is really displaying the glories of his ancestors before the eyes of guests present at the ceremony. To the Bella Coola it is unthinkable for such to be performed without the giving of presents to all; failure to do so would destroy the value of the prerogative. The potlatch is the ceremonial at which the most lavish generosity is displayed, but the principle of the acquisition of prestige by the giving of presents is the same for all other rites; the only difference is that at a potlatch a man is able to display his generosity to a larger number of recipients. In consequence, the aim of every ambitious man is to hold potlatches, since his status in the community virtually rests on his ability in this respect. The ritual of a potlatch will be given in detail in the latter part of this chapter, but its complications will be intelligible only after a description of the

622
556* 431
[424]
[773]
[554]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

622
*556 broader principles of chieftainship. The first essential is to 431 consider the principles of present-giving.

PRESENTS

*556 Consider, for example, a man who wishes to take for him-431 self one of his ancestral names, and at the same time to display certain features of his ancestral myth—a particular type of ●424 house, totem-pole, or dance used by one of his forefathers.
He invites guests to his house, displays the feature of his myth, and must give a present to each to show the value of his prerogative and to demonstrate that he has not merely casually usurped the function in question. In giving a present of, for instance, $20, it is as if he said to the recipient:

"See! These are the glories of my ancestors of whom I am the descendant. I have a part in their fame. To make this valid I give you from my wealth a mere trifle, a matter of no consequence to me, who am so firmly established in the path of my ancestors."

*556 The guest receives the money with mixed feelings. On the one hand he has received $20 as a "present." But if he wishes 431 to elevate his own position and his own prestige, together with that of his ancestors, it is incumbent on him to repay this sum with interest. Contrary to the practice among some other [171] coastal tribes, there is no fixed rate of interest among the Bella Coola. An ambitious man who seeks to become a chief will strive to the utmost to pay back with heavy interest when he himself gives a ceremony so that his fame will be carried far [558] and near. If he should repay only the principal, he would be regarded as having done all that was obligatory, but should he fail to do even so much, he would soon sink to a position of little consequence, no matter how lofty and distinguished his ancestral name might be.

171 In this respect there is a parallel between the Bella
*556 Coola and ourselves. A man invited to a dinner party is not 558 compelled to return the compliment, but if, in the course of

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*556 Island chief was felt by the Bella Coola to be quite natural;
578 one of their own chiefs might have resented the insult in the same manner. This account may have no historical basis, but it is a clear example of Bella Coola sentiment.

*556 Further examples may help to clarify this point. A few 648 years ago a number of Kwakiutl Indians visited Bella Coola
558 to perform a mourning ceremony in honour of a deceased Bella
[765] Coola who had a Kwakiutl name from his grandfather, a member of that tribe. All the natives were invited to a large house, where the visitors gave a dance according to their own ancestral myths; the songs which were used recounted the history of the Kwakiutl name of the dead man. After thus displaying their prerogatives, they felt themselves obliged, and proud, as hosts, to give presents as validation. The sum of $546 was distributed among the guests. Realizing that it would be impossible to return such a sum by holding ceremonials in Fort Rupert, the home of the Kwakiutl, the leading Bella Coola decided to return the compliment immediately. The amount to be given was discussed at great length. Appreciating the courtesy of the foreigners in thus coming to pay honour to the deceased, it was not wished to insult them by giving a larger present, which would have had the effect of intimating that the recipients considered the $546 a trifling amount. Accordingly it was finally agreed to give the visitors about $300, which was done as validation of a Bella Coola ceremony at which the strangers were present. Thus the hosts allowed themselves to be shamed as a mark of courtesy. Not to be outdone in politeness, the Kwakiutl chief made a speech, expressing his willingness to allow the Bella Coola to drive him (this occurred in the days of horses and carts) to the wharf to take the steamer. In other words, he allowed the Bella Coola to put him in their debt, as they had allowed him and his party to do with respect to the distribution of money. The visit terminated with friendly relations maintained on both sides.

123 The need of validating every ceremonial act by presents 533 can be further illustrated by the following instance. When *556 •424

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

the writer was in Bella Coola, a non-ceremonial entertainment was given one evening at which several men sang and performed. The writer was asked to sing a Bella Coola song, which he did in the belief that it was not one that was incorporated in the ancestral myth of anyone. Unfortunately, his teacher had erred, and as soon as the song was completed an old woman arose and stated that it belonged to her ancestral family. She avoided the difficulty of its singing by immediately announcing that the singer was her "son." Thus the writer was adopted into a Bella Coola family, a circumstance which aided him considerably in collecting information. This did not alter the fact that a ceremonial song had been sung. Accordingly, the woman gave presents to the guests, thereby legalizing the adoption, and saving herself from the disgrace of having one of her songs used as if it were a matter of no consequence, free to anyone. 123 533 556* 424 [597]

SEATING

Presents are also a means of obtaining seats. Every Bella Coola has at least one name embodied in an ancient myth. A man who wishes to become a chief can do so only by giving lavish presents to make his designation "strong," "firm," or "bright," to use Bella Coola expressions. Such gifts increase the importance of the owner's name, and they obtain for him the right to a seat, more or less definitely located, in the house. Since all Bella Coola habitations are built on similar lines, a man can occupy his wonted position when summoned to a ceremony in any house. The validating of ancestral names and the acquisition of seats are among the important features which occur at potlatches. 554 556* [622] [424] [553]

In the beginning of time, when the first people were sent down to populate the earth, it is assumed that each who established a village, consisting of a single house, seated himself in the best spot within the dwelling, namely the central position behind the fire; his younger relatives ranged either beside him [773]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

554 or sat in two rows, facing one another, on opposite sides of the
* 556 central fire, parallel to the side walls of the house. When these [773] first ancestors died, the name of each was passed on to some [551] descendant. The Bella Coola feel that he who bears the name [171] of the first settler in a village should have his ancestor's seat. Comparison with the practices of other coastal tribes suggests that formerly the Bella Coola must have had a definite series of seats in their houses, either according to the rank of the occupant, or according to the rank of the ancestor whose name he bore. The most careful investigation, however, failed to show such a system of ranked seating. The only indications that such may once have been customary, are found in the feeling today that the bearer of the first chief's name ought to occupy the central seat behind the fire, and in the expression, "He seats himself where his ancestor sat," when a youth is given his place in the house.

[551] A seat can be claimed and an ancestral name assumed at any age. Goods must be given away which are said to be "covering" for the young man, to have "flowed away," or to have "become nothing" for the name. These validate the official assumption of the designation. With it is given a place in the house. A seat is chosen at the side of the fire, and the goods mark that spot as his in conjunction with the name.
● [424] The seat itself is not material, though the general location on which a person shall sit is indicated. His "seat" is the goods that have been expended. Several men may have positions at practically the same spot, but when all are seated they merely move slightly so that all have room. There is no thought of one person infringing on the location of another. A parent who gives ample wealth at successive potlatches may seek for his son a seat behind the fire. Such is entirely his own affair and if sufficient goods are distributed the son may seat himself in that place, but if the gifts are of little value the occupant is secretly held in derision, as having a seat that is unsound, or unfirm. In later years the man may expend large sums in strengthening his seat; by so doing he wins recognition from all that he sits in an enviable spot, irrespective of its location in the house. 554 556*

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

In precisely the same manner a man may take for himself a seat in the central part of the row behind the fire, but he is laughed at for endeavouring to assume a dignity, unworthily, unless he can validate his position by lavish presents. The Bella Coola are always ready to make fun of a person who fails to maintain his seat. On the death of the occupant of the central position it is taken for granted that whoever inherits his name will assume that location and give the essential presents, but it is not incumbent upon him to do so. He may choose to establish his new name at his old station, beside, instead of behind, the fire. Thus it has come to pass that the seat of the most important chief of a village is often at the side of the house. When all are seated the chiefs may be widey separated, and a parent may have obtained for his son a seat in a better part of the house than his own. But as a rule the chiefs sit in a row at the back of the fire, the most influential one in the middle. There must have been feuds when two men desired to seat themselves in the central position at the same time, but disputes about this were uncommon, because a man's seat was, and still is, primarily regarded as the intangible goods wherewith he is clothed, rather than his right to sit at any particular spot. It is these non-material coverings that enable a man to be bold and assertive in argument or suggestion, in fact to be a chief. A young man may have had conferred on him one of the noblest names, but his infuence depends on the value of the goods expended on his behalf, subject of course to the universal characteristic that a man of forceful character may have more influence than his actual position warrants. [424] [428] [622] [424]

Jealous feuds are common when the man who owns the name of the first chief, first ancestor of a village, has duly validated it, but is being eclipsed in the giving of potlatches by a man whose name is of less intrinsic importance. Such a complication recently arose at Kimsquit, and the Bella Coola [578] [682]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

present, and the fame of the initiate is thereby carried farther afield than would be possible if only Bella Coola were in attendance. Every individual duly secluded and given a sisaok name feels himself ceremonially allied to others who have had a similar experience, and they form a grouping which may be termed the sisaok secret society. 553 556* 575

The close connection between this society and chiefs is obvious from the presence of names of each type in the same ancestral myths. None the less, every chief, that is a person with duly validated ancestral name and seat, is not a sisaok, unless he has validated a sisaok name for himself and undergone the period of seclusion. Conversely, a man may be a duly authorized member of the sisaok although lacking a seat and the other marks of chieftainship. The relationship is, however, so close that the Bella Coola think of the sisaok society as a society of chiefs. Sisaok dances take place at potlatches and funerals, and occasionally at gatherings of less importance. Difficulties arise at the death of a chief who has failed to use some of his goods for the acquisition of a sisaok name. Such a case took place at the death of an important Bella Coola in the summer of 1923. Theoretically, he was ignorant of sisaok rites, but after much discussion these were used on account of his importance as a numitl chief, an instance of the manner in which a man's personal importance over-rules ceremonial dictates. 575 622 [553] [535] [766] [183]

The Bella Coola believe that only some of their sisaok name-prerogatives came to this earth at the beginning of time with their first ancestors, and that many more have been acquired later by supernatural experiences. These were especially common among their forbears as they ranged over this earth seeking places to settle in the beginning of time. No sisaok name can be assumed casually; each must have had a specific origin. There are few sisaok origin myths, though theoretically there should be one to account for every name. The explanation appears to lie in the undoubted fact that many sisaok prerogatives have been acquired comparatively recently 424 551 575 773 [177]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

177 from the Bella Bella, a fact emphasized by all. It is not diffi-424 cult to understand, therefore, why elaborate myths are lacking, 551 even if such were possessed by the Bella Bella. The Bella
575 Coola possessed certain similar rites to which the Bella Bella [773] prerogatives were in the process of being grafted at the time of the coming of the white man. There has since been general decay of ceremonial life, with the result that the whole situation is in a state of flux presenting great difficulties to the investigator.

428 Susaok names are willed and inherited in the manner already 551 described for other prerogatives. The type of dance, and the 575 time of use, will be described in the following section of this chapter.

The Potlatch

* 556 It is unfortunate that an adequate treatment of Rank
128 among the Bella Coola requires a description of the potlatch since this ceremony, or rather group of ceremonies, includes a number of features which, logically, should have been postponed until a later stage of this monograph. An effort has been made to lessen references to non-ritualistic features by the description, just given, of the basic concepts of chieftainship and the susaok society. Other ideas will require rather lengthy digressions, a method of presentation which seems preferable to the use of many foot-notes, its only alternative.

GENERAL OBSERVATIONS

104 In scientific and popular writings alike, the term "pot-
* 556 latch" has been applied both to the public giving of presents, [431] and to the rites at which this occurs. But among the Bella Coola, such distribution of gifts is necessary at every ceremonial; accordingly, each is essentially a potlatch. There is one, however, which the inhabitants regard as the most important of all, the goal which every ambitious man aims to reach, the rite in which his ancestral myth can be displayed. In this

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

556 *
monograph the term "potlatch" will be limited to this, the łum. [104]

Every Bella Coola is, or should be, able to recount how, in the beginning of time, the supreme god, Älquntäm, caused his 556 * ancestors to be created in his house in the land above, whence 773 they were sent down to populate the earth. A creation legend of this type is a man's most treasured possession.[4] Most myths [424] describe the adventures of these first people, how they prospered in the Bella Coola country until they were able to invite to their homes guests from far and near, to whom they showed what they had achieved, through the assistance of Älquntäm, or of some other supernatural being. In so doing they were carrying out Älquntäm's wishes. He told some of these first people that if they accumulated much wealth, in those days chiefly food, there was danger that the provisions first stored would rot, hence they should cut away the bottom of the pile and present it to other men and women. The Bella Coola term [192] for "to cut out that which is rotten" is łult, hence the origin, according to their belief, of the word łum, which thus has the significance of "a giving away of long accumulated goods which otherwise might rot."

By the splendour of his gifts each of the first people able to give a potlatch (łum), spread the knowledge of his name and fame to the towns whence his guests had assembled. Further, those who had received dances from Älquntäm were able to demonstrate them. In course of time those who had first given potlatches died, but on taking their fathers' names, the sons, or other descendants, endeavoured to uphold the parental [574] tradition by inviting guests from afar and giving them valuable presents. At such a ceremony the family history, or family myth, was recounted, so that the donor of a potlatch not only increased his own prestige, he incorporated therewith the traditions of his parent. This is the essence of the potlatch as carried out today.[5]

---

[4]Examples of these are given in vol. I, chap. VI.

[5]It has been found convenient to use the present tense throughout, although the potlatch is not now carried out in its entirety. [104]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 556 622 the time the earth was settled, ought to be chief of that village. If he has been able to give the necessary potlatches to weight his possession of that name, the fact that he is the legal descendant of the first chief will add a certain amount to his prestige, but unless he has been able to do this his influence will be slight.

* 556 622 766 [775] Thirdly, potlatches smooth the way for the giver after death. Before the corpse of a chief is removed from the house where he has died, a speaker always announces the number of potlatches he has given and the total value of goods distributed at them. These gifts in a vague way are felt to make easy the deceased's path in the next world as they have done in the present. The feature of the potlatch, though firmly believed by some of the older people, plays a less important part in the life of the Bella Coola than might be expected.

* 556 What are the requisites for giving a potlatch?

[424] (1) Possession of an ancient myth, containing a name or names. Probably every Bella Coola has this requirement. A man's family may not be the proud owners of one of the ancestral myths dealing with the first settlement of this earth, but they will at least own some ancient myth which they can elevate by giving a potlatch. As has been said, the owner of one of the most ancient names in many cases chooses to elevate one of lesser antiquity, a course which must, perforce, be done by one who lacks an origin myth. The slight feeling of deference with which those are regarded who hold the names of the first inhabitants of the earth, the mighty chiefs of old, is subordinate to the very real feeling of respect in which is held the successful giver of potlatches. The descendant of one of the first people has the potential right to chieftainship, but unless he can give potlatches he will fail to gain that eminence.

[554]

* 556 769 (2) An occasion for giving a potlatch is never lacking. It consists of a number of closely associated rites, any one of which will serve as a reason for the ceremony. The most important feature, the return of a dead ancestor or ancestors to visit the living, is available to anyone at any time. The Bella

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

PLATE 13

Photograph by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

Five-peaked house representing Mount Nusdalt

342
424

[7 186 (E)]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

342
424

PLATE 14

Photograph by H. I. Smith, National Museum of Canada

Framework of an old house, displaying the owner's prerogative of spool-like indentations in the front posts

[f 186 (F)]

Pre-
* 556 sently the guests assemble, those who are nuask wearing on [575] their heads one or more weasel skins as a mark of membership
237 in the society. Each takes the seat to which he is entitled,
292 the chiefs behind the fire, or on either side of it, the commoners,
[554] slaves, and foreigners in the two corners nearest the door. The heralds move to and fro between door and fire, their constant exchange of remarks adding to the general interest of the affair. It is the function of a herald to lend dignity to chiefs by [203] the tone of his observations, but should one fail to live up to his station, the herald is privileged to comment thereon. In some respects his position approximates that of a buffoon, but as a herald always receives valuable presents, the office is sometimes accepted by ambitious young men, willing to undertake the slightly derogatory duties in return for the substantial gain.

264 A number of young lads, friends or relatives of X, distribute
* 556 the food. It is placed in boxes; an important chief is not called upon to share with any one, whereas six or seven men of no [883] standing may partake from one box. These receptacles, with whatever food remains in them, are taken home by the guests; otherwise the host would be insulted. Many boxes are lost in [578] this way, a source of considerable irritation. After the first course, a second follows, consisting of a different kind of food in another box, and in some cases there is a third, and even a fourth course. A chief must never appear stingy. The more he gives, the more does his prestige increase. Also, a man who gives freely receives abundantly, so that generosity brings its reward.

583
* 556 Next, the father or other male relative of X's wife, or a [537] fluent friend who speaks for him, stands up and makes a speech, extolling the fame of his own family by sketching in general
425 outlines one of the myths of his ancestors, and announcing that X's wife is taking to her husband some portion of it. This may
● [424] be the prerogative of using a spoon carved, for example, with [532] the shape of a beaver; or a carved box, or a totem-pole with certain figures on it, or the right to use a painting of a grizzly bear on the wall of his house, or an ancestral name.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

335 of one in his ancestral myth, he will do so; if not, it will suffice
* 556 to decorate the old house; but in either case the tasks connected with the construction must be allotted. X gives to one man the work of making new beams; to another, the two front upright posts; to a third, the two rear upright posts; to another, the planks along one side of the house; to a skilled carpenter, the totem-pole bearing whatever design X has decided upon; to a painter, one of the designs for the back wall of the house; to another painter, another design near it; to still another, part of the painting of the front of the house; to another, more of the same; and so on until he has allotted work for every part of the edifice. In some cases there are 342 peculiarities of house construction dependent upon their occur-
● 424 rence in the builder's ancestral myth, which are jealously
* 556 guarded prerogatives. One man, for instance, enjoys the right [773] to build five peaks above the front of his house. These represent the five peaks of Mount Nusqalst where his first ancestor came to earth (see Plate 13). Another has a series of spool- or disk-like indentations in his upright posts (see Plate 14) to support the beams, a prerogative established by his ancestor Qeil in the beginning of time. Another chief's posts are carved to represent a mythical creature. Still another prerogative is that of building a sloping board, resembling a gang-plank, from the door of the house to the ground, with a representation of a mythological sea monster at the bottom. In that case the theme of the grandiloquent potlatch song is how chiefs are attracted to X's house, as canoes are irresistibly drawn to the sea monster.

Each of the above-mentioned prerogatives belongs to one family alone; whereas several have the right to build semi-subterranean houses. The artisans excavate a rectangular hole, about six feet deep, equal in size to the central part of the dwelling. A platform is then erected round the sides of this, about three feet from the bottom. The walls of the house itself are raised sufficiently far back from the central pit to allow an unencumbered passageway, off which the bedrooms are built. The central fire is laid in the bottom of the pit, a few feet above that is the platform where the guests are seated, and the ground-level is a few feet above that again. A few instances are remembered of houses having been built with two, and even three, of these tiers, or platforms. In those cases it appears certain that this type of construction was embodied in a myth derived from Bella Bella or Rivers Inlet people, where, according to the Bella Coola, large houses, of five or six tiers, were not unknown. 342 424 556* [177]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

X uses his own discretion in choosing his workmen,[1] avoiding only his own relatives and those of his wife. The question of pay is never broached, but it is understood that X will recompense those who have worked for him. The scale on which he does so will depend entirely on his generosity. This is one of the ways in which a chief helps the poor people of his village. More food is distributed to "sharpen the wedges." 335 556* 465

While a man is engaged on his allotted task any food or other articles which he or his family may obtain belongs to X. If a man who hews the planks takes his wife with him and she chances to pick berries while he is at work, these must be given to X who will distribute them with his other food at the potlatch, and it will be announced from whom he has received them. If a man's friends should help him to complete his task and then all go hunting, any skins acquired will belong to X; but when he repays his indebtedness he is expected to reward the worker, not only for his carpentry, but also for the berries or pelts. As X must give lavishly to prove his chief-like generosity, the collection of foods or skins by his workmen is profitable for them.

The guests have been passing in and out of X's house all day and towards dusk all again assemble within. Suddenly the door is burst open by a number of young men carrying a large log, like a battering-ram. The majority of the bearers are sisook, though they may obtain assistance from those who are not members of the society. The people within the house spring up to eject the ram, and a sham battle ensues. Back- 552* [575]

1 [ie. to build a new house for a potlatch. -ANALYST]

Title: Unwoith E-5 (1922-1924)948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

with a number of the large cone-shaped whistles used for nuxalk ceremonial. Towards dawn, sounds come from these, and sometimes a dull thump is heard on the roof, as if a heavy being had landed there. At once there is great excitement within the house. The voices of supernatural people prove them to be at hand. No-one is allowed to leave except a nuxalk sisi[9] who is skilled in dealing with Malakila,[10] also called Siexiepuxum, the supernatural being closely connected with the nuxalk ritual. Those within can hear the voice of the sisi raised as if he were speaking to someone at a distance.

"Chief, you have come too early," he says. "The house is not yet ready. Please return later."

He is answered by loud whistling, which grows fainter, as if the being who made it were moving away. In reality the young men are merely blowing less forcibly into the whistles.

[9] The accounts of all informants agree that much of the nuxalk ritual was newly imported into Bella Coola from Bella Bella. According to some statements, Pudes, a Bella Coola chief who died between 1870 and 1880, married a Bella Bella wife, also one from Rivers Inlet, and it was these two women who brought with them so dower certain nuxalk prerogatives. It is said that previous to that time the Bella Coola did not understand the use of the large cone-shaped whistles, nor were they able to summon the supernatural beings to the youths secluded in the back-room, nor to dispel the beings at the conclusion of the rites. On the other hand, some Bella Coola claim that their few ancestors brought the whistles with them from the land above. It is probable that the calling in of the supernatural beings is a recent addition to the potlatch, which accounts for the contradictory accounts, but whether or not the whistles are a new feature is more doubtful. It appears certain that the prerogatives of sisi has recently been obtained from the Bella Bella. Sisi means "the man who cures," and the name is given to the man whose prerogative it is to tend the Sacrier initiates in whom supernatural powers are located. In Bella Bella there is a similar functionary for nuxalk matters, known as a kai sisilala. Through intermarriage several Bella Coola have recently obtained this prerogative; in each case it is frankly stated that it has been derived from the Bella Bella. The Bella Coola apply to them, as formerly, the term sisi, as they do for the Sacrier "cures," though the Bella Bella term, kai sisilala, is used with equal frequency. The present sisi have endeavoured to claim for themselves certain ceremonial functions formerly carried out by any nuxalk. In this manner of a potlatch it is assumed that a sisi is functioning on all occasions, but in many cases any member nuxalk is considered sufficiently close to the supernatural beings to act satisfactorily. Until about 1870 it is clear that any nuxalk was regarded as capable of doing so.

[10] Knowledge of this being is said to have been acquired by the marriage of a certain Sacrier of Kimsquit to a Bella Bella woman in the beginning of time.

1:96:Dorsett E-1 (522-524)948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

As the dances proceed, those women who have the prerogative for doing so, utter a peculiar drawing cry. After dancing, the initiates return to the back-room, where they doff their masks. The ceremony concludes with the distribution of food. 595 596 575 [424]

The initiates are now free to leave their place of concealment, as each has become a legal member of the secret society. Some young men, sons of influential chiefs, are included a number of times, others but once. The oftener a youth is included, the greater is his prestige, because goods must be distributed on each occasion to validate his name. At the present time, there is considerable uncertainty about the exact details of the ceremony, for it has been so easy of late years to give potlatches that the simpler rite has fallen into disuse; some informants state that each initiate should emerge alone and dance by himself. This concludes the shorter ceremony, but with a potlatch the dancing is reserved until the coming of the foreign guests. [354]

DELIVERING OF INVITATIONS

Returning now to preparations for the true potlatch, it does not matter whether the ceremonies already described are carried out before or after the departure of messengers to invite guests from abroad. Although X usually consults his relatives and friends as to whom he shall invite, this is entirely optional. In giving his invitations X is actuated, first, by a desire to entertain those from whom he has previously received hospitality; having accepted presents from them he must discharge the obligations or sink in social estimation. Considerations of friendship also enter into his selection, and he will likewise invite anyone whom he wishes to put to shame by a lavish display of wealth. It is taken as a matter of course that each guest will be accompanied by a number of followers, members of his family, slaves, or adherents. 556* [388] [351]

Acting on X's instructions, a herald invites the people of his village to X's house. X stands up and announces to them [288] [464] want to give valuable presents, but he need not give any. It is a deep disgrace to any man to be unable to return these presents. Nothing is said, nor does the donor take active steps to receive his returns, but the influence of the recipient perceptibly wanes. It is expected that a heavier rate of interest will be paid on presents received many years before repayment, but again this is a matter of individual volition. The debts of a man who dies while owing for goods received at potlatches are scrupulously discharged by his family. If they fail to do so, their own influence is lessened. 426 556* 558

One method of reducing the value of an investment present can be used by a man who finds unable to repay a large gift. The uncle of an elderly Bella Coola was once guest at a Kimsquit potlatch, where he received, as an investment present, a few large canoe and two hundred blankets. Not wishing to incur so large a liability he at once returned fifty of the blankets to his host for distribution among the guests. Consequently, he was expected to make return for only one hundred and fifty blankets, with whatever interest he desired. This action tended to lower his prestige, since it acknowledged his inability or unwillingness to repay his presents. The chief in question, being firmly established in his chiefly status, did not fear to do this, though one of lesser rank would have hesitated to confess his inferiority.

It is on the value of the goods distributed in these three types of transaction; namely, recompense for work done, repayment of debts, and investment presents, that the importance of the potlatch, and consequently of X himself, is usually judged. These distributions of presents are for the potlatch as a whole, including the return of the dead and the intangible prestige of X; the donations which follow are to validate specific transactions which can be omitted. In one or two families the whole course of the potlatch is changed since the members have the prerogative of distributing their presents outside the house. In such a case the giving is done during the day instead of at night. Details of this ritual, 426 556* [164] [124] which is said to have come as a prerogative obtained through marriage with a Kwakiutl woman, were not obtained.

556 [420] [184] [424]

After the distribution of investment presents comes the strengthening of X's seat.

His wife, aided by members of her family, has placed the necessary goods in readiness, though it is pretended they merely happen to be on hand. A herald takes his place near the door, and another behind the fire. Beside the latter stands a chief, attired in a noted head-dress, who represents X. One of the heralds calls on this substitute to come forward, as if he were just entering the house, and chants:

[208]

"There is no place for him to sit!"

Then he turns to X's wife, saying:

"See if you have not a few trifles in your room to strengthen him."

[192]

The word for "strengthen" is ululutem, or ululitem, which means, "showing up," as if X were wobbling on his chief-like base. The words have the other significance of "clothing." They represent the ceremonial dignity wherewith a chief is garbed.

X's wife goes to her room, or to the place in the house where the goods are stored, and brings forth a large assortment of valuables, which are piled in a convenient spot. The substitute who is representing X then places himself in the latter's seat, which is to be made more solid by these goods. X's wife may tell the herald that they have still more goods for him, and in that case he calls out:

"His seat is too hard. Have you no soft cloths for it?"

The wife brings forward more goods to make her husband's seat more comfortable. The herald, who has been chosen for his fluency, uses his originality in what he calls for from the wife; soft cloths for the seat is merely an example. In some cases, many presents are given; at other times, if the wife and her family be poor, these are few and of little worth. It is not essential that foreign guests witness this establishment or strengthening of a seat, though their presence means that X's

[209]

1:M:Dewalth E.S (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[556* 575 789]

turns, clad in his ceremonial costume, including a long cape with pockets. With him come the four or five young men who have just finished dancing. The singers beat time furiously with their sticks, and the ski whin round and round, working himself into a frenzy with twists and gyrations. Gradually, he approaches one of the initiates, and pretends to pluck something from his body. As he opens his hands the spectators see that there is something in them what exactly, they cannot distinguish. Only those who are ska understand that, whatever it is, it has been pulled from one of his cape pockets. He pretends to throw this object upwards, at the same time slipping it back into his cape. As the article is, theoretically, thrown aloft the sound of whistling is heard, which grows weaker and weaker till it finally ceases. Meanwhile the heralds discourse loudly with one another about how the "eagle" or whatever it is, has been extracted and is now returning above. The same procedure is repeated for the other initiates. This concludes the night's ceremony. Food is distributed and the people disperse.

[424 177]

The employment of a foreign shi to expel the power from the initiates is necessary since this particular prerogative is not native to Bella Coola. Formerly the expulsion was done in the back-room without any elaborate ceremony. This rite marks the admission of initiates into the ska society although they cannot yet leave the back-room. It must be understood, however, that a youth may be initiated several times, on each occasion receiving new songs and perhaps a different mask. In this way his prestige as a ska is increased, and the son of a powerful chief will often be initiated ten or more times. A mask so acquired is preserved in concealment as the personal property of the owner who may use it at potlatches on future occasions. It will be the guise in which a dead person returns to visit the living. After being used for this purpose, a mask may be burnt, or willed to a near relative of the deceased, who slightly alters the painting before using it himself.

[556* 575]

[422 532 428]

It is somewhat difficult to understand the attitude of those [781]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

556 with the objects back on the fire. In some cases four sets of cloths are used. This rite, which is regarded as very impor-575 tant, frees the lads from the supernatural powers with which 789 they have been endowed, and permits them finally to leave 789 the back-room and return to normal life, just as their earlier cleansing freed them from the tutwinam. During their period of seclusion no initiate can perform a kusiut ceremony of any kind. The supernatural beings of the two societies, though closely akin, are yet independent, and it would be unthinkable for a man to enter into contact with the two at the same time, unless he should be the owner of a rare prerogative enabling [424 him to do so. Only a few men have the right, which un-177] doubtedly was derived either from the Bella Bella or the people of Rivers Inlet.

556 X pays the functioning sîki with new clothing. This com-575 pletes the whole ceremony. The guests either return home or adjourn to some other house where a potlatch is taking place, [465] but no rites mark their departure.

556 Such, then, are the principal features of the Bella Coola 171 potlatch. Without making a careful comparison of its features with those of neighbouring tribes, the following points stand out with great clearness:

(1) The basic concepts of the potlatch in Bella Coola are the same as those of the rite practised elsewhere on the coast.

(2) A potlatch has not the same importance at Bella Coola as it has on other parts of the coast, especially among the Kwakiutl. All informants stated repeatedly that they did not [186] carry their potlatches to the same lengths as did the "foolish" Kwakiutl, nor were they as keen financiers. A Bella Coola would never entirely impoverish himself by lavish giving.

(3) The potlatch, though fundamentally the same as it is elsewhere on the coast, has certain rites characteristic of the locality. The central Bella Coola feature, the return of a dead ancestor, is not equally important elsewhere. It would be interesting to be able to trace the history of this. The most

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

first established on his seat, he must reward the heralds lavishly for their remarks. 203 556 *

As with so many elements of culture, the Bella Coola ascribe the origin of heralds to the wish of Alqantäm as expressed to the first people in the beginning of time. Some groups of these early settlers brought with them heralds whose games had been created by the supreme deity himself in his house in the land above. Such a one was Qäqä'li who was a member of Xemcua's (I, p. 326) party at Kimsquit, another was Olqdimut who came with uyuyuyut (I, p. 329). These heralds functioned in the manner of their descendants of today; others of the first chiefs appointed certain of their relatives to perform this service, and by means of the power with which they were endowed, created names with respect to their functions. Besides his ordinary name every herald must have an ancestral appellation of some kind, as well as the probability of possessing kuxiut ones in addition to those of a professional nature. Either by bringing with them from above, or by creation on this earth, each group of first settlers became provided with a herald, whose name is embodied in the ancestral myth describing their experiences. As each of the first heralds died, his name was passed to a successor, and this practice has been carried out from generation to generation until the present. The Bella Coola state that no new names for heralds have been created since the time of the first people, and it is certain that none has been made for many years. Consequently, the number of heralds is strictly limited in accordance with mythological beliefs, and every man who owns one of the ancient designations embodied in an origin myth knows the name of the herald associated with his first namesake. 203 773 551 [428]

At the death of a herald his name becomes dormant. Since heralds function at all ceremonies, whether or not the donor belongs to the same ancestral family as themselves, the members of the group sustaining the loss are not deprived of their 203 553 556 * 614 424 ●

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

203 services. None the less, one of their prized prerogatives, the 553 visible embodiment of an element in their ancestral myth, is *556 no longer present. In such circumstances, no member of an 614 ancestral family would give a potlatch unless able to revive at [424] it the dormant name in a new herald. The intending donor usually consults with the senior members of the ancestral family as to a suitable incumbent, or especially if he is an influential chief, he may simply use his own discretion. In either case, some relatively young member of the ancestral family is offered the post. If he accepts, the matter is settled; if not, another is invited in his stead. The new herald cannot function until his name and appointment have been validated by the distribution of presents at the potlatch. Such gifts are not returnable, since they are held to "have become nothing" for the name. Relatively lavish expenditure for this purpose is one of the many ways in which a chief is able to show his prowess and generosity. Thus established, a herald can carry out his duties thenceforth. He functions at every ceremonial, but especially at potlatches given by members of his own ancestral family, in whose origin myth his own name is embedded. From [627] constant participation in all kinds of ceremonials, a herald [796] becomes conversant with every type, and is appealed to as arbiter in difficult points of ritual, thus adding to his reputation.

203 Although acceptance of the post of herald somewhat cur-
*556 tails a man's activities in other respects, instances are known of energetic ones using the gifts received to establish themselves as chiefs, passing on their herald names at the same time to other incumbents. More often, a herald uses his wealth for the benefit of a son or other relative, being satisfied with his own status in the community. He takes a prominent part in every ceremony and is a person of some standing, yet is spared the responsibility of actually giving rise himself, a position which offers many attractions to a man lacking great ambition and initiative.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

pended, so that it serves as a visible and tangible memorandum of the chief-like generosity of its owner. By means of these media, debts are passed from one individual to another without actual liquidation in goods; in fact, it is unlikely that the Bella Coola possess sufficient money to meet the sums represented by their coppers. 556* [435] [426]

Professional Prerogatives

The importance of prerogatives in the lives of the Bella Coola has already been noted in many connections. A man's name is his only because his ancestral family has the prerogative of using that designation; a Dsaiat dance can be performed only by an individual with the necessary prerogative; specific totem-pole designs, the portrayal of bird or animal on spoons, seats, house-posts, and other objects is a right dependent upon an ancestral prerogative; as is also the area on which a man can hunt or fish. The concept colours all Bella Coola life. Not only is a man's ceremonial life based on this principle, but on it depend his actions as chief, and the economic sources of his food-supply. No prerogative, even though it be the property of a man, is effective until validated by the distribution of presents. Much of a man's energy throughout life is expended on the validation and display of his prerogatives; most Bella Coola feuds are caused by the infringement of one individual on another's rights. 424 ● 556* [532] [796] [431] [627] [578]

In addition to the various types already mentioned, there are a number of professional prerogatives on which depend a man's vocation. That of herald approximates this class, although the Bella Coola consider it rather as a right operative only during ceremonials. Professional prerogatives rest on the belief that a man's ability as a hunter, wood-worker, and so forth does not rest in his innate skill, but upon an inherited right which must be confirmed and validated by the distribution of presents. These can be given at any convenient time when the people have been called together, but, as it is to the man's advantage to have his right made known as widely 424 463 556*

424 as possible, a potlatch is the most suitable occasion. Goods 463 distributed for this purpose are not returnable; they have 556 "become nothing" in the acquisition. The value of presents so bestowed differs enormously; a man who is proud of his prerogative validates it lavishly until he is strong in his vocation, whereas another establishes himself on a lesser scale. The origin [773] of professional rights, like so many of other kinds, is lost in antiquity and ascribed to the wishes of Hqumtsin as expressed to the first people. Some of the early settlers came to earth [551] with definite duties and vocations, each indicated by a special name; others, lacking these, created them through their own enormous power. At the death of one of these incumbents, 424 his name passed to one of his relatives who acted in the same 463 manner as his predecessor after duly validating the name in 653 question. Ever since that time, the owner of a confirmed pro-556 fessional name has been able to perform the functions of the prerogative. This is never a man's sole designation but merely [551] an addition to those of ancestral, Ancient, nuxalk and other types. Like them, professional names are usually willed by their owners, though if this is neglected, one can be revived by any member of the deceased's ancestral family. In such a case, the older people usually decide on a suitable incumbent and suggest the matter to him; if he does not accept, the opportunity is given to another. If a member of the group is eager to validate the name, it is unlikely that anyone would try to [769] forestall him. Ability in certain respects can also be obtained by magical means (I, p. 701), and a member of the ancestral family so endowed is the natural choice for the prerogative in question.

Prerogatives of this kind can be grouped according to the types of vocation included.

424
463
551
653
773

THE PROFESSION OF RIVER GUARDIAN

In the beginning of time, Hqumtsin is said to have sent down with Kyil, who landed on the mountain behind Lymqo-ti,

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

a man, ux·wnaisa, with the prerogative of enforcing obedience 424 to river taboos. Ever since, the owner of this name, when it 463 has been duly legalized, has had the right to perform this function. In some cases, such as carpenters and singers, the validation of a prerogative has not brought with it the necessary 551 693 ability, so that the incumbent remains a properly ratified, but [773] non-functioning, craftsman. No mechanical skill is required by a River Guardian, hence the owner of the name ux·wnaisa has always been able to perform his duties.

From time immemorial certain restrictions have been en- 784 forced concerning the river: No refuse may be thrown in, 825 otherwise the olachen would remain in the ocean. For the 226 same reason, women at certain periods are not allowed to bathe lest a speck of blood should blind the fish and prevent them [515] from seeing the route. Occasionally an olachen with red eyes 841 is caught; this is caused by some heedless woman. When the [562] fish are running in the river, women are not allowed on the bank, nor to repair the nets. At high tide, it is forbidden to drive stakes for olachen nets.

The number of prohibitions increases during the critical period of the salmon run. Then no freshly hewn planks can be set afloat, and even a canoe which has just been completed [502] must be kept for ten days before launching. No one whose [765] husband or wife has died within the last year can embark at the village, but must proceed to a landing-place at the head of the fiord. Most important of all, refuse of salmon must be deposited in the woods; if thrown into the river, the fish would smell it and avoid the stream. Even accidents such as the upsetting of a canoe, or the spilling of olachen grease, are considered to be offences.

Disregard of any of these injunctions is displeasing to the 688 salmon and it is the duty of the River Guardian to punish the 693 offender, irrespective of his rank. In case of slight infringements, he beats the guilty person or throws him into the river. The guilty person usually scrambles out, but should he be swept away and drowned, no recompense can be claimed by 688 his relatives. This punishment is customary in cases of the 693 upsetting of a canoe. Death is the penalty for throwing refuse [177] into the river, particularly during the summer, and until the coming of the white man the River Guardian exacted it without hesitation.

THE PROFESSION OF UTTERING A DRONING CRY

424 At the appearance of masked figures representing super-551 natural beings, whether in nsask or kusiut dances, many of the [575] women repeatedly utter a peculiar, high-pitched, droning cry
[463] which adds considerably to the weirdness and impressiveness
[431] of the occasion. Ability to do this depends on an ancestral prerogative duly confirmed by the distribution of presents.
[773] Many ancestral myths describe how some of the first women were given by Alqantám, or acquired in other ways, the right to drone, and mention is made of the name used by each with respect to this prerogative. Unlike the one previously described, many of the first women possessed this privilege, which is accordingly common at the present time. A name [553] of this type is usually confirmed in girlhood, sometimes even in infancy, and being of relatively slight importance may be validated at a ceremony of less dignity than a potlatch. One of these names is Nunuqwelelsleipw-a, which has reference to [773] the blue-green sheen of some abalone-shell brought from the east by Raven in the beginning of time, as described in the ancestral myth in which this name is included. For many [178] years there has been considerable laxity with regard to this prerogative, and women lacking it have even been urged to drone in order to add to the solemnity of the occasion and to increase the wonder of the uninitiated.

424 There is another similar prerogative, enabling the incum-767 bent to drone at mourning ceremonies. In the beginning of 463 time, Smaxa of Kimsquit married Tlátwaitl, the daughter of 773 a Bella Bella chief, who had this right. It has since been transmitted from one of her descendants to another at Kimsquit.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

424
767
463 quit. Details of this prerogative were not obtainable, but it seems to follow the general type.

THE PROFESSION OF FIRST BERRY PICKER

All women can pick berries, but in every village there is at least one who has the prerogative of picking the first of every kind. The origin of this right is lost in dim antiquity, but, like all others, each first berry picker has a special professional name embodied in her ancestral myth which must be duly validated before she can function. One of these is Stlxwaxwâ-nimân·a, another is ła'ya. Though normally reserved for women, one of these names is occasionally given to a male child, in which case it is said to have been hermaphroditized. No one would dare to pick berries until the legal picker has paraded up and down the sidewalk carrying on her back her picking basket decorated with a representation of the sun, an act which is believed to ripen the berries.

222
424
[463]
[551]
[562]
[532]
[789]

"Get ready to pick red elderberries [or whatever species is ripe] tomorrow," she keeps calling out.

The berries may then be picked by anyone. This is repeated for every variety. As far as could be learnt, there was no social mechanism to punish a woman who picked berries before the announcement of the official picker; obedience seems to have been so universal that infractions are said to have been unknown though formerly there may have been some penalty of which even the memory has disappeared.

[688]
[183]

THE PROFESSION OF WARRIOR

The profession of warrior is another prerogative handed down from the distant past and requiring validation before it can be used. As with other rights of this type, magical means are in many cases employed to make any young man brave and successful, but there are a number of warriors confirmed as such by the distribution of presents at the time of bestowal on them of professional names. At the present time, it is

901
[424]
[463]
[431]
[55]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

701 156 than that of anyone else. The Bella Coola do not rationalize in a scientific manner; if a man holds a belief firmly, he acts on it without questioning its logic. Moreover, if a professional warrior functions a number of times, this in itself is enough to strengthen his conviction that he must act henceforth in the same way. It can be said with confidence that the owner of [463] a professional prerogative has considerable belief in his own powers, that this acts on himself to render him proficient, and that the majority of the community have respect for his capabilities.

555 424 533 [463]

THE PROFESSION OF SINGER

Singing is one of the professions open to a Bella Coola either through natural ability or an ancestral prerogative. There is a constant need for men able to sing and compose songs for every kind of ceremonial, so a young man of talent has little difficulty in gaining admittance to the choir. He may even win great distinction and become recognized as the leading authority on musical matters. None the less, his success is considered to be accidental and unauthentical, lacking the foundation that comes from the possession of a duly validated professional prerogative. A person made a singer by the latter means may be entirely unable to compose; in this case he is not a member of the choir, although he enjoys the social distinction which he has won by distributing goods to confirm his professional name. The singer most respected is he who combines with natural ability a confirmed prerogative to give substance and power to his position and compositions. At the death of such an one, an effort is always made by the members of his ancestral family to transmit the name to a youth who has shown musical promise. Arguments and differences of opinion are common among the members of the choir and in such cases the self-assurance and influence of a man whose position has been made strong by the distribution of presents often outweighs that of one who can rely only on his actual ability.

[55] [424] [578]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

THE PROFESSION OF CARPENTER

As with singers, there are many carpenters who ply their trade without the advantage of an ancestral prerogative. They, also, may be expert and receive credit for their skill, but they can never achieve quite the distinction that comes to a man who has been made a carpenter by the distribution of presents. The latter may be so clumsy with tools that no one would ever trust him to make a canoe, or even a mask; but he is, socially, a carpenter, whereas a skilled artisan lacking a prerogative is admired for his ability but has no foundation of social esteem. In transmitting a professional carpenter's name, however, an effort is always made to give it to a youth with a bent in that direction.

The most esteemed carpenters are those who can make canoes, a trade which requires no special prerogative. In the beginning of time, Yaletmwat was the canoe-maker par excellence; he assisted many of the first people, and no one can have a professional prerogative as carpenter unless this supernatural being appears in his ancestral myth. The Bella Coola ascribe the skill of the Bella Bella in carpentry to the fact that Yaletmwat married a Bella Bella woman in the early period of the world and that many of that tribe are his descendants. In the old days, before the coming of the white men, carpenters were always respected as esteemed members of the community. Chiefs always cared for them, and they received abundant food at every ceremonial. None the less, they were not wealthy, and only in recent years, since the Bella Coola have realized the value put upon good craftsmanship by the white men, has it become customary to give valuable presents to carpenters. Ceremonially, they have considerable influence, since the carpenter who makes a mask usually decides who shall wear it and takes charge of the fitting and adjustment. He is also held responsible for any accident such as its falling when in use or for mechanical defects.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

224

THE PROFESSION OF HUNTER

424 Another profession which is entered by means of an ancestral prerogative is that of hunting. Many Bella Coola have [463] validated their right to this vocation, some by confirming names created by their early ancestors, others by legalizing those brought down from above in the beginning of time. [551] One of the latter is Lelaimkila, "The Brusher Off," so-called because the owner is such a successful hunter that he can sweep mountain goats from the mountains as easily as an ordinary person can brush insects from a wall. Unlike the professions of carpenter and singer, it is believed that legalization of a hunter's name always brings success to the holder; perhaps because everyone is more or less successful, it follows [555] that whatever good fortune is achieved by a professional hunter [556] can be attributed to the validation of his prerogative. Others, lacking this assistance, may be proficient, but their success never carries with it the social prestige gained by a man who has distributed goods to substantiate the prerogative.

224 There is a difference of opinion among the Bella Coola as 424 to whether or not certain hunting methods are inheritable pre- 184 rogatives. With the introduction of rifles, these have long [177] been discontinued, and no definite information was obtained regarding the social position of their users. Several of the older men believed that the contrivances depended upon ancestral prerogatives, whereas others stated that they were merely individual discoveries which could have been, and in many cases were, imitated by anyone. It seems probable that most of the following practices are prerogatives, although it may be that they are no more than special hunting devices suitable only in certain areas and, therefore, limited to the members of the ancestral family owning that particular locality.

223 The method about which the most definite information was 424 obtained, was one formerly employed by a certain Nuxalqiq to catch geese at Tāl-ia. According to one elderly Bella Coola,

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

this practice had been handed down with the name from the beginning of time; another man stated that it was no prerogative and could be used by anyone. The best time for hunting was at the equinoxes, and Nuxpalxiq always observed ceremonial chastity in such a way that it terminated at that date. Before setting out, the hunter prepared a net of the shape shown in the accompanying sketch (Fig. 1). The net was stretched over a wooden framework, about ten feet long and four feet wide; counterbalanced by a long and heavy handle. The whole affair was called, "The House-like Thing." Choosing a still night, the hunter used to set out in his canoe paddled by a number of assistants. Nuxpalxiq would place himself in the bow with his net, and in the middle of the craft a small fire was kept burning with resinous sticks piled beside it so that it could be kindled into bright flames at a moment's notice. As the canoe was slowly paddled along the shore, the geese were half attracted, half repelled by the light. Unwilling to take to flight, they used to swim around at the edge of the illumination and so were guided into some narrow opening of the shore. Then Nuxpalxiq would throw his net so that the end farthest from the handle first touched the water and as the latter came crashing down it imprisoned a number of birds. Others, bewildered by the light and the falling net, tried to fly outwards and were knocked down by the paddlers. These were retrieved at once and the necks of those caught in the net were wrung at leisure. It is said that this method of hunting was almost always successful.

FIG. 1
Goose Net

Another Tāl'ia hunting device which, however, was not transmitted and may have been merely an individual stroke of genius, not an inherited prerogative, was employed to kill seals. The last to use this method was the father's father of an elderly Bella Coola. This man used to go out at night in a 225 small ocean-going canoe, with an assistant who passed his paddle through the water in such a way that a slight phosphorescent streak resulted. This resembled the course of a salmon. In a short time a seal would rise in pursuit of the "fish," and the watchful hunter would harpoon it. The seal would rush off with the head of the weapon, which was attached by a long line to the shaft remaining in the hunter's hand He would play it like a huge fish, until the exhausted animal was drawn to the side of the canoe and clubbed. Several seals were often obtained by this means in the course of a single night.

224 The two usual methods of killing mountain goats are by 424 cornering them with dogs and then choking them to death, or by shooting with rifle or bow. There was formerly a special method of snaring which had been handed down as a prerogative from the time of the first people. The hunter used to set his snares on a precipitous path commonly used by goats and had remarkable success. Others might know how to make snares and where the hunter set them, but no one would ever attempt this method of hunting without the proper prerogative. Another right, enjoyed by another hunter, was the catching of bears in a similar way in nooses.

424 Little need be said in conclusion about these particular 556 privileges, except to emphasize that they are merely an aspect 182 of the principle of validated prerogatives which permeates every phase of Bella Coola life. It is as natural for a man to be made a singer or a hunter by the distribution of presents as it is for him to acquire a dance by the same means. Each is contained in an ancestral myth, and the validation of the prerogative enables the incumbent either to function actively, or as heir to enjoy the social prestige accorded to the craftsman who has been duly confirmed in his vocation. The necessity of bestowing gifts to validate a prerogative introduces an economic element to the concept, but this is lessened by the fact that a poor man can acquire a name by a relatively small expenditure though he must forgo the prestige enjoyed by a man who has been able to elevate his professional names in a lavish manner. Selection is a constant factor in the social life of a Bella Coola; the man who uses all his wealth to acquire a firm seat cannot be "strong" in nusnt matters; the man who desires to specialize in kusiut affairs cannot afford to display an elaborate totem-pole. Amid these conflicting desires, it often happens that a man somewhat neglects his professional prerogatives, especially those of which the dignity has been slightly lessened through superior skill shown by individuals endowed with no more than native ability. Upstarts of this kind have always infringed upon professional dignity, and the coming of the white man has added a new factor which has almost destroyed vocational prerogatives.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

424 556 182 [555] [197]

A'alt Dances

The most important, as well as the most spectacular, dances that occur at potlatches are those given by members of the nusnt society. In addition to these, a feature of many potlatches is the performance of a'alt dances.[1] As already mentioned, from 1870 onwards there have been many changes in nusnt ritual; new elements have been acquired by the marriages of Bella Coola to members of the coastal tribes, with the result that details of procedure vary at every ceremony according to the prerogatives of the donor. Since 1910, the influence of white civilization has increased to such an extent that nusnt ceremonials have virtually been abandoned. This took place at a time when the ritual was in transition, a state of affairs which rendered difficult the collection of coherent information. A'alt dances are associated with nusnt, but the addition of new features to the latter was accompanied by a decay of the former. Both societies have now almost ceased to exist, but whereas the nusnt organization was abandoned during a period of change and accretion, that

197 535 575 [184] [796] [128]

[1] Called c'alpsu in Kitamaat.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

177 of the a'alk came to an end when it was already waning in 535 importance. It was impossible to obtain as much detailed 575 information about the latter as was desired, and it is even 128 possible that some of the facts recorded in connection with nuaak ceremonial really belong to a'alk rites.

The right to perform an a'alk dance depends upon a duly 424 validated ancestral prerogative of which the obvious mark is 535 an a'alk name. Some of the first people brought down such 575 designations and dances with them from above in the beginning of time, a few were acquired on this earth as gifts from super-
[773] natural beings. Those who have rights of this kind form a loose organization which may be termed the a'alk society. This is closely associated both with the nuaak society and with chiefs, owing to the occurrence of these three types of names in the same ancestral myths. One member of an ancestral [556] family may use his goods to validate his ancestral name, another to make himself a nuaak, a third to become an a'alk, and an important chief, endowed with ability and wealth, may be able to do all three.

A'alk dances are less spectacular than those of either the nuaak or kusiut societies, nor are rattles or whistles used. The prerogatives of a member are limited to his name, the right to perform a certain dance, and the use of a song which commonly describes some feature of his ancestral myth. Four types of dances are considered to be a'alk; the methods of acquiring and using any one of these are similar, so it is unnecessary to describe the differences before the actual account of the performance of each.

556 If there is a dormant a'alk prerogative in the ancestral 575 family of the donor of a potlatch, he usually chooses to validate this as one of the features of his ceremony. He first consults his wife and other relatives to ensure that sufficient goods will be forthcoming, and if this matter can be arranged satisfactorily, he chooses some young relative as the recipient of the dormant right. It would be most unusual for the youth selected to decline the honour. Or some man, other than the

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Long ago, there lived in Kimsquit a young chief who was a great hunter. On one occasion, he was camping in a cave, Anakwilit, on the mountains when not only its roof, but the dome of the sky as well, opened so that he was able to gaze into the upper regions of space. From this manifestation of the supernatural, he took for himself the name Ätkwi, "The Opening of the Upper Regions," and validated it by giving valuable presents. This name has been transmitted from generation to generation and was recently brought to the present owner by his wife. With it is the prerogative of distributing potlatch gifts outside the house since the first Ätkwi claimed that the sky itself was his only ceiling. 539 575 [551] [424]

A few years after Ätkwi had had this experience, he and his three brothers left Kimsquit by canoe to hunt mountain goats at Sarwilk. To their surprise, a gull perched on the bow of their canoe; they did not scare it away, thinking it indicated a manifestation of the supernatural. At intervals it left its perch and circled around the canoe, but soon returned. As they neared the landing-place, the gull flew ashore and changed into a yearling mountain goat. Ätkwi told his brothers, of whom the second was named Äthexa and the third O'mätäl, that he believed this to be a further visitation of the supernatural to himself and that he would investigate it, and later meet them at Anakwilit.

Ätkwi leapt ashore and followed the yearling goat. Wherever the road was rough, his strange guide travelled slowly so that his human companion could follow him. At length they came to a deep chasm with sheer walls about six feet apart, and a ledge running along one side. Ätkwi followed the goat along this, until the animal leapt across the gorge, struck the face of the precipitous rock, and vanished. It was clear that he had passed into the interior of the mountain and the chief could hear the distant sound of a drum.

"I can die but once," he said to himself.

Then the brave hunter leapt across the chasm, struck the rock, and passed through it as if it had been tissue paper, to find himself in a vast cavern amid a large number of people. These were really animals who had gathered to await the coming of his guide, the yearling-goat. The latter told him not to be afraid, that henceforth he would be under the protection of all animals and would not come to harm, no matter how often he hunted. With breathless interest, Ätkwi watched the performance of a nuqwal dance, for every yearling goat is a supernatural dancer of this type. The ceremony lasted throughout the night, and next morning he set out for Anakwilit, not realizing that it was really a year since he had left his brothers. [825]

Meanwhile, though the three brothers had almost despaired of their elder's safe return, they patiently remained at their post, and after a year were overjoyed to see smoke rising from Anakwilit. They hurried

Schwatka E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

CHAPTER VI

ORIGIN MYTHS

Introductory—Bella Coola Origin Myths—Origin Myths of Other Tribes—Early Traditions Having the Ceremonial Significance of Origin Myths—Sacred Origin Myths

Introductory

973 128 EXAMPLES will be given here of the origin myths, which are believed to authorize so much of the ritual already described, and to which repeated reference has been made. [114] In 1898 Professor Boas published such an admirable collection of traditions of this type (pp. 50 ff.) that the present writer paid little attention to the subject. The Bella Coola, however, are so intensely proud of the deeds of their first forefathers [124] that several insisted on recounting them before they were willing to do other work; in consequence, a fair number of myths was collected through necessity. Since tales of this type were recounted almost entirely at potlatches, their significance has declined since the prohibition of this rite. Consequently, many legends are only remembered in part; the abbreviated and often pointless series of anecdotes here recorded can be no more than a small part of the rich field which must once have existed among the Bella Coola.[1]

● 424 773 As Professor Boas has clearly shown, origin myths relate how, in the beginning of time, the supreme god sent down to earth the first ancestors of the Bella Coola people, each usually provided with means of sustenance, a house, and certain supernatural powers. The right to the names of these people, as well as to the type of ceremonial objects used by them, has been the privilege of their descendants. But these early Bella Coola, like their modern descendants, had several designations, each carrying with it a definite prerogative. In a single myth there may be embodied a dance or more names and incidents which are quoted at the present day to authorize such diverse phases of culture as dances, rights to hunting-grounds, protections, names of dogs, or kwaxa prerogatives.* Any myth which gives the initial use of a name, a dance, or any other prerogative, is termed a snaxnaxa. Each of these is, or was in the old days, remembered with great care and never recounted in full detail except to the members of the ancestral family whose names are embodied in it. Even at potlatches the full details of the myth are not laid bare. Indeed, if a young man is of a flighty, garrulous disposition, unlikely to preserve the dignity of his ancestral lore, the details are concealed from him. Even at the present time there is much resentment at any unauthorized use of a snaxnaxa, and in the old days this would inevitably have led to bloodshed.

[1] In writing up this field material, it was my original intention to place all legends together in a separate section, or appendix, following a common anthropological practice. This, however, would have been contrary to Bella Coola thought since origin myths, for example, are regarded as entirely different from other myth stories, or from incidents connected with shamans,—to name two other groups of what are usually described as "legends." I recognize that the insertion of this chapter of origin myths interrupts the sequence of presenting Bella Coola culture, but I believe that it is the way which the Bella Coola themselves would regard as logical, and that it brings out the essential interrelations of this type of myth upon their whole life.

Boas (p. 116) states that the terms snaxnaxa and sneowa are synonymous. The writer feels certain that this is an error. It was discussed repeatedly with various Bella Coola, all of whom agreed that a sneowa is a mere story which can be told by anyone, whereas a snaxnaxa is a myth possessed by the individual, or individuals, whose prerogatives are derived from it. To the Bella Coola the two are vastly different.

None the less, there is no doubt that records of the past change from one category to the other. A wealthy chief, eager to give a potlatch, but lacking the mythical authorization, most frequently have used a sneowa, claiming the have as a snaxnaxa. There would be veiled amusement at him for doing so, but the prestige of one who can give potlatches is so great that in time his claim would probably be accepted. The two versions of the myth given (vol. I, pp. 313-19) is a case in point. The first was told as a sneuxem by a woman who claimed to be a descendant of the people figuring in it; the second, as a story, sneuxem, by a man. In view of the reliability of both informants, it seems highly probable that this is a story, partly converted to a myth. In other examples there are incidents resembling the supernatural tales given in vol. I, chap. vi, and here too it appears probable that sneuxem have been assimilated into snuxem. It is complimentary to the truthfulness of the Bella Coola, and to the respect they show for intangible property, that none of the myths recorded were sneuxem owned by others. Repeatedly an informant would say that he knew one, but would not tell it since it belonged to some other family.

*The details of these will be described later.

After collecting a few myths, in each of which it was stated that the first settlers at village X were A, B, and C, with their sisters, P and Q, it seemed as if it would have been possible, before the culture of the Bella Coola had fallen into its present decay, to make a census of those whom they believe to have been first settlers of the earth, and that such a list would have had few contradictions. This was soon found to be false. Two myths may give different people as the first occupants of a certain village, nor does such contradiction trouble the Bella Coola. Each man, convinced of the authenticity of his own family account, is quite willing to believe that the one belonging to someone else is equally correct. This characteristic lack of logical consistency has already been mentioned in other connections. Boas (p. 61) likewise gives an instance of uncertainty as to the first occupants of a village, though, on the whole, he found Bella Coola mythology to be more unified than the present writer has done. In view of their lack of systematization in other matters, it would have been surprising if they had evolved a census of their first ancestors, accepted by all as authentic.

Another matter to be considered at this point is the similarity of detail in many myths. In part this can be explained [illegible] to guide against his enemies. The man fell to the earth under cover of a fog which lifted at an inopportune moment, but the chief deceived the Five Rogues Indians into believing that his comrades were not beside. Kimshiang[1] consoled the guide with a mirror-like coat and one of [illegible].

When it came a potlatch, Kimshiang[1] had the back wall of his house decorated with pictures of sun and moon, while he himself wore a greyish bear-skin with its head above his own. As he danced, there was through the floor a large box on which was painted [illegible]. Kimshiang[1] went to the mountain and took from it sufficient powers to supply the requirements of the visitors from one tribe, the Bella Bella, for example. Then the box would sink from sight, only to reappear with gifts for another group; this was repeated as many times as there were parties of guests from outside places. This was the method of procedure thereof by Kimshiang.

Then five Nuxalk people made a number of special objects for their potlatches. In a representation of the five-peaked mountain beneath which they lived, they erected five poles over the front of their house, a custom which has been carried out until the present day. Projecting from one of them was a figure of a mountain goat, since that animal was brought to earth to serve as food by their five ancestors. They also made a number of large cross spears, which, after being used for many generations, were buried with a certain Nuxalk chief in 1878. These consisted one of a cope used by Nuxalk before he became a mountain, and were later copied by the carpenter-masons.

Kimshiang[1] was so powerful that he placed a small rim of his pot, which was a feather-brush, changed Nuxalk into a feather-rope, and declared that the supporters should be under the spot where he lived. So this commencial he always used a whistle with the voice of a raven.

[illegible] Nuxalk

(Second version dealing with another settlement)[2]

Nuxalk is a chief among mountains. Like a human leader, it has several names, Tsilmaulkc, Gmaplkm, and others; these names belong to several persons now living. Like a person, too, the mountain was [illegible] down from above at the beginning of the world to Tsimsm, Bore Lake, whence it moved to its present position midway up the Bella Coola valley, a location which is but based was a pleasant one.

[1] Related by Eugene Schooner.

U.S.N.M. Proceedings, 55-7 (2302-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

98 THE BELLA COOLA INDIANS

over a series of parallel ridges, from the top of one of which he saw below him a number of men, who going upstream. Around their heads they wore light-coloured bands. They disappeared over the next ridge and when Winpuit reached the summit of this he saw in the hollow below, him, not a number of men, but a pack of wolves, preceding him on the trail. The wolves passed over the next ridge out of sight, but when Winpuit gained the crest he saw in front of him, not wolves, but the men again with bands around their heads. This continued for some time, Winpuit seeing men below him from one ridge and wolves from the next; he was slowly gaining on them, and finally saw the animals assume human form, take off their coats, and wrap them around their heads. He caught up with the wolf-men and told them the reason for his travels, that he sought a wife. They agreed to help him and all travelled together to the home of Hemmemanis, who had landed with his wife from above on Mount Tweedsmuir in the Carrier country. They had brought from above a heavy ax head, and some moose skins. Hemmemanis had a daughter, Nadalhaiz, whom other women were Nadamalin and Nadamanil. Winpuit asked Hemmemanis for the girl and the latter agreed. So the two were married and the wolf-men sang a song which has since been handed down as a congaeria to the family of their descendants.

After the marriage the four returned towards Sisaz, Nadalhaiz going ahead to break a trail through the forest. From this she took the name Nuyamkamatin, "Trail-Breaker"; and she not cleared this path there would have been no communication today between the Carrier and the Bella Coola. In the house which Winpuit built for his bride, everything was decorated with a raven; the door was the beak of the raven, the totem pole was a raven, and a raven was carved on the end of every house. Hemmemanis constructed a house a little above Sisaz; it was this the present Bella Coola were last made entirely of skins. He called it Ulkumasi.

The two families remained in this vicinity for some time when Winpuit decided to travel around the world. He set off and, for it the east, crossed the upper waters of the Bella Coola River, which he decided to open as a route to the sea. He had brought with him some abalone shells, which he used to decorate a knife, then gave it the name Alakaia i. It floated downstream to Nuxalk, where the river plunged beneath a huge rock, but Alakaia i made clear its course by shattering the barrier. Meanwhile, a numerous member of the Sun people, who had come to earth on a mountain behind Tsimsh, had made ready his canoe for a journey upstream. Someone was very proud, and considered himself the oldest of all mankind under the assumption that he was the first to reach this earth. Accordingly his grief was great when he saw Alakaia i floating

*534 before he came to this world. It was a large pole and stood across the 534 sidewalk from the house, not being pierced by the doorway. At the base was a grizzly bear, with paws wrapped around it as if desirous of climbing after the food which could be seen higher up. Immediately above the bear was an eagle's nest with four fledglings crowding amid their broken eggshells and crowing their necks eagerly upwards to greet the mother eagle flying back with a salmon. At the top of the pole was a bell, Nanamala, representing the successor to which the sun was enclosed; it was this that Raven broke to release light to mortals. The name of the pole was Ki-ikiul.*

[531] The names mentioned in this myth are still in use. Xiwilkw was the salmon of it; her sound song deals with Swaiwa-a and, since the salmon enter Bella Coola River in hopes of reaching this place, salmon are used in the decorations of her house. The name *Tsalkamy varies; it becomes *Mkamy when applied to a youth, and *Mkamy as a for a girl.

FOURTH ORIGIN MYTH OF *Xiwa

*534 Long, long ago there was in a mysterious place far to the east and far above this world, a very large house, Nalaldmaix, in which dwelt together all people, Bella Coola, Bella Bella, Carrier, and the rest. In it there lived too, all kinds of birds, including the thrush who taught such to sing.
[529] The chief of the house, Sikaum by name, lived there too and gave to each tribe its special language. One day he decided to visit the earth, and dived from his house downwards, becoming the sun. In this guise he came to earth on Mount Nayu, near Xiwa, where he became a man and built for himself a house which was a copy of Nalaldmaix, and to which he gave the same name. Sikaum became prosperous and gave many potlatches.

FRAGMENT OF A Swalk'ai ORIGIN MYTH*

In the beginning of time, Sqamtin, in guise of the sun, were down to earth a number of brothers with their one sister. Their names have been forgotten except that of the oldest one, Tsiatlamla, who had brought with him a beaver as provender. He released the animal, which multi-

*534
[534]
[551]

*As is commonly the case, there is no connection between this origin pole and the adventures of Ki-ikiul. The person using this name has the right to use these designs as a part of his myth, exactly as the right to recount the adventures of his ancestor belongs to him.

*Approximate meaning, salmon ceremonial.

*Related by Jackson Sharp.

1:McDowell E-5 (1922-1924)948
NEH Bellecoula NEH

plied to provide abundant food for all, it became the ancestor of all the beavers of the upper valley. Owing to their position higher up the Bella Coola, Tsiatsmis and his brothers considered that they were nearer to the sun than any of the people dwelling below, a fact of which they were exceedingly proud. Moreover, having been sent down by him, the sun was their sun.

There were two large boulders in the river near the settlement, which Aqumtin had shown Tsiatsmis how to use as supports for a salmon-weir. With the help of his brothers, a hole was drilled in one of the rocks; then they felled a large tree upstream and allowed it to drift down until the butt lodged in the perforated boulder and the head swung across against the other. With this as base, other trunks were sunk in upright so that the river was almost spanned and a fine dam constructed. In this they caught so many salmon that Tsiatsmis and his brothers were able to call people from far and near to potlatches and feast them liberally on the fish. In course of time their sister was married to a chief from another town. Henceforth, whenever one of her brothers gave a potlatch, he was able to relieve his sister on a lavish scale with the running salmon. The sun had taught the women a song for such occasions, which has since been used as a prerogative by her descendants when relieving them selves from their husbands.

Tsiatsmis made a long voyage of exploration during which he reached the Skeena River. He made friends with the inhabitants of the town, Kyemsm, who gave him the name, Tsiatsm,* meaning what in their language. Continuing his journey, he ultimately visited the earth before returning home. He obtained several other designations, including Hlamda from the Kwakiutl people.

Even after the settlement of Snaik-ti, the drilled stone supporting the salmon-weir broke and the ruins were swept away downstream. The people cut their hair and blackened their faces in mourning, then moved to Snaw where a number of their daughters had married chiefs.

ORIGIN MYTH OF NAUSIT

It is common to add details from a story to a family myth in order to increase its length and importance. Almost con-

*It appears that Tsiatsm is an attempt to pronounce the English, which does, as interesting example of the way in which modern words have been incorporated into ancient myths and been clothed with the glamour of antiquity.

Both are still used by members of the ancestral family descended from Tsiatsmis.

Related by Mrs. Walkem, who had learnt it from her late father, Tsemlahi, a chief of Dean, whose hatsar name was Sualtsay.

their craft and set out on foot along the overland path to the head of South Bentinck Arm. 534*

Midway along this trail the travellers saw a house, called Tsitsaalat because it could lengthen itself at will. From this supernatural right each of the five became a dancer. This house was a replica of the one above in which mankind was made and, like it, contained many rooms, in each of which lived an individual speaking a different language. Hi'mitsats failed to understand them and in his annoyance scattered the speakers, who fled to different parts of the coast where each invented and perpetuated his own language. This is why the various coastal tribes have their own tongues; if Hi'mitsats had been able to understand them in Tsitsaalat there would be no diversity of speech now. [524]

Various dances were taking place in the rooms within the house. There was a constant din from the large whistles used in social ceremonial which sounded of their own accord and were continually answered by Echo. Only at this place and at Nuuyaitl did Echo appear to the four people; hence only the descendants of Hi'mitsats and of the Nuuyaitl people have the right to portray him in their dances. Ana'Mmatsats (II, p. 6) stood near the door, where as he did the called out, the sound whistles became silent as if in fear. [524] [525]

Continuing their journey the travellers reached Tsi'ts, at the head of South Bentinck Arm, where a solitary man, Nuyumis, was living. At this place Tsitsaalitsyakim gave birth to Raven, who was born in a box with the legs of a crane. Hi'mitsats named his ciqiatsamqaqilmas. After a short sojourn at Tsi'ts they ascended the river, and presently Hi'mitsats saw a female grizzly bear, whom he also invited to join the party on his canoe. The bear accepted and he endeavoured to change the creature to a woman. He had his canoe with the paws and feet, that is why these parts of a bear are similar to those of men at the present day, but the bear's hairy hide defied his efforts and in disgust he told it to run away. Before banishing it, he bade the animal always show a friendly disposition to human beings, whereas grizzly bears at Tsi'ts have never been known to attack a person. The party proceeded up the river to Mount Sagi, where Hi'mitsats found a repository (II, p. 6) through the discovery of which he became a Cannibal with the name Sawalilas and an eagle as totem. From this point they returned to Tsi'ts, where they settled permanently. [525]

Many of the names which occur in this myth are still in use. Mrs. Sebenzer's designation as chief is Tsitsaalitsyakim, a name that can be used by either men or women; in the former case the suffix yakim is 531

Grouse. Kaul'kiki'yahen is held by a Dog Salmon chief. Several factor names, with dances, were obtained from Tsilhaitsi' where the swallows now there being performed, among them were Ánuhkhimsk and Tsalaqsen, which are now used by our Bella Coola women. Alnamlin is now a Cannibal (II, p. 70) name. Ts'ilu'n Ai'mulaxis gave a factor dance, and with his own power made there a repository as if he had brought it with him from Tsilhaitsi'. This was only possible because of his supernatural power as one of the first people, strengthened by his becoming a dancer through seeing Tsilhaitsi'.

SECOND ORDER MYTH OF Ts'ilu'n[1]

* 384 In the beginning, there came down to the Dean River,[2] Tsaqqa, Nuxwmalu, Wiqaqi, and their younger sister Nalomamalim, they brought from Ilgamim some of the large cone-shaped whistles used for world ceremonials.[3] The three revolved all over the coast seeking a place to which to settle, and always the whistles kept calling out of their own accord, giving advice. Finally they decided to locate at Ts'ilu'n, the head of South Bentinck Arm.

When they had lived there for some time, the neighbours objected to the use of the whistles, which drove many shellfish and herring, so Nuxwmalu built a high, narrow mound of refuse, on the top of which he constructed his house. The building was peculiar, its four upright posts, usually used to close with a mat when anyone entered. On either side of the hill there lived a sisiqa, whose hoot one could hear the calling of an infant at any distance. In those ancient days, these beasts were like dogs and did not enter houses, they were servants to Tsaqqa. One day he learnt that a visiting-party was approaching, but instead of being afraid he instructed the sisiqa to use their power when it drew near. When the hostile canoe came in sight the two creatures covered their eyeballs, causing a blinding fog which covered the occupants of the canoe. After a little they recovered consciousness and again came on, but again the sisiqa covered their eyeballs with a fine mist. When this had happened several times the visitors withdrew discouraged.

---

[1] Related by Mrs. Willie Hack.

[2] It is not necessary for the Dean to figure in the plot, which some of the first people came to settle, but the descendant names in Bella Coola then that river.

[3] This paragraphs is too common among the Bella Coola from the Bella Bella.

[illegible]
[illegible]

[534]

presents were distributed to validate the name, Tlaxpitlum, which Uwagal had chosen for himself.

Uwagal married a Bella Bella woman who brought with her the prerogative of a dance with respect to the dead-fish. In Bella Bella this rite was connected both with the burial and the wake, but in Kwakiutl it was performed only at a burial dance. It was first given the by Galgwa-i, a relative of Uwagal, and has since been performed like dances in Kwakiutl. Their daughter received the Bella Bella name, Tsilem, which has since remained in Kwakiutl.

[424] [575] [585] [551]

ORIGIN MYTHS OF Ayat-i[1]

In the beginning of time there came to Ayat-i, on the sea side of the Dean River, about one mile from the sea, Sonsamilla and his three younger brothers. They brought a cross-bowman to their place from Hagwilem. After they had lived some time on the earth, Sonsamilla asked Tsilkiwun to have a cross ready for him on the morrow. By the sun-day Tsilkiwun had completed a fine cross. Sonsamilla was lighted and spent four days fasting. In one, then set out with his three younger brothers for a trip to the far north, where he heard by report that whale-skulls were to be found.[2] The four did not know the route, it was necessarily penetrating into lands from which there was no exit, however, they persevered and were helped by all whom they encountered. Sonsamilla's cross being well known. After a month's voyage, they sighted their goal. They found themselves before a lofty precipice falls above and the cross with a canoe visible in it on very low side. To they boldly entered. In fact they were delayed with falling cow-dung; fact, that canoe would have been sunk by the weight of these. The eldest brother had set-forth up his cross-back chief, to meet them all. Little further on they found countless skulls-skulls, with which incredibly filled the canoe, having for the side should not sufficiently to contain them canoe. If they stayed to investigate further. Once safely inside they camped, and the elder brother took the opportunity conferred on the younger brothers for things they had seen in from the sea. He called his second brother Tsamsamsa, "The Worm" as if he had fought against the shadows, the third Ma-ma, "Fully Bear-Fish," and the youngest Hagen, "The Bear-Shadow," in reference the [1] Phonetic by Dr. Boas. Boas in 1895 has recorded a similar tale from Bella Coola with different characters.

[487]

[2] The Bella Coola are explicit in saying that whales-skull compose the cache in the sea, possibly this was to explained by an indirect route.

1:McIlwraith E-9 (1922-1924)2948
NES Bellacoola NES

Next morning they found a house in readiness for them, a short distance from the beach; its name was Nuwalqinem, and it had been created for them by Ałqantlen who had selected this spot for their residence. It resembled other houses except that the door was in a back corner instead of in the middle of the front because bears must not approach the river, and the fire still had seven characteristics. The salmon would have been frightened if they had lived too near. The paintings on the back walls were of Kingfisher.

Chips from their firewood floated downstream to the point where Swanee (I, p. 332) lived. Judging that someone was encamped there him, he set out to investigate. He met Tsilla and entered into conversation with him, finally asking if he, Swanee, might marry Tsilla's sister, Sulmelem, "The Light-Bearer." Tsilla agreed, and the two were married in due course. At this ceremony a marriage song given by Ałqantlen was first used.[*]

Qayayar and his brothers made a special kind of fish-trap, in which they caught large quantities of trout and steelhead salmon, and below them Swanee and his family were also catching large quantities of salmon. The two settlements combined to give a potlatch. The brothers built an extension to the house to accommodate their guests, and when all were seated a representation of a black bear emerged from the room at the back of the house, imitating the appearance and actions of its ancestor when first they arrived on this earth. The artifacts brought by Qayayar and his brothers from above were displayed to the guests, as has since been done on similar occasions by their descendants. At this potlatch the name Hałqelsiła was given to Sulmelem, having reference to the coloured house with the rear doorway.

Tsilla once sent his kingfisher-herald up the river to discover whether or not there were people there, for at that time it was unknown country. He reported that there were, so Tsilla built a canoe, in the manner taught by Raven, and set off, en route to visit the upstream settlers, who had likewise learnt the art of making canoes and were travelling downstream on an annual circuit to his town.

The brothers used some of their wealth on one occasion to give a feast dance, at which they validated for Hałqemilaxa the Dancer (II, p. 122) name, Hamatsemłaxa. This refers to the way in which he had flown with quivering wings when a kingfisher, and so he danced he dark his hands in imitation of this. This name had been given him by Ałqantlen, he had also his third, Gigelmem, referring to his status as herald.

Swanee and Sulmelem had many children who formed a local lineage

[*] He has since been remembered as a newcomer by the descendants of this couple.

1:McDowell E-5 (1922-1924)[948]
NEB Bellacoola NEB

make a salmon-man. In accordance with Ḵpamin's instruction, Sasamat planned to make a circuit of the world making a suitable place to settle. He started northward, in eagle form, scattering eagle down, wherefore this material has ever since been highly regarded and is used as a symbol of peace. Owing, moreover, to the eagle down scattered on the mountains, there has always been much snow in that region.*

Sometimes so he travelled he encountered the form of the sun, for he was so powerful that nothing was impossible to him. For in the north Sasamat obtained an enormous copper, which he carried back to Kimsquit without completing his original plan of circling the earth. He perched on a tree near his brother's almost completed salmon-man.

"Why don't you change yourself to a human being?" Ongwedzida inquired.

"I am waiting until our food is more plentiful," Sasamat replied. "Besides I have been to the far north where I obtained an enormous copper."

When the war was completed and Ongwedzida was catching many salmon, his brother at last decided to become a man. But instead of sending his cloak back above to animated it, he an eagle. Sasamat now became an orphan fatherless and was much annoyed by the chirps made by the bird, though he himself was responsible for it not having returned as Ḵwanita. After about a year he suggested to Ongwedzida that they should kill it, but the latter demurred, since it was the gulls which Ḵpamin had given Sasamat. The latter said nothing, but the next time he saw the eagle circling his fish he killed the bird, without consulting his brother. He cannot had he done this than he felt sorry, but it was too late; he could not restore the eagle to life.

Owing to the salmon given them by Ḵpamin the two brothers now were very prosperous, and Sasamat began to think of marriage. One day he noticed some chips floating down the Dean River, so he judged that people must be living on that stream. He set out to investigate, met Tsiaxa, and married his sister Sawamina, as has been described in a Dean River myth. To celebrate this event the two brothers proposed to invite people from far and near. First they lengthened their house to accommodate a large number; it was of the type known as ninwalal, though it could not expand without human agency. Then they painted their spears with designs of the ninkapu, since they had brought this crest with them from above. Now everything was ready and they commenced their guests. When all had assembled, Sasamat gave a ḵwalkwa dance

*The cloud which has over Kimsquit before a war-cry on all called "Sasamat's cloud," in memory of his journey. The myth fails to explain how Sasamat was responsible for this phenomena.

[536] [424] [536]

commemorate the killing of the eagle. The war of his song described how he had come to this earth and how he had slain the bird which had been his own cloak. This dance was fully validated by presents of salmon, and has since been carried out by the descendants of Sisaxum. It is assumed that the concept of such a dance was given to him by Hagwilnex before he left Tsyemsa, but he used his own discretion on this earth as to the actual season for it.

At this gathering of people, virtually a potlatch, Sisaxum took for himself the name Snaqhilaten, "What Pile People." He chose this name with reference to the countless salmon caught in his weir.

Sisaxum now revealed to Bella Bella making a wife. His fame and wealth were so well known that he was able to wed Tsitsaxit, the daughter of a powerful chief. She had the valued prerogative of wailing, a right which had been fully validated by presents. Her father told her that when she was going with Sisaxum to Kimsquit she would pass Tsyeximgi, a man who had been turned to stone on the skyline above the western side of Dean Channel, about five miles from its head, and that unless she waited to the present him her children would be unable to enjoy this prerogative. The reason for this injunction is not now understood; it is merely recognized that as Tsyeximgi became petrified now Sisaxum's home he became, in some manner, a stone. As the canoe leaving Tsitsaxit passed Tsyeximgi she began to wail and weep, but could her husband soothe her. He, for his part, told the herald, Nuxlitsq, who had come with him from above, to call out as follows:

"Halo! Chief, our chief has married a Bella Bella woman; no one can be cross, as you see here."

[484] [76]

When Nuxlitsq had called this a second time the stone man answered. Ever since, passers-by have addressed Tsyeximgi, and a failure on his part to reply is considered an omen of death.

Tsitsaxit brought her husband several valuable prerogatives, a small dance with the large cone-shaped whistle, several Sisiutl dance rights, as well as some Sisiutl color-bath. According to one of Sisaxum's descendants, this is how the small Sisiutl reached Kimsquit. Among the Bella Bella, whistles can only be seen by chiefs, and Sisaxum received the right from his father-in-law. The latter also gave his son-in-law a Sisiutl whistle, which was carried behind the canoe towards Kimsquit. Sisaxum knew that his people would object to it being brought into the river, since there was a free belief that a whistle would drive away the salmon. Accordingly, he hoisted the canoe in the bend and there dried the men to smoke.

Sisaxum now determined to give an elaborate potlatch at which he planned to perfect his prerogative with regard to the whistle. He decided to build his new house of the most substantial type, where it was finished

[illegible] E-5 [illegible]
NES Bellacoola NES

In this instance someone saw a party of strangers, and wondered who they might be as they entered the town. There was great rejoicing when the two brothers told their purpose who they were, for they had been so transformed that they were unrecognizable. As he has had still, Eulamain's three beautiful wives came rushing up, eager to have him take them back, but he paid no attention to them. He welcomed only the ugly one, who had mourned for him, and managed her until she became the most lovely of all.

Omaum, delighted at the safe return of his son, and proud of Eulamain's beautiful children, now invitations for and sent to a great potlatch. At the ceremony he validated, with many presents, a seat in the house to Eulamain a. The name Nas confirmed was Spiteldi, "The Fine Boy," a name given to Eulamain a by Kopatsiyu. Omaum also took the opportunity to confer names on his numerous grandchildren. After adjourning for some time to Kimsquit, the Kitlala people returned home, richly laden with gifts.

In the course of time Wiyumbiyat bore her husband two more children. Omaum continued to prosper and to give potlatches, at one of which he gave one of his grandchildren the name Sidlung, "Chief." This designation at once became honorable on account of the gifts expended. Eulamain a did not wish to forget his Kitlala friends, so in time he sent one of his children to live there. One of them was Sidlung, a name that has ever since remained there. Thus friendly relations between Kimsquit and Kitlala, first opened by Eulamain a, have been maintained. There have been many marriages between people of these two areas, each known of Eulamain a, and it was only about one hundred and fifty years ago that a Kimsquit woman, Ahghel'ts, was married to a Kitlala man to repay the original marriage of Wiyumbiyat.

When Omaum became old he gave yet another potlatch at which he took for himself the name Eulamainem, "The Sunrise." He created this from his own fertile imagination, with reference to the way in which he entered night down when that travelling to the north to night from. It has since been used by his descendants when old.

The descendants of Omaum enjoy not only the prerogative of using this myth and the names included in it, but other privileges connected with it. If one of them gives a potlatch he carves the form of a mirror, as the spoons to be used in it, and paints the wall of his house with a similar design. Omaumbiyat's descendants are more likely than others to receive supernatural good fortune from a mirror. The descendants of both

* 534 brothers have the right, moreover, to have and collect food in the places used by these five ancestors. The areas so authorized are:

Nuxalk-qimuc, the mountain where they first came to earth.

Ulqinuxw, a valley leading into the main valley of the Kimsquit River where Tsqumkilda was accustomed to hunt.

Nulal-kit, a valley where Tsmaxu's wives used to pick berries.

Tsmaxlt, a level area of country on the bank of the Kimsquit River twenty-eight miles from its mouth. The people landed here and Tsmaxu pre-empted it as a hunting-ground.

Nulqa-kalt, another valley where Tsmaxu's wives used to pick berries.

The place in the Kimsquit River where their salmon-weir was erected, and the spot where they caught chicks.

534 The length and width of land authorized in this myth since the question of whether it is one of the usual type, or represents a combination of several stories strung together and joined by a new saga to justify the existence of the new ancestors. It was received from Jim Pelkey, a Kimsquit Indian, descended from Tsmaxu, and himself the son of this name, a valuable and reliable informant. Jim is a man of great ability, who has given more protection than any other Indian of either Bella Coola or Kimsquit, and who, accordingly, has been able to validate very fully his ancestral myths and the names embodied therein. Owing to the death of his relatives, Jim has been able to use designations and portions of the legend which otherwise would certainly have belonged to other people. In this regard it therefore represents an amalgamation, but one of a legitimate nature. Theoretically every myth would be complete if it were not for the parts possessed by others, and the use of every one Bella Coola is to seek the return of those parts by judicious marriage. Jim has been able to achieve this by the death of his relatives and the existence of his wife, herself a descendant of Tsmaxu. Before the coming of the white man and the consequent decimating of population, it is probable that any one person would have the duly validated right to call a myth of this length, but theoretically it was possible, and might have been done by anyone as superior to the fellows as this one is to the present inhabitants of Kimsquit.

TSMAXU WITH AT TSMAXLT*

* 534 Among the five people dispatched to this earth were four brothers, Tsmaxu, Tsmaxlt, Ellaxu and Ellaxlt, who came to earth and settled in Tsmaxlt, the site of the present Nuxalkmc Canyon, Kimsquit. Before

*Related by Jim Pelkey.

1:McDowalth E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

539 sided by older sticks which bent time of their own accord. From this night Ewatwalie became a shaman and used what he had seen when he was giving a dance of his own. His brother Wakko went downstream until he came to a large house at Kitlatla[*] outside of which stood a huge bull-head. No one was in this house and Wakko took possession of it.

A FRAGMENTARY OKANAGAN MYTH[]

Long ago at the time the world was first populated there were no rivers apparent, for such were confined underground in a cavern-like prison called Nawaklilowaix, the approach to which was barred by a huge boulder. Not only were the rivers shut up, but with them were their occupants, including the salmon. First Eagle tried to break this barrier, but without avail; then Raven succeeded. Since then the Bella Coola River has flowed in its present course. But the Tsawat River was still in bondage, to the disgust of the chiefs who wished to travel up it to the home of the chief, Kwanaw'la. The Carpenter, Atlakiik, took pity on them and by breaking the barrier permitted them to reach their destination.

Origin Myths of Other Tribes

177 538 424 As has been repeatedly stated, the Bella Coola have obtained many prerogatives by marriages with the members of neighbouring tribes. Among these are, according to their belief, myths dealing with the peopling of distant localities. Ceremonially and sociologically, such traditions have the same importance as myths that describe Bella Coola as the final place of settlement of the first inhabitants. Accordingly, they can be given at this point.

177 538 174 114 In the previous section the original landing-places of some of the individuals described is said to have been outside the Bella Coola valley. Boas, discussing this fact (p. 111), suggests that such myths may reflect the movements of the ancestors of the Bella Coola from the parent Salish stock. Though this is a plausible hypothesis, it is also possible that [*] This place could not be identified.

[] Related by Louis Charlie.

McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES
Bellabella NES

BC
* 539

air. As they did so the feathers began to move, gradually rising in the air until some passed through the roof. It was as if a minimum whirlwind of gentle power were spiraling them. As the three continued to use the sticks, the corpse itself began to move, finally disintegrating into the down and passing through the roof. As it did so the three said:

"Go back whence we came. Ty.....,"

Since that time the people of Owikl have disposed of their dead in this manner.

The first Hkaiaiic brought with him from above not only the right to a scaled dance, but also a Cannibal Sacrier dance (II, p. 71) with the Bella Bella name Lelmas. He had, moreover, the rare privilege of performing Sacrier and scaled rites on alternate nights.

BC
[766]
[177]

This myth is important since it embodies an account of the disappearance of a corpse through a roof, a method of removal of the dead now practised by the Bella Coola in the case of children. This means is recognized by the Bella Coola to have been a recent introduction from either Bella Bella or Rivers Inlet to Tal'ts, and thence to Bella Coola.

[424]

Judging from this account, it would appear that such a method of removal of a corpse must be considered as originally a prerogative embodied in a myth, although it has ceased to be regarded as such in Bella Coola. The man from whom this tradition was obtained said it was only one of the type current in Bella Coola, though such are common in Bella Bella. It was obtained by the marriage of one of his ancestors to a woman of Owikl, and was used as theme for a mourning-ceremony on the death of his sister.

BB
539
BC
* 539
[177]
[583]

AN EARLY BELLA BELLA MYTH TRANSMITTED BY MARRIAGE TO BELLA COOLA*

In the beginning of time, when the population of the earth consisted only of the few people who had come down from above, Tsaiximaw was in the Bella Bella town, Qqayai, where, as was common at that period, people had no houses but were sheltered under huge trees which Ilgwaiiw had placed there for that purpose. Tsaiximaw was in the form of a man at the time and fell in love with a girl of the village. Her father, Nkwi, agreed to the match and the two were married. The husband never slept with his wife; when he wished children, he willed that they

*Related by Joshua Moody.

McIlwraith E-1 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES
Bellabella NES

Be * 534
BB
[534]

FRAGMENT OF A KWATNA ORIGIN MYTH*

In the beginning Ayaxnim sent down to Qwaxalk, a point west of Kwatna, two men with their respective wives. The men's names were Ti'mqulaxa and Lagwanmis, and those of the women, *Sasa and Ilimai.

ORIGIN MYTH OF SCHOONER PASS*

In the beginning there came down to Qwaymai, on Schooner Pass, a woman whose name was Sisa. On the shore of a lake near there she became a shaman, through a vision of which the details are lost. To obtain the continued goodwill of the power residing in the lake Sisa was wont to throw upon the water eagle down and dried cedar-bark, and cast this water when crossing patterns. One day when she was singing, she was overheard by Tsiatsaula, Kaulum, Wiuus, Qwaiamis, Sasai, and Wala, who had come to earth at the Nass River, Kaulaai, and were travelling by canoe, looking for a suitable place to settle. The four first named were brothers, the remaining two their sisters. Attracted by the song the six landed and ultimately chose Qwaymai as their abode, where they lived amicably with the powerful Sisa. In this they were fortunate, for she was so magically endowed that she had success in whatever she undertook.

Tsiatsaula and his brothers built a huge house of the kelp which grew abundantly in the vicinity. In course of time they were able to call people from far and near for a potlatch, at which a whale vomited grease down through the smoke vent on to the central fire causing it to blaze brightly, much to the amusement of the guests.

Be [424]
[554]

Since that time, whenever the owner of the name Tsiatsaula has given a potlatch, carpenters have prepared for him a wooden whale which vomits grease on to the fire, a jealously preserved prerogative.

ORIGIN MYTH OF Qulaula:*

In the beginning, Ayaxnim sent down Tsilikar with a herald to Qulaula, near a lake in the country now occupied by the Carrier Indians. Tsilikar brought with him a sack containing the model of a house which, when he set it on the ground, expanded without visible cause into a fine, large dwelling. In front of it there was a towering totem-pole surmounted by an owl.

---

*Related by Snaachnut Annie.
*Related by Snaachnut Annie.
*Related by Mrs. Willie Mack.

1:36:Howeith E-5 (1922-1924)948
NEA Bellacoola NEA
Bella Bella NES

Be 534*

to death. Gyamkhlamat was the most prosperous of the brothers; so much had his wealth increased that he was able to call the people from all parts of the coast to a potlatch.

BB 534

Alpentlas had given Tlakmakila the honorable prerogative or duty of singing the mourning song whenever anyone died. When it was time for her to function she painted her face with a design representing a rough sea, and beat time on the floor with a stick, Ipemkalate, on which were jingling copper bangles. The theme was how Raven had brought her help on all occasions.

Be

The right to sing this song has since been preserved as a prerogative in the ancestral family descended from these four brothers. No name accompanies it, but the right must be validated by the giving of presents. [424] [535]

Early Traditions Having the Ceremonial Significance of Origin Myths

Be 534*

The following are examples of myths which are used as authorization for potlatches even though they do not deal with the actual peopling of this earth. It will be noted that they describe the adventures of early settlers, and only with non-Bella Coola. All are claimed to have been obtained by intermarriage with the descendants of individuals mentioned in them.

Be [177]

An Early Lizdmy Myth[20]

BB 539

Not long after the first people had come to this earth, Raven taught an Lizdmy chief, Ep pamak by name, how to catch black cod with hook and line. It was summer at the time, and Ep pamak began to make preparations for fishing early the following year. He instructed his wife to take three female assistants with her to the woods to collect a large quantity of cedar-bark for making the line, which had to be at least three hundred yards in length, owing to the depth at which black cod are found in Labouchere Channel. The four women returned four days later with a large amount of the material, on which they worked all summer and the following winter. Meanwhile Ep pamak, with three other men to help him, was busy manufacturing hooks of the usual British Columbia type. They were made from the knots of dead and fallen hemlocks; the interior was first cut out, bent into the desired shape, smoothed with mountain

Be 539*

[20] Related by Jim Pelkmit.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Bellabella NE5

BB 539 BC 539 BC BB [226] [825]

a person has been in contact with supernatural beings to enable him to enter.

Ailsamka told them everything, that her mother had failed to teach her how to cut up black cod, "so Xmoqwa sent blackfish to catch me so that I could be taught," she said. "You must be very careful to cut them up properly or trouble will come upon you."

The correct method, as taught by Raven, is to split the fish cleanly without severing the bones. Xi-paak's daughter had erred by cutting the one which is equivalent in a fish to the human collar-bone. She told them of the fish that abounded in Xmoqwa's house; of the red-fish, which disobeyed their mother by playing outside the house so that their stomachs were often forced out from their mouths[78] and they floated up to the surface; of Xmoqwa himself and his large hat; and of the other denizens of the underworld. The people listened attentively and ever after cut up black cod in the prescribed fashion, though if Ailsamka had not been carried off to Xmoqwa's house Raven's teaching would undoubtedly have been forgotten.

Not long after his daughter's safe return Xi-paak gave a potlatch. He took for himself the name Xmoqwa, and at the same time reproduced in his own house as much as possible of what his daughter had described. Thus there were imitation fishes, especially the halibut, around the house, while the red-fish were shown as wooden models that could be drawn up to the roof by hidden strings representing the manner in which the fish float up to the surface of the ocean. Xmoqwa, himself, was shown wearing his large ball topped hat, of the type known as hipol.[79]

While Ailsamka was under the water Xmoqwa had shown her xuaak whistles, and at this potlatch they were used while the girl was concealed within the back-room as a xuaak initiate.

BC [177] [556]

This was the[80] origin of the xuaak ceremonial, which spread in time from the xuaq people to the Bella Coola. The name Xmoqwa passed to one of Xi-paak's descendants who, when he gave a potlatch, arranged

BC BB [424] [292] [532]

[78] The red-fish is an unidentified deep-sea fish which dies in shallow water through lack of pressure.

[79] This style was always worn by Xmoqwa and Alquatin and, as many of the first people obtained their power from one or other of these beings, the prerogative of using such hats at potlatches is quite common. They are made of cedar roots, are waterproof, and are usually painted with one of the wearer's ancestral crests. When either Xmoqwa or Alquatin is shown on a totem-pole he is displayed with one of these hats.

[80] It will be noted that the narrator tacitly assumes any origin recorded in his myth to be the sole, or authentic one.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Bella bella NE5

BC
* 539

he travelled the whole distance on a single billow, so asked to be sent on a four-billow wave. His canoe was a sea-lion's stomach, into which he climbed through the mouth and which he made watertight by tying up the entrance with the animal's entrails. Whether or not the creature was alive is not clear, but at any rate the man set off in the strange craft. He felt as if he were on the back of an animal which made long, easy, slow bounds; it was the slow surging of a gigantic Pacific comber. After four bounds he untied the neck and found himself at home.

BC
[552]
[55]

Certain names have been preserved from this myth. The name Nqeqe is now used by a dog, as the owner is the last of her family. Another name is Tharamqwitl, "The Crash," derived from the metallic sound of the closing door of the sea-lion house. The name Nametsta was also obtained inside the house, but the details of its significance are lost.

BB
539
BC
* 539
[178]
[424]

AN EARLY MYTH OF Kelde-t[19]

As has been said, ambitious individuals, especially if they lack origin myths of the customary kind, sometimes claim ordinary stories as such. The following is almost certainly a case in point. It was obtained from an unreliable informant, who claimed it as a family myth, and said he had used it at a potlatch. He asserted that it was a Bella Bella story, transmitted through the marriage of one of his ancestors with a Bella Bella woman. Another informant, well versed in Bella Bella folk-lore, recounted another version of the same myth as a mere tale. There seems little doubt that the first narrator had merely laid claim to a common story to supply the deficiency of a true myth.

In the beginning, there came down to earth at the head of Gas Bay, Kelde-t, a solitary man whose name was Kásdn-a. He was so lonely that he made for himself from soft punky wood a woman, dressed her in blankets and clothing, and gave her the name, Qua'lems, which is in the Bella Bella language. Kásdn-a was a great hunter; every day he went out to seek mountain goats, which provided him with great quantities of grease, as well as yarn that he wove into blankets. Before leaving the house he always placed Qua'lems in front of a loom, put food beside her and told her to eat as much as she liked and to work diligently.

[19]Related by Kimsquit Alec.

I:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NES Bellacoola NES
Bellabella NES

Other people had come down to earth at the same time as Kásto·a, and among them a man and his wife who had landed at the mouth of Gee Bay. They had two daughters who, walking one day at the head of the bay, were surprised to find a house. They looked in and saw a woman, so entered, and laughed heartily to find her made of rotten wood. They kicked over the figure and the head fell into the fire and was burnt. Then they seated themselves in her place, worked diligently at the blanket and ate a large amount of the food. Towards dusk they put the figure back in place and hid themselves.

Soon Kásto·a entered. He embraced the figure, called her a good wife, and thanked her for weaving so diligently and for having eaten so much of the food. Then he saw that she had burnt her head, and chided her, saying that she must take better care of herself. At this the two girls who were hiding burst out laughing and showed themselves. They suggested to Kásto·a that he choose one of them for his wife; he agreed, selected the elder and married her. He built a house on a hilltop where they lived and to which he called people from far and near when he gave a potlatch.

Sisaá Origin Myths

As already stated, many sisaá names are believed to have come down from above with the first Bella Coola, or to have been created by them on this earth. In such cases, the sisaá origin myth is the same as the ancestral myth. Theoretically, names of the same type can also be received through visions in which a beholder is given his new designation by some supernatural being, or takes it from the apparition. In either case, of course, it must be duly validated by the giving of presents. Only three myths were obtained which deal solely with the acquisition of a sisaá prerogative. No doubt this is chiefly to be explained by the fact that most sisaá rites have been derived from the Bella Bella.

THE ORIGIN OF THE Sisaá NAME, Spuxpuxá-mpdimai[40]

About 1840, a party of Xusais Indians[41] spent the winter in Bella Coola. Early in the spring one of them broke his leg so [40] Related by Joshua Moody.

[41] It was impossible to identify this tribe. According to the Bella Coola they are akin to the Carriers, but have adopted the use of totem-poles, hactat dances

*539 that he was unable to return home. A young Bella Coola 609 woman charitably took the injured man into her house, but though she tended him with care, the injury did not heal ●424 properly, and he was crippled for life. He used to work around the house at light chores, but was unable to perform any hard work, and was virtually adopted into the family, though, lacking land in Bella Coola, he could never acquire any real status there. After remaining for more than five years the cripple became ill, and realized that he was about to die. In gratitude to the woman who had sheltered him, he asked her to use his xuxuk name, Spaxpaxuq-mpdimat, for one of her children, if she ever had any. Soon afterwards, the stranger died. The woman's family paid for his burial, and it was recognized that the name, with myth attached, belonged to them. In later years it was duly validated with presents at a potlatch, for the benefit of her son from whom this account was obtained.

The myth is as follows:

*539 Long, long ago, a number of the sons of chiefs were playing on the shore of Ootsa Lake, not far from a village. One of them, happening to look upwards, was surprised to see drifting down from a great height a spaxpax, one of the long feathers which grow on the upper leg of an eagle.
They idly wondered who would get it, and pressed close together, ready to struggle, boy-like, for the prize, but it eluded their outstretched hands, and lit on the head of one of the boys. Then, to the amazement of all, he was lifted from the ground, as if the feather had been a magnet drawing him aloft. One of his friends seized his ankles and tried to pull him down, but in vain; moreover, he found that he could not release his grasp. A third lad grasped the feet of the would-be rescuer, but he, too, was lifted from the ground. One after another tried to pull down his friends, but none could do so, until finally all the lads were drawn aloft by the feather, each holding the legs of the one above him. Nothing was ever heard of their fate.

A few years later the father of the boy on whom the feather had fallen gave a potlatch, at which he used this event as a xuxuk theme for one of his surviving children. A mask representing the sun was used in the belief that this supernatural being alone could have caused such an event.

[829] and the xuxuk ceremonial through intermarriage with the coastal people of the Skeena River. Their home is said to be far to the north of Ootsa Lake, but, as no Bella Coola has visited them, little reliability can be placed on this statement.

[843] be avoided. If she walks on a beaver dam, or dips her head [825] into a pool made by this animal, the birth of her infant will be blocked in the same way that the dam restrains a stream. This difficulty can be obviated, however, by dipping up the water with her hands instead of bending her head to the surface to drink. As far as possible, she must avoid being startled by [774] small animals or reptiles; even if the excitement so caused is too slight to expel her own spirit, it may be sufficient to damage that of the foetus. Such dangers can be counteracted by means of magical rites (I, p. 700). Her husband is also subject to certain injunctions and prohibitions. If he sets beaver snares his wife's delivery will be difficult. He must preserve a small piece of the skin or an eye of every animal that he kills; a few [846] days after birth the child is stamped in the smoke of a fire on which these articles have been thrown. This prevents injury from the father's quarry.[1]

A pregnant woman continues to reside in her own house, where her condition is a source of interest to her friends and relatives. There are no midwives with inheritable professional 844 prerogatives, but as the time for delivery draws near, arrange-[424] ments are made for the mother or some other experienced female relative to be in attendance. It is quite proper for the husband to attend to this point, though it is customary for elderly female relatives to do so, sometimes those of the wife, sometimes those of her husband. A woman who, having herself borne children, has assisted at many births with success, is often requested to be present, and it is taken as a matter of course that she will be rewarded for her services.

When the pains of labour begin, the patient leaves the house with her assistant or assistants. In summer the party goes to some lonely spot in the woods where a rude wind-break may have been erected; in winter, to a sheltered spot beneath a [171] house. No man can be present, a point in which the Bella Coola state that their culture differs from that of the Kwakiutl. The midwife manipulates the infant so that the birth is made

[1] This rite is described in detail later (I, p. 720).

[533] handles of the metates[1]; symbolizing that they are pals to protect the bride, though the dancers derive no benefit from the pals, which are stacked with others for later distribution to Y's family. A large amount of provisions has been prepared and placed in boxes, one for each member of Y's family. In many cases it is difficult to estimate how much food will be required, and if there is a surplus, it is eaten by the performers and other assistants.

When all are ready they rush forth, dancers, dancers' assistants, and young relatives of X, followed more sedately by his father. The rest of the villagers watch with interest, but do not take part in the ceremony. Choosing a position outside Y's house, the singers hear the tune of the marriage song used by X's ancestors; if the words are known they sing them. Like the propagation of marriage dances, there may not be a marriage song embodied in every origin myth, but if X lacks such he is usually able to borrow one.[2] The keeper of the song is stationed near the singers, ready to help them with the words or the tune, if necessary. Meanwhile the dancers are performing on the sidewalk outside Y's house. Each uses whatever type of dance he chooses, twist, scud, s'alt, or even chance's, but all dance simultaneously, though without paying greater attention to each other than is necessary to avoid collisions. The professional dancers accompany the singing with their high-pitched quaver.

[533] [534] [535] [536] [537]

Meanwhile Y's father, surrounded by his relatives and friends, waits in readiness within their house. Y herself is

[1] The original origin of marriage songs has been described in vol. I, chap. vi. They are less strongly preserved as perquisites than some elements of origin myths, in fact some keepers of the songs are willing to perform or say nothing, although this may be a modern development. The keeper, either man or woman, is chosen by the senior members of the ceremonial family, after discussion with the singers. It is his duty to remember text and tune, and the only pecuniary advantage is from the presents made by those to whom he teaches it. Some songs have words, others only a tune. The text of a song brought down by Mapatsim to Tsadik d'ic:

"Hulo, Sunshine! We do as we have done before. Please make good the path for those who are about to marry."

Mapatsim obtained this song from his heavenly ancestor and used it at his own marriage, as his male descendants have since done.

[534]

In one case where an orphan woman, without relatives, repurchased herself by her own arduous labours, the announcement was made:

"Y's half-bee came to ransom her."

The reference was to the manner in which she had heaped up her clothing with a half-adze working. If Y's father should die after amassing goods to repurchase her, they are used for the purpose intended and the announcement is:

"Y's father's sons-bee came to ransom her."

The uncontrol family descended from the first settlers at Sealth-ó have the prerogative of singing a special song as they ransom one of their daughters. This was used by their first ancestors on a like occasion. The theme is:

"I, I, I am the highest of you all. No one of you is capable of doing what I can accomplish. You all live on what I void."

The significance of this last sentence is that the village of Sealth-ó is furthest up the Salmon Creek River. Its inhabitants used to claim that the people of the other villages lived on the refuse which they threw into the river, a source of pride to them.

After announcing the various relatives who have ransomed Y, the presents are counted and carried into X's house. The statement concerning their number, who has given them, and for what purpose, is repeated to the foreign guests there assembled, and they are then piled indiscriminately in a large heap for future distribution. At this juncture X calls out:

"Come in, come in," as though he were welcoming arrivals from a distance.

Y's relatives arrive, and the ritual of the potlatch continues in the manner already described. The origin myth in which Y's new name is embodied is related in considerable detail, especially its recent history, that is, by whom it was last used and any pertinent items connected with its transmission. If she has received several names from different myths, each is similarly expounded.

As has been said, many women's names have been created

0:96:Slowalk E-1 (922-924)948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

ciety. These are given several times, serving to recall the 533 ceremonies in which the chief took part during his life. At 575 intervals, the new song is repeated and nuxalk members of the 766 audience join in as they become familiar with the words. Frequently one or more relatives of the deceased dance in his [535] stead during the singing. The details of this rite, especially of the songs used in it, differ considerably according to the actions of the person during life; if a mighty chief, the donor of many potlatches, this fact is described in the song, whereas only an incident from the ancestral myth can be used for a young nuxalk. If some of his female relatives are professional [767] wailers, they function during the ceremony. In all circumstances, the rite aims to comfort the grieving kinsmen, an end which it usually achieves.

As already described, nuxalk ceremonial was in a state of 575 transition at the time of the coming of the white man. Pre- 766 vious to that date, a spectacular funeral prerogative had been 177 adopted from Rivers Inlet,[1] which has since been claimed by a 424 number of nuxalk. All the Bella Coola know of this ceremony, [178] and most of them desire to perform it at the death of a dearly loved relative; at the present time this is possible owing to the slight regard paid to prerogatives, but it is certain that a few years ago it would have been forbidden to most people, and that it was never a universal Bella Coola rite.

When this rite is performed, the corpse is allowed to remain 575 in its coffin for at least one night after the day on which 766 Mutakila came and the nuxalk songs were sung. Meanwhile 532 the carpenters have prepared an imitation body, usually of rags on a light framework, and a wooden representation of the deceased's crest. Since this figure is to come through the roof and carry aloft the corpse, stout hooks are attached to its feet.
In theory, the bird or animal disguise used by the first ancestor

[1] One old Bella Coola stated that this prerogative was obtained during his own life-time from a Rivers Inlet chief who moved to Tal'ia. It is impossible to state accurately when this ritual was adopted by the Bella Coola, though it is unquestionably of recent origin.

575 766 981 with to emphasize the importance of this society, some that the deception was always apparent, and that even the hooks and ropes by which the figure was manipulated could be seen. Still others regard the ceremony as a symbolic means of portraying the manner in which a man's crest comes to carry away his spirit and life. It seems clear that different interpretations must always have been accepted by different members of the community. A young and ingenuous initiate, steeped in the atmosphere of the supernatural, may well have believed that he was gazing upon an actual supernatural being, as the senior xaxai desired him to do; others must have recognized that a deception of some kind was being practised, but dramatization is such an important factor in Bella Coola life that individuals often disregard the difference between semblance and reality, and it is contrary to custom for a person to cast aspersions upon the prerogative of another. It is easy for such an one to accept the drama as a symbol or representation of the manner in which the crest carries off the intangible elements of the dead. This is certainly the attitude of the Bella Coola at the present time. Everyone realizes that the crest is of human manufacture and that the corpse itself is not carried away, but the rite is still performed and gratifies the survivors by giving them an opportunity to display their prerogative and the cloak of the deceased's ancestor.

[184]

575 766 Perhaps because of its relatively recent introduction, details of the performance of this rite are not fully standardized. In some cases, the crest is made to appear at the same time as Matakila, instead of at a subsequent ceremony. It is assumed that the origin of the rite is in some ancient myth in which the body was actually taken above by the crest, an act copied, with the aid of carpenters, by the descendants of the person to whom this occurred. There are no myths of this nature current in Bella Coola, although it is thought that such must have been common among the peoples of the outer coast to explain the prevalence of the practice in that area. One old man mentioned that an Owikt myth in which a body became angle down and was walled upwards in psychologically of the type which might serve as basis for a rite of this kind. If the descendants of the person to whom this had happened had determined the incident as subsequent death, a custom analogous to the one here described would have arisen.

[424] [773] [424]

BURIAL OF THE DEAD

There is no fixed time for the disposal of a corpse. When possible, it takes place on the day following death, but as many as four days may elapse if delay is necessary for the performance of the rite just described. Another reason for postponement is the absence of near relatives; if they can be summoned within four or five days, the funeral may be delayed until their arrival. There is always endless discussion concerning the exact details; all relatives and members of the ancestral family take part, though the wishes of a son, brother, or other near kinsman are usually followed. In this, as in so many points of Bella Coola ritual, an influential chief often overrules the desires even of those who are more closely related to the deceased.

Heralds announce the hour chosen,* usually about noon, and the people begin to assemble in the deceased's house, even strangers being welcome. Women wail dolorously, and another indication of the occasion is the bundles containing clothing, cooking utensils, and other articles belonging to the dead person. The lid of the coffin has been left open, but when everything is ready, an elderly man is asked to strike it, once, with a stone; then the lid is closed. Planks have been removed and a hole made in one of the front corners of the house, through which the man throws out the stone. The women redouble their lamentations as an old woman, previously asked to do so, lights a bundle of dyed and undyed cedar-bark and climbs through the opening carrying this. No request has been made for pall-bearers, but any strong man, especially

*This is done at present, even after the carrying away of the "body." In former times it was omitted when the corpse was secretly buried by the canoe.

* 556 mourners may be marked with the same ritual as at a potlatch, but there is always curtailment of round features if rites 764 of that nature are to be omitted.

Meanwhile other preparations have not been neglected. Among the prerogatives embodied in many origin myths, is that of the presence of professional mourners at memorial * 556 potlatches. If mention of these is made in the ancient traditions of the donor's ancestral family, it is a matter of pride for him to do as was done by his ancestors in the distant past. [767] For example, it may be recorded that at the memorial potlatch of some ancient chief, a number of his younger relatives appeared with red paint smeared upon their faces, with finely chopped cedar-bark in the hair, or with bands of the same material across their heads. [768] Myth-time had decreed that they should thus exhibit their grief, and the descendants of the chief have since had the privilege of doing likewise. Such signs of mourning may not, however, be worn without proper validation. It is only the members of the ancestral family who are entitled to don these marks, and among them, only those whose right has been confirmed by the distribution of presents. This is a masculine professional prerogative, known [562] by the same name as the feminine one of uttering a drawing cry to which it is closely akin. The right is verified at memorial potlatches, and the donor of one is glad to do so as a means of displaying his own wealth as well as of making plain the glory of his ancestors to whom the one being commemorated has returned. There is no mention of professional mourners in [967] the myths of many families, nor are they ever as important in [17] Bella Coola as among the Bella Bella and other tribes of the outer coast. If such belong to the family of the donor, he notifies the incumbents and asks them to be ready, although, eager to act, they seldom wait for such an invitation.

533 The most difficult task is the preparation of mourning songs * 556 at which the singers toil for several weeks. The donor first 764 invites them to his house and recounts the myths from which they must be composed. These may include several traditions only for a child, can be employed for a dead child. In this case, the theme describes the efforts of the persons concerpoeate the deceased to the traditions of their ancestors, and the number of times he had been ceremonially marrie. The text of one used a few years ago is:

"We said, Hail! Xwalaxla [the child's name in the Sun] when she was born. What more could we have one? Why did she leave us?"

The text may refer to the prerogative of singing mourn-ers, as in the following:

"Come ye professional mourners, help me to pe voice to my lamentations."

The tunes of mourning songs are usually remembered from year to year, and the singers may merely alter wds to make an old song applicable. In some cases, such compositions are changed so slightly that they become virtually possessions of an ancestral family, and may then be preserved fogenerations until even the history of the tunes embodied i forgotten. Occasionally, ancient relationship between two uch groups can be deduced from the occurrence of the same tunes in their mourning songs, although all traditions of intermarriage have been forgotten. There is considerable difference etween the tunes of deceased and deceasedd; in fact, this dinction may be more important thus the themes, since the litter do not invariably conform to the types just described. A few items of ancestral history may be incorporated into a ong dealing primarily with the actions of the deceased and vice versa. Sometimes four of one type are used, sometimes two of ach. Much thought is devoted to the compositions, the singrs meeting every day to try over and improve one another's eforts. The texts, long and complicated, require much practic, since any error would be an admission of gross inefficiency. These daily rehearsals take place in the donor's house and he is required to provide food for the singers. It is not uncommon to use a song of Bella Bella origin, since the Bella Coolaadmit that members of that tribe excel in compositions o this type.

556 will now be the forms of the one who has recently died. As 769 soon as all have taken their places, an eloquent chief whose [537] aid has been requested for the purpose stands up and recounts the donor's ancestral myth in some detail, mentioning the source and meaning of the mourners' masks and the designs of the totem-poles. Then he continues to the effect that the chief will "cry" by relating the history of his ancestors, which is also the history of the journey taken by his kinsmen, and that [195] this recital will shove him up. The word used for this, sneat- dzakw, is the one commonly employed for raising a heavy burden with the aid of a lever. Then the singers begin to beat [533] out the first of the mourning songs, accompanying it with their voices and assisted by as many of the audience as are familiar with words and tune. Every effort is made to make the singing as impressive as possible to add dignity to the recital of the journey taken by the person who is being commemorated.
The guests listen attentively and are suitably impressed by the ancestral history of the donor and his family. All the songs that have been prepared are sung in succession in the same manner. The lack of dancing distinguishes this type of cere-[535] mony from all others and adds somewhat to its impressiveness.

After the last song is the proper time for validating young [424] relatives of the donor as mourners. One of the miniature [425] totem-poles, which are light enough to be carried in the hands, is brought from the back-room and given to the boy on whom this prerogative is being conferred. An eloquent speaker explains the meanings of the designs so displayed and enough of the family's ancestral history to make clear whence, and how, they were obtained. The singers begin to beat time slowly, and the youth endeavours to keep time with his feet, while he continues to hold the pole.

Meanwhile the donor and his immediate relatives have been arranging the piles of presents with the inevitable counting and [537] re-counting. As at a potlatch, a fluent speaker is commissioned to hold up the objects, state whence they have been obtained, 1 [i.e. - the memorial potlatch - ANALYST]

964
*556
313

"Please stop crying. We have made good your memory. You are a light to your brother. Go to Smamuit where he stands among the abalone-shells far to the south.[a] Thence go overland to Rivers Inlet where a sisnuit will serve as canoe for you.[b] You will see the long house where your ancestor obtained shaman's power."[c]

Meanwhile Reuben Schooner had been out of sight behind the curtain of the stage. After a short interval, he emerged [292]
wearing a blue blanket decorated with mother-of-pearl buttons sewn on in raven design. He was followed by two other influential members of the nuxuit society, Alexander Challaman and Nebuchadnezzar, similarly attired. Reuben began to sing in a low, sad, penetrating voice of considerable musical power and, followed by the other two, walked slowly in a sunwise circle around the hall, all the time shaking his right hand, held projecting outwards at right angles from his elbow. The song was in Bella Bella, and even the singer did not fully understand the meaning, and few of the audience had any idea of its significance. When the three had almost completed the first circuit, someone brought Reuben a rattle, which he clutched in his right hand as he continued his way. The reason of the shaking at once became evident; he should have had a rattle throughout but few of these were left in Bella Coola at the time and it had not been possible to borrow one before beginning his song. Again the three slowly circled the hall, Alexander and Nebuchadnezzar calling out at intervals:
[178]

"Listen to the mourning song of the chief."

After the second circuit of the hall, Reuben paused near the singers and spoke to Alec Davis, a xauxk siki. The latter [424]
rose and stated how the prerogative of siki, including the right to sing, unaccompanied, a mourning song on occasions such as this had been transmitted both to Reuben and his brother Harry from Ae-sti, a Bella Bella chief to whom they were [a] An incident in one of Jessie's ancestral myths.

[b] An incident in one of Jessie's ancestral myths.
[c] An incident in one of Jessie's ancestral myths.

[illegible] through their mother. After a little further discussion, Harry took the cords from his brother and began to sing as he walked around the hall, followed by Alexander and Nebuchadnezzar. Harry was less familiar than his brother with the proper words, but supplied this deficiency by humming. He was also less at ease, and he lacked the musical ability which had made his brother's singing so impressive. After a single circuit, he returned the cords to Reuben, who continued to go around the hall as he sang. This time he paused at intervals, and kept glancing towards the door, his whole attitude betraying that something was interfering with the previously arranged plans. The purpose of the singing was to summon the dead woman in the form of her crest, but she did not appear. In early times those who were not moved were told that the words and music penetrated to the upper regions, reminding the deceased of the grief of his relatives and persuading him to return. This belief had passed away at the time of the ceremony here described, but the fiction was continued, and it had been planned that the representation of the deceased should enter when the song was finished. It later transpired that the delay was due to a number of white people who, having gathered at the doorway, made the performer unwilling to put on his masks and disguise. Reuben continued to sing half-heartedly, and finally cried out:

"Perhaps I have lost my power, it does not come."

Alec Davis, who had previously left the hall, came rushing in and called out in a loud voice:

"Gwanis [Jenie's ancestral name and the one in connection with which she had been made a chief] is coming. She has been to the scenes of her ancestral myths. Her crests have taken her. She comes as Eagle, Raven, and Blackfish, bearing her grandchild."[11]

The speaker is a morose, rather surly individual, usually undignified and often drunk, but on this occasion his manner had changed in a remarkable degree. His eyes were bright, his towed the actor, blowing eagle down over him separately. After one circuit of the hall, the performer passed out through the front door, from the vicinity of which was heard once more the large whistles and the screaming of the eagle, both growing less distinct as if the bird were flying away.

[11]Although not yet dead, all hope had been abandoned for the child's recovery.

The wearer of the mask displayed considerable dramatic talent and succeeded in giving a realistic display in spite of the glaring lights which exposed his bare feet and betrayed the human handiwork of the mask in a manner impossible in the native type of house with a single, central fire as the sole illumination. The Carriers had wrought the performance with interest, probably singed with contempt, but to the Bella Coola it was no mere spectacle, it was a religious rite of the highest importance. All the spectators realized that the figure was human, but this seemed inconsequential as they gazed upon the representation of the dead woman in the form of her crest, to which they believed she had been transformed by death. Even the children were silent, and the only sound during the passage was the wailing of a sleepy infant. The eagle crest belonged to Jessie by virtue of membership in the ancestral family descended from her father's first ancestor, traced patrilineally, who had come to earth at Tsimsit in the form of this bird. The blackfish was a crest acquired through her mother; the raven represented a copper raven belonging to an ancestral myth of the dying grandchild. In former times, carpenters would have worked for weeks preparing an elaborate composite figure, but Captain Schooner wished no delay in the ceremony for fear of police interference, so that it was necessary to use what masks happened to be in existence and to place them in conjunction by means of the crude white sheet. Jessie had not been initiated into the nusuk society, but no opposition was raised to the use of nusuk whistles both on account of her status as chief, and owing to the influence of her father who, a nemsit chief, feared no restrictions and heeded no conventions. Besides, both her brothers were influ-

969
*556 [324]
[178]
[575]
[622]

social scandal. In former times it is certain that objections would have been raised to this breach of ceremonial privilege.

There was a pause for several minutes after the withdrawal of the figure. Then Reuben threw a copper on the floor in the track taken by the actor "to make home for the dead woman." A number of chiefs were forward to join the singers and discuss whether or not the copper should be redeemed. No one wished to do so, so Captain Schooner said he would have it fastened to a post over Jessie's grave, a proposition to which all agreed.

969
*556
585

After interminable discussion in which Captain Schooner, Nebuchadnezzar, Reuben Schooner, Jim Pollard, and Alec Davis took the principal parts, it was decided to sing the fourth mourning song at this point. There was no reason why this should not have been done at the customary time, after the other show, but wide latitude in detail was allowed in this ceremony; in fact, exact ritual never flourished in Bella Coola and has become increasingly rare in recent years. This song had been composed a number of years previously when Captain Schooner had called in the Bella Bella to a memorial potlatch, and great care had been expended on its composition owing to the skill of the guests in songs of this type. The words, altered to fit the circumstances, were phrased as if George and Dan were lamenting the loss of their mother and other relatives.

[178]

"I, we," they ran, "are thinking of our mother, our brothers, our sisters, our mother's brothers, our mother's sisters, our father's brothers, our father's sisters, of all our dead relatives. Please, ye chiefs from abroad, turn your heads, listen to our wail. You revered great ones, let us all cry together. It is we who have called you hither; look upon us."

This song was sung in the manner already described, except that more of the Bella Coola were familiar with the words and tune and could accordingly join in.

969
*556

Meanwhile Captain Schooner, with his sons Reuben and Harry and his grandsons George Nelson and Andy Schooner, had been crouching in a corner of the hall, poring over the money which was to be distributed to validate the ceremony,

Inglewith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEa

777 A visitation is not regarded as an inheritable right, but as a
* 787 tendency; for generations no member of a family may see one of these beasts, but the tradition is preserved, and when one [424] is seen it is recalled that such have been observed by ancestors of the fortunate one. Instances have occurred in which a person has obtained good luck without the tradition of this being in his family, but they are rare. On the other hand, a man may lose the advantage of his possession, even if he own [785] a portion of a mätsqus or a nsiatl, through failure to observe ceremonial chastity.

776 Some of the Bella Coola believe that the mätsqus and the nsiatl are the same animal, which can assume these two forms; others that the two are distinct supernatural creatures. In any case the powers and characteristics ascribed to them are the same. Most families have a tradition regarding the appear-[173] ance of the one or the other to their ancestors, and the infor-[184] mation to be derived from them is always about that particular creature. Hence the details here described are probably not all known to any one individual.

* 789 The different types of appearances, and the different types 811 of taboos called forth, should be noted. These are due to 182 failure on the part of the Bella Coola to rationalize the sum total of their concepts. Each man recounts what he believes to have happened to one of his ancestors or friends, irrespective of whether or not the methods used may be in direct contradiction to those employed by someone else on another occasion. A man who has heard of the mätsqus, for example, from his father and mother, may describe contradictory means of dealing with the creature, and in each case may affirm that disaster would have followed if the method described had not been carried out. Such lack of co-ordination is typical of the Bella Coola.

777 According to an elderly Kimsquit man, the mätsqus was brought down in the beginning of time by one of his own
* 787 ancestors, Omqomkilka. It is to this fact that he attributes [773] his own near approach to one on two occasions. As it is fre-

777 224 elapsed, he fetched his musket from its hiding-place and again began to use it. Thenceforth he never missed his aim; every shot brought down an animal.

Before the days of muskets good fortune could likewise be obtained by the discoverer of the nest of a mätsqwi. Each contains small particles of the skin of all animals, including human beings, plucked from them in their sleep by humming birds and toads. The finder must touch the nest with his stick, such as is always carried by hunters, then break it and throw it away, saying as he does so:

"May I see you at . . . tomorrow." This means next year. He names his favourite hunting-ground. The finder must not say anything to anyone about his discovery, and for one [785] year he must observe continence. If he then goes to the locality mentioned, he will there find his stick, the one which he broke when he touched the nest, though it will be invisible to anyone else. Adhering to its end will be four hairs of the mätsqwi. These he must hide for a year, wrapped in some of his own clothing, taking care that it is an article which he has long [785] worn and which is accordingly saturated with his essence. During this period, too, he must observe continence. Two years after finding the nest, he will be able to hunt with phenomenal success. [424] The knowledge of this proper procedure has been handed down in an ancestral family for many generations.

On the occasion when the two men had seen the nest they 777 continued their journey, each chiding the other for his failure * 787 to take advantage of the opportunity put in his path. Before [776] long they saw a footprint where no man had been and knew that it must be that of Twalältit, the supernatural hunter of mountain goats. In spite of remonstrances, the comrade scraped up a little dirt from the track into his handkerchief. In this he did wrong, especially as he had failed to take advantage of the opportunity presented to him by the nest of the monster toad. That night as the two were encamped a slide came thundering down beside them, and they barely escaped [761] with their lives. Not long afterwards the erring man died,

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

* 756 of these demi-gods of antiquity are favourite themes for stories.
538 The powers of the later shamans have been far less than those of their forefathers, and their exploits have been of a somewhat [173] different character. Hence it is possible to divide the subject into three sections:

(1) Shamanism in the distant past.
(2) Modern shamanism.
(3) Shamans from the dead.

SHAMANISM IN THE DISTANT PAST

Information on this phase is contained in stories and a few anecdotes which describe the achievements of ancient demi-gods, endowed with miraculous powers of various kinds. The tales are similar in type to those dealing with the granting of supernatural aid to the unfortunate, so that it is in many cases difficult to differentiate them. As might be expected these narratives are not exact. Frequently the teller does not know from what being the ancient shaman received his power, nor can he explain the abilities described, which are different from, and superior to, those with which he is familiar. In fact it is customary to describe any mythical hero as a shaman.

[424] Tales of this kind can be related by any one; they are not the personal property of a specific family. Many of them, that of W'aumal-is, for example, are well known and are told and retold constantly.

In addition to information obtained from stories, a few isolated facts are remembered regarding ancient shamans. It
* 756 is thought that various taboos connected with hunting were 228 learnt by them in the distant past. Such restrictions and in-[224] junctions were firmly believed in and strictly adhered to until a few years ago, and many of them are still observed. The usual method of hunting harlequin ducks is, or was until recently, from a canoe, with a sapling set up in the bow to hide the hunter, crouched with bow and arrow in readiness; several shamans, however, were able to kill the birds by merely [262] waving the butt-end of a paddle towards them. Such power

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

CHAPTER X

STORIES ILLUSTRATING THE SUPERNATURAL

Stories Illustrating Supernatural Aid Granted to the Unfortunate —Stories Illustrating Supernatural Good Luck—Stories Illustrating Shamanism

KNOWLEDGE of the contact between supernatural and human beings is based largely upon tales describing such incidents; in fact, generalizations like those made in the last chapter are, as has been already stated, contrary to Bella Coola practice. Such tales are, however, so numerous and so long that their inclusion in the sections describing the kind of experience they illustrate would have made the last chapter unduly cumbersome and confusing. Stories recounting three types of contact with the supernatural are brought together here, not as items of folk-lore, but as basic material to supplement the relevant sections of the last chapter. These legends are not family property, but are considered to be historical incidents which can be related by anyone. 538 787* [424]

Stories Illustrating Supernatural Aid Granted to the Unfortunate

THE GAMBLER'S SUCCESS

Four brothers, of whom the youngest was named Djaodjo·ca, were very fond of gambling with crabapple sticks. They played on all occasions, but with such lack of success that they lost first their goods, then their houses, their mother, their children, their wives, and finally themselves. The three older men went hunting every day, but Djaodjo·ca remained in the house as if he had no heart to do more than lie down and die. Perhaps he had an inspiration; at any rate he was deceiving his brothers, because as soon as they had gone out he used to get up and collect clams which were plentiful below the floor of the house. These were his sole sustenance, but he also chewed the fin of an old salmon, which served to exercise his jaws. Before his brothers' return Djaodjo·ca always lay down in his corner, covered with an old dirty blanket, as if he 525 539* 787*

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

$ 539
$ 787

The woman's husband was not dismayed at her death, knowing she deserved it on account of having spoken harshly to her son-in-law. This was the only occasion on which Tsaiskit killed anyone. After the funeral he said to his father-in-law:

"I am sorry for what has happened. If I had intended to slay your wife I should have done so by means of my supernatural power, whereas her death was caused accidentally by the too-great force latent in my own body."

"Do not let this event trouble you," the other man replied. "We all realize that my wife was in the wrong and thus caused her own death. I will take a new wife from among your relatives, and there the matter will drop."

A year later the marriage took place and the death of Tsaiskit's mother-in-law was thus amicably settled.[1]

THE GOOD FORTUNE OF Yalhal'a

Yalhal'a was very poor. He hunted diligently but was never successful, and the people of the village used to laugh at him. When feasts were given, Yalhal'a received a share, but he was never able to reciprocate, and this preyed on his mind. One day he set out at dawn for the mountains with his stick and his dog, but though he hunted industriously he returned at night with nothing better than herbs to cook for his supper. Undaunted, he set off again the following day, but had no better success, and again brought back only vegetables for his evening meal. He placed these on a stick before the fire to dry, and lay down, weary and depressed. Presently he saw a man enter the house and stand on the other side of the fire; around his head he wore a snake, which stamped him as a shaman. It was Tsaiskit, but Yalhal'a did not know this.

"Yalhal'a, what are you cooking?" asked the visitor.

"Mountain goat liver," he lied in answer.

Tsaiskit next inquired, "Is your dog a good mountain goat dog?"

"Yes," replied Yalhal'a, unruffled. "Every day he goes hunting he kills twenty mountain goats."

"Is your stick a good one?" inquired Tsaiskit.

"Yes," answered Yalhal'a, "I always kill a great many mountain goats with it."

Tsaiskit then suggested that they exchange dogs and sticks. Yalhal'a, though at first unwilling, at length consented, and his visitor went away, leaving his own staff and dog behind.

[173]
[424]

[1] The above is regarded as an historical account, and the descendants of those who figure in the story consider that they have prior rights to relate it. But as it has no ceremonial significance, this claim is not pressed.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

hand, as if it had been a blow from a feather, and wrenched it from his opponent. Another of the brothers likewise struck at him with a pole, but again Qwiwas seized it from his grasp. Then he stretched out one hand, caught the holder of the stick by the neck, and squeezed until the man's head parted from his body. In the same manner Qwiwas killed two more of the brothers, allowing only one of them to escape. His bear friends had been in the vicinity, but help from them was not required.

Qwiwas finished the construction of his eulachon-weirs and then went back to his aunt's house. The brother who had escaped had already brought tidings of what had occurred, and the old woman, fearful of the consequences, angrily asked Qwiwas why he had done such a thing. He quickly quieted her by reminding her that it was she who had led him to think of revenge by telling him of the reason of his father's murder.

Qwiwas remained quietly at home for the rest of that summer and the ensuing winter, but early in the spring he began to build an enormous salmon-weir. The fame of his strength had spread far and near among the coastal people so that many of them came to assist him. The weir was rapidly finished and was a great success. With the wealth of salmon obtained, Qwiwas was able to give numerous potlatches and took for himself the name Łáłáłdja. In course of time he married the daughter of xpayayat.

Qwiwas was a great inventor. The next winter he made a net for eulachon, which he used with great success in the spring. It was the first time that this had ever been done and the pattern he used has since been copied by the Kitamaat people. The following winter his aunt, acting on his instructions, made the first small salmon-net. Not only are the inventions of these two useful articles ascribed to Qwiwas, but also the first use of the bow and arrow, as well as other valuable appliances. After a long life he died, but he is still remembered for his achievements.*

A NEGLECTED OPPORTUNITY

[228] A few Bella Coola believe that supernatural experiences of the foregoing type tend to occur in certain families, although not with sufficient frequency to be called an inheritable characteristic. A middle-aged man who held this belief gave the following account of a personal encounter.

His father had obtained power from a black bear, and once when hunting he himself saw a track of which those footprints were those of a

[224]

*The above differs from the usual tales of this category in that the participants are well known. In consequence their descendants take a family pride in it and tend to add it to the accepted myth of the first Qwiwas, perhaps improperly. Probably it is a tale that members of a certain family have sought to ascribe to their own ancestors.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

has gone contrary to something about which there has been universal agreement for generations. 771 754

To understand Bella Coola medicines it is, therefore, necessary to regard them as concepts deep rooted in tribal history, and made potent by the suggestibility of those who practise them. This can be most clearly illustrated with regard to those effecting death, but is equally true with regard to all medicines, whether curative or causative. 628 [784] [755]

There remain for consideration the sociological aspects of medicines. Knowledge of most remedies has been handed down for generations as the property of ancestral families. Some are acquainted with one or two "cures," some with many, and some with none at all. The name of the discoverer of a particular medicine is usually lost in antiquity, though it is often attributed to someone described in the family's myth. Like other possessions based on mythology, a remedy of this type can be practised by any member of the group to which it belongs. If it is observed that a certain individual is using one of these successfully, others will ask him to apply it for them. Payment is always expected, but the sum varies enormously, depending upon the efficacy of the remedy, the difficulty of operation, the generosity of the person benefited, and so many diverse factors that no general conclusions can be made. A patient may observe the details of the treatment, but unless he is entitled to it, he would never dream of using it himself. This is due not only to honesty, but to the conviction that only a person with the inherited right to a certain cure can perform it successfully. Rarely, such knowledge is sold or given away outright, but, like other possessions of an ancestral family, this usually leads to friction and jealousy on the part of those overlooked. Some of the simple herbal remedies are common knowledge and are used by all, since remembrance of their ownership, if it ever existed, has been lost. At the present time it is difficult to learn details of proprietorship of some medicines, but these are indicated whenever possible. 424 755 757 [614] [465] [614] [425]

846 ating point shall be one year after the birth. Early on the 856 morning of this day, he takes the umbilical cord and goes far 789 into the mountains until he finds a place where the grass is [785] matted and the earth packed, showing that a mountain goat has slept there. He digs a hole, inserts the cord in it, and covers it with stones, praying as he does so:

"Please, father! May my son be skilful, may he be successful in hunting mountain goats."

This has the effect of showing the child where these animals are to be found. The father then returns home.

Four days later he goes back to the same spot, digs up the umbilical cord, brings it home and hangs it in the doorway of the house. Should this be omitted, the child would have an intense longing to hunt in the mountains and would leave home at the first opportunity, but would be unable to return. The cord is left suspended for four days, then taken to the forest and deposited under an overhanging rock where no water can penetrate. It dries in course of time but no further attention is paid to it.

[868] A child so treated begins to hunt birds and squirrels when he is eight or ten years of age, and later follows mountain goats with obsidian-pointed arrows. This medicine has been handed [424] down in certain families for generations. If a parent, not possessing the prerogative, wishes to have it applied to his child, he requests one who is entitled to use it to perform with his son's umbilical cord in the manner just described. He is later paid for his assistance.

A similar, though simpler medicine is for the father to take the fallen umbilical cord to the mountains immediately and bury it beneath stones where a mountain goat has been lying. Four days later he returns to the spot, digs up the cord, and brings it home, thus ensuring that the child will have no fear of the mountains and will be a successful hunter of mountain goats. In such cases it is customary for the mother to preserve her son's cord during his childhood so that he will not become careless.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

789 ceremonial dances without making mistakes. The Bella Bella 856 paint a representation of a wolf's bladder for the same purpose.
[532] The basis of this medicine is the belief that it is the gall-[826] bladder which causes wildness and intelligent fear, and hence that anyone so treated will be careful not to make mistakes.
[825] A bird with a large bladder is thought to be difficult to approach, whereas a deer, which has a small one, or none at all, is often stupidly brave. This medicine is known only to the mem-
[424] bers of certain families and is used for the children of chiefs [622] alone, since errors on the part of others is a matter of little importance.

MEDICINES OF CHILDHOOD

789 Some of the instruction given to boys and girls, and the 856 acts which they are enjoined to perform, are virtually religious, and have accordingly been described in earlier chapters. For 771 example, when a lad washes in the river before daybreak, scours himself with a smooth stone and prays to Alquntäm, he is carrying out what might with justice be called a religious act. If, however, he believes that mere washing is enough to compel some desire or end, it is magical. Different Bella Coola have different sentiments concerning the exact means by which this method causes the desired effect. To some it is unquestionably a true prayer, but in other families it is customary for a father to take his son, when he has reached about eight years of age, and wash him four times, to the accompaniment of the usual prayer. It is believed that this causes the lad to grow up powerful and active, constantly striving for success. This type of washing may be called magical.

789 In the following there is no element of uncertainty; they 856 belong unquestionably to the category described in the preceding section.

To Cause Agility

The following medicine is frequently employed by fathers when their sons are first able to walk:

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

789 morning to whip his son. It is clear, however, that such was 856 regarded as proper by anyone practising this medicine, even though few did so regularly.

MEDICINES APPLIED TO YOUNG DOGS

789 To Cause Ability in Hunting

231 When a bear has been killed and the first incision made for skinning it, take a puppy, force its head inside the opening, and rub it to and fro. Throw the animal into the river and when it has swum ashore, repeat the rite. If this act is repeated four times, the dog will grow up to be a good hunter.

To Cause Ability in Hunting Beaver

Wrap the puppy in the freshly removed skin of a beaver and throw it into the river to the accompaniment of hand-clapping from as many as happen to be present. After submersion for a few moments, remove the bundle and throw it in again. Repeat this twice more. This makes the dog grow up unafraid of water and, accordingly, useful in hunting beaver.

To Cause Disregard of Musket Shots

Lay some black powder at the nose of a sleeping puppy and ignite it. The dog will grow up without fear of musket shots.

To Cause Keen Scent

Slit any kind of salmon so that the liver is exposed and hold the puppy with its nose immediately over this. Make an incision in the tip so that the blood flows freely on to the organ of the salmon. Hold the animal until flies have gathered from all directions to feast upon the fish and fresh blood.

The dog will grow up with the ability to locate game in any direction, just as flies gather wherever there is blood. He will also have their ability to travel without requiring a path. One [424] old man stated that this medicine was the property of an ancestral family, and should be used when a puppy is one month old.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

To Cause Ability in Hunting Mountain Goats

789
281

Steep the freshly removed head of a fisher, wolf, or wolverine in smoke for four days. Break a hole in the top of the skull and hold the puppy's head over this; then slit its nose so that the blood drips down into the interior of the cranium. Release the dog, take the head to the mountains and bury it in the ground beneath a spot where mountain goats have been sleeping. Dig it up four days later and conceal it under a shelving rock where it is protected from the rain.

This medicine causes the dog to grow up with knowledge of the haunts of mountain goats as well as with the bravery of whichever animal was used. This means can be practised only by members of the ancestral families to which it belongs. [424]

To Cause Ability in Hunting Otters or Seals

Obtain the head of whichever is desired, and proceed as described for mountain goats. Instead of burying, place the skull under shelter near a creek much frequented by land otters, or near the ocean where seals are plentiful. It need not be taken up after four days.

To Cause General Ability

This medicine can be applied only by a successful hunter, who expects compensation for his assistance. It is employed when a puppy is about one month old.

Early in the morning the hunter seats himself on a box within the house of the dog's master, his legs stretched out before him. He seizes the puppy firmly and passes it, sunwise, around and under his legs four times, frequently spitting on its nose and kneading it with his hands to make that organ slender. This causes the animal to grow up with good tracking ability, while the passing makes it faithful to its master. Next the hunter seizes the dog by the hind legs and swings it four times, sunwise, over and through the smoke of the fire. This prevents it from being dizzy and afraid of precipitous mountains, but if it yelps as it travels through the air, it will be a poor dog. Finally, the hunter carries it to the river and throws

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

757 (2) Place on the surface of the skin nearest the pain hemlock gum and a human bone taken from that part of the skeleton adjacent to the seat of the discomfort.

[424] This medicine is the property of several ancestral families and can be used only by members of them.

For Stomach Trouble and Rheumatism

Scrape in the earth a hole about six inches deep and six feet in length. In the bottom deposit a large number of hot stones and cover them with a thin layer of river sand mixed with fine gravel. On these place as many herbal medicines as possible; such as nettles, devil's club bark, western dock, cottonwood leaves, green moss-like growths from water-covered stones, bark from spruce saplings, and the debris from cones eaten by squirrels. The actual ingredients vary according to season; in winter, for example, only one or two may be available. Mats are thrown over the plants for the patient to lie upon, covered by additional ones. A helper is always present to sprinkle him with water when the heat becomes too great and to rub away the sweat which pours off with a sponge of undyed cedar-bark. Instances are remembered of patients going to sleep in this type of sweat-house and being severely burnt.

For a person who is very ill, the hole is dug within the house, near the central fire, otherwise it is located at any convenient spot in the woods. This remedy is known to, and can be used by, everyone.

For Stomach Trouble and Water in the Blood

Dig a hole about three feet deep and with the same diameter. Throw hot stones in the bottom and place a rack of crossed and tied sticks across the excavation below the level of the ground. On this place medicinal herbs as described in the last remedy. The patient squats over the hole, enclosed in a tent-like shelter of mats or cedar-bark. Water is thrown on the stones and the enclosure prevents the resultant steam from escaping.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

This type of smoke-house, which can be used by anyone, is usually built in the forest. The Bella Coola have great confidence in the use of one as a means of curing all types of internal ailments, especially from the bad effects of water which is believed to have entered the blood. In former years many patients were blinded by the steam affecting their eyes, so that a recent improvement has been the construction of a door-like opening through which the head projects. Many stories are told of people being cured in this way after a white doctor had abandoned hope. 757

No Bella Coola had heard of a smoke-house large enough to contain more than a single individual, and a question whether they were ever used as meeting-places was regarded as highly humorous and absurd. [343]

For Ailments of the Heart

The patient must eat some of his own excrement mixed with certain herbs, of which it was impossible to learn the species. This remedy can be used only by the members of certain ancestral families. [424]

For the Blood

The following medicine is the property of certain families; consequently, anyone else who wishes to use it must obtain the services of an owner to apply it, and must recompense him for so doing. [424]

The man who is to apply the remedy locates a pond where water-lilies are growing and then searches for four spruce saplings growing in line, approximately east to west. He cuts four branches from the east side of each tree and lays these beside the pond with a small space between each bunch. Then he pulls up some lily roots, lays them in the three gaps between the boughs, and wraps the whole into a bundle with a cord consisting of alternate strands of dyed and undyed cedar-bark which he winds around, clock-wise. On returning home, the practitioner must not carry his burden through the door but 757 throw it in through the smoke-vent. He cuts the roots into thin slices which are boiled in water for four days. The patient drinks several cupfuls of the decoction which never fail to benefit him.

[776] The basis of this medicine is the belief, already described, that when a sisiutl swims through a pond it frequently sheds [773] some of its scales which become water-lilies. They are, therefore, potent in themselves and are of greatest benefit to one who has practised ceremonial chastity. The patient must observe several taboos for forty days after treatment: He must hold no sexual intercourse; must eat neither salmon nor meat that has not been smoked; must eat nothing cooked either by a menstruating woman or by one who has lost her husband within a year; and must not approach a girl during the year following puberty. The breaking of one of these taboos causes [761] his death, and the man who has administered the medicine watches the conduct of his patient with great care.

755 For Debility (two means)

(1) Drink strong, stale urine, mixed with red rock-paint ground fine.

Knowledge of this medicine has been handed down for [424] generations in certain familes. It is said to be most unpleasant to take.

(2) The following medicine, said to be the most potent known to the Bella Coola, is used for a person who has long been feeble, especially if he has been spitting blood. It is the [424] property of several ancestral families, and must be administered by an elderly male member of one of them.

The owner of the remedy obtains a dry, clean skull, places within it a little water which he brings to a boil with hot pebbles and adds a small quantity of mountain goat marrow. The patient is given a dry stick, about three feet in length, from which the pith has been extracted to make a tube. With this he sucks four times, swallowing a little of the decoction, while the practitioner says to the skull:

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

grave. When, presently, he feels sick and believes that the ghost has caused the malady, he throws the object he has obtained on a fire and allows the smoke to drift over his body. It is not known how this destroys the power of the dead victim. 755 775

At present (1922), in case of unexpected death in which murder is suspected, the relatives keep the body under lock and key and watch carefully to see whether anyone tries to gain access to it. To endeavour to do so would be considered proof of guilt. For the same reason, they may place boards over the grave and watch it for several weeks. As already described, a middle-aged woman died unexpectedly in 1922. Her father, believing that she had been murdered, expressed the opinion that a certain man was the criminal and that he would die within a year. He outlived this period by three weeks and it was generally agreed that the power of thought had been sufficient to cause the death. Apparently, the father shared this view and expected the ghost of the alleged murderer to be hostile, for he made two efforts to enter the shed where the body was lying, but the relatives of the deceased foiled him by locking all doors and windows. When he himself died a few weeks later, it was taken for granted that the ghost had exacted vengeance. [695]

To Cure a Malady Caused by a Sorcerer

The most complicated medicine about which information was obtained was one employed by an elderly Bella Coola who had incurred the enmity of a sorcerer. The latter had succeeded in breaking a triangular bone in the man's chest which would have caused his death if his mother had not consulted an old woman who knew the proper remedy for such an ailment. This knowledge had been handed down in her family for generations and she was rewarded lavishly for her services. It will be convenient to refer to the patient as X and the old woman who treated him as Y. 755 [424]

X's mother requested the services of Y who agreed to assist and called upon her husband to help her. They scoured the 755 of water in which had been boiled eight splinters from a coffin. She would have obtained two from each side, and two from each end, in each case inserting the point of a crooked knife to pry loose a fragment of the wood, and then pulling it off in the same direction as the sun travels. It would have been immaterial from which aspect the first had been taken, but Y would have been careful to move around the coffin from east to south to west to north, corresponding to the course of the sun.

It is believed that no one has now the ability to use this cure.

Sorcerers

754 Among the causative medicines of which knowledge has been handed down in various families for generations are secret [424] means of killing. Every sorcerer must have such a possession, but he is not so branded unless he begins to exercise his powers for anti-social purposes. For example, if it be known that a [575] certain individual is able to cause death, the members of the kusiut society are eager to admit him to their group, so that his ability will be at their disposal to punish anyone who breaks their regulations. Likewise, if a chief decides that a certain [622] man should die, the power of his thoughts may suffice to cause the death, but the desired end will be effected more certainly by requesting aid from the owner of a means of killing. Such [956] an individual is frequently a shaman who is only too glad of an opportunity to exhibit his powers. The following methods of execution are said to have been employed socially, that is, with the connivance or at the request of chiefs or the members of the kusiut society:

(1) The executioner scratches for four successive nights on the door of the victim's house. If the latter suspects what is to take place, he may endeavour to escape by remaining awake which renders the scratching powerless. It is said that no one has been able to remain sleepless for more than three nights which gives the killer his opportunity.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

by their owners for safety. Judas, an old Bella Coola believed to be a sorcerer, has been seen to scrape up the moist earth where a man has urinated; in former times anyone doing such a suspicious act would have been killed. The article obtained is hidden and kept for future use, and if the practitioner wishes to inflict pain or death, he places it in contact with some potent medicine. Human bones are frequently employed for this purpose, although the most powerful is said to be grease obtained by boiling flesh cut from the inner side of the thigh of a recently buried corpse. To obtain either of these, graves must be robbed, another reason for hating sorcerers. 754 [685]

Secrecy is essential, so a sorcerer is usually assisted by his children, and in this way he has a better chance of obtaining articles belonging to different people without arousing suspicion. The necessary knowledge can accordingly be transmitted from generation to generation, sometimes without the slightest inkling of it becoming known. Even if a man is found out, he may be able to bribe his discoverer to silence. [424]

Sometimes two from different tribes work in partnership to lessen the danger of practising their rites near the village of a victim. For example, a Bella Coola sorcerer may send an article to an accomplice in Bella Bella for placing in contact with strong medicine; this causes the victim to languish and die while the person responsible continues his usual routine of life around the village, suspected by no one. The commencement of such a partnership is a matter of great difficulty, since anyone who admits his crimes places himself in the power of his confidant. Sometimes, however, rumours that a certain individual is practising malevolent magic reach a foreign sorcerer who needs an accomplice. If he considers that the information is authentic, he may admit his own prowess and suggest that they work together. Such an arrangement is profitable to both parties, and a partnership so formed may continue for generations. 648 754

Sorcerers display considerable ingenuity in arranging that their skill shall bring them pecuniary benefits as well as the 754 756

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

women listening from the village are able to tell how many have been caught from the number of times the cry xak'loi is raised. 226 796

Then the salmon are cut up (only shell knives may be used for the purpose) and cooked. Everything must be used, heads, bones, and entrails, the only refuse being the blood which is scraped from the leaves and carried into the woods. The leaves themselves, and the strings of dyed and undyed cedar-bark are thrown into the river in accordance with a desire expressed by Noäkxnm long ago. When everything is ready for a meal, the men take their places in two rows, facing each other across a coarse bark mat. Bark spoons have been provided, and when the heralds call for food, the fisherman brings the heads of the salmon and the guests make the motions of eating, though in reality these parts are dried and kept for winter. Boxes containing a liberal portion of the choice meat are next served and all eat freely. Each guest puts on one side what he has not consumed as if to carry it away, as is the custom at an ordinary feast, though his share is really left in the shelter until the following day. Finally, a third course is provided, the back of the fish cooked with the bone in position. Like the last, the guests eat as much as they desire and pack up the residue as if to take away. Then they leave the Spring Salmon House. [412] 226 796 574 [251]

All the fish are not cooked on the one occasion. The following day the fisherman again calls back the men of his village. The same type of meal is served, but this time the guests carry away what they do not eat for the benefit of their families. This portion may be eaten by the women without affronting the salmon. [562]

This rite has not been performed in full detail in Bella Coola for many years, and it was impossible to collect information on some points. It is uncertain, for example, whether this ceremony was carried out by every fisherman or whether there used to be certain individuals with the prerogative of dealing with the first catch. The latter appears to be the most logical 226 796 424

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

226 manner, and was definitely stated to be the case by one well-796 informed old man. It is clear, however, that every spring salmon was landed with the cry of xak'loi·, taken to the Spring [424] Salmon House, and cut up by the men until the time when women were allowed near the river. Another old man stated [574] that the feast took place at night and that only the heads and [251] refuse of the first catch were eaten, the remainder being dried for the winter. Women of child-bearing age were not allowed [562] on the river bank, and were rigorously excluded from the Spring Salmon House until the time when the sun's shadow reached a diagonal scar on the slope of one of the mountains on the north side of North Bentinck Arm. This occurs about August. From that time onwards, there was no calling of xak'loi·, and women, except those who were taboo, could cut salmon freely on the bank. It was even stated that refuse of salmon could be thrown into the river after that time. No one knows the origin of this seasonal prohibition, or why it should end when the sun reaches a certain point, but it was faithfully observed in former times.

In Kimsquit similar rites were carried out, the chief variation being that the bodies of four swans were placed in the Spring Salmon House and the fish laid with these at intervals in the line. Moreover, the youth used to bite the back of each salmon as he presented it with the cedar-bark streamer. The same regulations with regard to drinking water, and crying after eating, were enforced for spring salmon as for olachen.

Miscellaneous Beliefs

372 The following miscellaneous beliefs and customs cannot be assigned to any special aspect of Bella Coola life:

If a spark from a fire jumps out and lights on a person's hand, it is said:

"The fire wants to give you [the person on whom the brand has fallen] food."

827 If a man sneezes repeatedly, it is said:

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

535 contact with supernatural beings, so that it is a time for grave
*575 thoughts and decorous behaviour. Even by day the members
796 pass from house to house with dignified mien, not loitering [787] around the sidewalks nor indulging in frivolity. Every effort is made to prevent quarrels between members who are expected to show by their appearance and actions the gravity of the rites in which they are engaged. Night after night they assemble at the house wherein the dance is taking place; those who have performed, and are therefore most closely in touch with the supernatural, even sleep there, not returning to their own houses until March. A dance usually lasts four nights, and during that time the performer's house, in which it takes place, is termed a nuqpik, "An Empty House." The significance of this designation is unknown.

178 Membership in the society depends on a duly validated
*575 ancestral prerogative to perform one of the many kusiut dances.
[424] At the present time every Bella Coola is a kusiut, even babes in arms being initiated, but formerly no one was admitted until he or she had reached an age of discretion. Some informants went so far as to say that the hair of an initiate must have begun to turn grey, and all agreed that no one was ever admitted until at least twenty, or more often, twenty-five years of age. Initiates were frequently still older; one woman, for example, stated that her mother was past the age of child-bearing before admission. Since only a member of the society [551] could be called by a kusiut name, the uninitiated continued to be known by the ancestral names conferred on them at infancy until they received kusiut designations. The importance of the 178 society depends on the belief of the uninitiated in the super-*575 natural powers of its members, and as there are now none to 796 impress, the rites carried out today are little more than pic-
128 tures of what took place years ago. It is the aim of the Bella Coola to carry out the dances as if uninitiated persons were in attendance, and since most of the following information was obtained from men who well remembered their sensations when not members of the society, it is justifiable to use the present

2: McIlwraith K-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 the hair from his head. After various rites which prove that 796 the Cannibal actually possesses peculiar power, he is calmed and songs are sung describing what he saw aloft, and the 781 dangers from which he escaped. The uninitiated shiver sym-[787] pathetically, marvel at his valour, and anticipate with mixed feelings the time when they too may be privileged to have similar experiences. Or they may witness the killing of one of their fellow-villagers by disembowelling, and his restoration to life. They know the victim; under ordinary circumstances he could not endure death, hence the claim that his strength is due to the call given him by his patron is accepted as an obvious fact. The uninitiated never suspect that they are victims of an elaborate deception. At all times the kukusiut are eager to [766] make known their own perils, and if it happens that a member [761] of the society dies while in concealment, his corpse is buried secretly. The explanation given is that he has succumbed to some of the dangers to which kukusiut are exposed, a fiction readily believed in view of the absence of the usual funeral rites.

*575 Though it is common knowledge that the ability of a kusiut to perform any extraordinary feat has its source in the per-778 formance of the same feat by his supernatural patron, yet it is 787 equally well known that his specific power has been brought to this earth and is located in one particular spot. An ancestor •424 must in some way have come in contact with the patron, and at that time his kusiut name, carrying with it the prerogatives of supernatural patronage and of dancing on this earth, was deposited for safe-keeping in a repository, nuxkāsiutsis (also called nuxsi'ipsts), by the supernatural woman Ana'kāwulsaix.
Each repository is thought of as a cave, or hollow, beneath a large tree, a rock, or other distinctive natural object; to obtain his power a kusiut initiate must go there, actual contact with his patron being unnecessary. Every kusiut prerogative has its [776] repository and in each of these is Ana'kāwulsaix; she is one, yet capable of being simultaneously in many hundred spots, corresponding to the many hundred kusiut prerogatives. Her functions are to guard the names, and to keep in touch with the patrons. Every uninitiated person believes that if he could only have the good fortune to find a repository, he would obtain the kusiut prerogative there localized. Ana'likwolsaix travels only during the ceremonial season when she is present at every kusiut dance in the form of a woman with a long, thin face and pointed chin (see Plate 13),[4] who "explains" the significance of the figures to the uninitiated in a peculiar high-pitched voice. She is well able to do so since as guardian of repositories she knows the prerogative of each member of the society. Frequently she shocks the uninitiated: 575* 787 424 [778] [776]

"Ha! Ha! Ha!" she jeers. "You [naming some ambitious youth], you who think yourself so smart, you nearly fell over me that time you walked up in the woods behind the village looking for grouse. If I had been a bear I could have felled you with a blow of my paw. How can you ever hope to become a kusiut like your father and grandfather if you are so blind."

His fellows are inclined to join in the laughter at the one singled out for Ana'likwolsaix's scorn, but she flays them all in turn. "She" is, of course, a kusiut chosen for fluency and ability to make biting remarks. Parents tell their children that in the autumn, pleased at the sight of falling leaves, Ana'likwolsaix bares the roof of her house and sits shaking her fingers like a dancer. [776]

"Go to the woods and look for her," they say. "If she sees you she will say 'tru' and beckon to you. Then you will become a kusiut."

To further this deception, kukusiut are accustomed to disguise themselves as Ana'likwolsaix and move around in the autumn forest, taking care that no uninitiated comes too near for safety. An individual may have several kusiut prerogatives, and if he wishes to transfer one of these to an associate, the report is circulated that the recipient has stumbled upon the repository of the donor. The latter then acts as if he were crazy, and the uninitiated are told that he is a nuhaxem, an 575* 778 425

[4] [See category 116, p. 84(A) - ANALYST]
(Apparently Plate 1 is meant)

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 untranslatable word with the significance of "One who has 778 suffered loss through faulty concealment [of his repository]."
Some of these vaults[1] are said to be dangerous to the unin-425 itiated who avoid them and in this way the sanctity of some [784] chiefs' meeting-places is guarded.

According to Kimsquit belief, Ano°likwelsaix has a hus-
*575 band, Ałmoqłaikila, who dwells with her in every repository.
778 If an uninitiated person should chance to find a vault, he falls 776 dead before the power emanating from Ano°likwelsaix. Her husband then restores the dead by blowing violently on the back of the victim's neck, accompanying this with cries of hoip. When a person is initiated into the kusiut society, the uninitiated hear the songs used, in many of which are references to the experiences of the novice with this supernatural pair.

*575 Turning now to the manner in which the kukusiut regard their own society, it is evident that the most important duty of each member is to aid in impressing and deceiving the uninitiated. The prestige of the organization depends upon the ability of its members to inspire awe, hence any weakness in fulfilling this obligation is an anti-social act. For this purpose the society acts as a whole. Many kukusiut have, for example, [424] Cannibal prerogatives, and on occasion the Cannibals, having the same functions, work together, but they do not form a separate organization of their own.[1] Many of the means employed to deceive and impress the uninitiated have already been described. Mythology records, and it appears to be a [773] fact, that long ago the ascendancy of the kukusiut was often [178] challenged by the a'alk and other uninitiated, but when the white man came the society had reached a position of such eminence that the powers of its members were unquestioned. Moreover, the combined strength of virtually all the seniors of the tribe was so great that an uninitiated person could not assert himself even if he was suspicious.

[688] Although members of the society exert every effort to con-

[1] The Bella Coola state that such sub-societies are found among the Kwakiutl.

[1] [i.e. - a repository of supernatural power - ANALYST]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 781 626 their faces. In spite of what he may have seen, the lad cannot rid himself of the supernatural fears with which he has been inculcated from childhood, and the experience is terrifying to a degree. It may be that he has seen some of the whistles, and thereby learnt that the strange sounds are made by men, not by supernatural beings. In this case he is shown their mechanism in detail, and warned of the dire fate which will befall him if he tells others of his knowledge. Fear impels him to silence, and at the same time he realizes that what he has discovered has placed him in a superior position to that of his former associates. He feels, too, that he has been admitted into the ranks of the society in which his father, grandfather, and ancestors have distinguished themselves, and that it would be desecration to make light of what they have held sacred. Finally, an initiate does not at first grasp the fact that all the rites are deceptions, and by the time that this is apparent to him he has become so thoroughly a part of the organization that he has no thought of betraying his associates, upsetting a vital part in the complicated fabric of Bella Coola life, and exposing himself to ruin and death. A logical white man might think these considerations insufficient, but the existence of the society proves that the varied motives operate so strongly that a young man does keep silence. Some informants state that hypnotism was formerly used to ensure obedience. [828]

*575 176 781 424 The kukusiut are always ready to deal with an emergency such as sometimes occurs in spite of every precaution. It is remembered that about one hundred and fifty years ago during a dance at the village of Nuqâxmâtz, a figure, representing one of the supernatural beings, had the misfortune to drop his mask, the strings by which it was tied having worn through. The house was crowded with uninitiated to whom the deception at once became apparent. For a moment there was wild confusion, but the senior kukusiut rose to the occasion and closed the door, allowing no uniniciatnd person to leave. Then a kusiut was sent out with a whistle which he sounded as if the supernatural being of which it was the voice was growing

Hollowell E-1 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

nearer and nearer, till finally a thump was heard on the roof. 575*

O....., cried out the kukuxiut, "it is my patron." 176

The uninitiated were told that in consequence of the disaster, the supernatural beings had sent calls to this earth for all within the house. Even small children were admitted on this occasion. Those kukuxiut in whose families were dormant prerogatives at once explained to their relatives that the call was from the patron of one of these, and that henceforth the person addressed was a protégé of that being. But even with the assistance of all the kukuxiut, there were not sufficient privileges for all who had seen the accident. The explanation hastily agreed upon for those who could not otherwise be provided with prerogatives, was that a supernatural being mentioned in the myth from which the uninitiated had derived his ancestral name had come as patron. Repositories were stated to exist in various places near the village for the designations thus created, and order had been restored before morning. This event was described by so many informants that its historical accuracy can hardly be challenged. Those so initiated were said to have become "kukuxiut under easy circumstances"; as prerogatives they had merely the right of singing about their respective patrons, not of performing any particular dramatic dance, but they were, none the less, fully qualified members of the society. The prestige and influence of this organization can be estimated by the fact that it was thus able to carry through a wholesale initiation without its secrets becoming known in adjacent villages. Those admitted, though realizing that deception was being practised, were so overawed by the other members of the society that they accepted what was told them without question, entirely failing to use their common sense. Thus, this incident, which had at first threatened disaster, ultimately reacted to the advantage of the kukuxiut. It is true that their prestige was somewhat diminished by the admission of young people, but in compensation they claimed many new patrons, including several regarded with veneration owing to their occurrence in ancestral myths. Since the latter 575*
176

2:Mc:Ilwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1968
NEK Ballarenia NEK

Not knowing where to go nor what to do, he hid himself on a small island within sight of the village whence he could see and hear the people seeking him. At times some of his kukusiut friends came close, calling his name; but not till he was driven to do so by hunger did he reveal his hiding-place. Then he answered the shouts of two men who at first pretended they were merely seeking him because of the worry his prolonged disappearance was causing his parents. Once the lad was within their grasp they carried him swiftly to the house of one of the chiefs, where he found himself seated among the most influential men of his village with the door barred behind him. The fear which any youth would feel in like circumstances was increased greatly by the awe with which he, as an uninitiated person, regarded the kukusiut, especially on this occasion when he knew that he had roused their anger. 575* [781]

"What did you hear?" asked one of the marshals. The lad was too terrified to lie, so he blurted out all the gossip he had overheard, including the news of the death of the Rivers Inlet Cannibal.

"You have heard too much, you must join us," continued his questioner.

The same man then asked one of his relatives whether he would "buy" the lad from them, that is, whether they would provide the necessary goods to have him initiated. It was understood that through his improper knowledge he had come under the jurisdiction of the kukusiut and that, unless made one of them, they would kill him. The lad was the protégé of his uncle who at the time was initiating him into the susek ceremonial, and who accordingly was most unwilling to have his nephew made a kusiut. [688]

"Let him be a spy," said the uncle.

After much discussion this proposition was agreed to; the decision was facilitated by the fact that one of the lad's ancestors had been a spy. All night he was kept sitting in the centre of a group of elders who revealed to him the mysteries of the organization and showed him the whistles and other regalia. For twenty years this man remained a spy, dutifully informing upon any over-inquisitive, uninitiated person.

The informant was more than sixty years of age when he related this incident, but the passage of time had not caused him to forget the utter terror and feeling of inferiority experienced when he was taken into the presence of the senior kukusiut. [781]

Although every kusiut assists in preserving the dignity and awe of the society, this duty is especially the function of those members who are regarded as the earthly representatives of 575* 424 776

J. McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEb Bellacoola NEb

*575 Ano°likwolsaix. They may be termed marshals of the society. [424] Each must have an ancestral prerogative for this, duly validated by presents to the kukusiut, in addition to a kusiut prerogative of some kind. [776] In each village there are four or five of these men. Whenever food is being served at a kusiut dance, the marshals receive theirs first and then one or other of them addresses the audience in slow and impressive style, beating on the floor with a stick to add emphasis to his words. He admonishes his fellows to safeguard the ancient rites of the society, to be bold, to be secretive, and he pays honour to the member who has given the dance. It is they who take the leading part if a youth is dragged away to the meeting-place for initiation, and it is they who arrange matters when a spy reports that a non-member is over-inquisitive. *575 688 If any member of the society should break one of its laws at a time when no uninitiated are present, the marshal is expected to seize a burning stick from the fire and strike the offender with it. If death should result, revenge is unthinkable, since the criminal had broken the law. The same fate is unhesitatingly meted out to any kusiut who should dare to betray any of the mysteries to the uninitiated. Moreover, it is the marshals who decide whether any improper act lowers the dignity of a dance, and punish accordingly. Not many years ago a kusiut woman gave birth to a child while a dance was taking place and the infant was slain by one of the marshals. [761] The usual explanation made to the uninitiated for a death within the dance-house is that a supernatural being caused the roof to fall and kill the victim.

*575 Each marshal has, in connection with his prerogative of this vocation, a professional name, used only within the house 551 where a kusiut dance is taking place and carefully concealed [424] from the uninitiated. Some designations were obtained from Ano°likwolsaix by an ancestor of the possessor, others were created on this earth with reference to some specific event, and [553] duly made valid by presents to the kukusiut alone. Some of these names are:

Xwolsukmis, "The Destroyer," so given on account of an

A. McDowell E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 only by members of the same tribe. The Bella Coola firmly 648 believe that if, for example, there is a serious disaster at 688 Qomqo·ts, that village will be raided by the people of Bella
721 Bella, Fort Rupert, Kitkatla, or by tribes even farther away.
[628] News of the accident reaches Täl·io or Kimsquit and the inhabitants, themselves related by blood to the offenders and therefore unwilling to punish them, call upon the members of a foreign tribe to do so. On different occasions this statement, in practically identical terms, was made by six independent informants, so there appears to be not the slightest doubt as to the belief of the people in this law. But when specific cases were asked for, they could not be obtained. It therefore appears clear that the Bella Coola, probably owing to long teaching on the part of the kukusiut, consider that an error in ritual is sufficient to bring punishment from an alien tribe. There must be some basis of truth in this conviction, and it is highly probable that the kukusiut must have taken advantage of raids to explain to the uninitiated that these were caused by disasters in ritual. One informant was of the opinion that, following the collapse of a house at Kimsquit during a Cannibal dance, a Bella Coola chief called upon Tcabsa, chief of the Kitkatla, who raided Kimsquit in punishment. Quite apart from the belief inculcated in the uninitiated, it is obvious that tribes eager for war sometimes used an accident as pretext. The Bella Coola know of no case in which they raided a foreign tribe for this reason, although they state that if they had been called upon to act as punisher, they could not have refused.

*575 Leaving now the functions of the society as a whole, the
● 424 rights of an individual member can next be described. Each 425 kusiut has:
553

(1) A Kusiut Name. Like every other prerogative, a name of this type can be acquired from father, uncle, grandfather, or other relative, or even by a son from his mother. As a rule a kusiut wills his designation or designations, for a man may [556] have several, before death and his wishes are observed. Although the cost of validating such a prerogative is less than a potlatch, yet a Cannibal dance, for example, entails considerable expenditure, so a man entitled to give such a ceremony frequently lends his right to another, or it may lie dormant for generations. Like other loaned prerogatives, failure to return is a frequent cause of feud. A man frequently gives away a kusiut name-prerogative, and if he should give away all of them, he becomes legally an uninitiated. In such a case it is customary for his wife, or some relative, to give him a new kusiut prerogative, as is likewise the case when a master causes a slave to be initiated. A name is sometimes given to a person who resembles a deceased relative of the donor.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575* 424 425 553 [556] [578] [426]

(2) A Patron, omätuts. Little need be said on this point. The words of the songs used by the dancer often describe his patron, always couched in mystical terms for the benefit of the uninitiated. If the supernatural associate performs any type of dance at the gathering above, so can his protégé perform on this earth, otherwise his power is limited to singing of the being. If an individual inherits prerogatives with the same patron from two different relatives, he can merge these to give a composite dance, with consequent additional power. Greedy individuals sometimes illegally add features to which they are not entitled, a cause of bitter feelings. Or one individual may own several prerogatives with different patrons. Although most kukusiut have only one, yet two or three are not uncommon and one case is known of a man with six distinct patrons. The uninitiated believe that from any one of these may come the call giving him the power to perform.

575* 424 776 [533] [535] [578]

(3) A Repository. In this subterranean shelter his name remains, guarded by Änoºlikwolsaix. An individual with several prerogatives has a repository for each.

575* 424 778

Although the kukusiut are aware that much of their ritual is deception, it is clear that they believe in the supernatural origin of their rites, and that their ancestors actually had the abilities which their descendants of today imitate. In time

[773] [781]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

this undoubtedly leads them to believe in the powers which they claim. Each kusiut prerogative has had one of three origins:

(a) It was brought down by the first people. Before coming to this earth each of them saw in the land above his patron, who instructed him in a type of dance, and told him where his repository on this world would be. It is assumed that the earliest men were in contact with all the supernatural beings before coming to this earth, but it is believed that each was "blind" to the patrons of his fellows, and thus had only one.

(b) It was derived from an experience with one of the supernatural beings of this world. In this case the repository was either at a spot indicated by the apparition, or at the actual scene of the vision.

(c) A powerful chief sometimes altered an ancestral to a kusiut name. It is believed that this occurred comparatively frequently in ancient times when chiefs had semi-supernatural power. In such cases each followed his own inclination in the choice of a patron,[4] and usually made his own repository within his house, giving strength to it by killing and burying a slave there. Although several Bella Coola informants described this, Kimsquit Indians denied that it could ever have taken place. They say that all repositories were long ago dug by Nunudjixnim, a male supernatural being sent down by Alquntäm at the beginning of time to prepare the habitations of Änoºlikwolsaix and her husband. After doing this, he returned to the land above where he has since resided.

It will thus be seen that the prerogative of a kusiut is always derived from some experience of an ancestor. In carrying out the rite, the dancer feels that he is continuing the works of his forbears, a factor which increases his desire that neither error nor carelessness on his part shall dim the prestige of the society before the uninitiated. And, further, a man who has spent [4]The Bella Coola cite such actions as proof of the amazing abilities of their ancestors.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

years in deceiving, undoubtedly begins to convince himself that he is different from lesser mortals. 575* 778

Before describing in detail initiation into the kusiut society, and then the ritual of various dances, it will be convenient to outline the type of ceremonial, although emphasizing the fact that each differs so much from every other that lengthy descriptions will be necessary later on. When a person has been initiated, either in the proper manner during the ceremonial season or as a "shaman" during the summer, he is known as a lsix, a novice, until the kusiut dances of the next winter. During this period he wears certain distinctive cedar-bark ornaments and is expected to keep himself somewhat apart from the uninitiated. He is always required to give his ceremonial during the first dance season after initiation; by so doing he ceases to be a novice. In later years a kusiut can suit himself whether or not to perform. Having once done so, he is a fully qualified member of the society, nor does he increase his rank in direct proportion to the number of his ceremonies. It is true that one who often dances hears himself praised by the marshals, and gains a certain amount of fame among his fellow kukusiut. But no matter how often he may perform, he cannot become a chief, with prestige spread far and wide among neighbouring tribes, nor can he increase the fame of his ancestors by adding lustre to his ancestral names. Thus the benefits are not sufficient to urge a man to concentrate on kusiut ceremonials in preference to potlatches. The society is essentially one in which a relatively poor man can display his semi-religious prerogative equally with a chief. Usually, a man performs a complicated ritual, such as that of a Cannibal dance, three or four times during his lifetime; less onerous ones in which no dramatic theme is presented may be more often given.

575* 796 [301] 575* 796 556 575* 796 424

A man who proposes to give a dance must always notify one of the marshals of his village, who summons his fellows, some of the senior members of the society, and chiefs who are also kukusiut to discuss the intention. If it entails one of the

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

*575 more difficult dramatic rites in which failure would lead to the 796 uninitiated learning the mysteries of the society, the matter is debated at length. The writer was present at one meeting held 424 for this purpose, with regard to a performance which had not been carried out for over thirty years. An air of solemnity was evident throughout, as if each present realized the gravity of the topic. The prospective dancer explained what he wished to do, then anyone was at liberty to comment, and most of those present took advantage of it, the marshals speaking last of all. The influence of each speaker depended in part on the [554] type of kusiut dance which he himself had given, and in part on his general status in the community as chief or otherwise, an intangible position dependent on public estimation rather than upon functional rights. In this case, after considerable discussion, it was decided that the dancer could proceed with his arrangements. But if there should be any doubt as to the would-be performer's ability, the marshals have no hesitation in prohibiting his intended rite, and they often do so later if rehearsals show that it is unlikely to be successful.

Refusal of permission to perform occurs only in case of the more difficult dances, which include the Cannibal, Scratch, Breaker, Fungus and Kusiotem. Members of the society whose prerogatives are for one of these types are considered as having greater importance than those who can merely sing of some minor deity-patron; yet all are equally members of the kusiut society, which is not graded according to the performances of its members.

*575 Many of the more difficult dances require weeks of pre-796 paration, when it is sometimes said that the dancer has disappeared to the land above. When he returns they usually conclude in four nights, the time taken by those of a simpler type. Each of these nights[1] is known by an untranslatable [104] term, and, as it will be necessary to use these throughout, it may assist the reader to summarize the ritual which takes place on each. It can be assumed that it is a simple dance, that is, one without elaborate preliminaries.

1 [i.e. of a Kusiut dance - ANALYST]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[Kusiut Society Initiation]

The following morning the kukusiut alone are invited to X's house. The marshals meanwhile superintend the laying and lashing of planks across two river dug-outs to form a dancing platform. On this the singers take their places, in addition to as many kukusiut as can scramble aboard. The craft is slowly poled either up- or downstream, according to the direction of X's repository, and more kukusiut accompany it along the bank; the uninitiated watch with keen interest from the background. X and his companions proceed towards the river and on meeting the lashed-together canoes are taken aboard. The singers strike up any well known kusiut tune, and in time to it as many kukusiut as possible dance on the platform surmounting the craft. Each uses his own style of dancing according to his prerogative, so that the scene is strikingly varied and animated. X himself cowers in the centre, practically concealed from the uninitiated by the dancers. On reaching the village the whole party hurriedly runs to X's house, from which the uninitiated are rigorously barred for the rest of the day. Those kukusiut who accompanied the party along the bank of the river have preceded them and, as X enters, the droning cry is raised which always heralds the appearance of one who has been in close contact with supernatural beings.

575* 796 [535] [535] [424] [201]

If X is considered trustworthy, he may be allowed to go alone to his repository, although this is only customary when he takes a second or third prerogative. If this procedure has been followed, X tells those present what he has seen; otherwise his companions do so. The uninitiated listen eagerly from the adjacent houses, wondering anxiously what is taking place. Several kukusiut blow, or use bellow-whistles to increase the awe of the hearers. Presently a herald is sent out. He goes first to the lowest house[10] of the village, then in succession to those above, announcing in each that:

575* 203 796

"Something strange has happened to the son of the chief."

X's name is not mentioned; if his father is not a chief the [10]That is, to the one farthest downstream. By always going to each house in order from bottom to top of the village the herald avoids any danger of omissions.

[Kusiut Society Initiation]

*575 call is that something strange has happened to the "mortal." At intervals throughout the day he repeats this announcement, 203 and towards nightfall goes around calling:

796 Skinap, skinap, kukusiaot, "Cure, cure, ye members of the kusiut society, power has come to the son of the chief [or to the mortal]."

The kukusiut assemble in X's house, taking their places around the fire; the uninitiated crowd near the doorway. X is seated among his relatives and some of the senior members of the society behind the fire. A herald calls out:

"I want a siki to help X."

*575 In every village there are at least two kukusiut who have, 791 embodied with their kusiut names, the professional prerogative 796 of acting as healer to every novice; it is believed that the ancestor of each obtained a name and this right through a [424] revelation from some supernatural healer. Since that time the owner of the name has been able to insert some of his own ever- [773] present power into a neophyte to enable him to sustain the dangers of admission to the society. This is the fiction taught to the uninitiated. The profession of siki can be trans- [425] mitted by willing like any other prerogative and it occasionally happens that the same individual is siki for both kusiut and susaok. In answer to the herald's call, the two siki come forward and crouch behind the fire, one on either side of it. [302] Their faces are blackened with soot, and each wears a blanket, [292] decorated with dyed cedar-bark, thrown loosely over his [237] shoulders, leaving the chest and stomach bare except for an apron of deer hooves or puffin beaks. Meanwhile beating sticks are distributed among most of the kukusiut who strike furiously on the floor with them, without any attempt to keep time; the sole object is to produce the greatest din possible.

One of the siki contorts himself in an amazing manner, presses his hands against his stomach as if to force something from it, and rolls from side to side on his haunches, until at length he produces, as if from his body, a rock crystal (see Plate 3).[1] He waves this to and fro in his hands, then goes

[1] [see category 116, p 84(C)- ANALYST]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

and the patron shifts his protection to the substitute. Non-members are told that the death was due to one of the many dangers connected with the society. 575* 766

It is said that, in former times, the kukusiut sometimes held a commemorative rite at which the song composed resembled that used at a memorial potlatch. Details were unobtainable on this subject and it is clear that it has long been discontinued. In 1922, however, memorial songs were sung for dead kukusiut, but this seems to have been an innovation, due to prohibition of the potlatch. 575* 769 533 177

The Ritual of Specific Dances

GENERAL OBSERVATIONS ABOUT THE DANCES

A detailed description of various kusiut dances can now be given. Unfortunately, there are so many points of difference between them that each will require a separate account, although considerable repetition can be avoided by mentioning in connection with the first dance those features common to all. The initial performer is always he who has the prerogative of seeing the supernatural canoe which comes from the Land of the Salmon to visit Nusqulxwaista. Several kukusiut have the captain of this craft as patron, and if each should wish to dance the marshals decide which of them is to do so. Thenceforth there is no order for different dances; the marshals see to it that anyone who wishes to give a ceremony does so without conflicting with another. The first dance described is the one which occurs at the beginning of every kusiut season. 575* 796* [424] [776]

THE DANCE OF Noäkxnum[14]

The Bella Coola believe that on the fourth day after the September moon is full there starts from the Land of the Salmon, in the far west, the canoe Noäkxnum, commanded by a supernatural being of the same name. This craft slowly 773 824 825

[14]Cf. Boas, p. 40.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Dance of NoaKxnim]

773 approaches the Bella Coola River, and proceeds up it, beneath 824 the surface of the water, invisible to all. Its destination is 825 Smaien·a, whence its captain leaps to Nusqulxwaista to await the coming of Ätquntäm. The crew consists of a number of supernatural beings, who will be described in connection with the ceremonial on the night of nebusam. This canoe, which brings the salmon and berries to Bella Coola, has four masts but no sails, and is enormous. Whenever the weather is fine, Noäkxnim lowers first one side and then the other of his craft so that the salmon may leave; after swimming around for a time they always return, refreshed by their exercise. In former [785] times when people were purified by ceremonial chastity, sev-
[831] eral succeeded in seeing the craft, and from them it is known [787] that it is about six hundred yards in length, that it travels without leaving a wake, that any canoes passing near are sucked along after it, and that a mallard duck, perched on the bow, quacks continuously. Intelligent informants agreed that the bringing of the salmon during the autumn was inconsistent, but they could offer no explanation. One man believed that [626] this was pointed out not many years ago by a man whose [776] patron was Noäkxnim, but that the marshals requested him not to upset established ritual by too much logic. Noäkxnim is patron for several kukusiut, who are believed by the unini-575 tiated to be able to see his canoe. As he passes up the river 796 the kusiut dances begin.
184

It is unnecessary to describe the full ritual in each village, 424 as this is supposed to be identical, and probably contains only 551 slight variations, if any. In Tcimotl the kusiut who has the prerogative of seeing Noäkxnim is a certain Qoxolän·i,[15] in Kimsquit, Äluskinwasam,[16] and in Slskiutl, Xemtnim. Although,

[115] [15]Details of this dance were learnt from the father of Qoxolän·i, who intimated
[426] that the name was a family possession. Several months later an old woman [578] referred to the lending of this designation by her father and said that the present user had failed to return it. Bitter feelings are often caused by disputes of this kind.

[16]Meaning "Cloud Covered," a reference to the invisibility of his patron, as if the latter were hidden by clouds. Many kusiut names have significances of this type.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Dance of Noakxnim]

Although 575* 424 773

theoretically, every kusiut should know the origin myth of his prerogative, these are rarely remembered, a state of affairs differing entirely from that with respect to ancestral origin myths. An ancestor of Ałuskinwasam is supposed to have seen Noäkxnim, decorated with the tails of two eagles stuck in his hair. The following myth was obtained of the origin of [539] Xemtnim's prerogative:

In the beginning there came down to Mount Nus·läxim, a small mountain on the south side of the Bella Coola River about three-quarters of a mile from the sea, Ällilimnälosaix, his younger brother Omqomkilika, and their sister. Älquntäm had given them a model house, so small that it was portable, but which could enlarge to any size at their wish. It was called Skqwälutl, a name they bestowed also on their sister. They brought the sisaok designation, Xemxemlaix, with the right to perform a dance. The party, including Raven, who was like a son to Ällilimnälosaix, came down from their mountain top looking for a place to settle. As people were already living at Qomqo·ts and Älqäläxl, they chose Slskiutl as their home.

From this place the three could hear the beating of drums, as the people of the adjacent villages performed their kusiut dances and Raven determined that his companions should not lack the privileges which others enjoyed. Accordingly he flew down the fiord where he saw Noäkxnim, whom he obtained as patron for Ällilimnälosaix. This prerogative was embodied in the name Xemtnim, which is still in use.[17]

The prerogative of seeing Noäkxnim is known as dakdak- 575* älaix, "The Comer," or "The Ever-Comer." It will be con- 796* venient to refer to the person who has this power as X. As [424] already described, if he had been initiated during the preceding ceremonial season, he is now obliged to dance. In later years, if he wishes to do so, he first consults the marshals, and if they consent he begins his preparations during the summer. Among [533] other matters, X informs the singers of his intentions and they begin to compose songs. Occasionally they re-use one from a previous year, but to do this is to admit lack of creative ability. The usual practice is to compose new tunes and to adapt to them words bearing on the proper theme, sometimes including [17]It will be noted that this myth is of the typical origin type, and furnishes an instance of the manner in which kusiut prerogatives occur in such. [539]

[The Dance of Noakxnim]

if he so desires. The kukusiut listen to the song, and when it is resung they join in. They practise it repeatedly, until familiar with both words and tune. This part of the ceremony lasts for about two hours. 575* 796* [533]

The singers, and any others who are prepared to beat time, are always provided with long, flat, thin sounding-boards to increase the din of the pounding. When the marshals decide that the song is sufficiently familiar, they tell some of the kukusiut to carry these boards to the lowest house of the village. They do this, and also scatter clean sand on the floor, as is customary whenever a supernatural being is to enter. The uninitiated persons within the house watch with great interest. The singers enter and take their places behind the fire, then other kukusiut and finally X himself; his face is unblackened, but he wears his two eagle tails in his hair and a collar of dyed cedar-bark. On his head is a thin cylindrical circlet, about four inches high, of the same material, ornamented with swan's down by the inhabitants of the villages of the upper Bella Coola valley. The collar consists of a roll of grass, entirely covered with dyed cedar-bark from which pendant tassels of the same hang down over his chest; similar ones are worn by susaok dancers, except that the tassels hang down their backs. Every kusiut dancer wears these two ornaments, and those who have the necessary prerogative adorn themselves with an apron of deer hooves or puffin beaks. Blankets are always worn. Kukusiut women wear in addition woollen pubic garments. [292] [534] 575* 796* 292 [424] [237]

As the singers beat out X's tune, accompanied by the voices of themselves and other kukusiut, he dances. Since his style is typical of all kukusiut except Cannibals and a few others, it will be well to digress at this point in order to describe it. X raises his arms until their upper parts are approximately the height of his shoulders, and project outwards and slightly to the front; they are bent at the elbows with the forearms vertical, thus bringing the hands opposite the top of the head. Both wrists are shaken constantly, the muscles of the lower 575* 796* 535

[The Dance of NoaKxnim]

*575 arms being brought into play, so that the whole hands are con-*796 stantly quivering without spasmodic movements. Ability to do this is one of the marks of a skilful performer, and the inces-535 sant shaking is continued without stop throughout the dance.
[533] Most kusiut songs are in five parts, which may be described as three verses, separated by two choruses. Near the beginning of the first verse X stands up, raises his arms, shakes his fingers, then slightly bends his legs and begins to step in time to the beating of the sticks. Some dancers remain almost stationary, marking time, to use the military term, others advance in steps of an inch or so, at intervals slowly revolving sunwise.[18] Sometimes X introduces a variation by bending from side to side, in which case one hand rises above the other. If the time of the song is very slow, he sinks, bending his knees to a great extent, and advances in more lengthy strides, never ceasing to shake his hands. At each chorus the time becomes so rapid that it is impossible to move the feet in accordance with it, and then X crouches, his shaking hands the only movement. If it
● [424] is a woman who is dancing—like most kusiut prerogatives, this [562] one is not limited to men—the style of dancing is quite different. Keeping the upper part of each arm close to her body, the dancer extends her fore-arms, outwards, parallel to the ground, with the palms upwards. Like a man, she shakes her wrists, but few female dancers move from the spot on which they start, except perhaps to turn around, sunwise. Heralds always keep up a running fire of comments, especially when a woman is dancing, urging her not to be bashful, but to allow her breasts to shake. Some dancers have merged into one [424] prerogative rights acquired from different coastal tribes. In such cases they perform in two or more styles, each part according to one prerogative.

Kukusiut are always ready to assist one of their fellows, so that three or four friends are always willing to accompany the dancer. They stand close behind him, at frequent intervals blowing over his head the eagle down which either X, or some [171] [18]The Bella Coola state that the Bella Bella revolve counter-sunwise.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

THE DANCE OF Wl·a

*575 *796 556 Although potlatches and kusiut dances cannot take place simultaneously in the same house, and although the former are supposedly completed before the beginning of the ceremonial season, they often overlap the lengthy preliminaries of the Noākxnum dance. In such cases, when visiting the houses of the village, the kukusiut are careful to pass by the one in which the potlatch is going on. It often happens that foreign guests are still present when Noākxnum ascends the river and their host wishes to provide entertainment for them in the shape of a spectacular kusiut display. This is possible if a kusiut with a wl·a prerogative is willing to have a call come to him. It [424] is probable that in every village there is at least one kusiut with this prerogative; in Tcimotl the owner is a certain Łukwala,[20] in Kimsquit a woman named Nunuxemlaix. An ancestor of the former received his designation at the direct wish of Ālquntām as leader of the supernatural kukusiut. It is unnecessary to describe the ritual in detail in both places, although certain differences must be mentioned. It will be convenient to refer to the dancer as X. He has ten patrons, the nine brothers [776] Xemxemālotla, Xemcua, Omqomkilka, Āimālotla, Āiamkilka, Qomcua, Qwlaxwoa, Kwlilias Nuskāmpta, Ālmāk", and their sister Łłitcāplilān·a.[21] These supernatural beings remain in Nusmāt·a except when summoned below by X, or when Łłitcāplilān·a appears for her own purposes as already described.

If X accedes to the request of the donor of the potlatch and is willing to summon his patrons from above, one or other of them interviews the marshals, and if these acquiesce, the rite can proceed. In Bella Coola X asks the help of four kukusiut *575 who are termed his "Path Clearers"; no special prerogative is *796 required to perform this service. For four days X lies on the floor of his house, near the door to the back-room, while his [20] The rite has not been carried out in Bella Coola since the death of the former owner about 1912; the name has passed to his brother's son's son.

[21] Boas (p. 33) gives the same list of beings although in slightly different order.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Dance of Wila]

"Path Clearers" see to it that no one passes between him and the fire. The uninitiated are not expelled from the house and their curiosity is aroused. Meanwhile the singers prepare songs for X, describing his supernatural patrons; and some kukusiut carpenters are instructed to make in secret ten small pieces of wood, about one foot in length and six inches wide, sometimes half-moon shaped. They cover these with dyed cedar-bark on which they paint the designs appropriate to each being.[33] On the morning of the fourth day,[34] X blackens his face with soot or charcoal, obtained by pouring water on a fire, and dons the usual kusiut costume. A herald then invites the kukusiut to assemble in X's house. Presently they proceed to the lowest house of the village, where the singers beat out the tunes of the "Path Clearers," remembered from a previous year. They dance, while X stands, shifting his feet and moving his apron as if he also wished to perform but was too weary to do so. This is repeated at every house of the village, except that in which the potlatch was held; most of the kukusiut follow the procession, as do some of the uninitiated. Finally, with X last of all, they enter the potlatch house, where foreign guests and many uninitiated have assembled.

In Kimsquit the preliminary four days of watching are omitted, but from this point on, the rites of the two areas are practically identical.[35] As X enters, all the kukusiut who have pounding sticks begin to beat on the floor and the women drone. Without delay, and without attention to the timeless thumping, X begins to dance, sunwise, around the fire, at intervals casting on it particles of eagle down which have the effect of making the supernatural ones above take their places. He calls out intermittently that he can see the beings above sitting down, and a herald repeats his remarks loudly. In Bella Coola the four "Path Clearers" walk close behind X.

[33]The distinctive designs are given by Boas, to whom the reader is referred.

[34]It is probable that X must first lie down when Nestkmm's dancer reports that the canoe is at the mouth of the river.

[35]It is uncertain whether the differences in ritual are typical of Bella Coola and Kimsquit, or merely represent variations in individual prerogatives.

[The Dance of Wi·a]

About dusk on the following day X, who is in his own house, suddenly stands up and cries out: 575* 796*

"Yes. It has come. I am afraid. Yes! I will do as you bid me." 787

The kukusiut women begin to drone and the uninitiated are expelled. Heralds announce that a kusiut has been pressed to earth, and presently they go to every house inviting the kukusiut to gather in X's. From this point on, the rite of lsxtämem continues in the manner already described.

The ability of X to summon these nine brothers from above is a special prerogative; other kukusiut have one or other of them as patron, but lack the power to call the whole number to earth. One kusiut has exclusive knowledge of the mat which is spread for Omqomkilka when the other supernatural beings summon him to a ceremony; another of the place where the brethren obtain their eagle down. Detailed information was not obtained about these ceremonies. [424]

THE CANNIBAL DANCE

Of all kusiut dances, the one of which the uninitiated are most afraid, and which is, therefore, the strongest, is the Cannibal dance. It is believed that the performer is exposed to greater dangers than in any other rite, and observers have the most spectacular ocular demonstrations of his powers. The patrons of most Cannibals are Alqumtäm, Sexsexkälaig, or Kämai·ts, who implant in their protégés a wolf, bear, or eagle, causing them to devour strange foods. The Bella Coola consider that a man is equally a Cannibal whether he has the prerogative of eating corpses, biting the living, eating dogs or raw salmon, or biting himself. The most common of these is the right to bite the living, and few of the older people are not scarred thereby. Fear of Cannibals is one of the strongest causes for the respect with which the uninitiated regard the kusiut society, but though the holders of prerogatives of this type are regarded with awe on account of their powers, they are not considered as chiefs, as the Bella Coola say is the case

575* 796* 424 [981] [776] [787] [781] [171] [622]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Cannibal Dance]

among the Bella Bella, Fort Rupert, and Rivers Inlet people. Indeed, in Bella Coola a poor man may be the most dreaded Cannibal of all, if he has been able duly to validate and perform his right in this respect. Nor is the dance carried out with the same rigour in Bella Coola as among the tribes of the outer coast.

The ritual of different prerogatives varies to such an extent that several accounts must be given, in spite of the repetitions that this form of presentation entails. On account of the length of time necessary, a Cannibal dance usually begins early in the season. The following describes the manner in which Kämätslaks of Kimsquit, who can bite the living, carried out his rite; it was obtained from his brother, who is thoroughly conversant with the details. It will be convenient to refer to Kämätslaks as X, and to use the present tense throughout.

A meeting is held at which the marshals and others choose, in agreement with X and his relatives, a day suitable for him to commence his performance. Under normal circumstances it is on some qoilum that a marshal announces that he can hear X's call, and on the following evening, when the ritual has been completed, the uninitiated are startled to hear continuous whistling from the slopes of the mountains near the village. The instruments used are of the usual bladder type, but the long-drawn-out sound, termed Aiislāxa, is said to be the voice of the kindly supernatural woman, Snitsmän·a.[11]

[11] The sole function of this being seems to be the restoring to life of those who appear to have been killed in the performance of kusiut rites. The Bella Coola are uncertain whether or not she is identical with Thiexplitx·a. The noise which heralds her coming is produced by the whistles of four kukusiut who throughout the night range the forests and mountains within ear-shot of the village. By bending their heads up and down, they are able to increase the weirdness and apparent elusiveness of the sound. The four travel in single file; the leader blows, and when his breath is nearly exhausted he presses the hand of the second man, who starts whistling forthwith, while the original leader drops to the rear. As the second becomes weary, he signals in the same way to the third, and so on; in this way the whistling is continuous, and the uninitiated are convinced that it cannot be caused by mortals, even if such an idea should occur to them. If a non-member should meet the four, they would at once kill him or make him a prisoner, keeping him out of sight until he could be initiated into the society.

[The Cannibal Dance]

X, now almost sane, rushes around the house, shouting xwa·, xwa·, xwa·, while his call sounds loudly, as the whistle is pressed firmly beneath his armpit or against his stomach, tied under a belt. Often the kukusiut slip a rope over his shoulders to prevent him escaping again. Finally, he rushes from the house and all the kukusiut crowd close about him on the sidewalk without. As many as possible press upwards against his body with their hands, while they shout, ye ··, trying to expel the call upwards. On the fourth repetition it is supposed to have been driven forth, and in answer to the tumultuous shout of the kukusiut, there is heard the sound of a whistle from above. The uninitiated do not know that a kusiut has been dispatched with one to a mountain peak for this purpose. 575* 796* 787

The kukusiut now return to X's house for a meal. The first dish of food is placed before X himself, while one of the marshals addresses him and the audience in the following strain: 575* 796* [539]

Yāxmaodjinoot, sātixwa·ks! Ālaits di pāxotla!
Greetings, comrades! Hail to the dreaded one [the Cannibal][a]

Wai, pāxotlas[a] Nuxim. Nuqplaniats[b]duduqa.
More, dreaded one, Nuxim.[c] Eat to repletion.

There is no ritual significance attached to any particular words; marshals use their own discretion as to what they say, but the above may be considered a fair example of the kind of remarks addressed to a Cannibal at his first meal. After X has started eating, the other kukusiut commence and the marshals deliver their usual admonitions, praising X for what he has done and urging others to emulate his example. Then presents are distributed to those who have been bitten. It is considered that a Cannibal compliments a man by taking a piece of his flesh, and that he is under obligations to the one bitten for the latter having allowed him to exercise his preroga- 575* 796* 431 424

[a] Pāxotla means "The Dreaded One" or "The Fearless One." X is so called on account of the uncanny cannibalistic incubus that has taken possession of him. [787]

[b] This is the vocative form of the word.

[c] Nuxim was the name of the performing Cannibal on the occasion that this speech was recorded. [195]

*575 *796 431 *424 [773]

tive. Hence compensation must be given. Payment for wounds inflicted is really parallel to payments to witnesses of any other prerogative; without their assistance X would not have been able to display his right. Long ago Cannibals are said to have had teeth of such sharpness that they were able to take pieces from the bodies of their victims with ease and quickness. In more recent years, it has been customary for a person about to be bitten to cut himself with a knife so that, when the Cannibal seizes him, a simple sucking at the chosen part will bring forth blood. In view of the honour attached to being bitten, no person to whom such a proposal is made would think of refusing. As previously mentioned, Cannibals do not bite other Cannibals, Scratchers, Breakers, or those whose patrons are ghosts, otherwise their victims may comprise any ẖaẖuziut.* Presents received by those bitten are called "Bandages." At the time of such payment gifts are usually given to all ẖaẖuziut, with additional compensation for the sufferers.

*575 *796

Now that X has eaten ordinary food it is supposed that he is again normal, although special precautions must be taken for the rest of the winter since he is subject to returning fits of frenzy. Consequently, he is never allowed to be alone, but is always followed by a number of ẖaẖuziut whose function appears to the uninitiated to be to guard them from the Cannibal. The sight of strangers suffices to rouse him, so that when a canoe from Tāl ia or Kimsquit approaches, a herald bids the uninitiated conceal themselves. On their arrival X rushes to the beach, apparently in spite of his guardians' restraint, and honours several of the strangers by biting them, as he did before he was able to eat ordinary food. On such occasions he then visits every house, attended by his escort, before returning to his own. Inside each dwelling he growls, cries out xwe-, xwe-, xwe-, and sometimes shakes or tears off the

[752]

*Every effort is made to convince the uninitiated of the severity of the wounds inflicted. For example, if a ẖaẖuziut woman is suffering from some malady of the breast which requires an operation, a Cannibal bites her there and non-members are told that the incision, made about the same time, was caused by his teeth.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Cannibal Dance]

through the village announcing what has taken place. Meanwhile X, maddened by the taste of blood, dashes from the house, closely guarded by a number of kukusiut. Growling, he enters the lowest house of the village and, to the uninitiated there, it appears as if the restraint of his guardians is all that prevents the biting demon from breaking loose among them. This is repeated at every house in the village, and then X returns to that in which potlatch is taking place, where he is guided to his usual corner and a kusiut throws cold water over him. Any senior kusiut, often one who is also a shaman, calls on those present to beat time, and the frenzied orchestra of sticks sounds forth. X remains quiet and more water is thrown over him. This pounding of sticks is four times repeated, and after each more water is thrown over the Cannibal, until at last his temporary fit of frenzy is stilled. Then the kukusiut eat in comfort and leave. It must be remembered that the uninitiated hear the beating of sticks from adjacent houses, and their awe is perhaps increased by the fact that they cannot actually see what is taking place. 575* 796* [781]

This liability to madness lasts throughout the ceremonial season, effectively suppressing any venturesome uninitiated, and at the same time serving as a bond of union among the kukusiut themselves, who must sink individual differences of opinion in face of the absolute necessity of upholding X's prestige. A Cannibal novice can likewise become frenzied at any time during the summer following his initiation. [626]

The Cannibal dance entails a considerable amount of physical and mental effort, while if X bites many individuals, as he likes to do as a means of demonstrating his prerogative, he is forced to expend a considerable amount of goods as "Bandages." These two factors often deter a man from performing this dance. A Cannibal who has just been initiated as a kusiut at once begins to bite, and is carried away to the upper regions. He is required, moreover, to give his ceremony the following winter, like any other novice. During the summer he generally remains hidden within his house, and when he goes 575* 796* 556 [731] [424]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

songs are sung, all that are needed when a Cannibal does not go to the land above. 575* 796* 787

On the following day, qotlm, the masks are manufactured and the ritual proceeds in the normal manner. In the evening the uninitiated are invited to watch the dances, at which X is the first to perform, lengthening his face and protruding his lips to their greatest extent in order to frighten his beholders.

The ritual of the next evening, nakusam, corresponds to the usual pattern. Before the entry of the uninitiated, X has concealed himself so that nothing can detract from their awe at sight of the masked figures. Alqantām stands in state behind the fire, sometimes announcing his own name, while Ano'lik-wulsaix moves to and fro, adding to the solemnity of the occasion with her explanations, echoed by the heralds. Alqotlees, represented with blood-stained lips, moves around the fire, restrained by the three Holders, and the audience is told that this is how they act in the land above. When the guests have gazed sufficiently on these marvels they are sent away, and the masks are burnt in the usual manner, accompanied by the gentle singing of one of X's songs. Late at night a number of kukusiut go with X to the sidewalk outside his house, where they expel his call by pressing upwards with their hands against his stomach and calling hoip.

For the rest of the winter X conducts himself in the manner of any kusiut who has danced. 575* 796*

Although similar in outlines, the prerogatives enjoyed by Cannibals differ so considerably that no clear picture of the rites can be obtained without detailed descriptions of several. The following is an account of a dance carried out by Łulilmut, a biting Cannibal of Nusqalst. It was obtained from one of the marshals who, of course, understood the details of every performance. The origin of the name is unknown, although the informant believed that it had been created in this world by the chiefs in consequence of the manner in which a shaman ancestor of the dancer had been in the habit of biting people [424] [115]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Cannibal Dance]

his song, which they now proceed to sing as though they had obtained it from X in his ravings; they have, of course, composed it themselves in advance. The words describe the experiences of X in the regions aloft. When the song has been practised, food, and later presents as "bandages" for the wounds, are distributed. Other gifts are often given to everyone, irrespective of whether or not the recipient has been bitten. A marshal functions as usual; then the people disperse.

Presently as night falls and the people are preparing for sleep, X goes outside with a number of kukusiut followers. On the sidewalk the singers, a number of kukusiut women, and men with drums have assembled. X begins his high pitched call of xwa·, xwa·, xwa·, as if longing for meat; the whistle sounds at intervals and the singers begin their song with the women joining in. When the melody has ended, the party moves to a position outside another house where the same ceremony is repeated. X suddenly becomes frenzied, rushes madly from place to place, his xwa·, xwa·, xwa· resounds, and he dashes into a dwelling, growling ferociously. The musicians pay no attention to his actions, but complete their singing of the same song outside every house. When this has been finished, the kukusiut gather in X's home to make him sufficiently heavy so that he can lie down. This is done by calling upon these individuals who have the prerogative of using the crystals at initiation. They come forward and, with wild gyrations, extract them from their stomachs and insert them into X's body through his ears, thus partially deafening him so that he can relax. The people disperse when this has been accomplished. As usual, the heralds have informed those living in the other houses of what has been taking place.

The next morning the kukusiut construct a strong platform behind the fire on which X is supposed to rest for the next four days. In practice he can do almost anything he likes, provided that he is not seen by the uninitiated. The crystals pressed into his ears deafen him to small noises, but if he hears people talking loudly together, he at once becomes excited and rushes

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 575 placing their hands against his mouth and neck and pressing
* 796 downwards to the chest as if forcing some object from his 787 throat, constantly uttering the cry of hoip. When the obstacle has been driven down, X is offered his first food, choice morsels of dried salmon. He eats some of this but bites a small piece from the spoon, and does the same with the dish in which water is held to his lips. The assistance of a shaman is often required to feed the Cannibal.

The powers of, and restrictions upon, X for the remainder of the ceremonial season are identical with those already described. At the end of the period, however, the kukusiut assemble in X's house to rid him of his sqiols which, it will be remembered, had been forced from his mouth down into his chest. By means of a violent repetition of hoip and pressing with the hands, this is extracted and cast into another kusiut. As soon as the latter has received it, he acts as if he had become a Cannibal. Dashing out, he enters each house in turn, growling and calling out xwa·, xwa·, xwa·, and at intervals ripping up the planking from the floor or pulling off boards from the wall. Then the substitute re-enters X's house, where the power is returned to X himself, who, this done, rushes to every dwelling and repeats the growling and destruction. Though the uninitiated realize that two different indi-[781] viduals have appeared as Cannibals, they are too awe-stricken to feel anything but wonder. When he gets back to his own house, X is surrounded by the kukusiut who call out hoip, in unison four times, while as many of them as can find places press upwards with their hands against his neck and throat to expel the sqiols. This succeeds in sending back X's power to the mysterious regions above whence it came. While most of the kukusiut beat time vigorously, a number of them pull down the platform and cast it into the fire. They then have a meal, while a marshal gives weighty advice about the care that must be exercised during the coming year in guarding their sacred secrets from the uninitiated; whereupon they all disperse.

[184 The chief contrasts between this rite and the one previously 424]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

described for Kimsquit are the lack of the cannibalistic incubus and the presence of the sqiols. It must be emphasized that these are differences of individual prerogative alone; many Kimsquit Cannibals perform with sqiols, many Bella Coola with incubus. 575* 796* 787 184 424

Although every effort was used to obtain not only the general principles of the rite, but also confirmation of details, it must be remembered that many of these were omitted at the performances observed, so that reliance had to be placed upon the accounts of participants. It is probable that errors of omission have been committed in consequence; these may account for some of the discrepancies, but the most potent factors are undoubtedly lack of uniformity in individual prerogatives, and failure to enforce absolute rigidity in ritual. The two accounts just given by no means illustrate all the variations possible in this dance; others will become evident in descriptions of the rites of Cannibals other than those who can bite the living.

The following is an account of the ritual of a Dog-eating Cannibal, Olxän·i, of Sınxl. Long, long ago one of the ancestors of this man saw a pack of wolves devouring some dogs. In some mysterious way, which even the Bella Coola do not profess to be able to understand, the power of a wolf entered the beholder so that he was impelled to eat dogs. He was then carried away to the mysterious land above where he saw and was assisted by several supernatural beings. The first Olxän·i was able to transmit to one of his relatives his ability to eat dogs, and the prerogative has since been carried out by his descendants. Should the holder of the name fail to tell his destined heir the details of the experiences which are to be embodied in his songs, his successor can obtain these from the singers who, of course, are familiar with the themes used on previous occasions. The repository of the name, Olxän·i, is beneath a huge boulder not far from some carved rocks behind the village of Sınxl (see Plate 6).[1] It is said that many years ago some reckless uninitiated placed poles as levers beneath

575* 796* 787 773 [424] 575* 796* [778]

[1] [see category 116; p. 84 (F) – ANALYST]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 over him,[11] followed by the usual immersion in the river. X
*796 goes to every house, then returns to his own where another song, describing his experiences aloft, is rehearsed. In the 787 evening the kukusiut assemble once more and tie on X a long, tail-like appendage of dyed and undyed cedar-bark. Then a shaman gives him food, and at once he runs to the lowest house in the village. He enters the doorway and calls out:

"I can smell."

This announcement is repeated in every house, signifying that the Cannibal can again appreciate ordinary food.

X spends four more days on his platform, leaving it only when infuriated by the snarling of dogs. On the fourth evening the kukusiut assemble once more to learn a song of the usual Cannibal type, and to listen to admonitions from the marshals.

For four days longer X is secluded on his platform. In the evening the kukusiut gather to practise another song, but this time X dances, while the uninitiated watch with fear and wonder from the doorway. After their departure, X's sqiols is ● [424] extracted. In this particular dance, its removal is the prerogative of a certain kusiut who presses his hands along the Cannibal's collar-bone, forcing the malignant muzzle-like power upward and outward. Sometimes his first meal is delayed until this has been done.

*575 This concludes X's dance, though he must obey the same
*796 restrictions as other Cannibals for the rest of the ceremonial season and, if he is a novice, for the following summer as well.

[424] Other Cannibals have the prerogative of eating raw salmon. Since these are unobtainable during the winter, carpenters construct imitations consisting of skins of trout stretched over wooden frames filled with the flesh of deer, dogs, or trout. The resemblance is increased by a mechanical device which wiggles the tail. The Cannibal rips these apart with his teeth so that the uninitiated see the meat inside, and readily assume that they are real salmon, while their wonder is increased in view of the difficulty, or impossibility, of obtaining fresh fish in mid-winter.

[11] This expels his call.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Cannibal Dance]

The most feared of all Cannibals are those who have the unusual prerogative of eating corpses. At present (1922), there is only one man with this right, whereas at least seven can bite the living. His prerogative was recently obtained from the people of Rivers' Inlet, although the ritualistic devouring of corpses was well known to the Bella Coola in former days. All informants agreed, however, that the actual eating of a body was practically unknown.[10] Even when one was provided and the Cannibal dragged it from house to house, accompanied by an escort of kukusiut, though he sank his teeth into the flesh and pulled forth morsels of the carcass, he invariably disposed of them as soon as he was out of sight of the uninitiated, as in the case of the dog. Of course, blood and small pieces of flesh must have been swallowed inadvertently, but the rite was always essentially ritualistic, not real. More often, the "corpse" consisted of a wooden frame-work, shaped like a human body, and covered with the scraped skins of deer or dogs. The interior was filled with the flesh of an animal, and the whole buried in the graveyard until the meat had become foul. The uninitiated, from a distance, watched the exhuming of this object and concluded that it really was a long-buried body. Fear prevented them from making a close inspection, so that the defects of the imitation were not apparent. The frames were kept hidden from year to year; an inquisitive non-member who chanced to stumble upon one would have to be initiated or die.

575* 796* [424] [177] [688]

On account of the long time that has elapsed since a complete corpse-eating Cannibal dance was carried out, it was found impossible to obtain a detailed account of the ritual. This deficiency is unimportant since all informants agreed that it closely resembled other Cannibal dances.

Like other Cannibals, one who has the prerogative of eating dead human flesh can perform as often as he desires, subject only to the approval of the marshals, who have no hesitation

[424] [787]

[10] Apart from this ceremonial eating, no trace of cannibalism was found among the Bella Coola.

[266]

[The Cannibal Dance]

*575 in banning the rite if they do not think the dancer will be able *796 to carry it out properly. When the call comes, the uninitiated are at once expelled from the Cannibal's house; later he rushes [424] to the graveyard and exhumes one of the meat-filled frames previously buried. Non-members watch with horror as he sinks his teeth in the "flesh." Closely guarded, he is then taken to every house where, if they are bold, the uninitiated peer forth from their bedrooms and watch his performance.
He carries part of the corpse in his arms and periodically sinks his teeth in the repulsive mass. As usual, apparent attempts are made to tie him to this earth, but in spite of them he escapes to the upper regions where he remains for an unusually long [824] period. Great efforts are made to reduce him to a state of emaciation, for which purpose he drinks large amounts of water in which cedar-wood has been boiled. When the Cannibal ultimately returns to earth, the cannibalistic incubus is expelled and he at length becomes normal. When dancing, a [535] corpse-eater constantly bends both hands towards the floor in front of him and upwards, as though raising some heavy object towards his face. Then his head sinks towards this, only to be thrown quickly upwards and to one side, with a wild expression in his eyes. The uninitiated are told that this represents the manner in which he lifts a corpse towards his mouth and bites, only to be revolted by its putrescence. He has, they hear, no actual liking for human flesh, but his incubus fills him with an irresistible craving for it. Frequently [532] he wears on his blanket wooden representations of skulls (see Plate 7)[1] symbolic of the corpses devoured.

*575 Rarely, a corpse-eating Cannibal kills a slave and pretends
*796 to devour his body as a means of impressing the uninitiated,[60] but usually this is done only under the driving force of revenge 567 or jealousy. If a man hears that a near relative, slave of a 648 foreign tribe, has been killed, he often determines to wipe out blood with blood. He consults a corpse-eating Cannibal, and [60] Eating of corpses has long ceased among the Bella Coola; the present tense is used merely for consistency.

[1] [see category 116, p 164(A)- ANALYST]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 575 * 796 type of rivalry can be carried out only during the ceremonial season.

[567] [578] After killing and eating a human being, a Cannibal must conceal himself for a considerable period, sometimes as long as four years. The uninitiated are told that the great power within him has taken him so far into the upper regions that one or more years must elapse before his return. During this time he can be seen only by kukusiut. The writer was told of one unfortunate corpse-eating Cannibal, Xekalus, who was virtually secluded for eight years, since a stone was cast at his feet every time he reappeared, thus forcing him to kill and eat. [123] This name had been dormant for a number of years until conferred on the writer, who failed to uphold the prerogative.

* 575 * 796 One other type of Cannibal prerogative remains to be described, namely, that of biting oneself. This is even less common than that of corpse-eating, being enjoyed only by two ● 424 individuals, Qolliaolimx of Stuix and Snmiq of the Kimsquit 773 River. The following account of the origin of the latter's pre- 539 rogative was obtained:

> Many years ago, soon after the first people came to this world, the ritual of the kusiut dances was much more exacting than it is at present. At that time the inhabitants of the earth were still endowed with such semi-supernatural powers that they were able to perform rites that people of the present day can represent only with the aid of carpenters' devices. There was then living in one of the villages on the Kimsquit River a certain Snmiq who had the prerogative of biting himself. He once went hunting on one of the mountains, and when he failed to return the people were convinced that he had eaten so heartily of his own flesh that he had died. Although search was made for his body, it was not until the following year that a professional hunter found the skeleton. From the position of the bones it was judged that their conclusion was correct: he had killed himself by eating too much of his own flesh. The chiefs and other influential kukusiut held a meeting at which it was decided that henceforth kusiut dances would only be acted, not carried out in reality. The following winter the name and prerogative were transmitted to the son of the dead man, who bit himself, but not sufficiently deeply to cause serious injury.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

In the course of generations, Snuuq has combined with his self-anthropophagic prerogative that of eating dogs. As already mentioned, such a merging of rights, obtained from different ancestors, is by no means uncommon. The following account of the manner in which he carries out (or carried out, for the dance has not been performed for a number of years) his rite was obtained from one of the Kimsquit marshals. Many details are omitted which have been fully described in former Cannibal dances. It will be convenient to refer to Snuuq as X. 575* 796* [424] [115]

As with other Cannibals, when the call comes to X he begins to cry out and the uninitiated are expelled from his house, but not before they have seen him sink his teeth into his own arm, and apparently inflict a serious wound. In reality the Cannibal usually cuts himself in anticipation, so that the application of his teeth merely serves to reopen the incision and cause the blood to flow freely. Dogs are given to X, as to other dog-eating Cannibals, and he is escorted to every house, so that the uninitiated may stare with awe upon his blood-stained body and dripping jaws. Later, when he and the kukusiut have returned to the Cannibal's home, a herald goes to every house, announcing that his fellows are going to fasten X. The rope used in this particular rite is long and thin, with a small loop in the centre for his neck. It is forced upon X with the usual struggling, and again the herald makes his round, announcing: [787]

"We are measuring his arms for cords of dyed and undyed cedar-bark."

These too are placed upon him, and the kukusiut march X, pinioned, to every house, while he growls and gives every indication of being half mad with anger at his bonds. He is taken back to his own house and at intervals throughout the day a herald informs all in the village of the number of dogs he has eaten, and of the number of wounds he has inflicted upon himself.

That night X eludes his captors and is carried away to the

[The Cannibal Dance]

each house in succession, borrowing filled chamber vessels. 575* Five or six men are waiting for X with these, and as he enters 796* his house, they pour urine over him. Thus restored to partial sanity, he cries out in a different tone of voice, and at once visits every house. The kukusiut are still with him, but need not guard him as closely since he is now less liable to frenzy. The uninitiated are greatly relieved at this removal of peril from among them. Later in the day kukusiut go to the different houses, asking for choice salmon-grease with which the Cannibal will later be fed. The giving of the first food to X, the later sending aloft of his call, and the restrictions which he observes for the rest of the winter do not differ from those described for other Cannibals.

Snuuq's patron is a snuuq of the Mountain which became [776] petrified in the beginning of time. At his repository there is a [778] spring beneath a large boulder. Uninitiated persons passing the spot are often terrified by hearing the growling of a Cannibal from beneath the stone. It is in this place that persons [757] suffering from virulent skin disease are washed by X, as described in a previous chapter.

Few particulars could be learnt of the rite as carried out by Qoliaolmx, though it is said to resemble the one just described [424] in every respect. The prerogative was obtained in a vision of [787] one of the Cannibal's early ancestors, who located the reposi- [778] tory of the name beneath a large, flat stone, directly in the old trail up the valley. When anyone treads on it, reverberation is heard. The writer was a spectator when the present 575* Qoliaolmx gave his dance in January, 1924, but the rite was 796* performed in such a perfunctory manner that little could be 178 learnt from it. The Cannibal wore two bands of dyed cedar-bark on his left forearm, under one of which was a container of red paint. Uttering his cry of xwa·, xwa·, xwa·, and looking around with a wild air, he frequently buried his face in his arm, between the bands. The red paint made a realistic representation of blood, especially as it dropped with red smudges on the floor. On this occasion, the dancer appeared

*575 in a flesh-coloured bathing-suit, imitating the nakedness of *796 earlier years. The writer was talking to one of the marshals, 178 a very old man, and remarked how different the present rites must appear to him.

"Yes," replied the old man. "But after all, the change is not so great. In former years we imitated what the supernatural beings did, now we imitate what our fathers did."

Many ethnologists, acquainted with the elaborate rituals carried out on the coast early in this century, have expressed surprise at the rapidity with which these have dwindled to mere shadows. The writer believes that one factor for the Bella Coola decline in ritual, is the realization that the rites are imitative, and that accordingly their significance need not be lost when further imitation is added.

*575 Further research would undoubtedly have added particu-
*796 lars of the manner in which other Cannibals carried out their rites, but to obtain the full details of all would have been detrimental to other types of investigation; it is believed that the above descriptions are typical. Before passing to other dances, a few general remarks on the Cannibal ritual may prove useful.

*575 In view of the arduous character of the dance, and the *796 necessity for impressing the uninitiated with the great power ●424 of the Cannibals, the marshals usually prohibit a man from [562] acting unless he is physically strong. Rarely, however, a woman is allowed to be a Cannibal if she has the necessary prerogative, but usually only if she is the last survivor of her family. In such cases the shorter rite is the more common.

[538] As before stated, kusiut origin myths are supposed to be [173] remembered, but in practice few kukusiut know the history of their prerogatives. The process of forgetting has undoubtedly increased in the last few years, but the writer feels confident that they were never maintained with the same care as origin myths connected with the first people.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Cannibal Dance]

000
575 *
796 *
424 ●
539

myths connected with the first people. The following tale explains the reputed genesis of the biting prerogative embodied in the name Nunuqwalaiuts.

Many years ago, a number of lads were playing near the village of Snulle·tl when they were alarmed by the howling of a wolf and ran back to their homes. Next day the sound was repeated, and again they discontinued their play in fear. The third day the same thing happened, while on the fourth the boys not only heard the howling, but saw an enormous white wolf on the mountain above them. Fascinated, they forgot to flee, even when the animal drew near with phenomenal rapidity. It rushed up to a lad named Nunuqwalaiuts, and vanished. At once he became mad and ran to and fro, biting people; the beast had entered into him, and he had become a Cannibal.

His frightened comrades attempted to restrain and confine the lad, but they could not prevent him from escaping at times and biting people. That night he vanished from their sight, though they knew he had gone aloft because they heard his growling as he ascended. For two months he was absent, then suddenly reappeared among them, even wilder and hungrier than before, while his whole appearance had altered owing to the loss of his hair and emaciation. Again the people endeavoured to restrain him, but Nunuqwalaiuts had demoniac strength and could not be tied down. That evening a shaman was called upon, and he used the frenzied beating of sticks in hopes of curing the lunatic, for such he appeared to be. To the amazement of all, in this way he succeeded in expelling the head of a wolf, the cause of Nunuqwalaiuts's anthropophagous tendencies. Thus restored to sanity, he told of what he had seen in the land above, whither he had been carried.[61] Some time after the return of Nunuqwalaiuts it was discovered that the repository of his name was behind a waterfall near Snulle·tl.

Another myth explains the origin of the dog-eating prerogative embodied in the name Hai·alakila. Long, long ago, soon after the first people had reached this earth, a chief of that name lived in Bella Coola. One day his slave, Qälsmus, set out to hunt ducks which were resting on a small pond near the base of the mountains on the south shore of the Bella Coola River, not far from its mouth. Before reaching his destination he heard many people beating time with sticks and, judging that the noise could not have been caused by mortals, returned to tell his master. Hai·alakila at once set off for the spot, taking his slave with [61]Since that time the kukusint have imitated this rite with the assistance of skilled carpenters, and have been able to deceive the uninitiated.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 him as guide. Both heard the beating, and soon saw a pack of super-*796 natural wolves eating dog-flesh. The men were able to steal away without being observed and Hai·alakila told Qälsmus to say nothing about ●424 what they had seen. A little later he gave a dance in which he wore a wolf's mask and pretended to eat dog-flesh. His neighbours, ignorant of 539 the vision by which this dance had been inspired, were tremendously impressed.

Another exploit of Hai·alakila and Qälsmus may here be recorded, although it is unconnected with the Cannibal dance.

One night when they were spearing fish, a forest suddenly arose before them. Qälsmus, startled and terrified, began to cry, but Hai·alakila quieted him.

"I am master here," he said. "We are in this adventure together and your task is to keep quiet."

Then a house appeared before them from the depths of the ocean. It was really a skämtsk, with its ferocious mouth as doorway, and though Hai·alakila naturally feared to enter, he climbed to the roof, so that he could gaze within through what corresponded to a smoke-vent. The house was filled with valuables of all kinds, guarded only by gulls. Hai·alakila reached inside with his pole, hooked forth one object after another and swung each across to his slave on the mainland to hide in a tree. Unfortunately, a canoe happened to draw near, whereupon the house slowly sank back into the depths.

*575 Mention might here be made of a Stuux repository, said to 778 be unique in Bella Coola, that contains five Cannibal names.
551 It is in the form of a human being with a tail, kneeling and bent forward so that hands and head touch the ground. A repository is at each point of contact. The names are:

Qitlia, the head of the creature; Änuximän·a, the left hand; Sinuximätl, the right hand; Älximän·a, the left foot; Xuximän·a, the right foot; Älquntäm, the tail.

In this repository there lives a mätsqus with a copper lining to its mouth.

*575 It will be seen that these myths help but little to explain
*796 the kusiut society, or even the origin of the Cannibal dances; they appear to be only rationalizations attempting to account 424 for established customs. For this reason they have been in-539 serted after a description of the Cannibal dance.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Several Bella Coola were questioned concerning the Cannibal spirit which Boas has described for the Kwakiutl. Some had never heard of such a creature, others had vague knowledge concerning it, and two men were able to give it a name. The one called it Bäxbäxqwanälociwa, the other Bäxbäxqwaiwa. All informants agreed that this creature was not a part of the Cannibal rites of Bella Coola and one man suggested that the cannibalistic incubus rendered it unnecessary. The Bella Coola believe that this Cannibal spirit is used in Bella Bella. During 1923 there came to Bella Coola an old Kimsquit Indian who had left his home many years ago and had since been living at Smith Inlet(?). With him came his son, a grown man, who had inherited from his mother a Kwakiutl Cannibal prerogative which he displayed in the winter of 1923-4. After the dancer had, theoretically, returned from the regions above, a large masked figure representing Bäxbäxqwaiwa entered through the front-door. As the singers beat time, it hopped to and fro, up and down, with snapping beak. The Bella Coola were intensely interested, and one had only to listen to their remarks when wondering what it might be, to be convinced that the Cannibal spirit is a strange concept to them. The most frequent hypothesis was that it was a haohao, since the masked figure did resemble this supernatural bird. The Bella Coola greatly admired the dance, and were by no means ashamed to confess their inferiority as dancers to the Kwakiutl. After the disappearance of the masked figure, the singers sang the Cannibal's song and he danced in normal fashion, which was commented upon as another difference in custom.

575* 796* 776 [171] [171] [428] [424] [186] [171]

THE SCRATCH DANCE

Only less awe-inspiring than the Cannibal dance is the Scratch dance. Those kukusiut who have this prerogative are able to scratch the bodies of their fellows, so that long, bloody weals result. The privileges and restrictions of Scratchers are closely akin to those of Cannibals, as the following points show:

575* 424 [796]*

[The Scratch Dance]

*575 They[1] do not blacken their faces on receipt of a call as do ●424 most kukusiut.

[302] The theme of their songs is of the land above, instead solely [787] of their patrons.

[533] On visiting a house where a qotlim or nebusam is taking place they sit with the Cannibals in one of the back corners; this group is given food before any of the other guests.

They do not exercise their prerogative on fellow-Scratchers, Cannibals, or Breakers.

[787] They are liable to frenzy both when the call is upon them and after its departure. In such cases they run forth, apparently guarded and restrained by other kukusiut, and rush into every house to frighten the uninitiated.

They must recompense those whom they have scratched.

[578] They act as peace-makers among the kukusiut, since the necessity of accompanying a Scratcher who pretends to be frenzied overrules all petty causes of strife.

[554] Though any definite concept of graded rank in the kusiut society is quite foreign to the Bella Coola, it is generally felt that Scratchers and Breakers are only slightly less important than Cannibals. The patron of every Scratcher is Sno'olxdts [776] Älquntäm, one of the sons of Älquntäm; this supernatural being scratches the supernatural ones in the land above, and his father alone can restrain him. The prerogative is fairly common, and it is probable that in early days there was at least one Scratcher in every village.

*575 The following account of the ritual was obtained from one
*796 of the Bella Coola marshals and describes the manner in which the dance should have been performed by the Scratcher, [424] Äluslenaix, his daughter's daughter's son, who had recently obtained the prerogative formerly possessed by his deceased mother's father. It will be convenient to refer to Äluslenaix as X and use the present tense in recording the proper ritual, though it was largely omitted on the last occasion the dance was given.

X arranges a suitable day with the marshals for receiving

1 [i.e. - the Scratchers - ANALYST]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Scratch Dance]

his call, and when this has been settled, he informs those kukusiut whom he plans to honour by scratching. Since each will have to be recompensed for allowing X to display his prerogative, their number depends on X's wealth. Early in the morning of the day chosen, which is always immediately after the nebusam of some other kusiut, the call comes, and X gives a low hoot. At once he starts wildly rushing around and scratching, so that the uninitiated are only too willing to flee from his terrifying presence. Throughout the day X is escorted by a number of kukusiut to every house, where he rages around the fire, throwing his arms to and fro in an infuriated manner, sometimes scratching one of his fellows, but more often merely acting as if he desired to do so. The uninitiated hide within the bedrooms, greatly impressed by what they see if they dare to look forth. 575* 796* [424]

Towards evening the kukusiut are summoned to X's house, where a dramatic representation, into which the members fully enter, is made of binding him as if he were a wild animal or a lunatic. A rope is stretched around the fire, held by the kukusiut, with X inside. He pretends to be trying to escape, while the rope-holders bend down and move around to hold him within their bonds. Meanwhile a shaman, or some senior kusiut, leads a frenzied beating of sticks which is four times repeated, to cure the madness. A kusiut then grasps the Scratcher's face and moves his mouth four times, to make sure that his jaws can move properly; the meaning of this is unknown. X now takes one of the beating-sticks and sits down among the singers as if about to teach them both tune and words of a song describing his knowledge of the land above, derived from his call. For a few moments he beats sanely, and appears to speak in a rational manner, but soon he goes off in a wild frenzy of senseless pounding. Hoip, hoip, cry the kukusiut to soothe him. After this has been several times repeated, the singers announce that they have learnt X's song, though of course, they have composed one themselves in readiness for the occasion. They now sing it; the audience listens, [757] [533]

[The Scratch Dance]

obey one prohibition; he must not sleep with his wife for four days. 575* 796*

Like a Cannibal, X is liable to frenzy for the rest of the ceremonial season. During this period he remains secluded within his house, and the uninitiated willingly avoid him believing him to be mentally deranged. He attends every kusiut dance, where his latent madness helps to frighten the uninitiated. If strangers from Kimsquit or Tăl·io visit Bella Coola, he at once becomes frenzied, rushes to the beach and scratches them, precisely as a Cannibal would do; in this case he must be pacified in the same manner. A Scratcher always saves goods to recompense scratched foreigners. If it is the first time that X has danced, he must remain secluded for the following summer, and give his ceremony the next winter. During the warm months he remains within the back-room of his house, and though some of the uninitiated know of his presence, still believing him mad they do not intrude upon his privacy. The coming of foreigners during this period excites him to frenzy and he scratches them, irrespective of the time of year. [834] [828]

It might be mentioned that some Scratcher names are indicative of the dancer's function, and others, such as "The Cause of Fear," have reference to his prowess. [551]

THE BREAKER DANCE

When a Bella Coola speaks of the fear which kusiut dances cause the uninitiated, he almost invariably cites in order the Cannibal, Scratch, and Breaker dances. Kukusiut with these three prerogatives have no more privileges than other members of the society, nor are they considered superior in rank, but similarity in their functions leads to an almost automatic association. If questioned further, a Bella Coola will usually say that he regards the Cannibal dance to be first, with the Scratch and Breaker equal, but less important. Breakers share with Cannibals and Scratchers the prerogatives of not blackening their faces; of having as theme for their songs the land 575* 796* 424 [781] [554] [302] [533] [264]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Breaker Dance]

*575 above; of sitting in one of the back corners and receiving the *796 first food at ritual meals; of paying those on whom they [424] exercise their prerogative, and of liability to frenzy on arrival [533] of strangers. This last prerogative, if it may be so termed, [264] lasts for the ceremonial season, and in the case of a novice, for the following summer as well. Moreover, Breakers do not destroy the goods of fellow-Breakers, Scratchers, or Cannibals.

*575 In view of the similarity of this rite to those already de-*796 scribed, no effort was made to collect full details. Different 424 Breakers have minor variations in ritual, similar to those al-
539 ready illustrated. The following is an account of the manner in which the Breaker, Syek of Snuloli, performed the rite a number of years ago. As on previous occasions, it will be convenient to use the present tense, and to refer to the dancer as X. Syek gave the following account of the origin of his prerogative.

Long, long ago, soon after the first people had come to this earth, a marriage was about to take place in the village of Snull-ul. At that distant period the people were so powerful that they could themselves initiate kusiut dances, and the bridegroom determined to do so in honour of the event. He chose to imitate the actions of Sänollymulelts Älqunätm, one of Älqunätm's sons, whom he remembered having seen throwing stones in his father's house before he, the bridegroom, was sent down to this world.[a] When goods were piled up ready for distribution as marriage presents, the man began to hurl stones around; one of them ricochetted from a box, struck his bride and killed her. This unforeseen accident solved the question of his name, as by universal consent it was decided that he should be called, Syek, "He of the Faulty Aim."

Since that time a law has been enforced that no Breaker may throw a rock except ceremonially during his dance, and the marshals punish one who disobeys this injunction. If a Breaker is in the forest with a number [231] of kukusiut, it does not matter if he fails to uphold this tradition; the essential is that the uninitiated do not see him cast a stone, even at a yelping dog, the usual reason for doing so in Bella Coola.

*575 When X wishes to dance he must first obtain the consent of *796 the marshals in the usual manner. He also arranges with kukusiut to have boxes and other wooden objects placed within the house to serve as targets, and stones as ammunition. As soon as the call comes, X cries out, begins to throw stones at these objects, and the uninitiated are at once expelled. X is usually led, closely guarded, to every house where he casts more rocks, and may break a number of utensils. Since it is well known that, under normal circumstances, he must never throw a stone, the uninitiated are convinced that he must indeed be animated by a strange power. This being Isustämem, the kukusiut gather in X's house during the evening to learn and practise one, or sometimes two, songs for him. If X is a novice, the theme is of his ancestor and the accident which originated the dance; on later occasions it is of his patron and the land above. All Breakers do not have Sänoltsumulelts Älquntäm as patron; some have Snukilmälts, a supernatural being who causes wealth to curl up and come to him. The chorus is the same as for Scratchers, the meaningless words, 'aii, 'aii. It is said that this same refrain is used by the Breakers of all coastal tribes, so that their songs can be distinguished from those of Scratchers only by the words. With the food, presents are given to recompense those on whom X has displayed his prerogative, that is, those whose utensils have been broken. Sometimes canoes and other valuable objects are destroyed by Breakers, depending entirely on their desire to exhibit their right.

[776] [a] This being is also called Nuhowemowhum, "The Cherished One."

[The Breaker Dance]

575* 796* [787] 575* 796* 533 575* 796* [431] [424]

Next morning, nusiutälsap, X again becomes frenzied and rushes from house to house, destroying property. Of course this is later paid for, but the uninitiated have no idea that arrangements had been made for the boxes and other objects to be placed in suitable spots. During the day a number of kukusiut are sent to collect wood for nine masks. When members of the society gather in the evening the songs are practised, and the making of the masks allotted. One of these is of Sänoltsumulelts Älquntäm, four are of Breakers in the land above,[a] four of supernatural beings who sing there for the supernatural Breakers, and one of the inevitable Ans'likus-

575* 796* 532 424 796 [illegible]

[a] The relation of these Breakers to the patron is not clear.

[The Breaker Dance]

* 575 loaic. X is one of the few kukuciut having the prerogative of
* 796 using supernatural singers. The evening's ceremony concludes [424] in the usual fashion.

Until the departure of his call, X is liable to fits of frenzy so that on both qutlem and nakacum he often visits every house and breaks utensils, though his guardians appear to be making every effort to restrain him. Breakers, irrespective of their [424] exact prerogative, are enabled to act in any unusual manner they desire, and strive to excel in peculiar behaviour. A favourite trick is to smear themselves with excrement, either real or imitation. It is difficult to over-estimate the enormous [554] prestige which such actions call forth in the eyes of the unini-
[787] tiated, to whom it appears that the coming of a call entirely [828] alters the mentality of the recipient, a belief which the kukuciut make every effort to maintain. Nothing further need be said of either qutlem or the preliminaries of nakacum, both of which follow the usual pattern.

* 575 When the uninitiated are admitted to X's house on nakacum
* 796 evening, they are filled with wonder at the sight of the masked singers, of Sàwàlyumàlàt Ilqumàm, and of the four super-781 natural Breakers who move wildly to and fro as the songs are sung, as if only the eagle down which the kukuciut blow upon them restrains them from destroying property. The fleet Ànà'kàwàlàsàs makes the most of her opportunity to describe the wonders which are before their eyes. Then the uninitiated are told that it will be safer for them to withdraw, and hurry out. Presently they are startled to hear the sound of people moving, and the four supernatural Breakers, followed by all the kukuciut, leave the house and proceed to the lowest one in the village. Around the fire go the masked four, picking up stones and hurling them at any destructible property. Most [252] houses contain a number of stones which have been used in [578] boiling liquids, so that there is no lack of missiles. Kukuciut
[635] who are wise take care to hide or remove valuable property before this inroad begins, since the wearers of the masks take advantage of the opportunity to destroy the goods of those

[The Breaker Dance]

575 strate their own superiority; they had paid those who had wit-796 nessed their prerogative, whereas the Bella Bella Breaker had 648 merely cast a stone without solemnity. Speeches were made,
688 and it was decided that henceforth instead of waging true war
[921] in case of an error in ritual, it would be sufficient if the Breakers exacted punishment by destroying property. That is the explanation offered by this man as to why foreign war-parties have not more frequently upheld the law by raiding. As before stated, the writer is uncertain whether such beliefs are generally held by the Bella Coola and of course the historical accuracy of the information is still more doubtful.

THE Kwistow DANCES

575 More awe-inspiring, though less terrifying, than the Can-796 nibal, Scratch, and Breaker dances, are the kwistow dances.
424 In these the dancer undergoes mutilation and death, but his [975] supernatural power enables him to return to life—at least so it appears to the credulous non-members. The five dances known as kwistow are:

The Stomach-Cutting Dance;
The Beheading Dance;
The Drowning Dance;
The Burning Dance; and
The Swallowing of Hot Stones Dance.

Each of these comprises a distinct ceremonial of great complexity, but only one prerogative is required. That is, a man who has the kwistow right may allow his stomach to be cut one year, and when he next performs will choose to display his ability to swallow hot stones. In this respect, it differs from all other kwistow ceremonies. Although a kwistow dancer is entitled to exercise his privilege as often as he wishes, provided his marshals consent, the rite is so difficult that it is rarely carried out.

[975] As far as could be learnt, the Bella Coola of today have no elaborate myths dealing with the origin of the kusiotem dances. They believe that they are performed by the supernatural beings in the land above, and that long, long ago Alquntám and his associates held a meeting at which it was decided to send them down to mortals. They chose as recipient a certain Oniswalrus of Kimsquit, and the prerogative of giving kusiotem dances has since been possessed by the owner of that name.* The following accounts are of the dances performed by a certain Oniswalrus whom it will be convenient to call X. He has six repositories, one for each section of his dance.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

As with all other kusiut prerogatives, the impetus to dance can come only on receipt of a call from a supernatural patron, the being Kulsłkáémidjut in the case of all kusiotem dancers. The uninitiated are told that a call "falls" on the recipient, and moreover that for kusiotem dances it can take place only when the supernatural beings are rushing out of the house above on the entry of the sun at the winter solstice. Thus kusiotem dances should take place after the winter solstice, although this requirement has not been enforced in recent years.

The Stomach-Cutting Dance

In the early summer X decides to exercise his prerogative the following winter. He informs one of the marshals of his wish, and the latter summons his associates to the secret meeting-place where the matter is debated at length. Danger of exposure of details to the uninitiated is so great that the marshals refuse permission for the performance unless the would-be dancer is a man of proved reliability. Once this consent has been obtained, X quietly proceeds with his preparations, laying in supplies of food and asking his kusiut friends for their assistance. When the dances begin, X attends as do all other kukusiut, though his secret mental excitement increases as the time draws near for him to perform. The exact time of starting is discussed with the marshals, and a prelimi-

*There are other kusiotem dancers in Bella Coola.

*575 number of puppets is always made. Certain kukusiut, known *796 as awayas, have in connection with their dance prerogative, the 532 ability to summon and display supernatural objects in the [424] form of small puppets. These are sometimes patrons, more often [787] not, and include not only beings having human form, but snakes, hummingbirds, and other creatures. By calling his being, an awayas receives strength which can be transmitted to someone else—so the uninitiated believe—by passing it into the recipient's body. Non-members are told that X suffers
[775] death from which he is resurrected by his own powers, rein-
[787] forced by those passed into him by other members of the society through the transference of their puppets. The most potent "patron-puppet" is the giant toad. It is difficult for a [781] white man to understand how intelligent people, as are many of the uninitiated, can be deluded into believing that the somewhat rudely carved wooden figures which they see moving before them are supernatural beings. Emphasis must again be laid on the awe, mystery, and power of the ceremonies in the eyes of those who do not understand them, and the very great skill shown by the carpenters in making use of hidden strings, trap-doors, and other devices to increase the dramatic effect. Puppets are guarded very carefully by their owners and are usually hidden in some cleft of the mountains. A well-constructed one is used when necessary for many years.

*575 Other preparations must be made for the stomach-cutting.
*796 As in all other kusiut dances, deception is practised and X is not really disembowelled. Instead, a wooden, or copper, frame is made to shield his stomach; over this is arranged the skin of a deer or a dog, cut to cover him from chest to thighs, with even the navel imitated. This camouflage is held in place by his breech-cloth and by a strap passing around his chest. He wears a blanket which conceals most of the fastenings so that the artifice is not noticeable in the dim light of the house. The chief difficulty is to find a dog with skin the same colour as X's.
[281] Many animals are killed, and the fur removed by immersion in boiling water, but sometimes half the dogs of a village must

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

to discuss the event and lay plans for the future, but as it is now daylight they too soon retire to sleep. 575* 796*

The kusiotem ceremony resembles a double kusiut rite since it comprises two sets of four days and nights. The one on which X's stomach was cut is considered to be lsuxtämem. Accordingly, the heralds call the kukusiut to X's house early on the afternoon following and the regular ritual of nusiutälsap takes place. Some of the younger men are at once sent to the forest for wood to be made into more masks but, with the love of drama typical of the kukusiut, it is assumed that X himself is too feeble to accompany them. Accordingly his power is transferred to a substitute by means of the frenzied beating of sticks and repeated cries of koip. On the return of the wood collectors, who carry their burdens as usual on tump-lines and set them down carefully, this power is restored to X in the same manner. The work of making the masks is now allotted. For kusiotem, and several other kusiut rites hereafter to be described, the dancer is entitled to show as many of the beings in the Bella Coola pantheon as he desires. Consequently if X is wealthy and wishes to have a spectacular nebusam, he orders many masks. Then the kukusiut practise a number of songs composed by the singers. One, or sometimes two, prepared for X is couched as if he himself were telling what he had seen in the upper regions. They describe Ałquntäm, his messenger Oqolikts Ałquntäm, and, especially Kutslkäkmidjut, the supernatural being whose stomach is periodically cut in the land above. It is he who has entered X and impelled him to suffer the same mutilation from the effects of which Snitsmän·a has restored him. X himself usually remains concealed behind the matting in the rear part of the house, but sometimes, if he wishes to practise what he will perform the next night, he comes forward for a rehearsal. He still pretends to be very ill, and instead of dancing in the usual violent manner, totters around the fire, supported by several assistants, while he feebly shakes his hands. The vomen drone, and the uninitiated in the other houses realize that more exciting events are impending.

[482] [424] [556] [776] [787]

[The Stomach-Cutting Dance]

and must never gossip or mingle casually with the outsiders. 575* In addition to a band of dyed cedar-bark on his head he wears 796* one around his stomach.

A number of years ago, when the influence of the white man 575* had become strong enough to undermine the old ritual, a Bella 796* Coola kusiotem dancer, instead of remaining in seclusion after 688 the dance, ran away to Kimsquit where lived a young woman 177 with whom he was in love. In the old days this would have led to punishment by a third tribe. When the offender wished to return to Bella Coola he was afraid of the wrath of the marshals, but plucked up courage to come back after several months. The marshals seized him and scratched his stomach with a metal nail so that the uninitiated, seeing the wound, might be led to believe that the man had been severely cut. Periodically the scabs were pulled off to re-enflame the injury and make it appear that a deep gash was slowly healing. The offender, of course, could not protest, since he was a kusiut who had broken the law and was fortunate in escaping so lightly.

The Beheading Dance

Another of the dramatic dances which can be performed by 575* a kusiotem is that of having his head pulled off. Like the 796* Stomach-Cutting dance, it is the prerogative of a Kimsquit man named Onixwaltcua. He carried out the rite a few years [424] after he had performed the one just described. The main points of ritual being identical for all kusiotem dances, minor points already recorded can be omitted. As before, it will be convenient to term Onixwaltcua X, and to describe the dance in the present tense.

Early in the summer X informs one of the marshals of his desire to have his head pulled off the following winter. The one consulted discusses the matter with his fellows; in this case no objections were raised as Onixwaltcua had already performed a kusiotem dance and it was felt that he was reliable. As soon as permission is granted, the would-be dancer asks the [532] best carpenters to meet him in a lonely place in the forest and procession of supernatural beings according to X's choice. 575* The proceedings terminate in the same way as those described 796* in the Stomach-Cutting dance.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

X must obey the customary restrictions on his movements for the rest of the ceremonial season, and also remain in partial concealment for the summer following. The fiction circulated is that he is still suffering from the after-effects of decapitation. He is legally entitled to perform any other kusiotem rite during the following winter, but it is most unusual for a man to do so [424] on successive seasons.

The Drowning Dance

In a third kusiotem dance the performer appears to drown. X carried out this ceremonial during the third winter after his decapitation, but as usual it will be convenient to describe the ritual in the present tense.

During the summer, as for the Beheading dance, he obtains permission from the marshals. With the latter present, he then arranges with the singers and the carpenters to compose songs of the usual kusiotem type and to prepare a mask. Since X had preserved the mask used at the time of his decapitation, it was not necessary to have one made. The intending dancer borrows from a kusiut friend one of the large boxes used for [415] boiling olachen and this is taken in secret to some lonely spot [252] in the forest. The carpenters cut a hole in the bottom and smear the edges with grease and dirt to conceal the aperture; skin hinges are fastened to one side of the movable section so that it can be opened easily and quietly. They also make a wooden framework the size and shape of X's body, to which the portrait-mask is attached to give a realistic representation of the man himself.

Nothing more can be done until near the winter solstice when the carpenters cut a hole in the floor of X's house, immediately behind the fire, and fasten the section removed with skin hinges to make a trap-door. Then the carpenters, marshals, singers, and other influential kukusiut meet some evening beating of sticks. The plating over his stomach is not apparent in the dim light, especially as much of it is hidden by his collar of dyed cedar-bark and a broad dance-apron. Sometimes the disguise is improved by fastening the skin of a dog, mountain goat, or deer, over the outer surface. X takes up his position, standing, behind the fire. One of the heralds inserts tongs into the flames and draws forth a stone, taking care that the uninitiated can see that it is red hot. X pretends to swallow this, though actually it drops inside his collar to the receptacle between the plates of copper. The clashing can often be heard as it strikes against the metal, and smoke pours forth from the "navel." X groans and jabbers, i·····, while he shakes his fingers violently. After about five minutes the stone is seen to fall to the floor. Sometimes a number of pebbles are used, though one is often considered sufficient. When the last has fallen, non-members are expelled and the kukusiut eat and listen to the admonitions of the marshals. 575* 796*

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

As with other kusiotem rites, the ritual of this dance is continued for four more days. Masks are prepared and on the fourth evening the uninitiated are summoned. A masked figure, wearing a copper stomach, appears and swallows a stone which later falls out through the navel. This is done four times, while Ano'likwolsaix explains that the guest from above is repeating his actions at home. Following this performance, a procession of supernatural beings appears, in the manner already described.

Although X is not killed by this dance, as are other kusiotem dancers, he is required to undergo the same restrictions.

THE FUNGUS DANCE

Another of the more important kusiut ceremonials is the Fungus dance, now the prerogative of a woman, Snunkka'ks. The name was formerly held by her brother, who had inherited it from his mother's brother. The first Snunkka'ks came to earth in the beginning of time at Stuux and made his repository [424] [778]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

who comes nearest to drawing forth the fungus and the spectators comment: 575* 796*

"She must be a good girl for the supernatural beings to show their approval."

At intervals X lifts up the fungus, and his strength is shown especially when the cord has been pulled so far down that he can grip only the very end with one finger. The four kukusiut hidden below sometimes become weary of their work and tie a billet crosswise to the rope so that no one can lift it, but of course this must be removed when X demonstrates his prowess again. Towards dawn the concealed helpers cut the rope and X lifts the fungus, holding it in front of his body while the kukusiut women drone. With four assistants pressing closely around him, X turns and makes the motion of throwing the fungus up into the air with a cry of hoip. It vanishes, and the uninitiated do not realize that it has been palmed to one of the accomplices for concealment beneath his blanket. Then one of the marshals explains to non-members that in the land above the supernatural beings once endeavoured to lift up a fungus, but that X alone, referring to that part of him which visits the dances in the land above, could do so. Accordingly it was sent down for mortals to try, and now that they too have failed it has been sent back. He enlarges on the fact that X, through lying quiet for four days communing with the supernatural beings, has really become one, as is indeed the case with all kukusiut who ascend to the land above or experience other peculiar incidents in the course of their performances. This concludes the ceremony; the uninitiated are expelled and the kukusiut soon follow. [787]

Instead of a nebusam of the type just described, X has the prerogative of performing in an entirely different manner of which only the outlines could be obtained. The fungus is tied to a long rope and thrown into the rapids. One end of the cord is held by a kusiut on the bank with the result that the fungus whirls to and fro erratically. The kukusiut assemble on the bank and hurl harpoons at it while non-members watch 575* 796* 424

[The Fungus Dance]

*575 *796 from a distance. When one of the participants has speared the object, it is drawn to shore and carried into the house. [424] The uninitiated are then called in and enter, often covering their heads with blankets to prevent their spirits being drawn from them. None of the Bella Coola appears to know what governed, in the old days, the choice between these two performances.

*575 *796 178 The Fungus dance differs considerably from typical kusiut rituals already described. In part this is certainly due to decay of custom. When the writer witnessed the dance in the winter of 1923-4 it was carried out very crudely by Snnukka'ks, who, unwilling to admit this, was secretive about the proper ritual. Consequently, the performance of the dance was more of a hindrance than a help to the investigator. But even when full weight is given to this circumstance, it is clear that the Fungus dance is peculiar, particularly in the omission of masked figures on nebusam.

*575 *796 821 The ritual on that occasion was further complicated by the fact that Snnukka'ks has also the prerogative of dancing at an eclipse of either the sun or the moon, and insisted on this fact being brought out in connection with her songs. Four of [424] these were composed instead of the usual two, and the supernatural beings described in them were:

[533] Älquntäm: under the name of Snxälotla.

[776] The Moon.

Smaien·a: This was introduced on account of being the [532] place from which the Salmon-Bringer leaps to the sun. A mask representing this place of petrified power is always painted with salmon designs and the blanket of the wearer is decorated in the same way.

The Snnq mouths that act as posts at the ends of the sun's course.

Stlfim: A supernatural being dwelling under the river who is able to use a fungus in a dance held there. Detailed information about this creature could not be obtained.

[533] At any eclipse, no matter what the season of the year or

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

time of day, X must sing. The heralds call everyone to his house where the singers at once compose a new song, describing sun or moon as the case may be. They then sing it while X dances. Other kukusiut have the prerogative of dancing at an eclipse of the sun, and still others at an eclipse of the moon, but X claims to be the only one entitled to dance at both. 575* 796* 821 [533] [424]

THE MYSTERY DANCE

Mystery is the key-note of all kusiut dances, but in the one termed Ałmutsämk that element is brought home so forcibly to the uninitiated that it may aptly be called the Dance of Mystery. The Bella Coola explain that the word Ałmutsämk means staḑam, "What Is Hidden." The essence of the rite, as explained to non-members, is that the supernatural power which has come to the dancer is embodied in three supernatural beings or in manifestations of them. Unless someone guesses its locations, the performer will die. The Mystery dance is one of the most lengthy Bella Coola rituals and necessitates such a lavish expenditure of food that only a rich man can undertake it. 575* 796* [556]

Accounts were obtained of the ritual as carried out by Qoxołän·i of Tcɯotł and Saiχnäs of Kimsquit, both of whom have the necessary prerogative. The details differ so slightly in the two localities that only one description need be given, and the dancer can be spoken of as X. The patron of most Mystery dancers is Sänołłχɯułełts Ałquntäm, but that of Saiχnäs is Kokosłxɯm, a supernatural being remarkable for his wild and erratic behaviour. [424] [776]

When X has stored up as much food as he thinks necessary, he calls the marshals together to tell them of his desire to dance. In case of consent, they admonish him not to hurry matters but to perform the rite slowly and properly. Preliminary arrangements include the choosing of four kukusiut gifted with good memories to store up in their minds the guesses made by the uninitiated. If many kukusiut are anxious to dance, X usually asks permission on the night of a

[The Mystery Dance]

*575 qotlum, and it is agreed that the call shall come to him on the *796 following evening.

X's first task is to prepare, or to have made for him, a stick which he will use throughout the ceremony. It is of yellow [184] cedar, about five feet in length; in Kimsquit it is decorated with four bands of swan feathers, in Bella Coola with alternate bands of dyed and undyed cedar-bark.

[787] The following evening the call comes to X. He utters a low whistle, resembling a hoot, goes towards the fire and slowly revolves on himself. The kukusiut women present begin to drone and the uninitiated are expelled. Constantly turning on himself, X slowly moves sunwise around the flames, repeating his hoot three times, once at each side of the fire. He stands behind it and calls out loudly:

"Please say exactly what you want; whatever it is, I will do it."

After the customary frenzied beating, he withdraws to the back-room. Heralds go to all the houses, reporting what has taken place and summoning the kukusiut. When all have gathered, X appears and asks for the usual collar of dyed cedar-bark and a dance-apron. These are provided, put on him and his face is blackened. Under the guidance of a marshal or singer, the kukusiut men beat furiously on the floor, without time or rhythm, until the leader motions them to conclude with four thunderous beats. In the stillness that follows X begins to chatter loudly, without using exact words, and everyone realizes that this is an invitation to guess who are the three supernatural beings in whom his power is localized. Some- [424] times the meaning is made still more evident by his carrying the stick previously mentioned, which is the prerogative of Mystery dancers alone. The guests enter into the spirit of the dance and call out their guesses, naming little known supernatural beings, parts of beings, or manifestations of the supernatural; sometimes three or four answer at the same time. The four remembrancers have placed themselves near X and it is their duty to recollect the replies. When kukusiut alone that the whistle of Snitsmän·a is heard. The uninitiated, hearing the sound from the other houses, realize that the kindly being is approaching and are not surprised when a herald presently comes around to announce that X has recovered. In Kimsquit, X's frenzy slowly leaves him, and from this point onwards there are no differences in ritual between the two localities. The singers beat out a new song, prepared in readiness, of which the theme is Snitsmän·a, "The Restorer." X dances to it, and afterwards to any four of the numerous songs previously composed for him. Then he sits down, the first time he has done so, in public at any rate, since the beginning of the rite. Food is next distributed, the marshals make their usual remarks and the kukusiut finally go to bed. From this point on, the ceremony follows the regular kusiut pattern; this occasion, when the riddles are solved, corresponds to lsuxtämem. The successful guesser is dealt with as an initiate in the manner already described. Some of the uninitiated sitting near the youth often realize that he has been prompted by his father, but they regard this as a mere sign of solicitude, assuming that the parent's supernatural power enabled him to solve the problem. It seems clear to them that he could not have known the answer for any length of time because, like others, he had many times guessed and failed.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Mystery Dance]

575* 796* [184] [533]

The next day is nusiutälsap. In the morning all the kukusiut assemble in X's house to learn another new song; this corresponds to the second of a dance which lacks the long preliminaries of this one. A number of kukusiut accompany X to the forest to get the necessary wood for the masks. Mystery dancers have the right to exhibit any, and as many, supernatural beings as they please, hence a large amount of wood must be brought back. In the evening comes the allotment of work. X may do it himself, but usually he asks his father, or some other elderly relative to act on his behalf. Since all his relatives contribute, the actual distribution of labour is not a task in which X alone is concerned. Ano°liktwolsaix must be portrayed, and the three best carpenters are entrusted with 575* 796* 532 [424]

[The Dance of Winwina]

foes. Each of the crew captured a different kind of salmon which, in the myth, are referred to by their supernatural names. 773

The Bald Eagle captured the spring salmon, Oltoldimut, "The One that Changes Itself," a reference to the two forms in which this fish appears before and after spawning. 824 825

The Hawk captured the sockeye salmon, Nunutäkentinim, "The One that Penetrates to the Head of the Rivers." 539

The Raven captured the hump-back salmon, Änukpimaix, "The One that Fills the Rivers."

The Water Ouzel captured the dog salmon, Sqaieliwa, "The Maker of Good Weather," a reference to the calm weather in August when this fish spawns.

The Great Blue Heron captured the cohoe salmon, Kpapstustusailaix, "The One that Makes Us Fat."

The Cormorant captured a variety of dog salmon, Osipax, for the Bella Bella.

The Hermaphrodite was also successful and filled the enormous basket which he had brought for the purpose with a large number of berry captives.

As soon as the raiders had achieved their purpose they returned to Bella Coola and released their booty; since that time there has been an abundance of salmon in the river and of berries on the hills. The Cormorant left the canoe at Bella Bella and released the dog salmon there; that is why this variety of fish has since been plentiful at Bella Bella.

Several Bella Coola kukusiut have a dance prerogative of which the above is origin myth. The details vary slightly, and some informants stated frankly that they had forgotten the names of the bird crew. The reasons given for the use of Winwina as patron likewise vary. According to one account, in the beginning of time Älquntäm placed the name Nunuskimai in a repository near the summit of the lofty Mount Qo, near Stuix. He had two reasons for so doing: he did not wish it to be defiled by passersby brushing dust into it with their feet, and he wished the owner of the name to be the first to see the return of Winwina. The repository is a small pond, which can move from place to place, but, being itself supernatural, is visible only to those who have purified themselves. Since that time whoever has had the name Nunuskimai has had the kusiut prerogative of seeing Winwina. 424 773 778 [776]

[The Dance of Winwina]

424 Another kusiut derived the prerogative of having Winwina 773 as patron from a myth previously cited (II, p. 43). After 776 Raven had seen Noäkxnum and obtained him for Ällilumnälosaix, he flew down the fiord once more, observed Winwina, and made him patron for Omqomkilka.

*575 The ritual of the dance of Winwina does not vary, irre-
*796 spective of its origin; accordingly one account will suffice and the performer can be referred to as X.

[778] This dance occurs also at Kimsquit where the repository [424] is actually in the ocean a few yards from shore.

Winwina is supposed to return to Bella Coola when the [184] January moon is full;[87] accordingly X consults the marshals and makes his preparations slightly before that date. Four days before the full moon, the uninitiated are excluded from the house and a raised enclosure is built between the fire and the back-room. This rite differs from most kusiut dances in that the call does not come at this time. Irrespective of whether or not the kukusiut happen to be present on the evening of this day, X mounts to the enclosure and sits there, looking westward for the return of Winwina. Heralds inform the uninitiated in the other houses of what is taking place. X [292] wears a collar of dyed cedar-bark and a head-dress of eagle tail feathers, but his face is not blackened.

For three nights and three days X remains in the enclosure, gazing to the west, and meanwhile no uninitiated dare even to pass outside of his house. As the fourth night is falling, messengers summon the kukusiut who enter and sit in silence as if waiting for something; the heralds inform non-members that X's vigil will soon be over. After an interval they are likewise called in, and eagerly take their places near the door, where they receive a share of the food being served. Suddenly X jumps down from the enclosure and cries out loudly:

"The supernatural young man has left his child with strangers while he has been on a journey. Now he is returning, [805] [87]Owing to faulty calendrical observations the exact date is seldom found.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Dance of Winwina]

on the floor with a stick and the women sing with him. Food is then given to all and the people disperse. 575* 796*

It will be noted how greatly this dance differs from the usual kusiut pattern, especially in the omission of a nebusam when masks are used. Instead of the ritual just described, X has the option of using another, similar to the customary kusiut type. The following ritual has not been carried out for many years so it is probable that many details have been overlooked. No information was obtainable about the motives governing X's choice of dance. [424]

As in all kusiut dances, the first essential is to select a suitable time, a matter of arrangement with the marshals. The night chosen for the coming of the call is often the nebusam of some other kusiut, and the uninitiated are at once expelled. The kukusiut gather in X's house, where the singers beat out the song composed for the occasion, describing Winwina and his crew, especially the four Kämälälkl who were not only too lazy to capture any booty, but wanted to sleep all the time and could be roused only by being drenched with cold water. The audience listens attentively and then practises the song; X often dances but it is not important since no uninitiated are present. There are no unusual features in the ritual of this night of lsuxtämem.

The next day is nusiutälsap when the wood is brought in for masks, the making of which is allotted in the evening. Five only are required; one of Änoºlikwolsaix and four of Kämälälkl. The ritual is of the ordinary type both on this night and on qotlm. [532]

When the uninitiated are called in on the evening of nebusam they see X standing behind the fire, as if to guard the two masked figures standing on either side of him. Fluent speakers are selected to wear these masks of Kämälälkl and they enliven the proceedings by their arguments.

"I captured the sockeye salmon," says one.

"You liar!" replies another. "You were asleep. It was I who seized the sockeye salmon."

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 575 kukusiut send back X's call in the usual manner. Then, two
* 796 by two, the masks are cast on to the fire and the ceremonial is over.

THE DANCE OF THE TALLY POSTS

[773] As previously described, a tally post is erected in the land
[777] above for every Bella Coola at birth. As long as this memorial [753] is upright and firm, the individual to whom it refers enjoys health and prosperity, but if it becomes crooked he falls ill.
[424] The uninitiated believe that several kukusiut have the prerogative of climbing to the land above during the ceremonial season and straightening leaning tally posts. This is such a
[178] useful ability that it must have exercised great influence on the uninitiated in early days, but the rite has not been properly
[164] carried out since the smallpox epidemic in the last century. The following account was obtained from two old men
[115] who remembered the manner in which a certain Onikotl of Tcmotl performed a year or two before "The Great Sickness." Neither of the informants was a kusiut at the time, but they were able to supplement their recollections of the dance with what they afterwards learnt when initiated, so the following account is probably accurate in outline though deficient in detail. It will be convenient to refer to the dancer as X, and describe the ceremony in the present tense. It was also performed at Kimsquit many years ago.

The rite resembles kusiotem dances in many respects. X must obtain the consent of the marshals during the preceding summer, and their permission is refused unless the prospective dancer is a man of proved discretion. If they agree, X asks a [283] number of kukusiut women to help him by making a very long and strong rope of nettle fibre. At intervals the work-women gather for the purpose in the back-room of X's house, taking [688] care that no uninitiated see what they are doing. Every effort is made to ensure that there is no flaw in the rope as a break would be a serious matter, punishable by death.

Near the winter solstice the marshals choose a suitable time

[The Dance of the Tally Posts]

second of the whole performance. The ritual is of the regular type with the composition and practising of a song. 575* 796*

During the evening of the next day, nusiutälsap, the usual carpentry tasks are allotted. Only three masks are required, one of Ano°likwolsaix and two of supernatural beings termed Mtletsta, as if they had the power to lengthen or curtail the lives of human beings. The ritual on qothm warrants no special description. Late in the afternoon of nähusam the kukusiut assemble in X's home and the uninitiated are presently startled to see them all rush forth with three masked figures in their midst. Assuming, of course, that these are supernatural visitors, the frightened non-members retreat to their houses where they peer forth at the figures as they parade up and down the shore beside the river. They can easily recognize Ano°likwolsaix, but not her two companions whose faces are painted black and white, and who have projecting, snout-like mouths. After this promenade and a certain amount of dancing, the party retires to X's house whither the uninitiated are presently summoned. The two Mtletsta dance around the fire while Ano°likwolsaix explains their power over the lives of mortals. The kukusiut soon ask the uninitiated to withdraw and the ceremony ends in the customary manner. [532] [532]

X must perform this full ritual at least once after obtaining his kusiut name with respect to it, but on later occasions he can, if he so desires, limit himself to the second part of the ceremony with the appearance on earth of the Mtletsta. [424]

THE DANCE OF THUNDER

According to Bella Coola belief, the supernatural ones in the upper land resemble human beings in performing kusiut dances. Like mortals, some of those above are more powerful and more feared than others, but the senior kusiut among them is Thunder. Corresponding to the prowess of his patron, the dance of his human protégé is one of the most important kusiut rituals. The essential feature of it is that Thunder calls all supernatural beings to witness his dance, and in consequence 575* 796* 424 776

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

his follower on earth can do the same. The ritual of nebusam of a Thunder dancer is accordingly identical with that of a Mystery dancer. In the field an effort was made to obtain accounts of what had actually occurred at dances rather than of what should have happened; at the dance of Mystery, previously described, several of the usual features were omitted, and these were accordingly left out of the account. They will now be mentioned in connection with the dance of Thunder, but the fact must be emphasized that they belong equally to all kusiut rites in which the dancer has the prerogative of showing all supernatural beings, including Thunder.

In Kimsquit the name of the kusiut having the prerogative of singing of Thunder signifies, "The Roarer," with reference to his patron. The native term could not be learnt. It will be convenient to refer to the dancer as X.

The Thunder dance is of the normal kusiut type in every respect, so no account need be given of the ceremonial of the first three days. Many masks are ordered on the night of nusiutälsap and these are ready early on nebusam. During that day the expectant uninitiated are excited to see the masked figure of Ano°likwolsaix emerge from X's house, accompanied by a throng of kukusiut who chase all but members of the society back to their homes. Following them comes Thunder's herald, Älxwolätnim, calling on all to prepare to come to the dance of Thunder, the leading kusiut of the supernatural beings. This messenger circles Songʷ to summon the supernatural ones to Thunder's dance, the reason that all can be shown at X's ceremonial. Immediately behind Älxwolätnim comes Ťloqots, the Defamer, protesting that Thunder's dance is not worth attending since he, and he alone, is the senior kusiut of the supernatural ones. Ano°likwolsaix adds her usual comments to the remarks of the two masked figures. This series of invitations and counter-invitations is repeated four times during the day, to the wonder of the uninitiated who peer out through chinks in the houses and around corners of the buildings. Sometimes Älxwolätnim and Ťloqots pass from

[The Dance of Thunder]

575 796 776 [123] [981] with short, mincing steps. At intervals he pulls forth his stinger and rushes at one of the spectators, poking the weapon at him and humming fiercely. The writer took the part of a supernatural mosquito at one of the dances held in the winter of 1923-3 and remembers the expression of fear on the face of a younger member of the audience when about to be "stung." The victim was certainly afraid on that occasion, and if that feeling could survive the break-down of belief, it is not to be wondered at that fear was universal in the days when the kukusiut were thought to be possessors of supernatural powers.

[illegible] Rainwater-Dripping-from-the-Roof. The masked figure walks slowly around the fire and Ano°likwolsaix explains that this is the water which drops from a hole in the planking. The Clowns [522] are never omitted, and always cause amusement amid the gravity of the rite. One after another, the supernatural beings appear from the enclosure, circle the fire, and withdraw, accompanied by the sage remarks of Ano°likwolsaix. Finally there is a long pause, broken when a masked figure slowly toddles forth. It is Snail, who started at the same time as the other supernatural beings but arrived too late to be present at the dance of Thunder. Snail circles the fire and disappears. At this point the uninitiated are expelled and the rite concludes as usual.

575 796 [424] [821] Dancers whose patrons are Thunder, Earthquake, Sun, or Moon do not confine their dances to the ceremonial season, but perform whenever a manifestation of their patron occurs. If Thunder is heard, no matter what the time of day or season of year, X stands up and cries out:

"It [he does not refer to Thunder by name] is dancing too lustily up aloft. Xwo · · · ."

[789] The call of xwo · · · is thought to have a quieting effect on Thunder. Any kukusiut women present at once drone, then, accompanied by a number of his associates, X proceeds to the lowest house of the village where the same ritual is repeated. This is done in every dwelling, after which X returns home and

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 *796 539 821

the goats were plentiful, fat, and unsuspicious, so that before nightfall they had killed four. Well satisfied, they lay down in a cave to sleep for the night. At that time no one knew what supernatural being caused thunder; the earliest inhabitants of the world had possessed that knowledge but it had been forgotten in the intervening generations. Towards midnight the hunters were awakened by a loud boom and wondered what could have caused it. Presently they saw approaching a figure resembling a man, with a weird non-human face, who carried in each hand a huge rock crystal.* He raised and lowered his arms as if pounding; at each movement the crystals struck each other, producing the booming sound and also emitting a flash of light. The eldest brother, Saiks, told the others to cover their faces with their blankets and to keep their eyes closed, because some evil and powerful creature was drawing near. But the second brother, who had caught a glimpse of the two crystals and greatly desired them, watched cautiously, hoping for an opportunity to steal them. Thunder, for it was none other, ranged around; at intervals he passed across to the other side of the intervening valley on a sidewalk which grew before his feet to form a bridge for him, and on it, too, he was able to retrace his steps. Several times Thunder crossed and recrossed, accompanied by reverberating peals. He came near the four brothers and danced; then lay down while fire emerged from his nostrils. The second brother began to feel scorched, gradually the heat increased, but he was powerless to move; before dawn, when Thunder vanished, he had been roasted to death.

The three survivors buried the dead man in a hastily made grave in the floor of the cave and went home, abandoning the mountain goats which they had killed. Saiks, though grieved at the loss of his brother, felt that the latter's death was his own fault for peeking when he had been warned not to do so. Not long afterwards the two younger brothers died. Then the sole survivor told a carpenter to make him a mask secretly, according to a design which he would describe. In this way the face of Thunder was portrayed in wood. When the mask was ready, Saiks wore it and gave an imitation of the actions of his patron; no one had ever seen anything like it and the people were amazed.

* 575 *796 539 424 777

No great antiquity is ascribed to this myth and it gives no explanation of questions which at once arise in the investigator's mind. The type is fairly common in Bella Coola; in fact, the only unusual part of it is that the visionary received a kusiut prerogative rather than one of the forms of gold forwere previously described. To the Bella Coola philosopher, apparently no explanation is needed of the manner in which Sasky was allowed to use his experience as the basis of a hamat dance. The assumption is that he was a hamat at the time of his experience, although this is not clearly stated. The last to use the name died about 1900, each Sasky having had the prerogative of giving the Thunder dance.

*This is said to have been equivalent to the fire-castle of a Thunder dancer.

575* 796* 534 424 [777] [551]

THE GHOST DANCE*

Among the numerous patrons of hamat dancers are Ghosts. The term, kikankun, applied to a shaman whose power is derived from a ghost, is also applied to hamat with one as patron, but the two functionaries must not be confused. It is a fairly common prerogative and there are Ghost dancers in every village, their right depending in every case on some experience of an encounter with a ghost. The following is an account of the manner in which Sapsa of Tsimsil performed his ritual; it may be regarded as typical of all, and the dancer can be referred to as X.

575* 796* [775] [756] [424]

At any time during the ceremonial season X consults with the marshals to decide upon a suitable time for his performance. On the evening preceding, normally the potlatch of some other hamat, the marshals state that his call is imminent; X makes his final arrangements and asks the assistance of a number of his fellows.

When the sahsaw runs of the following evening have been completed and the uninitiated have returned to their own houses, they are startled to hear whistling from the forest near at hand. It is not the instrumentally produced sound that accompanies the coming of a call, but soulless whistling with the mouth; everyone knows that this is the language of ghosts. A visitation from them is by no means unknown, and always dreaded, so at once there is excitement and everyone covers in the bedrooms. Presently heralds go through the village

575* 796* 787 [795]

*This relationship is implied with the dance of the same name among Indians of other culture areas.

[791]

[The Ghost Dance]

leave their bedrooms, but pass curiously and fearfully around the edge of the boards. Finally the party returns to X's house, whence the uninitiated hear the sound of sticks being beaten in a frenzied manner, but without the usual rhythmic cadence. Each tsaxiu beats as he likes, because it is an affair of the dead with whom all things are queer and unnatural.

The ghosts wash and take their places in X's house where the singers are working on a new song. The words, as if spoken by the dancer, describe the land of the dead; how everything is green there; how the river flows from west to east so that the sun travels upstream; how the shades wished to make him a chief, and deceived him by not giving proper presents; how he visited the various towns scattered along the river, finding the bone in one of the houses; and finally how the dead told him of any mistakes in ritual that had been committed in the Bella Coola villages, in Kimsquit, or in Tsi'ts. This last is, of course, common knowledge, but the Ghost dance is the only tsaxiu ceremonial in which such information is used in the text of a song. Details are given, but the wording is so ambiguous that when the uninitiated hear the song they do not comprehend its meaning. Since the tsaxiu have concealed the error referred to, the necessity for veiled allusions is apparent. Everything connected with the Ghost dance is carried out in the reverse order; thus, the reference of X to presents which he did not receive is merely an intimation that he will presently bestow gifts on the singers and the other tsaxiu who have assisted him. The wordless chorus of the song consists of 'aya'ownsis, a phrase said to be the same for Ghost dances among all the coastal tribes. The singers practise this song while the audience leaves unanimously; then it is sung vigorously by all, while X dances. His style differs from that of all other tsaxiu; first one arm and then the other is kept extended, downwards, at an angle in front of the body with the forefinger pointing to the ground. This method of dancing is the prerogative of all Ghost dances and provides a variation to the somewhat monotonous performances on different gulcas.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

[The Ghost Dance]

*575 *796 [797] X's, where he is soothed by the four times repeated frenzied beating of sticks and his call returned whence it came.

During the rest of the ceremonial season X becomes mad at intervals and displays his insanity by rushing to every house and throwing dirt and sand. His kakaiat escort is always with him, and the procedure is identical with that already recorded. X makes no recompense for the damage inflicted, so it is probable that his fellows do not regard his dance as an unmitigated pleasure, but nothing can be done to deter him from exercising his prerogative. [424]

THE DANCE OF THE SUPERNATURAL CHARMER

*575 *796 796 [522] [831] Although the Bella Coola are probably as moral as members of any other tribe, they enjoy humour of an obscene nature, and a dance which never fails to provide amusement is that of the Supernatural Charmer. The person of this is Sainsainuik, a beautiful, unmarried, feminine being who is also named Mlqmin and Nuxkwalaxis. She is thought to disregard the efforts of her supernatural relatives to restrain her, and comes to this earth where she bestows her favours not only on human beings, but on animals. Her prototype at Kimsquit is a young man, Kalaiaks, at Bella Coola, a young woman, Kualakmo; like all other kaxiat names these can be used either by men or women. It is said that Kalaiaks's prerogative is derived from the experience of an ancestor in past ages, whereas that of Kualakmo was initiated three generations ago by a very powerful chief. The ritual in each case is identical, so the dancer can be referred to as X. Each has the prerogative of singing not only of Sainsainuik, but also of the being known as Wiwaxtamuk. Many masks are required at the rehearsals of either of these beings, so it is customary for X to perform with respect to Sainsainuik one year, and to Wiwaxtamuk at the next or a subsequent ceremonial season, though the actual songs always refer to both persons. [551] [562] [424] [538] [539]

*796 *575 When X wishes to dance he consults the mandals, obtains their consent, and then makes final arrangements on, normally,

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 *796 the burning of the masks, the dancing of X, and the return of his call.

During a later season when a call comes to X, the ritual deals with Wiwaxinmal, but only the outline of the ceremony could be learnt. The theme of the two songs composed for the occasion is of Wiwaxinmal and how he fights with his enemies, the cold winds. His only weapons are fierce roaring and a belligerent expression, but these suffice to keep his adversaries at a distance, especially his principal foeman, the evil wind, Nuxalápu.

[533]

There is no deviation from the usual type of kwáxat ceremonial until the day of sukaum when a fight takes place at the river's edge where all, including the uninitiated, can see it. The kwáxat of the village are divided into two parties, of which one comes from upstream, the other from below, meeting in front of X's house. The leaderless combatants shove each other two and fro, without actually coming to blows. Wiwaxinmal remains behind one party, encouraging his warriors by his roars, while Nuxalápu spurs on his supporters by valiant gestures, without daring to come too near the combat. Wiwaxinmal's followers finally win the day and drive back the other party. Ínu'kwalaxa is much in evidence, explaining to the uninitiated, who cower in the shelter of the houses, that this is the way in which the winds fight in the land above. That evening non-members are called to X's house where they witness a combat of the same type. The ceremonial concludes in the usual manner.

THE DANCE OF THE SUPERNATURAL LOVER

*534 Another kwáxat ceremonial which closely resembles that just described is the prerogative of a young Bella Coola woman named Qwa'nuk who inherited it from her mother's mother's sister's son. It will be convenient to refer to her as X.

When X wishes to dance, she first obtains the consent of the mandals in the normal manner and chooses a convenient day for the coming of her call. Then the kwáxat gather in [533]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Dance of the Supernatural Lover]

her house while the singers ompose a new song. The theme 575 * is of her patron, the young male being, Kwat·iwal·a, "The Big 796 *
One." It describes how he ame from above and went far and [533] near over the earth in lustul pursuit of women, how each [776] victim fell in love with her seducer so that she followed him in all his wanderings, how Loon befriended him, and how he exchanged his blanket for a covering of abalone-shells.

On [illegible] when the ukusiut as usual go to the forest, [532] they bring back not only wood for masks but also the trunk of a large cedar tree, at which the carpenters work during the two succeeding days. On [illegible] a parade occurs of the supernatural beings similar to that in the dance of the Supernatural Charmer, but the masked figures represent women, not men, of the different coastal tribes. Kwat·iwal·a leads the procession and pays no more attention to his mistresses than did Sximsx- iwal to her would-be lovers. There is the same licence for lewd [831] remarks, of which Kwat·iwal·a takes full advantage when he [522] calls the attention of the young men to his following, and asks them how many mistresses each has had.

In the evening the uninitiated are called to X's house where the first object they see is the tree-trunk, converted by the [532] carpenters into an enormous bird. Wooden wings and a loon's head have been provided and the whole is painted in imitation of a loon's plumage. Kwatiwal·a is in evidence, wearing a bird disguise. Presently a matting enclosure in one of the rear corners of the house is thrown open, and the uninitiated see the throng of his mistresses who rush forth, almost coming to blows in their eagerness to each their seducer. Ano'lkwaisair stands on one side and explains the significance. After the mock combat has lasted for few minutes, a Cannibal begins to growl and the uninitiated carry out. The ceremonial then concludes in the usual manner.

This dance differs from all other kusiut rites in one respect, [424] ● since the call can come to X several times during a single ceremonial season. Of course there is no compulsion; she uses her own discretion as to wether she dance more than once,

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

but a proud and energetic dancer sometimes repeats a ceremony three or four times.

THE SUN DANCE[21]

One of the forms in which Alquntäm appears is that of the Sun, and in that case he is referred to as Sinxälotla. Considering the importance of this deity, it is rather surprising that the kusiut dance of which he is patron is not more impressive. Efforts were made to obtain full details of the ceremonial from several informants, but only a number of incidents and a bare outline could be obtained. In part this was due to the fact that none of the informants[22] were themselves protégés of Alquntäm, but this is not in itself sufficient to explain the comparative unimportance of the dance, since full accounts were obtained of other rituals from those who did not own them.

Nothing was learnt of the origin of any of the Sun dance prerogatives, except that ancestors of the owners obtained them from Alquntäm. It is a common right, and kukusiut having Alquntäm as patron are found in every village, among them being Qaxolän-i of Tsmotl, and Nexnexliwalaix of Nusqalst. As far as could be ascertained, the ritual of various Sun dance performances is identical, so one account will suffice and the dancer can be termed X.

Like other kusiut dancers, X can perform at any time during the ceremonial season, subject to the approval of the marshals. The call comes to him in the normal manner, the uninitiated are expelled, and the kukusiut gather in his house to practise the songs which the singers have just composed. The theme is of Alquntäm, describing his manifold functions, and particularly that of guiding the Sun. The following day a second song with similar theme is composed, and in the evening the tasks are allotted for the manufacture of masks. Four are required; a large one representing Alquntäm himself, one of [21] Needless to say, no connection or similarity is implied with the dance of the same name in other areas.

[22] Except one man who had forgotten all details since his conversion to Christianity many years before.

[The Sun Dance]

Ano°likwolsaix, and two of the supernatural Clowns. In addition a white disk, about four feet in diameter, is ordered with a human face in the centre; this represents the Sun with Alquntäm. No detailed description is required until the night of nebusam. 575* 796* [532]

The kukusiut gather in the dusk and summon the uninitiated as soon as all is in readiness. On entering, they see the huge and imposing figure of Alquntäm standing in the centre of the space behind the fire, flanked by a number of the most important kukusiut as if to pay respect to him. X stands immediately behind, repeatedly throwing one arm over Alquntäm's head and crying hoip to soothe the visitor. The two Clowns move to and fro, all over the house, making what remarks they like as if they were spoilt children. Ano°likwolsaix stands on one side, explaining the meaning of it all, and giving the names of the supernatural beings represented. Suddenly the white disk appears against the back wall near the roof, slowly passes sunwise across the house, and disappears. The uninitiated recognize that it is not the Sun, but to them it seems miraculous that this body can move as it does, and they easily accept Ano°likwolsaix's explanation that this is the way Alquntäm crosses the heavens. They do not know that for the last two days the carpenters have been exercising their ingenuity in arranging cords so that the object can be drawn across smoothly and steadily. Again the sun "rises," and crosses the back wall, only to disappear from sight. This is repeated twice more, making four times in all. It is said that sometimes the Sun is made to spin just before it "sets," but the method could not be learnt. At this juncture the uninitiated are sent home and the proceedings conclude as usual. [522] [821]

In addition to performing in the customary manner, X is required to dance on other definite occasions, without the coming of a call. According to some informants, X must sing of his patron at the beginning of the ceremonial season, coincidently with the protégé of Noäkymm. This is probably correct but details were unobtainable. In any case, when the [424]

[The Sun Dance]

*575 dance of Noākxnum is omitted owing to the large expenditure
*796 required, X must sing, without a call, in conjunction with the Wi·a dancer. In this case also the details are lacking.

[424] Likewise at the winter solstice, when the tarrying Alquntäm [821] at last enters Nusqulxwaista to greet the waiting supernatural kukusiut, it is incumbent on his protégé to perform in his honour below. The singers are always ready with a new song for the occasion, and in the evening his fellows assemble in his house to learn it. X wears the usual ceremonial collar, but he lacks the awe-inspiring qualities of a kusiut who has had a call. When the song has been sufficiently practised, the uninitiated are brought in to listen to it and to watch the dancing of X. At the conclusion of the performance they are given a little food, provided by X, which they carry away while the kukusiut remain to eat at their ease and listen to the admonitions of the marshals. It is probable that the ritual carried out at the beginning of the ceremonial season is identical with the above.
[821] One old man stated that long ago it was customary to dance in the same manner at the summer solstice; this might be expected, but confirmation was unobtainable.

*575 Like the protégé of Thunder, X is sometimes called upon 796 to perform during the non-ceremonial season. But whereas a 821 Thunder dancer acts when his patron is apparent by peals of sound, X must do so when his patron is invisible through an eclipse.[] The ritual is almost identical with that already described for a Thunder dancer so nothing but additional details need be inserted. X visits every house shaking a rattle, which is not the case with Thunder dancers. After his circuit of the village, the kukusiut gather in his house where the singers are [533] composing a new song describing the phenomenon. The words explain that Eclipse, the supernatural being Nuqsulx', has blocked or destroyed the path of the Sun, and add how disastrous it would be if the Sun could not recover its way. Later on, the uninitiated are called in to watch X's dance which, like

[*] The Bella Coola term both for "eclipse" and the being responsible is Nuqsulx' which also means "A Fire That Has Died Out."

[796]
[192]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

the one that takes place at a thunder-storm, is said to "make good the path" of the patron. It would formerly have been a very serious offence for a Sun dancer not to perform at an eclipse; his failure would probably have been punished with death by the marshals. One informant vividly recalled his fears when he failed to perform at an eclipse soon after his conversion to Christianity, and reiterated that he had been in deadly peril from the marshals in spite of the white man's law. 575* 796* 821 [688] [177]

THE MOON DANCE

The Sun is not the only heavenly body that acts as patron to kusiut dancers, the Moon also has many human protégés. Among them is Nulwimăx, "The Moon When It Is Unobscured,"[9] of Tsmetl, from whom the following account of the Moon dance was obtained. As usual, he can be spoken of as X. [776] [551] [424]

The Moon dance can take place at any time during the ceremonial season, subject, of course, to X's wishes and the consent of the marshals. The coming of the call is heralded in the usual manner and the kukusiut presently assemble to learn the song just composed. It describes the following supernatural beings:

Asiutănem:[10] A woman who lives in the moon and who can be seen in certain of its phases, always carrying a bucket of water. 575* 796*

The two Aiqwaiust: These two beings are able periodically to blacken the Moon's face, thus causing an eclipse. 821 776

The two Sutsmăw·a:[10] These kindly women clean the Moon's face after it has been blackened. It is these beings who come to earth to assist stricken kukusiut.

The song also describes how no supernatural being dares to pass the Moon's house during an eclipse, a prohibition similar to that obeyed by uninitiated with regard to passing outside a house where a kusiut ceremony is taking place. [784]

[9] Aiuiănem is the usual term for ghost; no reason was given for the application of the same designation to the woman living in the moon. [775]

[10] There is difference of opinion among the Bella Coola as to whether or not there is more than one of these beings. [192]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Moon Dance]

*575 No detailed description is needed for the ceremonial on *796 either nusiutälsap or qothm. On the evening of the former day 821 the masks are ordered; one for Asiutänem, who appears to be [532] confused with the Moon itself, one for each Aiqwaiust, one for each Snitsmän·a, and one for Änoºlikwolsaix.

Late in the afternoon the kukusiut assemble in X's house to see that everything is in good shape. A large mat has been [532] spread across the back wall of the house and on it a disk representing the Moon, with a human face in the middle. After the usual discussion the uninitiated are called in. Each Snitsmän·a remains standing alone in the two back corners of the house, while the two Aiqwaiust are in the central space behind the fire, constantly waving their arms to and fro. Suddenly the Moon itself appears against the matting. A carpenter, concealed behind the screen, directs its course so that it moves in a short arc across the background and disappears; Änoºlikwolsaix explains to the uninitiated that this is the track of the new Moon, low down on the horizon. A second time it "rises," and moves across in a longer and higher curve, which Änoºlikwolsaix says is the longer orbit of the waxing Moon. On its third course it is still higher, and on its fourth appearance it moves across the full width of the house near the roof, which Änoºlikwolsaix describes as the course of the full Moon, far above the mountains. She also explains that we are indebted to Snitsmän·a for cleaning the Moon's face after the Aiqwaiust have blackened it, as otherwise no light would be visible. This ends the spectacle; the uninitiated are sent away, and the ceremonial concludes in the manner already described.

This constitutes the Moon dance as practised during the ceremonial season, but in addition X is required to dance whenever his patron is hidden by an eclipse. On such occasions the ritual is identical with that described for an eclipse of the Sun.

*575
*796
539
● 424
778
551

THE DANCE OF THE MURDERED SLAVE

One of the chieftains who came to earth in the beginning of time was Ätlumatsaix, whose wealth was so great that he was able to invite his associates from far and near to potlatches, and thus acquire many sisaok

575*
796*
539
424
778
551

names for his only son. Becoming surfeited with this form of greatness, he decided to initiate a kusiut ceremonial for his child. At that time chiefs were so powerful that they could create their own repositories, and Ālixmotusaix resolved to make his son's in his own house. To give strength to it, he dug a hole and buried alive in it a female slave with her small infant. The unfortunate woman was a member of the tribe known to the Bella Coola as Ťaxakł, probably a branch of the Haida; like all other northern tribeswomen she wore in her lower lip a plug of abalone-shell. Ālixmotusaix also buried in the hole a large number of the wasps which abounded in his house. The uninitiated were told that the woman had chanced to stumble upon a repository and had become kelulś, "rendered incapable of returning"; from this circumstance she was henceforth known as Ānukelulslaix. The kukusiut also informed non-members that the woman had been made immortal, and was forever to remain as a slave in the repository. Ālixmotusaix chose the name Ḷapātus, "Sharp-Nosed," for his son, a reference to the sharp beaks of the numerous ravens shown on every object in his house. This designation has since been transmitted in the usual manner; every owner has had the right to perform a dance with the buried woman as patron.

575*
796*

In describing the ritual it will be convenient to refer to Ḷapātus as X.

When X wishes to dance he obtains permission from the marshals and makes his preliminary plans in the customary way. A suitable date for the coming of the call is chosen, and, on the night preceding, the weeping of Ānukelulslaix is heard in the forest behind the village. The weeper is one of X's associates, but no uninitiated would be reckless enough to venture near. She moves down the valley, as if coming from the repository near the village of Stuux. The next evening X receives his call and the uninitiated are expelled from his house. The dancer blackens his face, puts on a ceremonial collar, and goes out alone to find the slave woman; presently he returns, leading Ānukelulslaix by the hand. She is disguised as an old, old woman, clad in rags and carrying on her back a bundle made to represent a small infant; over her face is a mask with a plug of abalone-shell in the lower lip (see Plate 12).[1] She slowly circles the fire, weeping bitterly, while the kukusiut

[532]

[1] [See category 116, p 164 (F)- ANALYST]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

This ceremony is an example of the great diversity in kusiut dances. Instead of the usual patron in the land above, the slave woman is considered to be definitely located on this earth, at a spot near Stuux. Moreover, the call comes through her actual appearance. The writer would have liked to learn further details of the dance, but they were unobtainable. 575* 796*

THE DANCE OF THE OTTER

Since every Bella Coola has, at the present time, some sort of kusiut dance, it would have been possible to collect the details of a large number. Only the main outlines of the dances which follow were obtained, but it is hoped that the complexity of those already described will suffice to explain the scope of the kusiut society. In some cases the details were omitted to save time, in other cases the informant was ignorant of them. The latter reason is responsible for the sketchiness of the Otter dance. [424]

This ritual is the prerogative of a Snulǝli kusiut, Xwodjen·i, "The Crash," a name which refers to the din when the first Sonx" collapsed in the beginning of time. Presumably one of Xwodjen·i's ancestors was present at the fall and chose the name in consequence. The dancer's patron is the land otter, but the connection between this animal and the name has been forgotten, as the father of the performer frankly admitted. He suggested that probably one of his ancestors remembered having seen an otter before coming to this world, and chose it as patron for a dance which he instituted with respect to the name Xwodjen·i. It will be convenient to refer to the dancer as X. 575* 796* 424 551

X can perform at any convenient period during the ceremonial season. When the call comes, the ritual of the first three days follows normally, except that the songs used are supposed to have been unaltered. Before nǝbusam the carpenters prepare a dummy otter, using a skin stretched over a wooden framework. A long rope is fastened to this and the figure thrown into the water so that it sways to and fro 575* 796* [593]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Dance of the Otter]

*575 below a rapids. Care is taken that the uninitiated do not ob-
*796 serve these arrangements. About noon on nebusam the heralds go to every house with a cry:

"Come to watch the kusiut catch the supernatural one in the river."

The uninitiated are wise enough to remain within their houses as the kukusiut troop down to the bank of the river. Presently X appears, clad in the usual ceremonial costume. In he dives, as if in pursuit of the dark shape which can be seen swirling to and fro in the water. Non-members, watching from the background, are amazed to see what appears to be a struggle, followed by the emergence of X clutching an otter in his arms. They are too far away to perceive that it is merely a dummy, nor do they know that a kusiut has assisted the performer by cutting the rope at the proper time. As X reaches shore with his burden the kukusiut women drone. Forcing his way through the throng of his associates, the performer goes to his house where the uninitiated presently hear the frenzied beating of sticks repeated four times. The dummy is carefully concealed in the back-room so that it can be used if necessary on a later occasion.

As X comes ashore, water is splashed in all directions from [556] the dummy and often dampens several of the kukusiut. Anyone to whom this happens is expected to give his clothes to a herald, and a man of chief-like disposition never hesitates to do so; in fact, he welcomes this opportunity of displaying his generous nature.

It is probable that a number of masked figures appear on the evening of nebusam, but detailed information is lacking. It might be added that a question as to whether the catching of this otter had any influence on the ability of X as an otter hunter was regarded by the informant as highly humorous.

*575
*796

THE OCTOPUS DANCE

In the beginning of time Sinuxeti of Kimsquit married a ●424 Bella Bella woman who brought as part of her dowry a kusiut
551
778

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

dance with Octopus as patron. This was first used by Łulqwan·i, a relative of Sinuxetl, and has since been the prerogative of the owner of the name, whom it will be convenient to term X. Being of foreign origin, there is no repository at Kimsquit; in fact, there is none even in Bella Bella itself where the kusiut society is believed to lack both localized power and ancestral authority.[11] The Octopus dance is thus the only one without a repository; as far as could be learnt it is not performed in Bella Coola. In Bella Bella the original rite was connected both with the sisaok and kusiut organizations, but in Kimsquit with the latter alone.

When X wishes to dance, which may be at any time during the ceremonial season, he consults the marshals and picks a suitable date. As this draws near, the carpenters are requested to make an octopus, sometimes using a real skin as basis. On the day that the call comes, the dummy is placed in the water of the fiord, close to shore. Suddenly the heralds raise the cry that a supernatural being is coming to X; the startled uninitiated flee from his house and the kukusiut assemble. Presently the dancer rushes forth, followed by a band of his fellows, and plunges into the water. Fom a distance non-members can see arms and legs flying to and fro, blood flows as the kukusiut struggling in the shallows strike each other's noses, and they have no hesitation in believing the heralds who report that a fight is taking place with a writhing octopus. X at last bears his booty ashore, amid the droning of the women.

That night the uninitiated are called to X's house where the dummy octopus, guarded by the dancer and several other kukusiut, is placed behind the fire. Hidden strings have been fastened to its arms so that it moves and seems to be alive. One of the singers takes a baton and beats time, stops, and all the kukusiut call out i···. This is repeated four times, accompanied, on the last repetition, by the return of the octopus whence it came. This is done by palming the body from sight, but of course the uninitiated do not know this. A [11] This is, of course, a Bella Coola version.

[The Octopus Dance]

*575 Cannibal begins to growl and soon the kukusiut are left alone
*796 in the house. The singers beat out a new song for X and the ritual continues like that of any other lsxtämem. No description is needed for the ceremonial that occurs on nusiutälsap and qotlm.

On the evening of nsusam the uninitiated are summoned in due course. The exact number of masked figures shown could not be learnt, but among them is always an octopus. [532] The rite concludes in the usual manner.

The presents given in connection with the Octopus dance [431] are more valuable than those bestowed at most kusiut rituals, accordingly none but wealthy people are able to carry it out. [556] The heralds especially are always beneficiaries.

THE DANCE OF THE DARK-SHADE

*575 One of the most peculiar and irregular of kusiut dances is *796 that performed by a certain Kälqam, whom it will be conven-●424 ient to call X. His patron is the supernatural woman Stqwast-
[770] lustkwi, Dark-Shade, whose home is beneath the thick ever-greens of the river valleys, thus explaining the darkness and shadows found in such places. X's repository is beneath some [778] large cedars near the northern side of the Bella Coola valley, a few hundred yards above the end of the fiord; it is probable that other dancers with the same patron have repositories in other dark and gloomy spots.

When X wishes to dance he must as usual obtain consent from the marshals who insist that he delay his performance until after the solstice at earliest. The reason is because his [776] patron, Dark-Shade, alone of all supernatural beings, has the power to open every repository; X brings her to the village and [787] in consequence calls come to many kukusiut,[*] which would be undesirable during the first few weeks of the season. On *575 the evening of the day selected for the beginning of the dance,
*796 X steals away from the village with three or four kukusiut,

[*] The implication in this case is that calls come from repositories, not from the land above, the customary source.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[The Dance of the Dark-Shade]

preferably skilled carpenters. Heralds visit every house in the village informing all that X has gone to meet, or to wait for, Dark-Shade. 575* 796*

Meanwhile X and his companions are utilizing the last hours of daylight in collecting a large quantity of gum. They build a fire, and by its flickering light the dancer is coated with gum so carefully that even his teeth and nails are invisible; in this disguise he represents Dark-Shade. Early the following morning the singers and those kukusiut who have already danced during the current season set off on lashed canoes to meet X and his party whom they take on board. Waiting till the tide is favourable, the canoes are slowly poled up the river. As they come in sight of the village, the singers strike up some well-known tune, and in time to it everyone on the platform between the canoes begins to dance, each using the style proper to his prerogative. It is an animated scene. The uninitiated watch the approach, and gaze with wonder upon the strange dark figure; it is all so uncanny that they need little urging from the kukusiut to withdraw to their houses, where they peer curiously through chinks in the walls. Members of the society line the river bank and, as Dark-Shade draws near, one after another cries out that a call has come to him. The marshals have previously decided who shall dance at this time and informed those selected; sometimes it is a kusiut who has already performed once during the season, or it may be a person who has not performed for many years. [535] [424] 575* 796* 787

All the kukusiut accompany Dark-Shade and her escort to X's house from which all uninitiated have long been expelled. The singers compose a new song of which the words are arranged as if Dark-Shade, not X, were speaking. The theme of one, used a number of years ago, is: 575* 796* [533]

"Let X fetch me to visit mortals."

Unfortunately, the details of X's dance were unavailable. Dark-Shade herself remains for four days hidden within X's house, though he attends the ceremonies of other kukusiut and his presence there on the nights of qothm and nebusam is a

*575 *796 source of awe to the uninitiated, who marvel that a man can still appear like an ordinary mortal when he has just brought a supernatural visitor home. According to one informant who, however, is not well posted on kusiut matters, there is neither qotlm nor nəbusam, and Dark-Shade is merely sent away after four days. This may be the case, but the dance has not been carried out for many years, and the man frankly admitted that he did not know the details. It seems more likely that there [533] is some kind of ceremony, since a song would not be composed unless for a definite purpose.

*575 *796 787 424 The coming of Dark-Shade complicates the kusiut ceremonial since a number of dancers receive their calls simultaneously. In this case the ritual is carried out in unison which requires, for example, the composition of one song for each performer on lsxtämem. Calls never come in this way to dancers with important or complicated prerogatives, but it is a useful means of dealing with those whose right is merely to sing of their patrons. On nəbusam the patrons of all are displayed, a method which has the advantage of producing a dramatic effect which would be lacking if only one were in evidence. The coming of a call by means of Dark-Shade is called twihmdimut, "Emerging from Below to Plain Sight." Another time when several calls may come simultaneously to different kukusiut is at the winter solstice when, on the entry of Alquntäm, the supernatural beings rush forth and some of them fall, causing calls to come to their human protégés.

THE DANCE OF THE STONE MAN

*575 *796 Yaxuhmxl, the man who was petrified with his Ootsa Lake wife and four children at the beginning of time, is patron for a [776] Kimsquit kusiut man named Kwasta. His repository is just [424] above high-water mark on the east side of Dean Channel, about [551] five miles from its head, and about one hundred and fifty feet [778] north of the legal fishing boundary. This is almost immediately opposite Yaxuhmxl's station. The repository is beneath the ground, and its doorway is a beaver which became

[The Dance of the Stone Man]

575*
796*

petrified and which can still be seen, with its head facing the water. [778]

The preliminaries of Kwasta's dance do not differ from those already described, although it is uncertain whence comes the actual call. A large number of masks are constructed, as well as a huge wooden figure of the Stone Man himself, and [532] smaller ones of his wife and four children. When the uninitiated are called in on the night of nəbusam they see the Stone Man and his family standing behind the fire, while the body of the house is filled with a number of masked figures. The latter keep shouting to the Stone Man and he answers them, as he does mortals who pass his station on Dean Channel. The marshals always arrange that he does not reply to one of the masked figures, whereupon the others gibe at this unfortunate and tell him that he will die within a year. It is common [763] knowledge that if the Stone Man does not answer the hail of a passer-by, the latter will soon die. The uninitiated are impressed to find that supernatural beings share this belief.

THE FIRE DANCE

This dance is the prerogative of a kusiut named W'ai·ɪ, [424] "Cohoe Salmon." Its origin is attributed to the experience of [551] an ancestor of the dancer who was helped by, and received his name from, one of these fish. Only a fragment of the ritual could be learnt, enough to show that it has many points of resemblance with kusiotem rites. When W'ai·ɪ performs, the central fire is raked apart and he appears to lie down on the ashes between the two flaming sections; evergreen boughs and sand are thrown over him, and the fire drawn together over his body. After an hour or more, when the uninitiated imagine he must be baked, his singing is heard, and W'ai·ɪ walks in through the front door. Deception is practised probably by means of a dummy fastened with deer tendons which contract with the heat so that it seems as if the body itself were writhing. It is said that the first W'ai·ɪ was actually able to perform this feat by means of the power given him by the salmon,

*575 but the kukusiut all understand that later performances by *796 those with the same name are only possible with the assistance of carpenters. This dance has not been carried out for so many years that the details have been forgotten.

THE DANCE OF THE BIRDS

*575 The Bella Coola notice that in autumn many of the birds
*796 disappear, to be seen no more until spring. Ignorant of a warmer climate to the south and of the causes of migration, 825 they explain the phenomenon by saying that Alquntäm collects [776] the birds in some mysterious place for the winter and releases them in the spring. It is believed that he does the same with supernatural birds in the land above. The setting free of the [424] birds, which is in effect a scattering, is known as nuqwekstl
[551] and is personified; he is the patron of a kusiut named Queta. For the nuluam of this man's dance a huge circular cage con-[532] taining wooden birds is constructed. By means of a regular maze of hidden strings they are made to "fly," to the extreme amazement of the uninitiated. This is one of the most complicated kusiut rites. Contrary to the usual practice, no eagle down is used for fear that it might settle on the strings and betray their existence to the spectators.

THE DANCE OF DARKNESS AND SLEEP

*575 The patron of this dance is a being who has the power of *796 bringing nightfall, and later, sleep. In accordance with his 776 double function, a dual personality is attributed to him. In 821 fact, he is almost two beings; as Sneqlominiz, "Darkness," he [513] causes night to come once every twenty-four hours, whereupon [532] as Siritema, he brings sleep. His kusiut protégé displays on [424] nuluam figures with black painted masks, representing both phases of his patron.

THE DANCE OF THE WHIRLWIND

Whirlwinds, though of rare occurrence in British Columbia, are known to the Bella Coola who believe that they are caused by the being Swaliarwanem. Like all supernatural creatures,

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575 *
796 *
776

assemble to witness the dance of Alqantăm. This is his function in the land above, so it is natural for him to do the same in this world.

THE DANCE OF Alqantăm'S FISHERMAN

Alqantăm in the land above has a servant who uses a hand-net, xota, in fishing for his master. He is accordingly known as Alqantăm's Xonsotăm, "Fisherman," and is patron for a kusiut.

THE DANCE OF THE TOP

The playful Sănollymulelt Alqantăm has a favourite toy consisting of a stick which can be made to spin between the hands. This top, if it may so be termed, is patron for some kusiut. The writer was unable to learn how it is displayed on nulusam.

THE DANCE OF THE PETRIFIED HAMMER

The patron of one kusiut is a hammer which in some way was changed to stone in the beginning of time when the Beila Coola River first flowed to the sea.

THE DANCE OF THE GRIZZLY BEAR

A kusiut named Bulkuut has, as patron, a grizzly bear resident in Qmoqwa's house.

424 ●
575 *
796 *
539

VARIOUS ORIGIN MYTHS

In most cases kusiut dances have been preserved until the present day, although the myths on which they depend have long since been forgotten, but the reverse is sometimes the case. The following myths, were recorded with few, or no details of the associated dances. In several cases, one of the same type has already been recorded, so that the significance will be apparent.

[178]

A COMPOSITE ORIGIN MYTH[58]

Long ago there lived in Stuse a man and his wife who were powerful, prosperous, and able to give their children many good names. This [58] Related by Mrs. Willie Mack.

[115]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

424
* 575
* 796
539

success aroused the jealousy of several of the chiefs who caused the death of the couple by means of sorcery. Six children, five boys and one girl, the last the youngest of the family, were thus left orphans. No one helped them and they suffered greatly from lack of proper food and clothing, besides being forced to bear unreasonable responsibilities and trials. One spring the six went to the forest to gather hemlock-bark for food. The eldest boy climbed a tree and threw down pieces of bark which the little girl helped to pick up; at least her brothers all told her how much she was helping, a kindly fiction because she was really too young to be of assistance. One piece of bark blew some little distance away; she ran to get it, but in a moment came hurrying back in fear, saying that she had seen a strange man clad in a bear-skin blanket, with dyed cedar-bark and eagle down in his hair. At first the five brothers did not believe her, but at length they went to investigate and found the man, as she had described. He was lying on the ground but sat up when they approached.

"I have seen your poverty," he said, "and how you have been afflicted through no fault of your own, but solely owing to the jealousy of the evil Stuix chiefs. It was they who killed your parents, but now I give you such power that you will be able to retaliate."

"Your name shall be Nuxim," he continued as he turned to the eldest brother. "You shall be a Cannibal. When you dance energetically, instruct someone to cut your stomach vertically and your vitals will fall out, trembling. They will return to you at dawn and you will then fully recover, having frightened the uninitiated."

"Your name shall be Sxy'mai," he told the second boy. "You, likewise, will be able to have your stomach cut, but you will not be a Cannibal."

"Your name shall be Nuyem," he said to the third brother. "You will have the ability to go to the land above to inspect tally posts. You will be able to foretell the length of a man's life from the condition of his post, and to cure the sick by straightening those that are leaning."

Turning to the fourth brother he continued:

"Your name shall be xyem. You are to be a wi-a dancer, with power to give food and grease to Omponhikka and his brothers in the regions above. On such occasions you will wear a head-dress of branches covered with eagle down."

Then he addressed the fifth and youngest lad, saying:

"Your name shall be xwai-a. You will have a kaxlar dance in respect to that designation, but without special ability."

Finally the stranger turned to the little girl and said:

"Your name shall be Qwainxstu-i. When you dance you will be able to use any one of ten songs and have as patron any supernatural being

424
575*
796*
539
[998]

you chose. You will be more powerful than any of your brothers and it will be you who will avenge on the murderers of your parents, because you will be a shaman."

The man, a supernatural being, of course, told the six that their repository would be the blue goat on the shaman of which they had met him; it was oval in shape, about twenty-five feet long and twenty wide. He added that its name was Nagamadaglaxa i. Having given his instructions, the strange vision vanished.

The six orphans returned to a somewhat bewildered condition to find. They went into the house where they were staying and amal a, who was about eight years old, disturbed a very old woman with his harmless play. In unmannerly anger she spanked him severely, and his older brothers told their sister to try her newly acquired power. She passed behind the old woman, by so doing she invoked to herself the latter's spirit without making even the motion of taking anything, and without the victim being aware of her loss. Qamaxum i took the supernatural element on a stick, as one spits a potato, and drove it on the long of movements piled up behind the house. Presently, when the woman wished to use the convenience, she took a stick with the intention of breaking it for sentimental use. She went to the platform for the purpose but it broke beneath her and she fell; the stick she was carrying pierced her heart and she died. The accident was, of course, due to the loss of her spirit. The five brothers were delighted with the realization that their sister was really as powerful as the supernatural one had said she would be.

The boys went right there alone to slay the principal chief, who had murdered a woman to kill their parents. Qamaxum i went behind him and invoked his spirit to himself; she broke it between her hands and presently the owner fell dead. Though secretly delighted, the brothers thought it wise to appear grieved, and accordingly went amal a to weep. As he was doing so, a kindly old woman patted him on the head, saying:

"Don't distress yourself, little boy. It is the man who killed your parents who is now himself dead."

But she had no idea that it was one of the orphans who had caused his death. Within a few days Qamaxum i captured and destroyed the spirits of two other chiefs who had had a part in the slaying of her parents; in each case the man died within a few hours of his loss. These four deaths so worried the people of Xisa that all the chiefs determined to leave, since the calamity, whatever it was, seemed to kill only those of importance. They took down the cedar boards forming the walls of the houses, piled them on canoes and made ready for departure, taking no heed for the poor people, including the six orphans, who were left destitute.

Qaumaxa-i moved to and fro among the chiefs as they were bringing themselves to preparations for leaving, and then to herald the spirit of every one of the party. As they pulled off from the shore, she put them on a board which she set down behind them. It capsized in the free rapids, immersing the various spirits, and presently the canoes were upset and their occupants all drowned. The six orphans continued to live on Bear where they intermarried with the poor people and in time the village increased in population and fully regained its old importance.

This myth has many points of resemblance with those described in vol. I, chap. vi. Each of the six orphans, and especially Qaumaxa-i, received the boon of supernatural good fortune, but the powers given to the five took the form of a hereditary prerogative. The names as received are either in use at the present time or have but recently become dormant. Nuxta was used by the father's brother of the woman who colored the story; long "was" belongs to her son, a boy about eight years old; Nuxum is the property of another youth, related to the family; xuxu has been lent to a friend, subject to recall at any time, and Qaumaxa-i is used by a girl relative about twenty years of age. Each of these has the prerogative of carrying out the dance given to their ancestor on Bear, long ago.

[illegible] OF THE DANCE AS THE [illegible] CONTINUED[*]

In the beginning Hipaxlas are lost in a point on the upper reaches of the Clearwater [illegible] brothers, Tlatlanxlas, Wuxuxum, Hipaxlas, and Xuxu dale with several sisters whose names have been forgotten. They thought they were the first to reach this earth but presently, as their canoe, saw Tlatlanxlas, a man who had preceded them, and the women cried lately to their mortification. Hipaxlas had given Tlatlanxlas characteristic powers which he now used to be rubbed his hands over his sisters' faces to carry away their tears.

"Become fog," he said, as he held the palms of his two outlined hands towards the face of the Tlo-an-ai people.

[821] Then is why there are thick fogs in the country of Bear Bay to the present day.

Tlatlanxlas and his relatives moved a short distance down the valley

[115] [illegible] by Swanton Boas.

when they arrived. Ajamma had given him the ability to kill monsters and tests by merely pointing his power at them, and in this way he [illegible] had for the whole party. He could also revive his victims with the aid of a peculiar stick bearing [illegible], consisting of seven cones. These he arranged around a fan balanced on [illegible] which he could move with his feet; as he pressed, the cones became animated and [illegible] formidably. It was Ajamma who had given him these two human attributes. Pinocchio tried to turn moments into [illegible], but succeeded only with the eyes of the wolf; whenever these organs appear human even today.

Ajamma gave Pinocchio the prerogative of carrying on a [illegible] dress, which has been performed in the same manner ever since by the [illegible] of that name. His persons, for he has four, are the aforementioned Carpenters. Pinocchio has the further prerogative of moving, when dancing, a wooden head given over his forehead representing (in the poll) [illegible] of the blackbirds. On the right of Ajamma, when the [illegible] are called in, marked figures of the four Carpenters appear, each carrying a conventional specimen of his work. Now to end, Pinocchio has [illegible] proper to these beings. Ajamma is so much in [illegible] and explains the significance of the apparitions.

[illegible] GIVE IN THE [illegible] OF Pinocchio[illegible]

There was once a middle-aged woman who had no [illegible] into the ranks of the [illegible]. She decided that she could [illegible] by moving Ajamma herself, so with this aim in view she got [illegible] to search for the aforementioned [illegible]. First she proceeded to the [illegible] of every work concerning [illegible] Nero, then proceeded up the [illegible] River to no [illegible], again visiting the head [illegible] of every officer, and finally went up the Hole Cloth River, as before, exploring each [illegible]. For a while [illegible] without making anything [illegible].

In the [illegible] of the [illegible] she came to a lake on the other side of which she could see a single column of smoke. It seemed [illegible], still as monument, and it was [illegible] that it must have a supernatural origin. Scarcely she [illegible] the shore, till she saw that the smoke was rising from a large mass of overgrown [illegible]. Stooping [illegible], she found Ajamma herself within, working with a wooden [illegible]. Ajamma was using [illegible] to strike the [illegible], and then [illegible] her, but all the time was resting [illegible] to [illegible] the ground. [illegible] with [illegible] the [illegible] by [illegible].

[illegible] [illegible] with the unfortunate Punch-gamut had [illegible] [illegible] from sight. Then a sound betrayed her to Bellbindiana.

"If you are a mortal," she said, "come in."

The woman did so, and Bellbindiana continued:

"I am Bellbindiana. You have found me, hence I give you a twelve-hour prerogative. You will have Punch-gamut as patron."

The woman returned to her home, where she performed a twelve-day [illegible] in which she perfected the [illegible] of Punch-gamut into the world.

[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

In the beginning of time there came down to Pimento, a point a little [illegible] below Mount Vaughn, a woman whose name was Gwendolyn Gaddes. Hymnion had given her a twelve prerogative with a peculiar repetition in her party, as I [illegible] now to other hand. Their names were Gwendolyn, Gwendolyn, Gwen, and Gwendolyn. When she danced she wore a wooden hoop-dress representing Woodpecker, and the words said (her patron?) were the one when is to rot, and an ugly. This dance has ever been carried on from generation to generation to the owners of the name Gwendolyn.

Social Prerogatives Given Your Dancer

The most valuable possession of a dancer is the dance which he has the right to perform, but each member of the society has, in addition, a somewhat peculiar object, sometimes material and sometimes intangible, known as a dancer's prerogative. The meaning of these two terms will become evident in the description of their use, inasmuch they can be termed "prerogatives." With every call, the possession of the dancer's name automatically to him, though it can also be presented to him by other means and without a call. There is no connection between the patron and the prerogative; for example, one dancer who has one of the sons of Hymnion as the former has, as the latter, the Hummingbird. Another may have Frog, Clam, a Snake, or one of many other objects, animate or inanimate. The "patron-puppets" described in Sections [illegible] belong to this class.

In almost every case the origin is lost in antiquity, and the owner knows only that it belongs with his dance.

2.98 Dorsey 9:-9 (922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

424 ●
575 *
796 *
183
[582]

Few prerogatives are used when the uninitiated are present; they are essentially secretbut provide considerable amusement and are a welcome intrude in the serious rites. When the prerogative is made visible, carpenters must be employed to make it, and be paid for their work; hence this part of the ceremonial is often omitted. When no handicraft is required, it is more frequently called into play, but even in such cases its employment is not universal. Not being an essential part of the Dance rites, the use omission of a prerogative is a matter which concerns the dancealone, and he acts strictly in accordance with his own wishes whether or not he desires the ceremony to be accompanied every possible show. It is impossible to estimate with exactness the relative frequency of employment, but it is probable that prerogatives of the type under consideration are used in about one-third of the dance ceremonials.

424
575 *
796 *
787
[582]

If a dancer decides to display a material prerogative, he consults with a carpenterafore the coming of his call and asks him to make, for example, a wooden Hummingbird. On the night of Initiation, whenall the Initiates are present, the bird is seen to move across in back wall of the house, pulled by concealed strings. The dancer rushes to it and appears to catch it, to entire hidings beneath his clothing. The women dance and the lavish amount to the uninitiated in the neighboring houses when breakes place. Carefully holding his hands cupped, as if clutching something of great value, the dancer moves to the rear of the house and returns the bird to the land above by raising his hands upwards while the Initiates call out hoy. This is the usual procedure when the prerogative is a bird, a small mammal, or a reptile. The same ceremonial is often repeated on the night of reinitiation, particularly if the ritual part to the occasion does not suffice to occupy the requisite six. If the prerogative is immaterial, the ritual differs. For example, when it is Fog, the dancer stretches his hands upwards, as if receiving something from above, and then makesthe motion of throwing this "some-

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

424 thing" into one of his companions. The recipient acts as if 575 blinded, staggering around the house and colliding with articles 796 of furniture or his fellows. One after another receives the 787 same present, until perhaps half the company are acting as if moving in a dense mist. Sometimes they reel from the house, falling into bushes and walking into the walls of other houses, as if deprived not only of sight but also of all sense of direction. The prerogative of Fog was given to Nwistwendeis (II, p. 144), but many other kukwisat enjoy the same right from other sources. After a short interval, the dancer goes to the vision and makes the motion of drawing something from him, thus restoring his sight and sanity. Fog is then returned aloft in the manner described for a Hummingbird.

When first told of this custom, difficulty was experienced in visualizing the attitude of the kukwisat to what they realize is a mere dramatization, lacking the presence of the uninitiated to give it zest and purpose. When several performances of this type had been witnessed, the difficulty vanished. The kukwisat enter whole-heartedly into the spirit of the affair, regarding it as a game, and yet as a game in which they must acquit themselves creditably. Each recipient endeavours to [522] excel his fellows in the realism of his performance, and his blind staggers never fail to cause merriment. The Bella Coola delight in acting, and this is an occasion on which they can indulge their tastes to the utmost, without fear of disaster if an error should occur, such as hampers them in the presence of the uninitiated. Moreover, each strives to assist the performer, and these two reasons combine to make the whole a success.

Although these prerogatives are often used on the nights of kwalkwem and nwistwilag, the time most suitable for their appearance is during the ritual of xwaqlat, which may be translated as, "The Rattle Ceremony." The Bella Coola say that the word is derived from xwa, a pillow, and that the meaning of xwaqlat is a ceremony of "Pillowness," that is, resting, combined with pleasure relaxation. In spite of the number of prerogatives, it sometimes happens that a week or more elapses without a hamatsa wishing to perform. In such a case the marshals instruct the heralds to summon the hamatsa for the Rattle Ceremony to a house from which the uninitiated have been expelled. When all have assembled, the singers beat out the song of any hamatsa and the audience joins in, although the owner does not dance. Song after song is repeated, the singers choosing particularly those which they fear may be forgotten. The uninitiated, who hear the singing from the adjacent houses, wonder what it may signify. The marshals arrange with a hamatsa willing to receive his prerogative, and soon after midnight this person puts on a ceremonial collar, even though no call has come to him, and is ready to play his part. Sticks are distributed and one of the singers leads the audience in frenzied beating. This suffices to bring the intangible prerogative to the willing hamatsa, who makes the motions of catching something in his upstretched hands while the women drum. Amid the continued pounding of sticks, the dancer circles the house and presently throws what he has received to one of his fellows. The actions of the recipients of Fog have already been described, but there are intangible prerogatives of other kinds. One of these is Rabbit, the owner hops in imitation of the animal to any hamatsa, presses his cupped hands against the other's chest, and the latter likewise begins to hop. He in turn passes it to a third, he to a fourth, until finally the owner withdraws his prerogative and returns to above. The hamatsa become so immersed that they often forget to continue the beating of sticks, a matter of no importance since no uninitiated are present. No one offered the prerogative from the owner ever declines; to do so would expose him to ridicule and a refusal is unthinkable according to an elderly Bella Coola. Another prerogative of the same type is an Adze, in which case the possessor pretends to be using that tool. When finally withdrawn by the rightful owner, he often makes the motion of throwing it on a rather instead of sending it back above; in this case it can be used

Z: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

424 ●
575 +
796 +
787

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

424
576
796
787

again later in the season without being brought from above. A Bat prerogative impels the owner, and likewise the temporary possessor, to move lightly to and fro like a bat; it can be thrown from one side of the house to the other, and is "caught" with arms stretched far above the head. Sleep, like Fog, can be projected into a number of individuals simultaneously, and causes all to slumber; while Anger causes everyone to fight with his neighbour. Still another prerogative of the same class is Ants. Some dances have Bull-owners, as is also true for some social dances. Details of their use were unobtainable.

Although these prerogatives always amuse and please the bekwiat, they also have two serious aspects. The insertion of one strengthens a bekwiat, and in the case of a Cannibal, Sorcerer, or Breaker causes him to become frenzied. Whenever this happens he rushes forth to all the houses, frightening the uninitiated, always attended by a band of bekwiat. Moreover, the injection of a prerogative so stimulates a bekwiat that he is more liable to receive a call. As many as fifty bekwiat may have prerogatives of this type thrust into them during a single "Rattle Ceremony." Of course not all of them receive calls, but one or more of them is likely to do so. The writer endeavoured to investigate the attitude of the Bella Coola on this point. Only bekwiat are concerned, since they alone can have this power inserted into them. They realize the dangerous practised by the society, and no individual interviewed claimed to have been so strengthened that he received a call, yet all stated that this had been the case with others. There is no doubt that the projection of a prerogative directs the recipient's attention to bekwiat matters, and may often lead him to the point of giving his dance. In any event, the "Rattle Ceremony" gives the novitiate an opportunity to stimulate the interest of the members of the society, and to impress on them the desirability of dancing. The uses of "person-poppers" have already been described.

In addition to these prerogatives, which normally remain

J:McDowell E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NES

in the land above and come to their owners only on special occasions, there are four of similar type considered to remain constantly within the possessor's body from the time of his admission, with respect to the name with which the right is associated. One of these, the use of crystals for initiation purposes, has already been described. The others are wind-dance, kakilla, and ne'wem, all uncontrollable vows.

424
575
796
787

One use to which the first of these prerogatives is put is to encourage the kokoxtcx to hasten to the house in which a ceremony is taking place. Delay is part and parcel of all dances, but particularly on kamamen and nuxmalinx the kokoxtcx are often very slow in arriving. In such a case the dancer himself, one of his friends, or a marshal, may ask the owner of a wind-dance prerogative to perform. It will be convenient to refer to this factor, who may be man or woman, as X.

The uninitiated have been told that X carries in his right hand a rock crystal which he can throw into anyone through the arm. The kokoxtcx do not share the belief, but they have acted for so long as if they did, that it is probable that they almost place credence in it themselves. When X performs, he leaves the dancer's home and goes in a crouching attitude, yelling furiously, to the lowest house of the village. As he enters, the uninitiated flee to the bed-room, but peer curiously and fearfully through the cracks. X rushes to and fro, still crouching, while the kokoxtcx appear to be trying to avoid him, but at last he seizes either a man or a woman. In spite of his victim's well-simulated struggles, X makes the motion of thrusting something into him, whereupon the person cries out as if in pain and proceeds to be unmanned. Away rushes X, enters the next dwelling, and does the same. This is repeated in every house in the village. As they go to the house in which the ceremony is taking place, the victims pretend to be suffering from a stomach ache, caused by the foreign substance within them, and this pretence is maintained after their arrival. After some delay, X takes a stick and beats furiously four or five times with it, while the singers accompany him with sticks and drums. Following another pause, he does this once more, causing the return to him of the crystals. The heralds visit the different houses to report what has taken place and the regular ritual of the evening continues in due course.

J: McDowell E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Occasionally the nuxalkmo ritual is elaborated to impress the uninitiated. Within this century a woman received a crystal in this manner and, as nonmembers were told, it became stuck so that the owner could not recall it. In this case two kukwiat were in grief, the woman who had lost her crystal, and the one who had it within her body. The former went from house to house for several days, weeping and asking that the kukwiat insert their prerogatives into the possessor's body to drive out the crystal, while the sufferer maintained a crouched attitude as if in intense agony. Her home was in Qwaqa'a, but she went even to Sutcito to see whether the kukwiat there could not help her. Meanwhile the uninitiated were both amused and impressed. After several days the marshals of the two villages decided to try a union to force out the crystal. It was day-time, and they gathered around the stricken woman in an open space between the two villages, while the uninitiated passed with music from the background. One kwiat after another called his tangible prerogative to himself and passed it into the sufferer and after each insertion the owner of the crystal tried to withdraw it, but without avail. After each failure, the one who had used his possession recalled it to himself by pressing with cupped hands and calls of hoij, then gave it back ahma. Throughout the ceremony, a man with a loud voice kept informing non-members which prerogative was being tried. At the insertion of Anta, and again of Sagan, the sufferer rallied, but the owner of the crystal could not bring it forth. It had been decided that a Bird-Sisma was to be the successful prerogative, and when this was inserted by its owner, the woman staggered, fell, and rolled wildly on the ground, her arms and legs flying apart in all directions. Then the joyful owner was able to draw back her crystal and the sick woman at once recovered. 424 575 796

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Another prerogative of the same nature is Izuhilta. As the Iukusiut are gathering and before the main ceremonial of the evening, the man or woman with this prerogative can display it if he so desires. He stands up, stamps, then bends down and begins to beat with a stick on the floor; the singers, who know what is to take place, quickly join in. This serves to concentrate the performer's power, consisting of the ability to scratch the external genital organs. The sticks continue to sound as the performer moves about the house, acting in accordance with his right, and at the same time rolling his eyes and licking his lips. Choosing either man or woman as he desires, he calls out his name, and the person addressed must come forward to take his hands. The power is thus transmitted and the one so chosen begins to scratch, with the same accompaniment of rolling eyes and licking lips. 787

"It is sweet," he cries.

The power is then returned to the owner, who later passes it to another victim, until the marshals decide it is time to proceed to the main rites of the evening. The use of this prerogative is a source of never-ending amusement to the Iukusiut. The only explanation given of this somewhat peculiar ability is that it is practised by the supernatural beings in the land above. Like every other Iucsiut rite, it can be performed only by a person who owns a name in which it is embodied. [522] [776]

Iis'mata, the third of these prerogatives, is to imitate the action of holding sexual intercourse. Like the last, its use is limited to the house in which a dance is taking place, and can be carried out only while the audience is waiting for the main ceremony. The performer, man or woman, stands up with a rope pressed close across his stomach, held with hands clenched at the hips. It is said that in this position nothing can pass behind him. The singers and other Iukusiut begin to beat time to concentrate the actor's power as he stamps around in a crouching posture, crying Iuiy and shaking his hips. Pre- 424 575 796 787 831 522

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

424 sently he begins to grunt, and calls the name of either a man 575 or a woman. The person so designated must take the per-796 former's hands, thus assimilating his power, and in his turn 787 begins to shake and grunt, amid the laughter of all. Presently 831 the "gift" is returned, and later passed to another recipient.
522 Sometimes a modest woman shakes her head instead of her [776] hips, to the intense amusement of the audience. After some time the owner draws his power to himself and the main ceremony of the evening proceeds. It is said that the supernatural beings above perform sit'mata.

The Death of a Kwiat

575 A detailed description of kwiat dances and ritual has now 766 been given, but certain special features still remain. One of 796 these is the method of disposal of the body of a dead member 989 of the society. In dances which are completed in four days, there is little likelihood of the performer's death, but this is by no means uncommon during the long seclusion of a Cannibal for example. In this case there is no wailing, and the death is concealed from the uninitiated, sometimes even a wife being kept in ignorance of her husband's decease. A mask representing the person of the dead man is hung in the house behind the fire as a constant reminder of what must be done. From the ceremonial point of view, the serious aspect lies in the fact that a call has come which has not been sent back, and which cannot be sent back by the receiver. The marshals discuss the matter and agree that it must pass to some kwiat, a near relative of the deceased, who is informed of the decision and does not dare refuse, even if he should wish to do so. After a delay of two or three days, the body is taken secretly to the grave and buried, while the kwiat sing the dead person's song. This causes the call to shift to the chosen relative who completes the ceremony in due course. In the case of a Cannibal, for example, a considerable amount of time is allowed to elapse, and meanwhile the uninitiated are told that the kwiat are still waiting and watching for his return.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

784
575
796
[787]

sticks, while everyone calls out, hoip. This is repeated four times. The sticks continue to sound irregularly as the younger men pull the enclosure to pieces and throw it on the central fire. By these means the kukwiat have been freed from their contact with the supernatural and, perhaps even more important, the repositories have been "tied up," to use the native term, for another year. Those members of the society whose dances have taken place in the house now wash the black from their faces and all share a light meal. The marshals take this last opportunity of addressing their fellows, impressing on them the necessity of maintaining the secrecy of the rites during the summer season. Above all, they warn them to hide the whistles and other paraphernalia most carefully. This concludes the season's ceremony in the house in question; some of the kukwiat withdraw, others remain, and the uninitiated are free to enter and take up the old threads of family life, as it was before the coming of the first call.

If it is not too late at night the party may move to a second house and remove the taboo from it in the same way. More often this is done on the following night, when a second body of kukwiat are allowed to wash. Another house is visited on the next evening, and so on in succession till all the enclosures are burnt and the only visible mark of what has happened is the collar of dyed cedar-bark worn by each novice.

[824] There may be certain prerogatives connected with this finale which could not be known owing to its discontinuance for many years. In fact, one old woman claimed to have a definite right to sing at the destruction of the enclosures, but it was unfortunately impossible to investigate the matter.

575
796
182
571

Concluding Observations and Summary

It is virtually impossible to overestimate the importance of the sociological aspects of the society. During the communal season the whole fabric of social life is altered; families are divided, parents and children being separated in many

2;36:Hewitt E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

with such powers that they killed one another in their performances. Consequently, they decided to dance only in the winter months, and merely to imitate the actions which had been previously carried out. 575* 796* 173

There are other traditions, probably with an historical basis, describing conflicts with the a'alt. The Bella Coola say that long, long ago there were not enough Tsaiat names for more than the old people to be admitted to the society, and that though members were regarded as having supernatural powers, yet the a'alt, confident in their numbers and strength, used frequently to assail the supremacy of the Tsaiat. On one occasion, when the latter had prepared an elaborate feast of smoked goat flesh for themselves, the a'alt collected their weapons and demanded a share of the feast. The Tsaiat, furiously angry, felt compelled to yield, though later they took revenge through the destruction wrought by many Cannibals and Scratchers when frenzied. It is said that even recently if the Tsaiat did not invite the a'alt to one of their dances, they were always careful to placate them by sending half of the food as a present. 575* 578 173 [224] [551] [431]

Sometimes the a'alt, collectively, were bold enough to kill a Tsaiat, particularly if something had gone amiss in a dance house. Or other motives might be strong enough to outweigh respect for a member of the society. On one occasion a chief, who was not a member of the society, was told that his wife, who was, had been in the habit of prowling off at night with a Cannibal. The jealous husband prepared his bow-spear and slew the Cannibal when next he entered his house during a frenzied rampage of the village. Tsaiat, both from that village and others in the vicinity, continued to cause the murderer's death with the aid of a member of the society who was a professional killer. 575* 578 [432]

Tsaiat did not always come to the Tsaiat in quarrels between members of the two societies. Long ago, the a'alt were invited to a potlatch in a village in the upper Bella Coola valley. One of their own dances was taking place, but they 575* 578 796*

126 text, although they are obvious on the phonograph record.
185 In singing, moreover, sounds, especially vowel sounds, are *533 altered to fit the tune, a factor which accounts for further discrepancies between record and text. A frequent device is redupication, a word or group of words is repeated in singing when not called for in the spoken version. Finally one sound occurs in singing which is practically unknown in speaking, voiced s (recorded as ʃ) which gives a whistling effect. Many choruses and some whole songs consist of meaningless sound in such cases the tune alone is important and no attempt was made to record the syllables.

It was quite as difficult to obtain interpretations as to record texts. Songs which have been handed down for generations abound in archaic expressions which are meaningless even to the older men; some recently composed are full of metaphorical devices to conceal their real significance from the uninitiated. The result is consequently a series of words which taken one at a time, convey no meaning. In many cases it was impossible to obtain literal translations, even with the willing assistance of younger men familiar with English. Every effort was made to get the general meaning, and it is felt that this object was adequately achieved, though the transcriptions do not be sufficiently accurate for grammatical analysis.

*533 Singers function at every ceremony; in fact, its success
*776 depends so largely upon their efforts that they are also *575 important members of the community. Some singers are [illegible] created by the initiation of an ancestral prerogative; others [illegible] by having composed a suitable tune. The young man who has [illegible] by having composed a suitable tune. The young man who, [illegible]
554 does so, calls one of the established musicians aside and hums
*424 it to him; if the hearer is favourably impressed, he may hum [illegible] and repeat it to his fellows, and if it wins their approval, the [illegible] composer may be asked to join their ranks for the occasion which it is to be used. Thus encouraged, the young man likely to try again, or he may be invited to assist at an ceremony for which a large number of singers is required.
proficiency, he is certain to win recognition in course of time

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

until it is accepted by all that he is one of the men who should be called upon to take part in all rites. If possible, he endeavours to legalize his position by a distribution of presents. Men are always eager to become singers, both for fame and for emoluments.

New songs are required every year for nuxuk and kwiuc dances, necessitating an almost limitless number of compositions. Singers frequently make use of fragments of old tunes, or snatches from half-forgotten songs, but they are ridiculed as inefficient if the plagiarism be too obvious. Tunes are always prepared in advance; in fact, proficient composers spend much of their time at all seasons of the year in humming over to themselves possible combinations. When word is passed around that a song is required, they meet in some lonely spot and each who has one in readiness hums it, tapping a gentle accompaniment. After considerable discussion, one is selected as being the most suitable and the singers make themselves familiar with it. Words are then put to it, consisting of fragments from the ancestral myth of the person for whom it has been prepared, or from some other theme appropriate to the occasion. Sometimes this is done by the composer of the tune; sometimes by another singer more familiar with the subject. The provision of words is considered less difficult and less important than the composition of a tune; no one knows the source of inspiration for the latter, but the former is said to come from either the heart or the head. All ceremonial songs are divided into three sections; kululu : or first part, ic iko ll or second part, and ilco or third part, separated from one another by the sisnalic, wordless chorus. The three parts correspond, approximately, to verses and each contains four, rarely six, subdivisions. In mourning songs there are sometimes as many as six or eight ilco, and the whole is correspondingly lengthened.

On the night of a ceremony, the singers always take their places beforehand for a final rehearsal. Each brings his own beating-stick, a stout baton about two feet long to pound on the floor in time with his singing. The only other musical

539*

[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
eagle down on his head(f)	ye children	of chiefs.

[illegible]
[accompanying concluding horn.]

(a) For some unexplained reason this song has been used without change for three generations. It was composed for a certain Sinkaup, willed by him to Wiuslis, who transmitted it to the present user. [424] [428]

(b) Recorded as song VII D 11, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

(c) Ali wilkum of dai should probably be dain, but in singing the final a sound is usually indistinguishable and has accordingly been omitted throughout. The d sound is often sung as d but the one spelling has been used consistently. [145]

(d) The wordless chorus of this song consists of a series of grunts which are said to be the voice of a horse, the crest of Wiuslis.

(e) The meaning of this is: What my grandfather brought down.

(f) The grandfather of Wiuslis had willed to him the right to use this crest. [424]

(g) The man from whom this song was obtained did not know what was the crest of Wiuslis. He judged from the text that it must have been the horse, although this is not one of the generally recognized birds. [428]

(h) Meaning: The horse which has failed to jeh its prey. When this song was sung, a masked figure of a horse appeared and unfolded several of the spectators, who were here reinforced for having permitted a pretenaitive to be displayed. [431] [424]

(i) An ambiguous expression for pretenaitive.

Song of Apalsis of Kimsquit when initiated into the Sunsh Society(a)

A Tsyuilkwaimaiyawa	a'wawkwaqwa	Tsa ahwiskaqilaxwa
Be of good courage	ye of the potlatch(b).	Use up and down(c)
[illegible]	Tsawaxwaiwalkwa	ahwaqwaiwalai
your head.	They have met with an accident(d),	the house being flooded (e).

([illegible] [illegible])

B [illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Wiuslis their farm [or crest]	whose will become [illegible]	who rise to Sunsh
[illegible]	Kawilkwai'ahwa	[illegible]
the Kimsquit River(f).	They who can dishes (g)	will prepare their biggest room.

([illegible] [illegible])

C The third part has been forgotten.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 12a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.

(b) The wording shows that the song was to be used at a potlatch.

(c) Meaning: Make use of it all directions.

2:36:Hewitt K-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellecoola 3-E6

(c) As incident in the dancer's ancestral myth, one of his forefathers ascended to dancing a cool chief. 533*

(d) Many origin myths dancing known, provided by Aperow for the four sections, which expended of their own accord to accommodate guests or patronize. The reference is to one of them, although it was impossible to record the myth itself. [795]

Song Used for Event of Kwaquitla

A Pâmyulâm Know yourselves for us,	ut'ilkuak yo wonderer!	Ilâkyulâyulâm See which is my supernatural being(d).	wyulâyyulâ

[WORDS OMITTED]

B Nulâmulâmulâm As the bottom(e)	ulâlâyyulâm the four corner(f)	âlâmamâyâ sented himself	mu nulâmulâ of our provided food(g).

[WORDS OMITTED]

C The third part, if it was existed, has been forgotten.

(a) Recorded on song VII D 6b, National Museum of Canada, singer, Jim Pollard. Ever was his mother's brother.
(b) The dancer's ancestors are invited to gather to witness his performance.
(c) Thus is: The mouth.
(d) Referring to one of the dancer's earliest ancestors.
(e) The reference is to the Kwaquit River which moves with salmon, the dancer describes the fish as the fare provided for his ancestral family by Aperow.

Song Used for Event of Kwaquit (a)

A ne Ilâ Lâmamulâm Go out and see,	yo ut'ilkuak yo wonderer!	Yulâmulâmulâ It is apparent(a) âyulâkuat what travels everywhere(b),	âlamulâlâm what brings our food(c)	âmulâyamulâmulâ from its home(d).

[WORDS OMITTED]

C Ilâmamulâm There is	âmulâmulâm the chief	Kulululâlâ(g) Kulululâlâm,	âlâmamulâmu he carries a heavy burden(h)	[796 424]
mamulâlâ in his name	âmulâyamulâmulâ from his land.

(a) Recorded on song VII D 6a, National Museum of Canada, singer, Jim Pollard.
(b) Only one of the three parts are remembered.
(c) The actual meaning of kulululâ is: What is Apparent. So use in this case is, therefore, an extraordinary pun.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

#583 (d) A somewhat beautiful reference to the power of the dancer's totemism.
(e) Another arrogant reference to the totemism.
[776] (f) In Bella Bella.
[424] (g) This is a Bella Bella being of whom little is known by the Bella Coola. The right to use him as totemism came from a remote ancestor.
(h) Presumably, the dancer's right to perform.

Fragment of a Song Used for Kapsis, a Kimsquit Steer(a)

A Hiyumsmsis	mudzwimsmsg	Sdzwimsmdzis
Protect your farm,	you quiet people!	Is always shooting arrows

Sudzwimsmdzis my count(b).

[WORDS NOT CONTD]

B and C have been forgotten.

[WORDS NOT CONTD]

Kymsiss	Ksyilimsmsmdzisiff
Don't do that,	they will cover us with valuables(c).

(a) Recorded on song VII D 29b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song is said to be an extremely ancient one, used by some of the earliest settlers; the tune is said to be entirely different from any recent social compositions.

[424] (b) The dancer's crest was the wasp, an insect which is believed to sting by the discharge of invisible, minute arrows. This admonition to the guests to hide their faces was, of course, a boasting reference to the goods which would be distributed at the approaching potlatch. Some of the first settlers were seen down to earth as a wasp, but several, including Stalkie, were guided and assisted by these insects to such an extent that they have been regarded as crests.
[825] [775]

[558] (c) It is customary, when quoting this song, to add this final remark. It is related that, many years ago, a Kimsquit man used his wasp prerogative, but was shamed at the potlatch by being transferred with goods from a steer. Since that time, none [424] of his descendants has dared to use the right and the admonition against doing so has become almost proverbial.

Fragment of a Song Used for Nagwilmsis of Kimsquit(a)

A Kwsmdzilkwsm	Ahdzhdzwhdzi	Dzhgwhdzwhdzi	wsmsgwhdzi
We all go	to see(b).	He(c) informs us	of what he carries.

B and C The name of this song is remembered, though it was used at a potlatch about 1900.

(a) Recorded on song VII D 29b, National Museum of Canada; singer, Louis Hall.
(b) Meaning: To gaze upon something supernatural.
(c) An unnamed supernatural being.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

533*

Fragment of a Song Used for Sxwahlis, a Man of Salmon House(a)

Wlidlpmlklaix Whence come those(b)	nanamy who were too late?

No more of this song is remembered.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 9c, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.
(b) Refers to guests at the potlatch.

Fragment of a Song Used for Sahamsta of Kimsquit(a)

Xatiqmsiye I am happy at seeing you(b),	natiqmsiye I am happy at seeing you,	hauhai good-bye(c).

No more of this song is remembered.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 31h, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard.
(b) Presumably refers to the dancer's totemism, Beaver, obtained from his mother's mother, a Kitlobe woman. [424]
(c) This word is said to be in the Haida language.

Song(s) Used for Lasqyaa-k'ii(b) of Kimsquit(a)

A Kmxwlhaxwmdimsqimalaax I make two of myself(c).	Ep'ensi(d) Raven(f).
ckhlnqlakaiyalinqin I make a huge whale of myself,	Ep'ensi Raven, ahtc-ulpimaxhs at the place of lucky finds (g).	Kmxwiklitimalaa People will remember me,	ckhlnqlakaiyalinqin I make a huge whale of myself(h).

[WOODLESS CANOE]

B Kmxwlmlqsiiwt' I stand upon	ahtc-ulmlaix my point(i);	ckapang' ctalakai I cry out loudly(j) dimlkmqalai with respect to my position as chief.

[WOODLESS CANOE]

C Kmxwmlhqsl' Go yourselves!	Ahlaiyanlinkp Pick out what you want!	Olqayimxmimals My house	mculakaals is open(k).

(a) It is doubtful whether or not this song should be included in this section. It was used by a professional warrior at a potlatch but, like all others with his [701] [575] [424]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

*533 prerogative, he was debarred from seclusion in the back-room and consequent [701] initiation as a sisook. The exact relationship between warriors and members of [575] the sisook society is obscure.

(b) Laxsiyaa-k' is a Kitkatla name from the north. The first owner moved to [424] Kitlobe where he married, and the designation was transmitted to his descendants.
[177] One of the latter migrated to Kimsquit, where the name has since been handed down from generation to generation though its original source has not been forgotten.

(c) Recorded as song VII D 36, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pollard. This song is said to have been used about 1870.

(d) Vocative form.

(e) That is: I double my importance. This kind of expression is popular among chiefs.

[424] (f) Qoui is one of the ancestral names of Raven, the dancer's crest. In thus [262] addressing the bird, he called attention to his ancestral history.

(g) The home of the first Laxsiyaa-k' was near a point where dead whales often drifted ashore. The dancer likens himself to a whale on which people will dine.

(h) Such repetition is not uncommon. The dancer implies that his wealth will be divided in a manner similar to the cutting up of a whale's carcass.

(i) A promontory owned by the first Laxsiyaa-k'.

(j) That is: I summon people [to a feast.]

(k) An invitation not to be taken too literally.

Xe-tla Songs

The tunes of xe-tla songs are believed to have been handed down, unaltered, for many generations. The words, too, are frequently ancient although the singers sometimes make slight changes so that they will be more suitable for the chief in whose honour they are being sung. Owing to the decline of cere-[796] monials in which they were used, few xe-tla songs are now remembered.

Xe-tla Song Used by Sinapul of Kimsquit(a)

[727] A Alinaynaa | Ahlrnal'alhdai | Di ntheitmydai | dinulkmit
Come! | See! | The chief | a man stands in the bow(b) di yalentsal'aikdai of those who travelled everywhere.

[WOODLESS CHORUS]

B Aleiqualnaynaaeit | di'entsaa'alhdai | eiyattiyamathdai
He did so, | my pattern(c), | whence I come(d);

*[illegible] 533 [illegible] 579 [illegible] 794 herd, but the rites in which they were used have been practically discontinued for several years so that unabridged versions are almost impossible to obtain. All themes vary according to the ceremonies in which they are used. For potlatches, they consist of incidents from ancestral myths; whereas for non-ceremonial occasions following the Bacini season, they deal with current events. The following examples are divided into these two classes.

THEMES DRAWN FROM ANCESTRAL MYTHS

[illegible] Away Used for Purposes, a Sign of Kinship(a)

A [illegible]
They give valuable [illegible], | [illegible] my goods(b), | [illegible] they [illegible] their own opinion

[illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible]
[illegible] to whom of these [illegible] to my house I shall give illegible.

[illegible]

B [illegible]
I speak lightly | [illegible] of everything(d). | [illegible]
Through them(e)

[illegible]
I become elevated, | [illegible] my power to give potlatches (to) | [illegible] my male relatives(f).

[illegible]

C [illegible]
Presently I shall stand | [illegible] within the box | [illegible] as the [illegible] design,

[illegible]
where found to sit(g) | [illegible] the [illegible] skins(h) | [illegible] of Pachelbel(i).

(a) Recorded on song VII D 24a, National Museum of Canada, singer, Jim Pelkey.

(b) That is: The goods which I am about to distribute advise me. This statement is not to be taken literally.

(c) It was impossible to obtain a translation of each subdivision.

(d) Refers to the dancer's many perspectives.

(e) Refers to his male relatives.

(f) The dancer had obtained several perspectives from ancestors, treated practically.

(g) A reference to the dancer's origin myth (I, p. 320). The house of his [illegible] ancestor, had its door in a back corner instead of the usual front.

(h) That is: Whales were distributed as potlatches.

[illegible] 424 [illegible] 773

[illegible]

[illegible]

(1) [illegible] from [illegible] as a gift from [illegible].
(2) One of the donor's [illegible] ancestors.
(3) Conclude [illegible] such as this, referring both to the approaching [illegible] and the donor's origin [illegible], are common in potlatches and [illegible].

[illegible] Song Cycle for [illegible] of Kwagiutl

A [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible]
Formerly the people who held [illegible] will [illegible] when I [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] | [illegible]
[illegible] [illegible], [illegible] [illegible].

[illegible]

B [illegible]
In the beginning there were three | [illegible] | [illegible]

[illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible]
[illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible]

[illegible]

C The last part has been forgotten(g).

(a) Recorded as song 102 D 3b, National Museum of Canada, stages, [illegible] [illegible].
(b) The word [illegible], which is translated as [illegible], is used only for the [illegible] of [illegible] [illegible] which are [illegible] to [illegible] [illegible] by those who are [illegible] [illegible] of the [illegible] family concerned.
(c) It was impossible to obtain [illegible] translations of the [illegible].
(d) It [illegible] which [illegible] (i.e. [illegible]) [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]. It is claimed that the composers of this song [illegible] to [illegible] this designation.
(e) [illegible] were [illegible] in the Kwagiutl River, but the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] that [illegible] and [illegible] were [illegible].
(f) The Kwagiutl River is sometimes [illegible] [illegible], or [illegible] [illegible]. This designation was [illegible] by [illegible] from [illegible], with the message to [illegible] [illegible] of [illegible], and [illegible] by him on the river.
(g) This song was sung during the winter of [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]. It is claimed that the right to the song [illegible] was lost to a Kwagiutl [illegible] who failed to return it. The [illegible] has been [illegible] [illegible], but when he was [illegible] to [illegible], one of the singers who was [illegible] to the original [illegible] refused to take part in the singing.

[illegible] Song Cycle of a Kwagiutl Chief

I am [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible]
I have [illegible] | the [illegible] right | which [illegible] | my [illegible].

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

(1) Sung on song 9(1) D 5b, National Museum of Canada, stages, [illegible]
(2) Typically a reference to Nuxlayank, the dancer's farter guiner(?).
(3) The meaning of this word is not known, it is considered to be quite distinct from the other term in Chinook jargon for "dance."
(4) The meaning of the whole song is extremely obscure.

Marriage Songs

As marriage songs, two distinct classes may be considered:

1. Those used at weddings;
2. Shaming songs used in connection with divorce cases.

Divorces are said to have been handed down from the [illegible] and consist of a few almost meaningless words. The lyrics are composed whenever required, and consist of foul allusions the person being ridiculed.

Wedding Songs

Gass Marriage Song(1)

[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]

(1) Sung on song 9(1) D 5b, National Museum of Canada, stages, [illegible]

(2) [illegible] with reference to the beginning of time, and brought [illegible] to Alqunta, the originator of dancing at weddings. He landed at [illegible] an explanation is given by the Bella Coola for the use of this song [illegible] of dance.

(3) [illegible] to a marriage among the five people as with. One of [illegible] a woman whose relatives had brought light with them from [illegible].

[illegible] Marriage Song(1)

[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]

(1) Sung on song 9(1) D 5b, National Museum of Canada, stages, [illegible]

(2) [illegible] 533*
(3) [illegible] 585
(4) The use of this song has been forgotten. [773] [424]

Fragmentary and short as are these songs, they are more elaborate than many used at weddings. These frequently contain no words, merely an ancient tune accompanied by humming and meaningless vocal interjections.[illegible]

[illegible]

Songs of this type are sung by the singers while the principal performer dances; in this respect, they resemble social compositions and differ entirely from the elaborately and individualistic wedding songs. Though used primarily to dance a runaway husband or wife, one is sometimes employed on other occasions. 533* 586 571 [345]

[illegible]

1 [illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

[illegible] [103]

[illegible]

2 [illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

[illegible]

3 The third part of this song has been forgotten.

(4) This most recent "The one (feminine) with the very hairy pudenda." The critics in question had two views from her husband and the children was one; [illegible] [351] [353]

[illegible]

[illegible] | [illegible] | [illegible]

[illegible]

(a) [illegible]

(b) [illegible]

(c) [illegible]

(d) [illegible]

(e) [illegible]

(f) [illegible]

(g) [illegible]

(h) [illegible]

(i) [illegible]

(j) [illegible]

(k) [illegible]

(l) [illegible]

(m) [illegible]

(n) [illegible]

(o) [illegible]

(p) [illegible]

(q) [illegible]

(r) [illegible]

(s) [illegible]

(t) [illegible]

(u) [illegible]

(v) [illegible]

(w) [illegible]

(x) [illegible]

(y) [illegible]

(z) [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

(a) [illegible]

(b) [illegible]

(c) [illegible]

(d) [illegible]

(e) [illegible]

(f) [illegible]

(g) [illegible]

(h) [illegible]

(i) [illegible]

(j) [illegible]

(k) [illegible]

(l) [illegible]

(m) [illegible]

(n) [illegible]

(o) [illegible]

[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]	[illegible]

[illegible]	[illegible]

(a) [illegible]

(b) [illegible]

[illegible] GIRLS ORDERS

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

(a) "The Gambler." This is one of the appellations of the infant's parent, the [illegible]
[illegible]
(b) Recorded as song VII (f) 1a, National Museum of Canada, stage, Jim Pickard. This song was composed for, and used during the forty-seven of 1924 in the initiation of Lithuanians, a bands called [illegible] to Kamaniauka. [776]
(c) A reference to Dieu, the neophyte's parent. The significance is that death [illegible]
[illegible] [556]
(d) The elaborate ritual of an Dieu dance depth grief. It was impossible to [illegible]
(e) Referring to one of the dead man's ancestors. The dance changes, and is [illegible]
(f) Referring to the dead Kamaniauka.
(g) "The Letter." This is one of the many designations for Pachpin, one of the dead man's [illegible]
(h) A reference to the supposing [illegible] described in the dead man's origin myth. [775]
(i) One of Kamaniauka's [illegible]
(j) This is another name for Pachpin. The meaning of the whole part is Kamaniauka are [illegible] within the supposing [illegible] on Mount Pachpin. There is the added implication that he [illegible] as does the supernatural [illegible] in the [illegible] dance.

Non-Ceremonial Songs

The Bella Coola are not an inordinately musical people. Sing- [776] ing is unique in an essential feature of every ceremonial circle, when alone, an individual seldom burns into melody from dans joie de vivre. They have, however, a certain number of non-ceremonial songs, diverse and more diverse in theme than any of those previously recorded. The people themselves do not arrange to classify them, though they can conveniently be grouped in accordance with their themes. Some deal with [525] love, others are sung invariably at sight of certain birds or mammals, while a third class can only be described as miscellaneous. Still others accompany stories and games; these are included in vol. III, chap. V, and appendix B.[1]

LOVE SONGS

Men sometimes compose songs which they sing, unaccom- [555] panied, to their lady loves. Occasionally, too, the mother of a [192] popular son will teach it to his friends who will serenade the [434]

[1 [See vol. III, pp. 545 to 567 - Anthony]]

[illegible] women, for taking the leading part. Such songs are our private property. Women, likewise, compose songs about men, though these are usually of a mocking nature and are sung only by a group of girls when on a picnic or fern-gathering expedition.

(Man's Love Song)(a)

[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
If you marry(b)	to Sang[illegible],	I would become a pine,	I would capture pine
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
If you marry	to the moon,	I would become a full-moon(b)	I would capture moon

(a) Recorded as song [illegible] D. Ch., National Museum of Canada, singer, [illegible] Dalhousie. This is said to be an ancient Haida Gwaii love song.

(b) The marriage here indicates merely the end of a work group, not a final rite. Marriage as a sacramental union in which the services of an officiant are required.

(Man's Love Song)(a)

[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
If you should go	to the land	of the full-moon,
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
I would change myself to a kingfisher,	[illegible]	I would not you.

(a) Recorded as song [illegible] D. Ch., National Museum of Canada, singer, [illegible] Dalhousie. The singer composed this song about 1900.

(Man's Love Song)(a)

[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
I	[illegible]	[illegible]

[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
I	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

[illegible]	[illegible]
I	[illegible]

P

CHAPTER 4

STORIES

Giant Stories — Natural Stories — Funny Stories — Supernatural Stories — Cosmogonic Stories — Historical Stories

In addition to myths which have definite sociological importance, such as those which explain the procedure of dances and other rituals, there are many legends which can best be described as stories.[1] These do not belong either to individuals or to families, consequently they are more widely known than allegedly historical accounts which are the personal property of social groups. In the long winter evenings it is common to see an old man or woman surrounded by young boys and girls listening attentively to some tale. An outburst of laughter always accompanies a humorous incident, no matter how many times it may have been heard. The narration is a mere pastime, an amusement which seems never to palL either on narrator or listener. Occasionally, a person of philosophical disposition will claim that a moral is taught by every story, and it is true that many of them point out some well-known experience of life, such as "The Bear Bit"; the most unconsciously strike the listener, but any intentional didacticism is quite foreign to Bella Coola thought.

As will be seen, these stories contain a large number of fantastic episodes. The Bella Coola recognize this to be the case without doubting their truth. They describe events which took place long, long ago, when men and supernatural beings were in closer contact than at present, when men was able to understand the speech and actions of the birds, the mammals, and the fish. The people of today do not expect to have such experiences now but, according to their point of view, there is no reason why the incidents of the stories could not have happened in the distant past. Frequently, different versions of the same legend are told by different men, such as [1] Stories, a story or, more accurately, a piece of ancient lore.

APPENDIX [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

APPENDIX D

192*

A'ylim: Village on Salmon House, on the upper Dean River.
ainim: Position between two lines.
a-lat: 1—Raised hail behind the fire used by a person seeking power, or by one who has been in contact with the supernatural.
2—Powerful.
[223]
a-mitsa: To reach.
a-mitsamitl: Hereditary fore handed down secretly to a family.
[224]
Ayimsis: One of Kwoiz's Cove sisters.
ayiqmas: Sound sung in slow time.
[323]
ayilim: 1—Rim, project, bump, seat.
2—One of the sights of a potlatch, probably that on which a representative of the deceased appears.
ayu: Rocky Mountain jay.
[225]
ayumatl: Carved horse gear.
Ababaxsit: Wife of Gaalq; both were changed to stone in the beginning of time.
ababxsit: That part of a house between fire and doorway.
Ababxsitsis: Expedition of the supernatural being P'ensiw against herons and fish.
A-gunam: Gaanxt's fish-dam in the beginning of time; the stones has since been used by his descendants.
agwanim: Only sister to a family of several brothers.
[401]
ag?: Tools.
[125]
ainmilim: Swaying to medicinal smoke as a curative measure.
[326] ainqmis: Dry.
[326]
Ait-sawit: Evil male supernatural being.
[324]
a-lag: 1—Death, not anthropomorphized.
2—Dead.
[325]
alawi?: Kingfisher.
[327]
ala: Fish-hook.
Alkem, "Place of the Dogs Jaws": Supernatural beings resident in the land otters.
amimsu: Eaten up.
amiqwat: plural, amiqwatl, neutro plural, amiqwatat.
1—Person who has not given a potlatch, a commoner.
2—Ancestral name of a Kitsegukla woman.
Ahlat: Lesser village.
Ayi: Deer was mentioned in an ancient story.
ayu hoolim, "He Unwrote Over Himself." The implication is that this is an indecent of witchcraft, hence the word really means snow. It is the Kitsegukla version of a conjur.
[187]
a-yunlim: Cause of death.
Ayu'i, "Occupied Mound": 1—Village at Kuxina.
2—Artificial mound at Pitts.
3—Village on the Kitsegukla River.
4—Island near Green Falls.
Ayu'i nas Wunalaxis, "Place of Dogs": Locality near Green Falls where the dogs come to work in the beginning of time.
ayunu'i: Partial decade.
[225]

*The house is a favorite place for obtaining power, the probable reason for the identity of the two terms.

Gaiwan. Tail.
Gaokiak. Sun.
Gar. Black beetles.
Gaiwo. Outer name of a Kitsugas man.
Gamilan. Personal name of the wife of Dadly who was changed to stone in the beginning of time.
Gaol. Rapids.
Gapaskiak. Kitkata chief living in the beginning of time.
Gaskly. 1—Marriage, properly arranged and legitimate.
2—The actual wedding day.
Gamilan. Outer name of a Kitsugas woman.*
Gar. Black beetles for boiling liquids.
Gdemdayar. The melting of manitous from a manitou stone a curing repository.
Gdemdayaw. Investment property, i.e., one for which a return is expected.
Gdaem. Bathroom in which sweat initiates and others are cleansed.
Gdim. Women during ceremonies.
Gdim, "What Was Sent Down". Intangible possession, such as a myth or a gen, negative, inherited from the distant past, usually from the coming to earth of the first settlers in the beginning of time.
Gempiyo. Wooden tongs such as are used for lifting hot stones.
Gdemdayar ala Gamiyaw. Economic rite in which the performer appears to be drowned.
Gdaw ni Gdoll, "The Guest". One who has been initiated as a member of the Sacred society but has not yet danced, especially one admitted through understudied knowledge or through successful participation in either a Sacrum or a Mystery dance.
Gdoll, "Rendered Incapable of Reasoning". Said of an unintoxicated person who is alleged to have exercised as a repository.
Gdoiaga. Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Gdoiaw. The dancers waiting for power by a shaman who, having had one visitation, awaits further manifestations before displaying his ability.
Gdu, mentor, Gdaw. Grandmother.
Gdu-ram-ra. Ceremonial marriage of a female child to an adult man.
Gdaudal. Name given to their canoe by the first settlers at Gaw in the beginning of time.
Gdaumaiaw, "The Wise One". One of Barney's women as chief.
Gdaudlan. One of the first women to settle at Ksyklad in the beginning of time.
Gdaia. Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Gdaum. 1—Cloth.
2—Ceremonial cloth-like creation, alleged to be found far in the forest.
Gdaulay. Name of a shaman who received his power from ghosts.
Gdi. Red elderberry.
Gdim. Wooden remedy used in the grounding of cedar bark.
Gdi. Unidentified plant.
Gdem. To wear dried salmon.
Gdemdayar. Suggestion, in the sense of held in place by physical resistance.
Gdaqmak. Locality on Pine Channel, west of Gurnah.
Gdaw. Place on south side of North Bentinck Arm, about one-quarter mile from its head.

---

*This name appears to be an entirely different word from Gaiwo.

Z:NA Uwesatik II-5 (1922-1924) 1968
NEA Bellacoola NEA

192*

[824]

[825]

[622]

[553]
[796]

[688]
[424]

[821]
[769]
[823]

[535]

Kwakiutlans: Totemistic Kwakiutl geographical subdivision of the Kwakiutl, the Kwakiutl proper.
Kwakiutlans: Kwakiutl proper.
Kwakiutlans: Kwakiutl proper.
Kwakiutlans: Kwakiutl proper.
Kwakiutlans: Kwakiutl proper.
Kwakiutlans: Kwakiutl proper.
Kwakiutlans: Kwakiutl proper.
Kwakiutlans: Kwakiutl proper.
Kwakiutlans: Kwakiutl proper.
Kwakiutlans: Kwakiutl proper.
Kwakiutlans: Kwakiutl proper.
Kwakiutlans: Kwakiutl proper.
Kwakiutlans: Kwakiutl proper.
Kwakiutlans: Kwakiutl proper.
Kwakiutlans: Kwakiutl proper.
Kwakiutlans: Kwakiutl proper.
Kwakiutlans: Kwakiutl proper.
Kwakiutlans: Kwakiutl proper.
Kwakiutlans: Kwakiutl proper.
Kwakiutlans: Kwakiutl proper.
Kwakiutlans: Kwakiutl proper.
Kwakiutlans: Kwakiutl proper.
Kwakiutlans: Kwakiutl proper.
Kwakiutlans: Kwakiutl proper.
Kwakiutlans: Kwakiutl proper.
Kwakiutlans: Kwakiutl proper.
Kwakiutlans: Kwakiutl proper.
Kwakiutlans: Kwakiutl proper.
Kwakiutlans: Kwakiutl proper.
Kwakiutlans: Kwakiutl proper.
Kwakiutlans: Kwakiutl proper.
Kwakiutlans: Kwakiutl proper.
Kwakiutlans: Kwakiutl proper.
Kwakiutlans: Kwakiutl proper.

2:36:Dorsey:B.-5 (1922-1924) 1968
NEA Bellacoola NEA

192*

[601]
[614]
[826]
[465]
[588]
[601]
[712]
[775]
[424]
[221]
[761]
[825]

[illegible]: Number of times one and some unusual family or speaker.
[illegible]: Supernatural being who comes with [illegible] to bring a call to the latter's prestige.
[illegible]: One of the names of Great Blue Heron as chief.
[illegible]: 1—A passage, especially the digestive tract.
2—Laudatory adjective applied to chiefs, referring to goods distributed.
[illegible]: Tahn-hah.
[illegible]: Ravenscow, virtually pro, given to carpenters and other craftsmen at a dancing ceremony.
[illegible]: Exchange marriage.
[illegible]: Passages.
[illegible]: Place near [illegible].
[illegible]: Racial name owned by [illegible] at Kitsapit in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Half-brother or sister with different mother from speaker.
[illegible]: Half-brother or sister with different father from speaker.
[illegible]: "The Inhospitable One". Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.
[illegible]: One of the four supernatural eagle-like creatures.
[illegible]: Supernatural being who created [illegible] in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: One of the four supernatural eagle-like creatures.
[illegible]: Name occupied by the four authors at [illegible] in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: The use of potent medicines after seeing a giant toad.
[illegible]: 1—The giving of hemlock-bark and dried cedar-bark to [illegible].
2—The cooking of offerings to ghosts by the casting of food on a fire.
[illegible]: One of the four supernatural eagle-like creatures.
[illegible]: Male supernatural being who travels with [illegible], takes charge of the singers who also accompany him, and sometimes dances happily.
[illegible]: Mother Nature.
[illegible]: Fishermen with inherited right to use of a salmon weir or of a place for catching sturgeon.
[illegible]: "A Calling Back", or "A Seizing". Term applied to the death of a chief in the belief that it is due to the supernatural artisans having come down to carry him off. The word is often added to their designation.
[illegible], "Where Water Extend". Name of one of the four groups of authors at Kitsapit in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Racial name of a Bella Coola man.
[illegible]: Professional name of a female dancer.
[illegible]: Supernatural being; this is probably a synonym for one of the Carpenters.
[illegible]: Racial name of a Bella Coola man.
[illegible]: One of the four supernatural eagle-like creatures.
[illegible]: Kitsapit house mentioned in an ancient story.
[illegible], "The One that Protrudes in the Head of the River". Supernatural name of sockeye salmon.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 192

Nuxutsqmum: Woman endowed supernaturally by Awi'lkwulcais and serving as patron (?) to a hamat dancer.

[919] nuxulilaic: Omen of death.

Nuxutsumhmum, "The One Who Is Thought Of": One of Tlistqhlitw-a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.

Nuxwumhlaic: 1—Man dwelling in Xwaqwa's house.
2—Kwiat name of a Kimsquit woman.

nuxqqim: The cry of hi, hi, uttered by Cannibals.

Nuxwumqq: Kwiat name assumed by a Dzaz woman in the beginning of time.

[424] nuxqqwum: Kwiat with right to display a puppet-patron. The difference, if any, between this and qaiaum is obscure.

Nu'xwumhmaic, "The Widower": One of Raven's names as chief.

[575] nuqtsoxlal-um: Synonym for ksuxum: Payments made by the wife's relatives to those of the bridegroom on first arrival outside his house on the wedding day. They are said to be in return for "Food" received from them on many occasions.

Nuqtsuhlitsa, "Hoodlumly Deaf": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.

[302] nuqw-ustc: The binding, by a warrior, of his hair into a top-knot.

nuqtsiw-i: Medicine brewed in a skull.

Nuqtymin, "Place of Much Ksymin": Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.

Nuqqutsic: Nuqwal name of a Kimsquit man.

Nuqlisqutlw-a: One of the first women to settle at Rivers Inlet in the beginning of time.

[105] nuqwumw-i ne xuq'"ain: One year.

[528] nuqum: Envy, in the sense of desire for something from which one is debarred by lack of prerogative.

nuqwil, "Empty House": House in which a hamat dance is taking place.

nuqulqut: The throwing of grease on a fire to heat, both literally and figuratively, a rival.

[521] Nuqwly": 1—Supernatural beings responsible for an eclipse.
2—Eclipse.

[527] nuqulitsin: Physical strength of the body running down the sides from little finger to little toe.

nuqhsum: Hoot-like cry uttered at the coming of a call for hamatsa and other important hamat rites.

[777] nuq"xuxulitsin: Unexpected stroke of good fortune.

Nuqwitlmlaic: Kwiat name of a Kimsquit man.

[772] Nuqwilim: Site of an ancient town on Schooner Pass.

Nuqwilaic: The upper heaven.

nuqwna: Woman with thick pubic hair.

Nuqwulinqlaw-i: A Dzaz cemetery.

Nuxlqwumuin, "Where Nqwumw Speaks": One of the names of the supreme god's house.

[524] nuxtqwu-uqy: Cottonwood bude.

Nuxtqwul'un, "The Place for Catching Salmon": Name assumed by Smaoas in the beginning of time.

nuxlkwqy: Canoe-maker.

Nuxlum: River entering the Bella Coola from the south near Nuqlalt.

[535] nuxlstqwy: Children's dance which serves as training for hamat rites and to provide entertainment.

[169]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Sinuqutl: One of the first men to settle in the Dean River valley in the beginning of time.

Sinuximatl: 1—"Right Hand": Name of a Sinux repository derived from a supernatural creature.
2—Kusiut name of a Bella Coola woman.

sio°mstu: Intangible kusiut prerogative of imitating coitus. [424] siplplâlosuts: Song sung by a kusiutem dancer on recovery from apparent death. [861] siphim: Regular beatings given to a male child.

Siqâlyam, "Time for Gathering Fern Root": Fourth moon after the summer solstice. [805]

Siqulusnâm: Rain after storm, anthropomorphized. This presumably refers to rain that comes after violent thunder. [821]

Siqulxmaix di Sisi, "The Gathering of the Supernatural Beings": Fifth moon after the summer solstice. [805] siqualdjut: Term of opprobrium applied to one who will not allow his children to perform ceremonial dances. [626] siqusek: Outright bestowal of a prerogative at marriage.

sisusts: Departure to a new locality. [425]

sisi, vocative, sisai: Father's brother or mother's brother. [601]

sisut: Paddle.

sisutsta: Dangerous power such as is present at various petrified places. [501]

Sitkmsta: One of the names of the supreme god.

Sitliuq': Ancestral name of a Bella Coola woman. [778] siut, vocative, sioat: 1—Any supernatural being, the significance being, "Learned."

2—Supernatural power of any kind.
3—Synonym for qomo·ts, the large sisaok whistle.
4—Killer whale. [825]
5—Song.
6—Kusiut name of one of the first men to settle at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.

Siutsn·i: Part of a peculiar repository.

Siutumkila: Celebrated Bella Coola warrior.

siutnâlos: Wordless chorus. [533]

Siwal·os, "Where Canoes Are Left": Village on the upper Kimsquit River.

Siwid: Celebrated Djoldâsnix chief living in the last century.

siwlikum: 1—Expedition without definite objective, made by a despondent person. [828]
2—Individual making such a journey. [484]

Siyman·a: 1—Daughter of the supreme god.
2—Kusiut name of a Bella Coola woman.

siuzâu·imustsa: Place where healing power is petrified.

Siuzinfutnam: Synonym for Mislakila, the supernatural being connected with sisaok rites.

siuwismag: Kusiut dance or object used in the land above which serves as pattern or model, anânusikx, for the user's protégé on earth.

siuwofâskmak: Actual goods used for the "Opening," the first public announcement of a forthcoming marriage. [584]

siuwutl: Unmarried mother. [848] siyustla: To perform the services of a herald to a master, especially the proper direction of all chiefly rites. The word siustla may be connected with this.

2; McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1968
NEA Bellacoola NEA

192*

shell: Devil's club.
shémmalis: To lament ceremonially, the term used to describe the reason for a memorial potlatch. [824] [965] Shenl, "Ashes": Ancestral name created for a Snaiah chief about 1910.
shewich: Supernatural creature dwelling in water.
shiy: Anus.
shoon: Splinters projecting upwards from the hole of a broken tree-trunk. [824] Shumalpuwa: One of the first women to settle at Snaiah in the beginning of time.
Shuyn: Chief of the spring salmon.
sisiutaka: Narrow strips of goat skin with wool attached, distributed at marriage. [585] sk'ism: Mosquito. [825] skémmalpat, "The Opening": Ceremony when the first public presents are given to the family of a future wife, following the commencement of betrothal. [584] sky: To cure, especially with the aid of a frenzied beating of sticks. [481] Skwamish: Snaw man mentioned in an ancient story.
skimp, "Cure Tel": Call of invitation to a Kwiat dance in the upper Bella Coola valley.
skiwm: Cloud.
skma: Thick hide, either of moose or caribou. [825] skma: Semi-circular knife used by women for cutting salmon. [412] skmain, skmand, or skmalpat: 1—Frenzied beating of sticks for curing purposes, especially when the patient is a member of a secret society. [755] 2—Final Kwiat rite at end of the ceremonial season.
skmim: To cure by means of the frenzied pounding of sticks.
Skmi, "The Charred Portion of a Half-Consumed Log": s'alt name obtained in the beginning of time.
Skmnial: House used by a group of first settlers near Snaw in the beginning of time.
Skmnalin-a: Daughter of the first settlers at Nuqhalt in the beginning of time.
sko'nals: Fungus. [824]
skómmiants: 1—Box made of strands of cedar-bark. [415]
2—Ancient name of mixed head-dress.
sky: Ceremonial designs executed on the exterior front wall of a house.
skuhl': Rum.
Skulmaw-a: Kwiat name of a Kimsquit man. [825]
skul: Wasp. [727]
Skulmmalin: Rock on shore of North Bentinck Arm where war trophies were washed.
Slqmshal: Name of house brought down by first settlers at Slóhid in the beginning of time; the term was also applied by them to one of their female relatives. [601] slsi, sneatin, shsei: Parent-in-law or child-in-law.
slitty: Suitable place in the river for setting sockeye nets.
slíla: Game played with throwing stones.
sluck-it: Synonym for yaxmas, the tangible or intangible prerogative possessed by some kukwiat in addition to a dance rite. [424] ●
sluwalsin: River sculpin. [825]

E: McIntosh E-9 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bella Coola NES

shamán: 1—Shamanic gathering.
2—Shaming song.
3—The wailing of mourners at a grave.

[763] Shamán-na-k, "The Weaver": Female supernatural being whose appearance indicates the death of a chief.

shamánhlaxúm: Professional factor prerogative consisting of the right to sing of Sisíutla during factorum dances.

shamán: Dance.

Shamá: Earlier name of a Bella Coola woman.

Sla-lá: Whitewater River, the southern fork of the Bella Coola.

[824] shas: Long grass suitable for pasturage.

[252] shaló: Smoked spring salmon with the bone removed.

shaló: Shore, adverse.

[554] shamnéjlat, "The One with Many Descendants": Term used to describe an elderly man with many children and grandchildren.

Sla: Man mentioned in an ancient story.

[601] slal: Game, resembling a tug-of-war, played with wooden hoops and spears.

[978] shamán, sacatín, shamánjin: Grandchild, the reactive indicates endearment.

shamanin: The deposition of eagle down on the heads of those quarrelling to pacify them.

sl-a: Gull blubber.

shpiém: 1—Breathing.
2—Sound of a sound whistle, referred to as the breathing of Sisíutla.

shal: Chicken grouse.

Shalchmaly: 1—Ancient village in the upper Bella Coola valley.
[778] 2—Place of petrified power or site of ancient village.
3—Semi-anthropomorphical being responsible for power in this locality.

Sílim: Supernatural being resident at the mouth of every river.

shamán: The voice.

[824] shaná: Dried elderberries.

shámala: 1—Shaman-like power, as brought by the first people in the beginning of time.
[821] 2—Bella Coola woman.

sialpm: Eclipse.

shamanlúa: 1—One who keeps in touch with a concealed Cannibal.
[424] 2—One who has the inherited right to assist factor or sound dances; this prerogative occurs in Kimsquit only.

Smaielíla: One of the names of the supreme god.

Smaielúla: One of the names of the supreme god.

Smaiewa: 1—Synonym for Shalchmaly, q.v.
2—Ancestral name of a Bella Coola woman.

[424] smplaxúm: A possession, such as a myth or a prerogative, inherited from the distant past, usually from the coming to earth of the first people in the beginning of time.

smalchmaly: Debris from cones eaten by squirrels.

Smanu, "The First": One of the first men to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.

Smanuel: Man mentioned in an origin myth of a southern locality.

snáwmp, sacatín, snáwmp: Friends.

Ecabe: Eshabe River.

Eshabe: Eagle that perched on top of a post supporting the sky in the beginning of time. [825]

Ewer: Animal's entrails.

Ewo: Wife of the brother, foretelling death. [763]

Ewoso: Ceremony, in Bella Bella language.

Gaikhemo: Gentle return to her husband by a deserting wife on her return to him. [836]

Gaiter: Ramsonites flea.

Gada, bald eagle: 1—Village in the lower Bella Coola valley. [831]

2—Bald eagle.

3—Name created for himself by one of the first settlers at Kimsquit in the beginning of time. [825]

Gas: Storm, either facial or shamans.

Gaskiawa or Gaskiaiu: First night of a dance dance.

Gaskiskiawa: 1—Dance supposed to Kamquem's house.

2—Name obtained from them by a Gatha man in the beginning of time.

Gaskiskiawa: Extreme rite in which the performer's head appears to be pulled off. [415]

Gila: Closely woven basket of spruce roots.

Gilapanuxu: Any act of an unclean nature which prevents a supernatural being from using the supernatural. [384]

Gila: Powers distributed when a sand initiate dances. They are provided by the dance "To Shield Our Eyes" from the mountain and serve to recompense the supernatural and others who have assisted in the rite. [431]

Gnaw: Bell. [465]

Gnu: Shrub.

Gumkiskiu: Women resident in the far north in the beginning of time. [824]

Gunaqlar: The giving of presents to the servants and ministers of the dance of a patlatch in return for being served with food to a male woman. [431]

Gyaud: Small woodpecker, species undetermined. [824]

Gyaskie: Winter wren. [825]

Gyaudi: Spawning sockeye salmon. [826]

Gyiddin: Intangible facial prerogative consisting of the right to scratch the genitalia. [824]

Gwikhen: Pronoun.

Gwunkhdu: One of the first women to settle at Gwakil in the beginning of time.

Gwunkhdi: One of the first men to settle at Tsawat in the beginning of time. [824]

Gwunsdu: Unidentified tree of which the bark was smoked. [825]

Gwuskwuy: To group freely with both hands, sockeye.

Gwuyim-i: Trees, plural.

Gwu'ni'ukuh: Ceremony resembling a potlatch given by a chief for the benefit of his fellow-villagers, especially during the year preceding his main rite.

Gwuyu, "What Is Good": Synonym for abstinence, the repurchase of a wife from her husband. [583]

Tatsul-ai: Synonym for Nuxtsilsinuxhow: Supernatural being who shamelessly begged food from his fellows.

Gwuiuma: 1—Masked figure, usually in crest form, which appears to sand and ritual initiates.

2—An appearance, that is, the coming into sight of what is usually invisible.

Tsuhiin: Supernatural hunter of mountain goats.

[illegible]

[illegible]: One of the five men to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.

[illegible]: "A Coming up from Below into Plain Sight". Term used with reference to the descending of a raft through the mouths of Dean Sound.

[illegible]: "Whence We Come". A procession, such as a moth or a pterygotus, selected from the totem pole, usually from the coming to earth of the first settlers in the beginning of time.

[illegible]: Old village near the head of Dean Channel, on the site of the present cannery on the opposite side of the foot from Shearlen Cannery.

[illegible]: Tree, inhabited by owls, behind the supreme god's house.

[illegible]: Space in a house between central the and side of which stand tables.

G

[illegible]: "What is Proved is Lacking". Name created for himself by one of the first settlers at Algaiskai in the beginning of time.

W

[illegible]: 1.—One of the five men to settle at [illegible] in the beginning of time.
2.—One of the five men to settle at [illegible] in the beginning of time.
3.—One of the five men to settle at [illegible] in the beginning of time.
4.—One of the five men to settle at Rivers Inlet in the beginning of time.
5.—Name of the Kimsquit River on chief.
6.—Usual name of a Kimsquit man.

[illegible]: 1.—Cohoe salmon.
2.—Name acquired by a man from cohoe salmon.

[illegible]: Man who descended to the Clearwater River in the beginning of time.

[illegible]: 1.—One of the five men to settle at [illegible] in the beginning of time.
2.—Fraser River.

[illegible]: Village at Rivers Inlet. This word is in the Bella Bella language.

[illegible]: One of the five men to settle at [illegible] in the beginning of time.

[illegible]: Lynx.

[illegible]: Woman who has inherited her husband.

[illegible]: To express a desire concerning the disposal of one's goods after death.

[illegible]: "I go."

[illegible]: "The Man Person of the Pond". Water-lily.

[illegible]: Name of [illegible]'s grandchild in the beginning of time.

[illegible]: 1.—Rivers Inlet.
2.—Collective term for the villages as in [illegible].

[illegible]: Nickname name of a Kimsquit man.

[illegible]: Celebrated shaman, central figure in an ancient tale.

[illegible]: Tribal name of one of the Bella Bella-speaking groups.

[illegible]: Mountain near [illegible].

[illegible]: Earlier name of a Bella Coola man.

[illegible]: Death in the house where a feast dance is taking place.

[illegible]: Mourning songs reported as expressions of real, not conventional, grief.

[illegible]: Synonym for [illegible]. The sky.

[illegible]

67

NOTES ON THE BELLA COOLA AND NEIGHBOURING TRIBES OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

By Charles T. Smith

INTRODUCTION

The most detailed dynamistic studies of four tribes of British Columbia, the Bella Coola or Bella Coola valley, the Gitksan or Skeena river, the Carrier who live in or territory behind both of these tribes, and the Sikani of the headwaters of Peace river. Among the Bella Coola the medicines are largely family possessions known to a few individuals only, so that one function may use different remedies for the same specific complaint, but this is not dissimilar among the other tribes. Everywhere magical practices were used in the treatment of disease, but no new material was added in this regard. It was impossible for the Indians to diagnose many of their maladies, so the the identifications given here are in many cases problematical.

Most of the information relating to the Bella Coola was given the writer in 1920-22, by Indian Jimmy, apparently a full-blood Bella Coola Indian, born about 1848, who did not speak English he gave the data in Chinook jargon, which he been interpreted and arranged in logical order. Jimmy is an Indian dentist with great knowledge of the local plants and animals. He remembers when Mr. John Clayton was the only white man living in Bella Coola valley, and when the inhabitants saw only one other white man every year or two. Consequently he can recall the old Bella Coola customs others before it was much affected by European ideas.

Some of the information relating to the Bella Coola was given the writer in 1920-22 by the late Captain Schooner, also, apparently, a full-blood, very about 1848, who used the Chinook jargon. Also Hanna, Alexander Clahoose, Louis Hill, and other Bella Coola Indians likewise gave information and corroboration.

Most of the information relating to the Southern Carrier Indians of Tl'ezaldai was secured during 1920-1922 from Charlie West, also Indian Charlie or Handsome Charlie, a native of that place, born about 1871. Charlie used the peculiar form of broken or pidgeon English commonly employed for communication between the whites and the Carrier and Chilcotin Indians of this region.

The information about the Sikani and the Northern Carriers of Bagwotsa is from stray field notes kindly supplied by Mr. D. Jenness.

The information relating to the Gitksan was secured in 1925-26 from the late John Fowler and Abraham Fowler of Kitwanga, Luke Fowler and Dick Robinson of Hazelton, with additions and corroboration from a few others, all old Gitksan Indians, apparently full-blood. The information was secured mainly in English, although Abraham Fowler used also the Chinook jargon.

The method the writer employed was to submit specimens of the plants to his informants and question them concerning all their uses. Of the information thus obtained only the medicinal portion has been presented here. The plants were later identified by Mr. M. O. Malte, of the National Museum, Ottawa.

B
S 121
557
101
317
B 124
B
S 191
C 115
C 198
S 127
T
5
T 191
B
T
S 129
126

ceremonial. Every time the sacred objects of a gens are shown to the people a potlatch is given. The sacred objects, although the property of the various gentes, must nevertheless be acquired by each individual. That is to say, every free person has the right to acquire a certain group of carvings and masks, according to the gens to which he or she belongs. Slaves and slaves' children, also illegitimate children, could not become Sisan'ka. A person cannot take a new carving, but must wait until it is given to him by his relatives—father, mother, or other brother. Sisan'ka'ala, to whom I owe my information regarding the gentes, and who is a member of the gens Ts'ak'ietsenot of the Tsak'ono, stated that he had received the mask when he gave his first potlatch. At his second potlatch he received the staff. He hopes that his mother will give him the whistle at his next potlatch, and will at the same time divulge to him the secrets connected with it. In course of time, he said, he might get some others from his brother; but if the latter's children should prove to be very good, and develop very rapidly, his brother would probably give his secrets to his children. At festivals, when a person acquires a new mask, he changes his name. Each person has two names, a Ki'ainu name, which remains the same throughout life; and a Qi'ntsin name, which is changed at these festivals. Thus, Sisak'ala'ala (which is his Ki'ainu name) present Qi'ntsin name is Ki'ituwa'ha'ala, but at his next potlatch he intends to take the name of Kalu'ka. These names are also the property of the various gentes, each gens having its own names. In the list of gentes given above, the names enumerated are the Ki'ainu names of the exogamous. In two cases only the Qi'ntsin names have been mentioned (see p. 620). When a man possesses several Sisan'ka masks he will distribute them among his children. When a girl marries, her father or mother may, after a child has been born to her, give one or several of their Sisan'ka masks to her husband, as his children make him a member of the gens. When a person gets to be old he gives away all his Sisan'ka masks. After any mask has been given away the giver must not use it any more. The crest and the Sisan'ka carvings must not be loaned to others, but each person must keep his own carvings. The only exceptions are the carved headdresses and the raven rattles, which are not the property of any particular gens.

The laws regarding the potlatch are similar to those of the Kwakiutl. The receiver of a present becomes the debtor of the person who gave the potlatch. If the latter should die the debts become due to his heirs. If the debtor should die his heirs become responsible for the debt. Property is also destroyed at potlatches. This is not returned, and serves only to enhance the social position of the individual who performed this act. It is not necessary that all the property given by a person in a potlatch should be owned by him. He may borrow part of it from his friends, and has to repay it with interest. I was told, for instance, that a man borrowed a large copper-plate and burnt it at a potlatch. When doing so he had to name the price which he was going to pay to the owner in its stead. Since that feast he died, and his heirs are now responsible for the amount named at the potlatch.

The Ki'ainu is presided over by a female spirit, called Anaûlikûtsai'n. Her abode is a cave in the woods, which she keeps shut from February till October, remaining all the while inside. In October she opens the door of her cave and sits in front of it. A woman is said to have been the first to find her. Anaûlikûtsai'n invited her into her cave and taught for the people of the K'ū'ish. The men commonly of red cedar bark around her head, waist, and ankles; her face was blackened, her arms with eagle-down. She commanded the women to dance in the same way as she was for dancing. The people should accompany her dance with songs, and after she had finished, they should dance with combs. She said, 'Whenever a person sees me, you people shall dance the K'ū'ish. If you do not do so I shall punish you with death and sickness. In summer, while I am in my house, you must not dance the K'ū'ish.'

[illegible] Now since that time the Hāyū'k dance the K'ū'ish. When a man has some distinctive sitting letter he can be will invite the people to a K'ū'ish. A ring made of red and white cedar-bark is hung up in his house, and the uninitiated are not allowed to enter it. Only in the evening, when dances are performed, they may look in, standing close to the door. As soon as the dances are over they must retire from the taboo house. Each K'ū'ish lasts three days.

[illegible] The various dances performed by members of the K'ū'ish are also the property of the gentes, and the right of performing them is restricted to members of the gens. They must not be given to a daughter's husband, as is the case with the Sisū'ts dances (see above), but belong to the members of the gens alone. They may, however, be bought and borrowed by members of the gens, who have a right to a particular dance, but who do not own it. Permission to use a song or dance is obtained from the owner by payment. The owner may exclude the dance or the borrower may return it at any time. Membership of the K'ū'ish is obtained through an initiation. At this time the novice is given his K'ū'ish name, which he retains throughout life. Each gens has its peculiar K'ū'ish names, which are inherited by young persons from their parents or from other relatives. Thus a young man who had the name of Pū'pi until he was about seventeen years old obtained at his initiation the name of Tī'kū'ūl. I have not reached a very clear understanding of the details of the initiation; it seems that the dance is simply given to the novice in the same way as the Sisū'ts, this initiation being connected with a potlatch. But still it seems possible that he must 'dance' of the dance which he is to perform. Only the highest degrees of the K'ū'ish have to pass through a religious ceremony of some importance. The highest degrees are the shap'ūn (the Hī'mats'ī of the Kwakiutl), the O'ūq (the Ki'ūmsil of the Kwakiutl), and the Dū'ūn (the Ki'ūtsālsil of the Hī'ūsak). These grades are also hereditary. A K'ū'ish novice may acquire them at once at his first initiation.

When the shap'ūn is initiated he goes into the forest, where he encounters his guardian spirit. It is believed that he goes up to the sun, and formerly he had to take human flesh along for food. The chiefs held a council the night preceding the beginning of the ceremonies, and anyone who wanted to show his liberality offered one of his slaves to be killed, in order to serve as food for the shap'ūn. The offer was accepted and a payment of from ten to twenty blankets made for the slave. The latter was killed, and the members of the shap'ūn order devoured one-half of the body before the departure of the novice to the woods. There the latter is tied up and left to fast. He may stay there for twenty or thirty days until the spirit appears to him and takes him up to the sun, where he is initiated. Early one morning he returns, and is heard outside the houses. He has lost all his hair, which, it is believed, has been torn

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] the tradition is considered much more sacred, the property of the person who has it in charge; this is a strong [illegible] tradition. A description of the sacred ceremonial has been given by Jackson in the paper above referred to.[1]

A clan legend which is treated in the sacred ceremonial is called in the Bella Coola "[illegible]" or "[illegible]". These traditions are the exclusive property of each clan. The laws according to which this descent from generation to generation takes place are the laws prevailing among the other Coast tribes. The traditions of each Bella Coola village are not exclusive [illegible] clan, genera, or septs, but each village community forms a solid unit possesses its own tradition. In order to keep the tradition in the tribe, the law requires that no person shall marry outside of his own village community. Thus the clan tradition is kept the exclusive property of the village community to means of endogamy. I have made two careful inquiries in regard to this point, and all the old men have unanimously the same statement. Even marriages among non-relatives are prevented; and although marriages of people who are distantly related to one another do not prevent, it even happens that cousins marry, so that an early marriage has arisen, in order to keep the clan tradition from being acquired by another village community. It seems, however, that owing to the influence of the Coast tribes, the endogamic system has begun to give way to an exogamic system. Formerly and wealthy chiefs marry outside of their own village community, in order to secure an additional clan legend through marriage. This new system agrees with the one prevalent among the Kwakiutl tribes.

The Kwakiutl, as stated before, is a religious ceremony to which all the dignitaries of heaven are permitted. The members of various clans are initiated according to their clan traditions; but the same societies and the same dances appear in the traditions of all the various clans. From what little I have been able to learn, it seems that there is an elaborate opening of the whole ceremonial, corresponding to the opening of the ceremonial among the Kwakiutl.[2] I received the following description of the opening ceremony:—

The person who invites to the Kwakiutl, that is to say, the man whose son is to be initiated into one of the secret societies according to the tradition of his clan, requests a person who is called K'wan to invite the nine brothers and their sister, who reside in the House of Myths, and in whose charge the Kwakiutl is placed. The names of the brothers are Kwaxwalelala, Kwaxwa, Qaq'ameklilla, Q'ûwaxwa, Ainmklila, Ai'mklilla, K'ûûlaa, Q'ûwaxwa, Ai'mklil, and that of their sister, [illegible] (see p. 33). In the rear of the house an elevated room is prepared for K'wan, in which he lies down. He is covered with wings made of red cedar-bark. For four days he stays

[1] Op. cit., pp. 1-10.

[2] I have described this fully in the Annual Report of the U. S. National Museum for 1895, pp. [illegible].

[illegible] 174

[illegible] 171 174 177 342

[illegible] 174

[illegible] 174 177 [illegible] 614

[illegible] [144]

[illegible] 174 177 [illegible]

[illegible] words of Kwakiutl derivation still lacking, also by a glance at the following list, which contains words that can be proved to be of Kwakiutl origin:—

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

With these names and customs the clan tradition must have found their way to the Bella Coola, but their social organization differed fundamentally from that of the Bella Bella branch of the Kwakiutl. While the latter, owing to intimate contact with the northern tribes, had adopted the Haida system with prevalent maternal descent, the Bella Coola were still distinctly divided into village communities that were not exogamic. It seems very likely that the jealousy with which the ownership of a clan tradition was guarded by the Coast tribes was very early introduced among the Bella Coola. Two means were available for preventing outsiders from acquiring the tradition. Among the Coast tribes with prevailing maternal institutions, among whom a limited number of clans existed, the ordinary law of inheritance was sufficient to retain the tradition inside of the clan. Not so among the Bella Coola. If their organization at an early time was similar to that of the Coast Salish, it is likely that the child was counted as well a member of the father's as of the mother's family, although the young woman generally moved to the village occupied by her husband. If the child belonged to the families of both parents, it had the right to use the tradition of either family; and consequently in the course of a few generations, the traditions acquired by each family would have spread practically over the whole tribe. There were only two methods possible to avoid this result. The one was to prevent marriages outside the village community; and this method would seem to have been most natural for a tribe organized in village communities, members of which were allowed to intermarry. The other method would have been to regulate the laws of inheritance in such a way that the child had to [illegible] other tribes or another, but that it had not the right to use the property of both groups. It seems to my mind that the former method was more likely to develop under the existing social conditions, and that to this reason we must ascribe the development of an endogamic system among the Bella Coola. The occurrence of endogamic marriage among the tribe is quite isolated on the Pacific coast. All the other tribes have exogamic institutions, and by this means preserve their property rights. It is interesting to note that the northern Kwakiutl, who originally seem to have been organized in village communities, have adopted exogamic institutions; but there is a notable difference in the organization of the village community, between the Bella Coola and the Kwakiutl. Among the Bella Coola we generally find five women to each village community, three men and one woman. It is true that there are generally called brothers and sisters but they were counted independently by birth, and are therefore not necessarily considered as blood relatives. Among the Kwakiutl the village community we considered the descendants of one ancestor; consequently, among the latter tribe they are all relatives, while are forbidden to intermarry; while among the Bella Coola they are not relatives, and may intermarry.

My intention is, therefore, that the various social system of the Bella Coola developed through the influence of the customs of the Coast tribes upon the home social unit of the Salish village community. The possession of clan traditions was felt to a great advantage, and consequently the desire developed to possess clan traditions. These were acquired partly by intermarriage with the Coast tribes, as is shown by the fact that many of these traditions are borrowed from these tribes, partly by independent invention. The desire to guard the traditions which were once acquired led to the development of endogamic institutions, in order to prevent the spread of the traditions over the whole tribe.

The jealousy with which the traditions are guarded has had the effect of making each family try to prevent other families from knowing its own clan traditions. For this reason the clan traditions of the whole tribe are remarkably inconsistent. We find, for instance, that the earthquake raven legend of the northern Coast tribes has been utilized by many families as a family tradition. But while one family uses one part of the tradition, other families use other parts of the same tradition. Thus it happens that among the Bella Coola we find the most contradictory myths in regard to important events in the world's history. Some families maintain that the Raven liberated the sun, while, according to another one, the Mink was essential in bringing about the present state of affairs. Still others say that Tsimo'ns, during his travels, caused the sun to appear. The discrepancies in the traditions referring to the visit of the Mink and Wasp to their father, the Sun, are also very remarkable. Although a considerable amount of combination is known to all the mythologies of the North Pacific coast; they neither exist nor exist to degree so among the Bella Coola; and I promise the fact that the traditions are kept secret by the various families accounts for this curious condition.

The powers of the Bella Coola directed to form or fixing but a remarkable resemblance to the powers of the Tsimshian addressed to Lagha, the sky. So both tribes we find the idea that when the Sun wipes his face it will be clear weather and men will be happy; consequently the prayer to the Bella "to wipe his face" occurs quite often.

One of the most important customs that the Bella Coola borrowed from the Coast tribes is the Kwakiutl ceremonial, with which are connected the various secret societies, particularly the custom of ceremonial cannibalism. The ceremonies and the paraphernalia used by the Bella Coola and by the Kwakiutl are practically identical. I will show (a) (a) the legend explaining the origin of cannibalism. Among the Bella Bella and Kwakiutl, another tradition is told to explain the origin of the custom. The tradition tells of a spirit called Bakbakalanuxsuwe, who lives in the forest, and who initiates the members of the Cannibal Society. The series of traditions clustering around this being differ fundamentally from those referring to the Cannibal Society of the Bella Coola. The custom has also spread to the Tsimshian, who say that the secret society was introduced by a hunter who was taken into the inside of a cliff by a white bear. Inside he saw a house, in which the various societies were performing their ceremonies. It appears, therefore, that the same ritual which is practised by these distinct tribes is explained by three fundamentally distinct myths; and we must conclude that in this case the ritual is older than the myth,—that the latter has been invented in order to explain customs that were borrowed from foreign tribes, so that the ritual is the primary phenomenon, while the myth is secondary.[1]

These considerations explain some of the psychological motives for the development of certain traditions and myths, as well as the curious inconsistency of the clan traditions of the Bella Coola. They do not, however, explain the most fundamental characteristic of the traditions of the tribe. I pointed out in the third chapter of this paper, that, notwithstanding the numerous contradictions contained in family legends, the conception of the word and the functions of the various deities are so well defined that we must consider the mythology of this tribe vastly superior to that of the neighboring tribes. While the latter believe in a great many spirits which are not coordinated, we have here a system of deities. The existence of a systematic mythology among the Bella Coola proves that under favorable conditions the advance from the lower forms of beliefs to higher forms may be a very rapid one.

[1] See Report of the U. S. National Museum for 1895, pp. [illegible] every morning when the sun rises. He takes care that he does prop- 556 erly. The first six of these totems are grouped in pairs, and are believed to paint their faces with designs representing moon, stars, 773 and rainbow. In the second three totems make their appearance, and 776 are represented by masks. Gyanitsa and Gyanamlilla wear the 533 design of the full moon, indicated on the mask of Gyanitsa by a 545 double carved line in red and black, the black outside, passing over 776 forehead, cheeks, and upper lip. Gyanamlilla has a double carved line in red and black, the red outside, which passes over forehead, cheeks, and chin. Gimlilla and Gimlilla wear the design of the crescent, drawn in red and black, with difference similar to those between the first and second masks. The two Gyanamlilla and Gyanitsa have designs representing stars, both wearing the same style of mask. The seventh is Gulu'nsa, whose face represents the blossom of a salmon-berry bush. The eight is Gulu'lus (who wants to have blankets too), whose the design of the rainbow in black and blue. The ninth, Ki'nsa'k, wears on the head a mask representing a kingfisher, and is clothed in a bird-skin blanket. The face of the saint is a woman called Ki'nsa'k'nsa (the sister), the sister of the others. The face is painted with the design of a blanket filled with grease. The figures is covered bagnets on standing provisions and purchased by the people whom she has robbed.

The sisan'k, which is danced at potlatches and other festivals of 595 the clans, is presided over by a being that lives in the sun. A man who 773 had gone out hunting met the sisan'k and was instructed by him in the 776 secrets of the dance. When he returned, he asked the people to clean 776 their houses and to strew them with clean sand before he commenced to enter. Then he danced the sisan'k and told the people what he had seen. He said that the being had commanded them to perform this dance and to adorn themselves when dancing with carved headdresses with tails of sea-lion skins, and to swing carved rattles. The man, later on, returned to the sun. Ever since that time the Ki'tsela dance the sisan'k. Besides this, it is stated that the raven gave each clan its 614 secrets. Each clan has its peculiar carvings, which are used in the 424 ● sisan'k only, and are otherwise kept a profound secret, i. e., they are 532 the sacred possessions of each clan. All clans, however, wear the beautiful carved headdresses and use the raven rattles, regardless of the [542] [534] carving they represent. Every time the sacred objects of a clan are shown to the people a potlatch is given. The sacred objects, although 424
the property of the various clans, must nevertheless be acquired by 532 each individual—that is to say, every free person has the right to 556 acquire a certain group of carvings and names, according to the clan 614 to which he or she belongs. Slaves and slaves' children, also illegitimate children, can not become sisan'k. A person can not take a [567] [848] new carving, but must wait until it is given to him by his relatives—father, mother, or elder brother. Nusk'nlu'sta, the Indian, to whom I [115]

[illegible] [illegible] my information regarding the clans, and who is a member of the gens Ka'ninamk of the Tsimshian, stated that he had received a crest when he gave his first potlatch. At his second potlatch he received the eagle. He heard that his mother would give him the otter at his seventh potlatch, and would at the same time divulge to him the secrets connected with it. In course of time, he said, he might get crests elsewhere from his brothers; but if the latter's children should prove too very good, and develop very rapidly, his brothers would probably give his secrets to his own children. At festivals, when a person acquires a new secret, he changes his name. Each person has two names, ski'nist name, which remains through life, and a ki'nistan name, which is changed at these festivals. Thus, Tsimlo'ymk (which is ksk'nist name) ki'nistan name was Ki'nanamk'ksiaks, but at his last potlatch he intended to take the name of Kaiki'ks. These crests are the property of the various clans, each clan having its crest. When a man possesses several ski'n secrets, he will distribute them among his children. When a girl marries, her father or mother may, after a child has been born to her, give one or several of their ski'n secrets to her husband, as his children make him a member of her clan. When a person grows old, he gives away all his ski'n secrets. After any secret has been given away the giver must not use it any more. The crest and the ski'n carvings must not be loaned to others, but each person must keep his own carvings. The only exceptions are the carved headdresses and the carve rattles, which are of the property of any particular clan.

The laws regarding the potlatch are similar to those of the Kwakiutl. The receiver of a present becomes the debtor of the person who gave the potlatch. If the latter should die, the debts become due to his heirs. If the debtor should die, his heirs become responsible for the debt. Property is also destroyed at potlatches. This is not returned, and serves only to enhance the social position of the individual who performed this act. It is not necessary that all the property given by a person in a potlatch should be owned by him. He may borrow part of it from his friends, and has to repay it with interest. I was told, for instance, that a man borrowed a large copper plate and bestitt at a potlatch. When doing so, he had to name the price which he was going to pay the owner in its stead. Since that feast he died, and his heirs are now responsible for the amount named at the potlatch.

The ka'nist is presided over by a female spirit, called Anatlikuts'al'x. Her abode is a cave in the woods, which she keeps shut from February till October, remaining all the while inside. In October she opens the door of her cave and sits in front of it. A woman is said to have been the first to find her. Anatlikuts'al'x invited her into her cave and taught her the secrets of the ka'nist. She wore ornaments of red cedar bark around her head, waist, and ankles; her face was blackened, her hair strewn with eagle down. She commanded the

Lib. Danish E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

Pre-
* 556 sently the guests assemble, those who are ancsi wearing on [575] their heads one or more wood skins as a mark of membership
[287] in the society. Each takes the seat to which he is entitled,
[293] the chiefs behind the fire, or on either side of it, the commoners,
[554] slaves, and foreigners in the two corners nearest the door. The heralds move to and fro between door and fire, their constant exchange of remarks adding to the general interest of the affair. It is the function of a herald to lend dignity to chiefs by [203] the tone of his observations, but should one fail to live up to his station, the herald is privileged to comment thereon. In some respects his position approximates that of a buffoon, but as a herald always receives valuable presents, the office is sometimes accepted by ambitious young men, willing to undertake the slightly derogatory duties in return for the substantial gain.

264 A number of young lads, friends or relatives of X, distribute
* 556 the food. It is placed in boxes; an important chief is not called upon to share with any one, whereas six or seven men of no [883] standing may partake from one box. These receptacles, with whatever food remains in them, are taken home by the guests;
[578] otherwise the host would be insulted. Many boxes are lost in this way, a source of considerable irritation. After the first course, a second follows, consisting of a different kind of food in another box, and in some cases there is a third, and even a fourth course. A chief must never appear stingy. The more he gives, the more does his prestige increase. Also, a man who gives freely receives abundantly, so that generosity brings its 583 reward.

* 556 Next, the father or other male relative of X's wife, or a [537] fluent friend who speaks for him, stands up and makes a speech, extolling the fame of his own family by sketching in general
[425] outlines one of the myths of his ancestors, and announcing that X's wife is taking to her husband some portion of it. This may [424] be the prerogative of using a spoon carved, for example, with [532] the shape of a beaver; or a carved box, or a totem-pole with certain figures on it, or the right to use a painting of a grizzly bear on the wall of his house, or an ancestral name.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

bear on the wall of his house, or an ancestral name. The speaker always recounts the whole myth before announcing which portion of it is transmitted to X as a prerogative. It is understood that this transference will be duly validated by presents to X when he gives his potlatch. Such are termed dzämänumtnum and signify the repurchase of a wife from her husband. Though this is known to be a fiction it has extreme social importance. Unless dzämänumtnum is paid there is an ineradicable blot upon the children; in fact, it is one of the essentials of a legal marriage. All prerogatives thus transferred on xlästnum become the property of X and will in time pass to his children, unless recalled to the wife's family by further repurchase (dzämänumtnum) money or goods. In this fashion elements of family myths become scattered, and one of the considerations in choosing a wife is to select a woman able to bring back some missing part of the husband's myth.

The usual present is an ancestral name, which X henceforth uses as potlatches as his most distinguished title, though the myth in which it is incorporated does not belong to him. As long as the name remains in X's family those who originally owned it are unable to make use of it. Such a name is said to be "dragged across" by the wife to her husband, the immense weight or importance of the designation being compared with the dragging of a heavy log. Occasionally, the father of a married woman, animated by the kindliest feelings towards his son-in-law, may give him outright a myth with all the names embodied therein. This can happen only where there are no other survivors of the family. In such a case when the myth is recounted it must always be mentioned how it has been obtained. The number and type of the prerogatives transferred depend upon the sentiments with which his wife's family regard X. If, in addition to being a worthy man, he is member of their ancestral family, or of one with which his wife's has frequently intermarried, so that in course of generations prerogatives have intermingled, there is less objection to giving him such rights than if he were an unrelated individual.

553
556 A man may receive so many prerogatives with regard to house 425 painting that he has to continue the designs on the sides of his [606] dwelling, or he may receive so many figures for a totem-pole [592] that he can erect one of composite pattern. X may acquire prerogatives not only from his father-in-law, but from his mother-in-law, and if he is the husband of several wives, the family of each may contribute something. If, for some inexplicable reason, X is not given any prerogative from the family of his wife, he uses one of his own ancestral myths with the names belonging thereto. A man who gives many potlatches can choose to validate numerous family names for himself, or to concentrate on one alone, elevating it to a position of great importance. But any names he validates must belong to his [615] family; it is contrary to custom for a Bella Coola to steal a name to which he has no right.

556 At this, or some other suitable time, X prays for assistance 782 in the complicated rites that are to follow. Taking four pieces of pounded and dyed cedar-bark, and four pieces of undyed bark, he places on each a small quantity of food and throws the eight into the fire. Likewise he may throw in four small pieces of any kind of goods. As he does so he appeals to the supreme god:

"Please strengthen my spirit for the many duties which are before me."

Instead of praying himself, X may ask a shaman to do so [756] for him, in the belief that the latter's supplication will be more efficacious.

556 The necessity for supernatural assistance lies in the fact 638 that any serious error or disaster in the performance of potlatch 628 rites calls for summary punishment, since X has allowed ceremonial secret knowledge to reach the uninitiated. In such a case the duty of meting out a penalty falls upon the members of a foreign tribe. Nothing is said at the time, but the departing guests take away with them information of what has happened. Great latitude is allowed as to who shall be the chastisers. The guests may be related to X and the members with a number of the large cone-shaped whistles used for nusuk ceremonial. Towards dawn, sounds come from these, and sometimes a dull thump is heard on the roof, as if a heavy being had landed there. At once there is great excitement within the house. The voices of supernatural people prove them to be at hand. No one is allowed to leave except a nusuk siki[9] who is skilled in dealing with Mulakila,[10] also called Sisiutewaw, the supernatural being closely connected with the nusuk ritual. Those within can hear the voice of the siki raised as if he were speaking to someone at a distance.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

"Chief, you have come too early," he says. "The house is not yet ready. Please return later."

He is answered by loud whistling, which grows fainter, as if the being who made it were moving away. In reality the young men are merely blowing less forcibly into the whistles.

---

[9] The accounts of all informants agree that much of the nusuk ritual was newly imported into Bella Coola from Bella Bella. According to some statements, Pakhe, a Bella Coola chief who died between 1870 and 1880, married a Bella Bella wife, also one from Rivers Inlet, and it was these two women who brought with them so diverse certain nusuk prerogatives. It is said that previous to that time the Bella Coola did not understand the use of the large cone-shaped whistles, nor were they able to summon the supernatural beings to the youths secluded in the back-room, nor to dispel the beings at the conclusion of the rites. On the other hand, some Bella Coola claim that their first ancestors brought the whistles with them from the land above. It is probable that the calling in of the supernatural beings is a recent addition to the pattern, which accounts for the contradictory accounts, but whether or not the whistles are a new feature is more doubtful. It appears certain that the prerogative of siki has recently been obtained from the Bella Bella. Siki means "the one who cures," and the name is given to the man whose prerogative it is to tend the hamat initiates in whom supernatural powers are located. In Bella Bella there is a similar functionary for nusuk matters, known as a hai-ahkila. Through intermarriage several Bella Coola have recently obtained this prerogative; in each case it is frankly stated that it has been derived from the Bella Bella. The Bella Coola apply to them, as forward, the term siki, as they do for the hamat "cures," though the Bella Bella name, hai-ahkila, is used with equal frequency. The present siki have endeavoured to claim for themselves certain ceremonial functions formerly carried out by any nusuk. In this account of a potlatch it is assumed that a siki is functioning on all occasions, but in many cases any senior nusuk is considered sufficiently close to the supernatural beings to act satisfactorily. Until about 1870 it is clear that any nusuk was regarded as capable of doing so.

[10] Knowledge of this being is said to have been acquired by the marriage of a certain Sisiutewaw of Kimsquit to a Bella Bella woman in the beginning of time.

584 preliminary agreement may have been made while they were only seven or eight years old, though marriage seldom occurs before the age of seventeen or eighteen. More often the agreement is made when X and Y have passed the age of puberty, and they wait for about two years before marrying.

583 Throughout this period, X's relatives are expected to give at least one feast at which Y's relatives are the guests of honour, 425 and always receive presents. At one of these rites X's father, 553 with the concurrence of his relatives, may mark his approval [584] of the coming event by bestowing on Y's father, or one of her other relations, an ancestral name from his family myth. This does not become the absolute property of Y's family, since the myth in which it is embedded does not belong to them, unless, of course, they are members of the same ancestral family. It is fitting that a name of this kind be bestowed by the recipient on one of Y's children, or returned to X's family a few generations later by a return marriage. If this is not done, in course of time the designation is apt to be regarded by Y's family as their own. If there are no children, Y's relatives should give back the name to X's [627] family, but there are many instances of feuds caused by failure to do so. According to mythology, prerogatives may some- [773] times be given outright, without thought of their use by the resultant children, or of their being restored by return marriages. It is claimed that the people of the Kimsquit River [648] have, through such a present, the inalienable title to use a certain spot in the Kitlope River for their olachen nets, and likewise the Kitlope people have an irrevocable right to the Kimsquit name Jiáhway. These two prerogatives were transferred at the beginning of time. At present, anyone bestowing outright his family prerogatives would be considered weak- [378] minded and the other members of the ancestral family would strenuously object. Considerations of this sort make it desirable to seek a wife within the ranks of the ancestral family.

During the period of engagement, Y's family may present a name, or names, to X's father, with the same conditions as those just described.

1:McIlwraith E-9 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

585
553
425

ancestry. He may wish to give X one of his ancestral names on this occasion, and if so, an eloquent speaker outlines the myth in which it is embodied, and announces that henceforth it belongs to X. He is called by it for the rest of the ceremony. Occasionally, X will receive several names, perhaps from different myths belonging to the different ancestral families of which Y is a member; or her father may grant X the especial use of some hunting-ground, although with the marriage he naturally has the right to use all belonging to his bride's ancestral family. Sunat rarely, and kusiut prerogatives more commonly, may likewise be transmitted at this time, though they are never expounded, since some who are not members of these two societies may be present. X's father may likewise use his ts'ela song and follow it by giving an ancient name to Y; if so, the procedure is the same as that just described.

Names transferred by marriage may be given when the engagement is announced, at the actual wedding or, as will be explained later, when the wife is rebought from her husband. A transference from the family of X to the family of Y is made only as a mark of respect and friendly feelings, but a transference in the opposite direction is necessary to establish the children on a firm footing. Accordingly, it is often delayed until after their birth, at a time when Y rebuys herself from her husband. A name bestowed at the wedding itself becomes the legal property of the recipient, but not of his ancestral family, since it cannot be passed on except to a child of X and Y. If there are no children, it is felt that the name has become practically dormant and it can be revived by a member of the donor's ancestral family. Thus it is virtually held in readiness for X's and Y's children, though literally this is not the case, since it belongs, meanwhile, to some individual. A sentiment that enters into a transaction of this kind is that, by the presentation of a name to some member of the family of the other partner, a kindly disposition is shown and confidence that it will be duly honoured by bestowal on the children of the couple. Indeed, some parents do no more than promise that

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

585 553 425 if a grandchild be born they will give him a certain name if a boy, and another if a girl, so that henceforth no one can take that title for himself, even though it is not in use. As already mentioned, even when a name has duly passed to one of the children, it can be recalled in future generations by a return marriage. The transmission of names, or the promising of them for children yet unborn, is perhaps the most binding feature of the whole marriage rite. Mythology contains instances in which names, and other prerogatives, have been given away outright. Cases are cited by the Bella Coola where a father has given hunting-grounds as "food" for the use of the relatives of his son- or daughter-in-law, but it is usual merely to promise the use of them to the grandchildren.

581 553 578 425 Since the transference of names, or other prerogatives, is the foundation stone of Bella Coola marriages, it is necessary to digress still further in an attempt to analyse the concepts at the base of the transaction. If the contracting parties are members of different ancestral families, or even of different branches of the same family, there is a feeling of strain and unpleasantness at the intimate relations into which they are brought. There is a conflict of desires. On one hand is the wish to keep the family prerogatives from going afield; on the other, a wish that they should go afield to show the respect felt for the bride or bridegroom. If children result, the matter is simple, since they are equally members of the ancestral families of mother and father and form a bond which draws the two social units into the closest community of interest. Return marriages will then be sought by successive generations, until the prerogatives of the two families become so closely interwoven that a child will, indeed, be born into the ranks of related ancestors from both parents. But when there are no children the matter is complicated, since the recipients of names not uncommonly try to keep them unjustly. They may do so with the best intentions, feeling that it would be a slight to the donors to give them back. Bella Coola etiquette is not sufficiently exact to stipulate what should be done. If the name is not returned, the donors may be offended at its being kept; if it is returned, they may be offended that it has not been kept. 581 553 578 425

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

The following examples will help to explain this rather complex point.

About 1900 the sister of a man who was middle-aged in 1922 was married to a Bella Coola to whom she was not related. At the wedding, her father being dead, her brother expounded one of the family's origin myths, and she took her husband a name from it. It was said to have been "hauled across," the word used being the same as that signifying the dragging of a heavy timber, suggesting, of course, the importance and dignity of the designation in question. On two later occasions the woman's family gave valuable presents to the man's, thus doing their part to cement the ḡulan, the strength which comes to both families by an interchange of presents marking the dignity of marriage, in fact, its basic principle. Unfortunately, there were no children. If the husband had wished to retain these names for his family, he should have arranged a further marriage between one of his own relatives and one of his wife's, to return the value of gifts he had received. He did not do so, and thus lost all legal claim to the designations in question. None the less, he was indignant when his wife's brother duly validated one of these names for himself at a potlatch, as if it had been dormant.

The accompanying diagram-pedigree shows another instance of the same kind. Smaoan's daughter, Swalkūndi, was married to Ninitsamlaix, and at the wedding her father promised his name for any offspring. No children were born, but Ninitsamlaix illegally used the designation, Smaoan, for King George, his son by another wife. This naturally incensed the relatives of the first Smaoan, especially as the debt could not be adjusted by the marriage of one of Ninitsamlaix's daughters to one of their family, since there were no daughters. To make matters worse, King George passed the name to his son, Jack King George, and again there were no daughters to readjust the debt. Finally, Jack King George married Ḡwakul, a relative of the first Smaoan, without the usual lengthy period of engagement, and while she was still concealed for the year that follows puberty. No children resulted, by which part of the debt could have been repaid. Thus, not only did Jack King George violate the customary ideas of decency, but in the course of three generations two women were obtained from the Smaoan family without any recompense. Bitter feelings arose, and a few years ago one of the descendants of the first Smaoan took the name for himself at a potlatch as if it had been dormant, thus arousing the ire of Jack King George. In 1915 [682]

581 two of his female relatives were murdered at Kimsquit. The slayer was 553 never detected, but most of the Bella Coola believe that it was done by 578 one of Smaxax's relatives, and that the dispute about names was quite 425 sufficient to furnish an excuse for the deed.

It is hoped that these two instances will serve to emphasize why the [682] Bella Coola prefer marriages within the ranks of the ancestral family. When this takes place, names are usually given outright, and not merely promised for the use of the future children.

Smaxax = ♀
|
Nintramlaix = Swalkgnalt = another woman
|
King George = ♀
|
Jack King George = Swakal

585 After this digression, to return to the marriage of X and Y: The ceremony is taking place in the house of Y's father, and the parents of each participant have expounded parts of their origin myths, and promised names for the resultant children.

Then Y's relatives give numerous presents to X's family, in each case including those who are associating themselves with the contract. Canoes, slaves, blankets, and other articles of great worth are given; they are said to be "bed covering" for Y. The greater their value, the greater her prestige. Her [537] father asks a fluent chief to address the assemblage, speaking as though he were Y. He says in effect:

"My father, my mother, my brothers, my uncles, and their associates have given me my bed covering."

These presents are the binding feature of the wedding. They are said to lock the girl in her husband's house, and [587] accordingly are sometimes called, "rope fastenings." This is only done when a woman is married for the first time.

[537] Another orator now holds forth on behalf of Y's father:

"What we do today is no small matter. We have done today what was done in former times, and what shall be done in the future."

old man came back to Bella Coola with his son, a man about twenty-five years of age. During his absence all his relatives had died, and he was forgotten. He went to the house of a man with whom his ancestors had intermarried generations ago, explained who he was, and was welcomed. The old man and his son have since lived there, although it is doubtful if the owner of the house had ever heard of their existence, and the son cannot even speak the Bella Coola language. 602 476

X and Y themselves are not entirely overlooked in the exchange of presents between their two families. If Y's father is well pleased with his son-in-law he may show this not only publicly, which redounds to his own credit, but by the communication of secret lore such as a special number of nights for ceremonial chastity. Conversely, if Y should not be a hamat, her father-in-law often asks her father's permission to make her a member of that society. The woman's father is naturally pleased and makes no objections; so she is initiated, using a name and prerogative embodied in her husband's family. Commonly too, they give her one of their ancestral names at any convenient ceremony later than the wedding. In conformity with the rules already explained, if Y should die childless the names return to X's relatives, but if there are children they pass to them. It is said that nuxnuk names can never be transferred in this manner. 606 491 425 [785] [575] [553] [575]

Y's father and other relatives continue to take an interest in her ceremonial welfare and in her personal comfort. If X beats or otherwise abuses her, they expostulate; and if his cruelty becomes unbearable they shelter their daughter when she runs away from her husband. If X should murder Y, she would be revenged by her family. Only one instance of this was known, when the murderer avoided his pursuers by fleeing from the country. As a rule a wife is fairly well treated, though this depends on the character of the husband, the importance of her relatives, and the amount of goods expended to validate the marriage. Among slaves and persons of no influence, it is assumed that a husband may sell his wife as a 593 [602] [627] [567] 432 [48]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)[illegible]
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

556 583

ments given by X's relatives up to the time of the wedding have exceeded in value those which they have received. Later, whenever, and as often as X gives a potlatch, Y's relatives are expected to rebuy her from her husband. Although this is the expression used by the Bella Coola, it has only a ceremonial significance, since Y remains X's wife.

Whenever X intimates that he is going to give a potlatch, Y and her relatives begin to hoard goods irrespective of whether or not children have been born. Their value is unregulated by custom, although the individuals concerned always try to give as much as they can; usually X does not know exactly how much will be provided until their actual delivery. Moreover, this is the occasion most preferred by the relatives of a wife to present to her husband ancestral names or other prerogatives embodied in origin myths. The exact rights of X with respect to such gifts have already been defined so need not be repeated here. Even if Y has taken an ancient name to her husband when she was married, she may bring him another when repurchased. This is an event of even greater importance to a woman than marriage, so no effort is spared to add to the dignity of the occasion.

425 556 583

On the second night of a potlatch Y's father announces what prerogatives he proposes to grant to X. These may include the right to a certain totem-pole design, the carving of a spoon, a painting for the wall of the house, or any other element embodied in the origin myth. These privileges are displayed by X at the coming potlatch. If, as is usual, Y's father wishes to give his son-in-law an ancestral name, it is announced on this occasion, and is the designation by which X is known during the ceremony. It is always said that such a name is so "heavy," in the sense of "so important" that it must be "dragged across" to her husband by Y. Kwiat names are commonly transferred as presents, but without any public bestowal, and one or two instances are known of the similar acquisition of sisaok prerogatives and whistles; it was in this way that Potles was able to import sisaok ritual from Bella Bella. After announcing the [553]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

556 prerogatives he is transmitting, Y's father usually takes the 583 opportunity of stating that he wishes to hunt on X's hunting-[425] grounds, or fish in his fishing-grounds. Permission is never refused, though it is only for the period of the potlatch. Since Y's father is to assist X, it is considered fitting to grant him facilities for obtaining pelts and food.

It is on the afternoon of the second day of the potlatch that the goods are delivered. They serve six purposes, which can be described separately, although the Bella Coola usually think of them as being too closely associated for division.

(1) They increase the dignity, influence, and prestige of the donors. This theme needs no further elaboration. When X later gives these presents to his foreign guests, he announces the person from whom he has received them and in this way knowledge of the manner in which Y's relatives have upheld the dignity of the marriage is spread far and wide, to their intense gratification.

(2) They help X to rise to a position of influence in the community by the credit which comes to him from their later distribution. Though a man may acquire goods in various ways, the Bella Coola affirm that without contributions from his wife's relatives no man can become a chief.

(3) They validate the transmission of names, or other prerogatives, taken by Y to her husband. Even presents given [606] directly from father-in-law to son-in-law are always said to have been taken by the daughter to her husband.

(4) Indirectly, they increase the prestige of the children, [554] either born at that time or who may appear later. None of the goods used for repurchasing their mother can actually be used for their benefit, but the whole rite gives them strength to succeed in life. A child whose mother has not been repurchased is said to be unable to walk, as if his legs were powerless; he lacks intelligence, and the ability to prosper. From the [578] petty quarrels of childhood until old age, a person is proud to recall the number of times his mother was rebought, and to thrust this statement in the teeth of those less fortunate.

556 769 will now be the forms of the one who has recently died. As soon as all have taken their places, an eloquent chief whose aid has been requested for the purpose stands up and recounts [537] the donor's ancestral myth in some detail, mentioning the source and meaning of the mourners' marks and the designs of the totem-poles. Then he continues to the effect that the chief will "cry" by relating the history of his ancestors, which is also the history of the journey taken by his kinsman, and that this recital will shore him up. The word used for this, snuh-lánkin, [195] is the one commonly employed for raising a heavy burden with the aid of a lever. Then the singers begin to beat out the first of the mourning songs, accompanying it with their [533] voices and assisted by as many of the audience as are familiar with words and tune. Every effort is made to make the singing as impressive as possible to add dignity to the recital of the journey taken by the person who is being commemorated. The guests listen attentively and are suitably impressed by the ancestral history of the donor and his family. All the songs that have been prepared are sung in succession in the same manner. The lack of dancing distinguishes this type of cere- [535] mony from all others and adds somewhat to its impressiveness.

After the last song is the proper time for validating young [424] relatives of the donor as mourners. One of the miniature [425] totem-poles, which are light enough to be carried in the hands, is brought from the back-room and given to the boy on whom this prerogative is being conferred. An eloquent speaker explains the meanings of the designs so displayed and enough of the family's ancestral history to make clear whence, and how, they were obtained. The singers begin to beat time slowly, and the youth endeavours to keep time with his feet, while he continues to hold the pole.

Meanwhile the donor and his immediate relatives have been arranging the piles of presents with the inevitable counting and re-counting. As at a potlatch, a fluent speaker is commissioned [537] to hold up the objects, state whence they have been obtained,

1 [i.e. - the memorial potlatch - ANALYST]

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

to whom they are going, and for what purpose. He says, for example: 556 v 769

"Fifty skins become nothing on the path of Kāliākus."

Everyone knows that this means the expenditure of that amount for the singing of a mourning song in connection with [533] the myth in which Kāliākus appears. Gifts must be given for each song, and it is the desire of the donor that they be of fitting value. So, too, is the validation of professional mourners con- [425] firmed. The goods having thus been displayed, a first distribution, called "Tears" with reference to the donor's grief, is made, each guest receiving a gift of the same worth. It is not returnable, being the legalization of the ceremony he has just witnessed. This is followed by donations to the carpenters, the singers, the professional mourners, and all others who have [465] rendered assistance; in essence, these are pay, though they are always referred to as free-will gifts made in gratitude for services rendered. Like the last, they are not returnable. Finally, any goods remaining from the store that has been brought out are given to chiefs and other influential members of the audience. Though not clearly stated, the recipients know that these are really investment-presents; when they reciprocate, [426] they mention that they are repaying a gift made at a memorial potlatch. A plentiful meal is now served, during which several chiefs make complimentary speeches, and the gathering breaks up.

In former times, when features of the ordinary potlatch were banned from a memorial potlatch, the ceremony just described was the central point of the proceedings. It was this public song-recital of the journey taken by his deceased relative which alleviated the donor's sorrow and filled him with pride. A few days after, in the late afternoon, the heralds called back the guests and the songs were sung and re-sung. Miniature [535] totem-poles were not used, nor were professional mourners in evidence; the sole function of the gathering was to provide opportunity for learning the songs. They were repeated until far into the night, when a large meal was served and the guests

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

556 departed. A few days later the same ritual was carried out 764 again, with a similar lavish distribution of food. This was often done at intervals of two or three days for several weeks, depending on how much food the donor was prepared to use. The amount required was so great that the rite was considered, in some ways, more difficult than a potlatch.

[178] As already mentioned, however, it became customary in the last century to incorporate features of the ordinary potlatch into one of a memorial nature. In such cases the first [533] singing of the mourning songs with display of marks by the professional mourners is as just recorded, but there is no recalling of the guests merely to listen once more to the songs. Instead, the ritual differs but slightly from that of an ordinary potlatch as already described (I, p. 182). An occasion is found to conduct the guests to the memorial-posts erected, and to in- [178] form them of the significance of the designs depicted. This same practice has been continued since the introduction of tombstones, and the meaning of the writing upon them is interpreted. The entry of the deceased in the form of his crest, and the subsequent use of a copper, is the same as already recorded. This is frequently followed by the singing of a nasaé mourning [533] song if one of the near relatives owns this prerogative of foreign origin. If so, he walks slowly around the fire in a wide circle, shaking his rattle, and singing, unaccompanied. Most, if not all [177] of these songs, are in the Bella Bella language and the right to [425] use one has in every case been obtained through intermarriage with a member of that tribe. At intervals, heralds call out:

"Listen to the chief's lament."[97]

When presents are distributed to validate the whole ceremony, mention is always made of the different features for which they are given. As at a potlatch, the most important is the return of the dead, but at a memorial potlatch another [211] essential is the display of the memorial-posts. These have been [764] carved, painted, and set up, but are worthless unless validated [97] There is no reason why this should not take place at a potlatch, but no instance of its performance was noted.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NEb Bellacoola NEb

composed the tunes used; to the carpenter who had prepared and used the masked figure; to the members of the band, including a payment for their services whenever Dan Nelson's child should die; to a carpenter to erect a fence around the grave; to another to cut the representation of an eagle on a stone to be erected over the grave; to the speakers at the funeral; to the speakers at the rite then taking place; to those who delivered the money; to the youth who, with pencil and paper, assisted in keeping accounts; to the cook, and to all others who had assisted in any manner. In every case the amount was announced, the bill held up, the name of the recipient stated, the reason for his reward, and the money was then taken to him by a messenger. Captain Schooner really decided how much each should receive, he being in the best position to judge what was suitable, and there being no fixed scale of charges to help him. Work paid for in advance, such as the erection of the fence, was carefully carried out.

A little money had been kept to validate the assumption of ancestral names by several children of the Schooner family. Everyone received a small amount, a child sometimes as trifling a sum as 25 cents. Captain Schooner had virtually chosen who was to receive which designation, although he received advice from all his relatives. Harry Schooner's infant was given the name, Pâtcâtwa, a reference to the manner in which the first beams of the morning sun strike the lofty summit of Mount Nuxpalst. Reuben's son was called alwaik, a Swalk'ot designation connected with the crash when the first Sang'ut fell. The myths in which these names were embodied were not expounded; in fact, they had been almost forgotten, even by Captain Schooner. Tâl'ic Jenny wished to transmit one of her names to Andy Schooner's infant; this was announced in the same way as the others and validated with them by the gifts to all. Jenny had not contributed to the common stock, but some of it was used with the understanding that she would later repay. Nebuchadnezzar announced the

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

769 sum being used for each name, and the bills were displayed *556 before messengers carried them to the recipients.

Finally, Jim Pollard took the opportunity to bestow on 553 Captain Schooner the name, Snusilkäls. This designation ●425 was the property of the donor's ancestral family and should [614] not have been transmitted without the consent of all its mem-[622] bers. Jim had probably informed several of them of his intention, but no objections would have been raised if he had overlooked this courtesy, since he is the only numitl chief among them, and the only one with determination and prestige. It was not an outright gift, since it was announced that it must be returned to the donor's family on Captain Schooner's death. Jim Pollard acted as his own announcer for this transaction, explaining that he gave the name in gratitude for the help which Captain Schooner had rendered at the death of his, Jim's, father about twenty years before. He promised that at the earliest opportunity he would give presents to validate the transmission.

769 During the lengthy distribution of money, the audience had *556 shown unmistakable signs of weariness. It was now between 2.00 and 3.00 A.M., and as soon as Jim had finished speaking the guests dispersed quietly, though many of them gathered in groups in one another's houses to discuss what had taken place.

Captain Schooner slept late after the lengthy ceremony, but was proud and contented when interviewed about noon. He felt that what was fitting for his daughter had been performed, and was willing to take the consequences of having broken the law.

768 Little else of note occurred in connection with Jessie's funeral. Samuel King deposited near her grave a sewing-machine which his wife had used for only a short time and Captain Schooner decided to replace this with an older one belonging to his wife. He made this exchange on the afternoon of June 30, when Samuel, in company with a number of women, was burning the rest of Jessie's clothing and possessions. Captain Schooner explained his act by saying:

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

has gone contrary to something about which there has been universal agreement for generations.

To understand Bella Coola medicines it is, therefore, necessary to regard them as concepts deep rooted in tribal history, and made potent by the suggestibility of those who practise them. This can be most clearly illustrated with regard to those effecting death, but is equally true with regard to all medicines, whether curative or causative.

There remain for consideration the sociological aspects of medicines. Knowledge of most remedies has been handed down for generations as the property of ancestral families. Some are acquainted with one or two "cures," some with many, and some with none at all. The name of the discoverer of a particular medicine is usually lost in antiquity, though it is often attributed to someone described in the family's myth. Like other possessions based on mythology, a remedy of this type can be practised by any member of the group to which it belongs. If it is observed that a certain individual is using one of these successfully, others will ask him to apply it for them. Payment is always expected, but the sum varies enormously, depending upon the efficacy of the remedy, the difficulty of operation, the generosity of the person benefited, and so many diverse factors that no general conclusions can be made. A patient may observe the details of the treatment, but unless he is entitled to it, he would never dream of using it himself. This is due not only to honesty, but to the conviction that only a person with the inherited right to a certain cure can perform it successfully. Rarely, such knowledge is sold or given away outright, but, like other possessions of an ancestral family, this usually leads to friction and jealousy on the part of those overlooked. Some of the simple herbal remedies are common knowledge and are used by all, since remembrance of their ownership, if it ever existed, has been lost. At the present time it is difficult to learn details of proprietorship of some medicines, but these are indicated whenever possible.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

functions are to guard the names, and to keep in touch with the patrons. Every uninitiated person believes that if he could only have the good fortune to find a repository, he would obtain the kusiut prerogative there localized. Ana'likwolsaix travels only during the ceremonial season when she is present at every kusiut dance in the form of a woman with a long, thin face and pointed chin (see Plate 13),[4] who "explains" the significance of the figures to the uninitiated in a peculiar high-pitched voice. She is well able to do so since as guardian of repositories she knows the prerogative of each member of the society. Frequently she mocks the uninitiated: 575* 787 424 [778] [776]

"Ha! Ha! Ha!" she jeers. "You [naming some ambitious youth], you who think yourself so smart, you nearly fell over me that time you walked up in the woods behind the village looking for grouse. If I had been a bear I could have felled you with a blow of my paw. How can you ever hope to become a kusiut like your father and grandfather if you are so blind."

His fellows are inclined to join in the laughter at the one singled out for Ana'likwolsaix's scorn, but she flays them all in turn. "She" is, of course, a kusiut chosen for fluency and ability to make biting remarks. Parents tell their children that in the autumn, pleased at the sight of falling leaves, Ana'likwolsaix bares the roof of her house and sits shaking her fingers like a dancer. [776]

"Go to the woods and look for her," they say. "If she sees you she will say 'tra' and beckon to you. Then you will become a kusiut."

To further this deception, kukusiut are accustomed to disguise themselves as Ana'likwolsaix and move around in the autumn forest, taking care that no uninitiated comes too near for safety. An individual may have several kusiut prerogatives, and if he wishes to transfer one of these to an associate, the report is circulated that the recipient has stumbled upon the repository of the donor. The latter then acts as if he were crazy, and the uninitiated are told that he is a nuhasem, an 575* 778 425

4 [See category 116, p. 84(A) - ANALYST]
* (Apparently Plate 1 is meant)

*575 untranslatable word with the significance of "One who has 778 suffered loss through faulty concealment [of his repository]."
425 Some of these vaults are said to be dangerous to the uninitiated who avoid them and in this way the sanctity of some [784] chiefs' meeting-places is guarded.

*575 According to Kimsquit belief, Awi'likwulsaix has a hus-778 band, Almaqhaikila, who dwells with her in every repository.
776 If an uninitiated person should chance to find a vault, he falls dead before the power emanating from Awi'likwulsaix. Her husband then restores the dead by blowing violently on the back of the victim's neck, accompanying this with cries of hoip. When a person is initiated into the hamatsa society, the uninitiated hear the songs used, in many of which are references to the experiences of the novice with this supernatural pair.

*575 Turning now to the manner in which the hamatsa regard their own society, it is evident that the most important duty of each member is to aid in impressing and deceiving the uninitiated. The prestige of the organization depends upon the ability of its members to inspire awe, hence any weakness in fulfilling this obligation is an anti-social act. For this purpose the society acts as a whole. Many hamatsa have, for example, [424] Cannibal prerogatives, and on occasion the Cannibals, having the same functions, work together, but they do not form a separate organization of their own.[1] Many of the means employed to deceive and impress the uninitiated have already been described. Mythology records, and it appears to be a [773] fact, that long ago the ascendancy of the hamatsa was often [178] challenged by the a'alk and other uninitiated, but when the white man came the society had reached a position of such eminence that the powers of its members were unquestioned. Moreover, the combined strength of virtually all the seniors of the tribe was so great that an uninitiated person could not assert himself even if he was suspicious.

[688] Although members of the society exert every effort to con-

[1] The Bella Coola state that such sub-societies are found among the Kwakiutl.

[i.e. - a repository of supernatural power - ANALYST]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 only by members of the same tribe. The Bella Coola firmly 648 believe that if, for example, there is a serious disaster at 688 Kimsquit, that village will be raided by the people of Bella
721 Bella, Fort Rupert, Kitkatla, or by tribes even farther away.
[628] News of the accident reaches Tal-ie or Kimsquit and the inhabitants, themselves related by blood to the offenders and therefore unwilling to punish them, call upon the members of a foreign tribe to do so. On different occasions this statement, in practically identical terms, was made by six independent informants, so there appears to be not the slightest doubt as to the belief of the people in this law. But when specific cases were asked for, they could not be obtained. It therefore appears clear that the Bella Coola, probably owing to long teaching on the part of the kukusiut, consider that an error in ritual is sufficient to bring punishment from an alien tribe. There must be some basis of truth in this conviction, and it is highly probable that the kukusiut must have taken advantage of raids to explain to the uninitiated that these were caused by disasters in ritual. One informant was of the opinion that, following the collapse of a house at Kimsquit during a Cannibal dance, a Bella Coola chief called upon Tsuxa, chief of the Kitkatla, who raided Kimsquit in punishment. Quite apart from the belief inculcated in the uninitiated, it is obvious that tribes eager for war sometimes used an accident as pretext. The Bella Coola know of no case in which they raided a foreign tribe for this reason, although they state that if they had been called upon to act as punisher, they could not have refused.

*575 Leaving now the functions of the society as a whole, the 424 rights of an individual member can next be described. Each 425 kusiut has:
553

(1) A Kusiut Name. Like every other prerogative, a name of this type can be acquired from father, uncle, grandfather, or other relative, or even by a son from his mother. As a rule a kusiut wills his designation or designations, for a man may [556] have several, before death and his wishes are observed. Al-

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

though the cost of validating such a prerogative is less than a potlatch, yet a Cannibal dance, for example, entails considerable expenditure, so a man entitled to give such a ceremony frequently lends his right to another, or it may lie dormant for generations. Like other loaned prerogatives, failure to return is a frequent cause of feud. A man frequently gives away a kusiut name-prerogative, and if he should give away all of them, he becomes legally an uninitiated. In such a case it is customary for his wife, or some relative, to give him a new kusiut prerogative, as is likewise the case when a master causes a slave to be initiated. A name is sometimes given to a person who resembles a deceased relative of the donor. 575* 424 425 553 [556] [578] [426]

(2) A Patron, omätuts. Little need be said on this point. The words of the songs used by the dancer often describe his patron, always couched in mystical terms for the benefit of the uninitiated. If the supernatural associate performs any type of dance at the gathering above, so can his protégé perform on this earth, otherwise his power is limited to singing of the being. If an individual inherits prerogatives with the same patron from two different relatives, he can merge these to give a composite dance, with consequent additional power. Greedy individuals sometimes illegally add features to which they are not entitled, a cause of bitter feelings. Or one individual may own several prerogatives with different patrons. Although most kukusiut have only one, yet two or three are not uncommon and one case is known of a man with six distinct patrons. The uninitiated believe that from any one of these may come the call giving him the power to perform. 575* 424 776 [533] [535] [578]

(3) A Repository. In this subterranean shelter his name remains, guarded by Änoºlikwolsaix. An individual with several prerogatives has a repository for each. 575* 424 778

Although the kukusiut are aware that much of their ritual is deception, it is clear that they believe in the supernatural origin of their rites, and that their ancestors actually had the abilities which their descendants of today imitate. In time [773] [781]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEb Bellacoola NEb

It is hoped that this somewhat lengthy description will assist the reader in following the complicated details of the actual rites. 575*

Initiation

Although kuxiut ceremonials take place only during the winter, preliminary arrangements are discussed and carried out throughout the year. One of the subjects over which the old men and the marshals debate at length is the admission of new members. Sometimes the relatives of a young man or woman wish to have him, or her, initiated and propose to use a kuxiut prerogative dormant in their family. More often an elderly person is willing to transfer one of his prerogatives to a younger relative; comparatively few are unused owing to the small sums needed to validate them. In either case, one of the marshals is consulted. He passes word to his fellows, and to a number of the elderly kukuxiut, who meet in the council-place of the village. The prospective novice's relatives are there and express the belief that he is sufficiently mature in mind to be a credit to the society. If some of those present demur, the matter is discussed at length until all agree, or until it appears that there is strong objection on account of the youth or inconsistency in character of the proposed novice. In this case his relatives can only hope that their proposal will be more favourably received the following year. Sometimes the young man or woman is informed that his relatives have exerted their influence with Ana'lèwulaxix to make him a kuxiut, more often he remains in ignorance until the ceremonial season. [425]

The initiation of one admitted under these normal circumstances is the same as for one made a "shaman" on account of too great knowledge. Sometimes the marshals themselves take the first steps. If few kukuxiut wish to give ceremonials so that there are gaps in the nightly performances, the marshals select a suitable slave and ask his owner to give him some kuxiut prerogative of little value. If the latter agrees, a pretext is found to lure the victim to the woods whence he is carried, 575* 567 [425]

[Kusiut Society Initiation]

575 call is that something strange has happened to the "mortal." At intervals throughout the day he repeats this announcement, 203 and towards nightfall goes around calling: 796

Skinap, skinap, kukuxiust, "Cure, cure, ye members of the kuxiut society, power has come to the son of the chief [or to the mortal]."

The kukuxiut assemble in X's house, taking their places around the fire; the uninitiated crowd near the doorway. X is seated among his relatives and some of the senior members of the society behind the fire. A herald calls out:

"I want a siki to help X."

575 In every village there are at least two kukuxiut who have, 791 embodied with their kuxiut names, the professional prerogative 796 of acting as healer to every novice; it is believed that the ancestor of each obtained a name and this right through a [424] revelation from some supernatural healer. Since that time the owner of the name has been able to insert some of his own ever- [773] present power into a neophyte to enable him to sustain the dangers of admission to the society. This is the fiction taught to the uninitiated. The profession of siki can be trans- [425] mitted by willing like any other prerogative and it occasionally happens that the same individual is siki for both kuxiut and nusq. In answer to the herald's call, the two siki come forward and crouch behind the fire, one on either side of it. [302] Their faces are blackened with soot, and each wears a blanket, [292] decorated with dyed cedar-bark, thrown loosely over his [297] shoulders, leaving the chest and stomach bare except for an apron of deer hooves or puffin beaks. Meanwhile beating sticks are distributed among most of the kukuxiut who strike furiously on the floor with them, without any attempt to keep time; the sole object is to produce the greatest din possible.

One of the siki contorts himself in an amazing manner, presses his hands against his stomach as if to force something from it, and rolls from side to side on his haunches, until at length he produces, as if from his body, a rock crystal (see Plate 3). He waves this to and fro in his hands, then goes

[see category 116, p 84(e) - ANALYST]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

[Kusiut Society Initiation]

*575 some ashes which he puts into his mouth and chews. Of course 791 he masticates only the ashes but X, unaware of this, is con-796 cerned for the fate of his spirit. At last it is restored to him and he is told that the siki has altered it from that of an [774] uninitiated person to that of a kusiut.* The psychological [781] effect of this act on the mind of a young man who has not had time to adjust himself to his new knowledge and who is firmly convinced of the powers of the siki is tremendous.

The first siki now instructs two kukusiut sitting on either side of X to lie down to serve as a seat for him. They do so, irrespective of who they may be. If the novice is still ignorant of the full mysteries of the society, the siki announces that he is going to get a call for X. He walks around the house, peering here and there as if seeking something, and then pounces as if he had caught an object between his hands. A whistle [534] is heard, such as the novice knows accompanies the coming of every call; but he does not know that the noise is made by compressing a goat or bear bladder-whistle between two sticks held beneath the armpit. This is the "mystery" of the strange noises.

*575 "Do you know what makes that noise?" ask the two kukusiut on whom X is sitting.
796

If X denies all knowledge, the mystery is explained to him, [688] and he is warned that he will be killed if he communicates the information to uninitiated persons. If he answers that he knows the cause, he is asked who has told him. Perhaps some lad has been peeking and has told X of what he has seen; in that case the over-inquisitive youth is at once initiated to prevent further leakage of information. As soon as X has learnt the great secret he moves to one side and the singers take their positions behind the fire. His father, or whoever it
[425] may be from whom he is to obtain his name, then stands up
[553] and unfolds its origin, telling which supernatural being is his patron, and the locality of his repository. X sometimes re-

[178] *This part of the rite has been omitted for so many years that many of the middle-aged kukusiut have forgotten it.

4:Hellwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1949
NEA Bellacoola NEA

[Kusiut Society Initiation]

X sometimes receives two prerogatives at his initiation, one from each parent, or from some other interested relative. In this case both are expounded. The singers listen intently, knowing that they will later be called upon to compose songs on the theme, or themes. According to some informants they immediately sing one, as if they had just created it, though it was really prepared in advance. The kukusiut listen until they have mastered it.

575* 796 [425] [553] [533]

Helpers now distribute the food provided by X's father, or whoever is responsible for his initiation. At every kusiut ceremonial the marshals are the first recipients, then the singers, and finally the others without distinction. As the guests are eating, X's father gives presents to all, without deference to rank. An announcer calls out:

575* 796 556 [264]

"Here are [for example] ten bear-skins from X's mother. They are to obtain for him his cedar-bark bracelets."

These goods are then distributed. Similarly other gifts from various relatives are handed out for his anklets, his blanket, his collar, his head-dress, and all other parts of his clothing. As each item of his ceremonial costume is validated, X dons the prepared article. A novice's head-dress consists of a round roll of dyed cedar-bark, covering a grass frame; in Stuar and the other villages of the upper valley this is decorated with a tuft of swan's down. The kukusiut of these villages also wear a distinctive decoration consisting of a swan's skin with the feathers attached. In recent years it has been customary to pile all the goods together and distribute them as dily'll, which has the significance of "something that has vanished for the novice's dyed cedar-bark." Theoretically, the aim of the donor is to bestow his presents on all equally, but if he finds that he has some remaining, he gives these to the chiefs, or to the relatives of someone whom he expects will soon be a novice. None of the goods used in general distributions are returnable, but a chief who receives an extra gift at the end usually remembers from whom it was received and cancels his indebtedness at the earliest opportunity. There is no close connection between the disbursements and the worth of the

[425] [292] [184] [237]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

'539 portion of the grease until it was exhausted; then she ate the container, and when it was finished she was entirely without food. She was very weak, but not unconscious, and the careful husbanding of her provisions had kept her alive into February. It so happened that four Kimsquit men, brothers, were trapping beaver in this particular hunting ground. Followed by his four dogs, one of the brothers went to inspect a shack, which they had previously built at some distance from the place where they were encamped. One of the dogs began to dig in the snow, and soon the other three joined in. The hunter thought it strange that they did not bark as usual when digging for game, and asked the dogs what they were after. To his amazement a voice spoke from below, using the Bella Coola language:

"You will be rewarded if you save me. I am the daughter of Taxlcrwam," it said.

All Kimsquit knew of her fate, so the hunter quickly grasped what had happened. He burrowed a passage down through the snow to the woman, who told him of her effort to return home by the overland route to Kimsquit. The rescuer cut her some firewood and admonished her to be brave, while he dashed off for help. He hurried back to his brothers, told them the news, and then rushed back with a little food, telling them to follow his tracks to where the woman lay and bring with them stone dishes for cooking. By the time the three brothers arrived, the forerunner had replenished the fire, and the woman was sitting up. One of the three was a shaman; he felt her heart and said that she would recover. For one day they camped with the woman, feeding her first with warmed grease of goat and olachen, then with a little food. This revived her sufficiently so that the brothers could carry her on a litter to their camp. For twenty days she was so very weak that one of them had constantly to remain in camp to feed her with bear soup and other nourishing foods, but she gradually regained her strength.

On her account the brothers decided to return home in April, instead of waiting until June as usual. They planned their arrival at Kimsquit to take place at night, and hid the woman in their house, telling only the members of their own family about her. It was June before she had fully recovered from her painful experience. Then she left the home of her rescuers, clad in new clothes which they had given her, and the account of her adventures was made public. A canoe was sent to Bella Coola informing her father of his daughter's safety, and inviting him to fetch her. This he refused to do, but said if her rescuer brought her home he might marry her with his full approval. This was agreeable to her saviour, and a large party of his Kimsquit friends accompanied him to Bella Coola where presents were exchanged and the couple married. As an [425]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Bella bella NE5

B 539*
425

especial mark of gratitude, the father gave a piece of Bella Coola land to the Kimsquit man. This is one of the few instances known of outright bestowal of land at marriage.

THE ADVENTURES OF A BELLA BELLA CREW

Bb
539
B 539*

One April, a few years after the establishment of white settlements on the coast, a party of Bella Bella set out in a single canoe to hunt sea-otters. Planning to be absent for several months, they carried with them considerable supplies of food and water, while their mat sail lessened the work of the paddlers. They reached their first destination, Goose Island, without difficulty, and then continued in a north-westerly direction towards a barren islet of hard sand where sea-otters were usually to be found. All went well until they were in sight of this, when they encountered Xai·utl, the steady north wind, against which they could make no headway. In spite of the efforts of the paddlers, the canoe was driven southward and westward, out of sight of land. Steady winds prevailed for months, preventing the crew from heading their craft east towards the shore; fortunately, they had ample supplies, though these finally began to run low. Rain kept them supplied with fresh water, and they were able to eke out their food with fish, which had to be eaten raw. It was the end of September before they saw land, a small, isolated island with moderately high hills and, more important, running water. They beached the canoe and tried to leap ashore, but long sitting in narrow quarters had so cramped them that they could only crawl. After they had rested and regained the use of their legs, the captain climbed to the top of a hill from which he could see the other side of the island where smoke was rising. The mariners paddled around, and found themselves near a settlement of people whose language was unknown to them. They resembled Indians, though their mouths were exceedingly small, and the wanderers could see that they were eating raw worms picked out from rotten salmon. The Bella Bella feared to land among these strangers, but some of the latter swam out and passed their hands in wonder along the sides of the foreign canoe. Their own craft were smaller and narrower than any used on the coast, and all were tied together in pairs to prevent tipping.

As the party was leaving the island, a strong west wind sprang up before which they made such headway that three days later they reached the mainland. None of the crew knew where they were, but they realized that their home must be far to the north, so they cautiously proceeded in that direction. The wind changed to the south, again assisting them, and they sailed on for four or five days until they were suddenly pursued by hostile canoes as they neared the point of what seemed to be a large

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192
[426] ákwekum: Excess of amount returned over that previously received as an investment present.
Áiamkikka: One of the nine supernatural siblings.
Áinlàxa: 1—Supernatural beings who drone as the sun moves.
2—Voice of the supernatural woman, Snitsmán·a; the term is occasionally applied to the being herself. The sound is produced by kusiut whistles.
Áimálotla: One of the nine supernatural siblings.
Áimaltua: "The Coming of Foul Weather," in the language of supernatural beings: The phenomenon is semi-anthropomorphized.
Áimá·ts: 1—Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
2—Ancient chief from whom the village is supposedly named.
Áiqwaiosamlaix: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man; the designation is of Kwakiutl origin.
[821] Áiqweiust: Supernatural beings who blacken the face of the moon at eclipses.
Áitsamka: 1—One of the first women to settle at Tál·ia in the beginning of time.
2—Daughter of an ustámq chief mentioned in an ancient story.
Áiutla: 1—One of the designations of Kámai·ts, the mysterious supernatural woman.
2—Ferocious, awe-inspiring, adjective.
[526] akátxyu: Swing consisting of two long ropes with cross-seat.
[824] akpádultnlp: Spruce leaves.
Ákamtci: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
álipotnam: Lehal.
Álkálàlis: 1—One of the first men to settle at Calvert Island in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Nuxwulst in the beginning of time.
3—One of the first men to settle at Áimá·ts in the beginning of time.
álkdjàlos: Stake supporting olachen net.
[796] álkxpianum: Ritual repeated at intervals between the allotment of tasks for a potlatch, and the coming of a supernatural being to the first stsask initiate.
alk, plural, wealk"ats:* Herald.
Álokánam: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
[533] álox: Third part of song.
'álox: Pleasure expedition of boys and girls to the forest.
[517] Álox: Name of an isolated star.
[821] Álqotlcos: Supernatural man-eater, patron of Cannibals.
Álqtcálos: Stick decorated with abalone-shell used by one of the settlers in the upper Bella Coola valley in the beginning of time.
Álfwulus: Supernatural female berry-picker resident in the land of the dead.
áltsia: Announcer.
Áltukwlaksa·s: Bay of the Thousand Islands near Namu.
Álusknaix: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
álxetla: Cannibal.
[587] álxwalàm: Marriage with sister of a deceased wife; the word is undoubtedly connected with the verb, to bequeath.
Álakwis: Supernatural creature similar to a human being.
Áfala: Supernatural woman, wife of Cold Wind and mother of Ice.
Álalala: Bella Bella man mentioned in an ancient story.
[425] [553] [584] álal-ipem: The transference of a name, during the period of engagement, from the father of the future bridegroom to the father of the future bride.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

Ālālkmkmm: Supernatural being sent by Smaiu·a to meet Noskymm.

ālālqe·xi, "One Who Is a Guest": The term applied to a youth whose father, a chief, will certainly give a potlatch to start him on the path to social importance though he has not yet done so. Such a lad is served ceremoniously at every feast. [556]

Ālhlxāu·i: Abalone-shell covered stick used by one of the first settlers in the beginning of time.

Alhlxāu·iatlhax: One of the first women to settle at Tāl·io in the beginning of time.

āldinnki: Word of uncertain meaning often appended to Inxāmem as complete term for the first night of a kusiut dance. [575]

āliknlxmm, "A Dragging Across" (as one does with a heavy log): The term applied to the transmission of a name from a wife to her husband either at marriage or later, when being repurchased. [425] [553]

ālikwis: Toasted food of any kind. [262]

Ālilixwumax: Ancestral name of a Stuix man.

ālilig': Perforated, adjective. [252]

ālimusnām: Those who perform to assist marriage dancers.

Ālimalwalaix: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.

Āl·imlsaix: One of the first men to settle at Tāl·io in the beginning of time. [585] ālipāxlits, "Weapons of War": The term applied to the presents distributed by the groom and his relatives to the bride and hers prior to entering her house. [431]

ālipoalm: Gifts given in secret, soon after betrothal, by the father of the future groom to the father of the future bride. [584] ālipotlām: Marshal.

Ālipmān·i: Immoral supernatural woman; synonym for Sximsximult.

Ālinmotusaix: One of the men who came to earth at Mount Tsnisi in the beginning of time.

Āl·likotl: Totem-pole erected by the first settlers at Stuix in the beginning of time.

ālklotl: Lying position with legs close together such as is maintained for four days by an adolescent girl, and also by a widow or a widower. [516]

ālly: Sisaok song in fast time. [533]

āld: Rapid beating of time during which a dancer does not try to move his feet in rhythm with it. [535]

Ālt'gmān·a: Daughter of the first settlers at Sātlia in the beginning of time.

ālmpus: Kusiut dancer whose disguise becomes apparent through an accident.

ālnkla: Synonym for knumdjut; one of the days of a potlatch, probably that following the appearance of a masked representation of the deceased. [556] ālnlla: 1—Night-time.

2—That part of a Cannibal dance when songs are prepared in the middle of the night.

ālx: Come, imperative singular.

Ālkexa: 1—One of Smaoan's sons in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first women to settle at Nuxulst in the beginning of time.

ālul·ilaix: Central seat behind the fire.

ālkidjelos: Hammer with handle for pounding stakes for fish-nets. [412]

Ālkilmlāhu: Mountain on north side of the lower Bella Coola.

ālkilothum: One who estimates the passage of time by watching the movements of the sun. [805]

Ālhn·ipamm, "The Devourer of Meat Killed by Another": Term used by hunters to Wolf. [825]

Ăłko: ustemq village.

Ălko·sp̓, "He of the Tied-up Penis": Name given to a lad whose sex was disguised in infancy.

[426] ălkstmaxdut: Refusal to lend to an outsider a family prerogative such as the employment of marriage dancers.

[574] ălkwqulsnam: Meal served when a chief's fellow villagers are called in, preparatory to an announcement of his coming potlatch.

Ăłkusiyustem: Name of a female shaman.

Ălkwi, "The Opening of the Sky":
1—One of the first men to settle at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Stuax in the beginning of time.
3—Name of a Snuhe·tl chief.

Ăłlibałxlsix: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.

Ăłlihmnălosaix: One of the first men to settle at Sĭskistl in the beginning of time.

[575] ălimusnam: Sisook having the ability to enter the back-room and treat initiates concealed there. The function probably antedates the employment of kai·shakila.

Ăłlipaios: Holders, supernatural beings who restrain supernatural Cannibals.

[583] ălfixăsm: Frenzied beating of sticks.

Ălmnmnăm: Wife of Twalaitit, the supernatural hunter.

Ălmnskitlnm: Supernatural calendrical experts.

Ălmoqłaikila: Husband of Ans'liktwelsaix; he is known only in Kimsquit.

[575] ălmutsămk: Kusiut dance of mystery.

[574] ălnaixwotsmm: Visit paid to a sick person, especially the coming of foreign guests to a mourning ceremony.

ălnaixwotsmmap: Call used by heralds when summoning to a mourning ceremony.

[425] [583] ălnăxmlaix: The "Dragging Across" of a name, crest, or other intangible prerogative from wife to husband either at marriage or later at a repurchasing of the wife.

[262] ălnăxm: To drag a heavy burden.

ălnexlaw·ax: Cranberries mixed with olachen grease.

ălnusxim: Visit to his repository by a kusiut initiate.

[821] Ăłoagsdimut, "Facing Both Ways": Second moon after the winter solstice.

ăłoliqosmmy, "The Actionless Time": Hushed assemblage of the hukusiut after departure of a Cannibal.

[597] ăłpnkiokem: Adoption of a person resembling the deceased to replace the latter.

Ăłpăłyulsłaix: 1—Supernatural being who revives mortals.
2—Name received by a shaman from this being.

ăłps: Food.

[425] ăłpstmm, "Food Supplies": The term applied to the giving of the use of land at marriage.

Ăłqăłăxl, "Stockaded": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.

[756] ăłqănăs: Shaman's collar of dyed and undyed cedar-bark, arranged in alternate strands.

[882] ăłqosik: Guarded, term applied to a girl secluded at adolescence.

[825] Ăłqsnaiyun·a: Supernatural name of olachen, applied to those brought by the first people in the beginning of time.

Ăłqsqi'djut, "A Glance Downwards": Name given to an Ăłqăłăxl man in the beginning of time.

2: McIlwraith E-8 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192 nuhuinutz: Synonym for qomo·tz, the large cone-shaped sisaok whistle.
[534] Nulya·ltl: Side valley of the Kimsquit River.
Nulya·lual: Side valley of the Kimsquit River.
Nulpytsiwan·e, "Nearest River": River flowing from the north into the northern corner of the head of North Bentinck Arm. The Anglicized form is Necleetsconnay.
[103] nu'uxulaix: Stone supernaturally born from another at sea level.
[823] Nuwaiso·x: sisemy village.
Nuwaiuk, "The Mother of Dogs": Name given to a Bella Bella woman in an ancient story.
Nuyalk: Bella Coola valley.
[101] Nuyalkmy: Inhabitants of the Bella Coola valley.
Nuyem: Kusiut name of a Sisaa man.
Nuzem: Name of a female composer.
Nuyekmtlaix, "The Light Giver": One of the names of the supreme god.
nuyex: Light.
Nuxim: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola Cannibal.
Nuximtlaix: Q'aqu name of a Kimsquit man.
Nugmulmmán·a, "Stick-Breaker": Name taken by daughter of the first settlers at Sisaa in the beginning of time.
[825] nuxúrunk: Mountain goat with long hair on its chest.
nuxtimut, "The Silent Night": The hushed assemblage of kukusiut after departure of a Cannibal.
[227] nuxtuutsta: Cross-piece which holds open mouth of olachen net.
Nuxulat: Village on Dean Channel below Kimsquit.
[585] nuxwolutnkmm: Public promise by the parents of bride and bridegroom on the wedding night that names will be provided for resultant children. This is [425] combined with an oration of origin myths. The term is also used for a similar promise of rights to hunting grounds, although the granting of this is automatic.
[828] Nuya: Mountain near Sisaa.
nuyálxikámut: Person who wanders away from home in despondency.
Nuyel·alaix: One of the first women to settle at Tal·io in the beginning of time.
Nu'yen·ixim: Land of salmon.

O

o'alyem: Kimsquit term for a'alk, archaic.
'O·ß': Kwatna lad mentioned in an ancient story.
[824] okal: Grass with edible roots growing on tide-flats.
[262] Okßemáy: Valley pre-empted by one of the first settlers at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.
Olßimut: Herald who came down to the Dean River in the beginning of time.
oly: 1—The kusiut prerogative of scratching.
2—Bad, adjective.
Olstu·i: Kusiut name of a Sisaa man.
Olliyaiya, "The Worthless One": Name assumed by a woman in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.
[825] Olsalámut, "The One that Changes Itself": Supernatural name of spring salmon.
[264] 'omátulik': Assemblage of the people for food of any kind.

Sinuxutl: One of the first men to settle in the Dean River valley in the beginning of time.

Sinuximätl: 1—"Right Hand": Name of a Stuix repository derived from a supernatural creature.
2—Kusiut name of a Bella Coola woman.

sio'msta: Intangible kusiut prerogative of imitating coitus. [424] sipälqälostuts: Song sung by a kusiotem dancer on recovery from apparent death. [861] sipkim: Regular beatings given to a male child.

Siqälxam, "Time for Gathering Fern Root": Fourth moon after the summer solstice. [805]

Siqalusnäm: Rain after storm, anthropomorphized. This presumably refers to rain that comes after violent thunder. [821]

Siqulxwaix di Siut, "The Gathering of the Supernatural Beings": Fifth moon after the summer solstice. [805] siqwaldjut: Term of opprobrium applied to one who will not allow his children to perform ceremonial dances. [626] siqwsek: Outright bestowal of a prerogative at marriage.

sisasts: Departure to a new locality. [425]

sisi, vocative, sisai: Father's brother or mother's brother.

sisut: Paddle. [601]

sisutsta: Dangerous power such as is present at various petrified places. [501]

Sitlamsta: One of the names of the supreme god.

Sitlliuq': Ancestral name of a Bella Coola woman. [778] siut, vocative, siaot: 1—Any supernatural being, the significance being, "Learned."

2—Supernatural power of any kind.
3—Synonym for qomo·ts, the large sisaok whistle.
4—Killer whale. [825]
5—Song.
6—Kusiut name of one of the first men to settle at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.

Siutan·i: Part of a peculiar repository.

Siutamkila: Celebrated Bella Coola warrior.

siutnälos: Wordless chorus. [533]

Siwal·as, "Where Canoes Are Left": Village on the upper Kimsquit River.

Siwid: Celebrated Djoldämx chief living in the last century.

sixliktam: 1—Expedition without definite objective, made by a despondent person. [828]
2—Individual making such a journey. [484]

Sixman·a: 1—Daughter of the supreme god.
2—Kusiut name of a Bella Coola woman.

sixsän·imutsta: Place where healing power is petrified.

Sixsixqutnam: Synonym for Mälakila, the supernatural being connected with sisaok rites.

sixwismaq: Kusiut dance or object used in the land above which serves as pattern or model, änänuskx, for the user's protégé on earth.

sixwoqäxkmak: Actual goods used for the "Opening," the first public announcement of a forthcoming marriage. [584]

sixwotl: Unmarried mother. [848] siyeutla: To perform the services of a herald to a master, especially the proper direction of all chiefly rites. The word sieatla may be connected with this.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[728] yuhmax: Peace ceremony.
Yelehn: Bella Coola carpenter living in the last century.
yen·imut: Ceremonial error.
[534] Yentsänl: House of the first settlers at Sätlia in the beginning of time.
yet·en: Rattle.
[425] yet·umm: The sending back of a name to the family of its original owners through a return marriage, or the proposal to do so, made by the relatives of the wife.
[589] yetsalt; plural, yeetsalt; vocative plural, yeetsalt: A woman who has attained an [554] honourable position through being many times repurchased from her husband; virtually, a female chief.
Yelsqwikaiya: Kitlobe chief living in the beginning of time.
Yexasila: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man.
yexdimut: Fire-holder carried by Thunder.
[825] yexo'maitl: Old, female sea-lion.
Yexthn: Ancestral name of a Sinxl man.
Yexwomaitl: Ancestral name of a Kimsquit woman.
Y'ulätimut: One of the supernatural Carpenters.
[372] yuhmta: Sticks for making fire.
yuhäly: Promontory.
yu'pätl: The actual appearance of a performer at an a'alk dance during a potlatch.
Yuhwet: ustamy village.
Yuyuhmpl: Stone on the shore of Dean Channel believed to have been a man a long time ago.
Yuyulk"mai: 1—One of the first men to settle at Älqälxl in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Snulsli in the beginning of time.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

names are also willed, but since their value depends on the goods expended to validate them, there is seldom bitterness about their allotment. Indeed, a chief who is the legal owner of a designation which came from above in the beginning of time, will in many cases choose to elevate his position with respect to a title of comparatively recent date. But if any person who is not a member of the ancestral family should dare to use an ancestral name, all the members rise to avenge the theft, for such they feel it to be. In recent years, however, this practice has become comparatively common. In such cases a man, eager to share in the glories of a myth and able to give a potlatch, has validated an ancestral name to which he has no right. The presence of the white man alone restrains the injured ancestral family. Names are sometimes lent or hired to those who are not members of the group for definite sums; the recipient recompenses the individual. If such names are not returned for several generations quarrels are apt to arise since the recipient claims to be the real owner and not the temporary possessor. During his tenancy of the name he is entitled to any prerogative attached to it, but he is not considered a bona fide member of the ancestral family.

578 614 553 [428] [685] [178] [426] [427]

Instances have occurred in which an old man or woman, believing himself to be the last survivor of an ancestral family, has donated his names and myth to those who have befriended him, or these have been taken by those who buried him. Some individuals are constantly watching to conduct the funerals of friendless old people in the hope of so obtaining names. But in almost every case this leads to friction, since it is virtually impossible for an ancestral family to die out. Perhaps in the next generation, perhaps in the following one, some youth will claim descent from the first ancestors of the supposedly defunct family, and claim the myth and names embodied therein. This leads to a feud with the person, or his descendants, who has received the names through aid given to the "last" of the family.

[428] [557] [628]

Such instances of an ancestral family becoming practically

614 621

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NEb Bellacoola NEb

given as a slave to a Bella Coola, he was treated as a guest.[a] Slaves were bartered between Bella Coola individuals as a matter of course. Their value depended on sex, ability, and industriousness, as well as on supply and demand. When there was an over-supply, the value of a slave fell to twenty or thirty salmon, but whenever an owner found that someone wished to purchase a particular slave he endeavoured to raise the price. If a foreigner borrowed goods in Bella Coola he usually had to leave a relative as pledge. Thus, not many years ago, a Xaxais Indian, from near Ootsa Lake, borrowed goods from a Kimsquit man and left his son as pledge. The goods were not returned, so the son was sold as a slave to the people of Kitimat.

It was not uncommon for a Bella Coola to lose his freedom by gambling. At lehel especially, a player who had exhausted his goods not infrequently wagered his children, or in extreme cases, himself. If he lost, his children, or himself, became the property of the winner. Unless speedily repurchased by some relative, such slaves were usually sold or given away at the first opportunity to a member of a foreign tribe, since it was considered improper for a man to hold a member of his own tribe in servitude. The same course of action was taken on those rare occasions when one Bella Coola village fought against its neighbour and prisoners were taken.

To the Bella Coola, who still consider a man's "power" in the land as dependent to a considerable extent on his ancestral myth, a slave's greatest misfortune lay in the fact that he had no ancestral home, and hence no rights.

"No slaves came to earth with the first people," they say.

A slave was a stranger in a strange land, unsupported by a chain of ancestors reaching back to the beginning of time. On the whole, captives taken in war were better treated than other slaves since it was felt that such a misfortune might occur to anyone at any time. They were frequently ransomed by their

[a]This is said to be an ancient practice, due to the fact that several of the forefathers of the Bella Coola came to earth in that region and were on friendly terms with the inhabitants. It is conceivable that this tradition may have reference to the breaking away of the Bella Coola from the main Salish stock.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

He is especially rich in caribou-skins, used for foot covering, and goat-skins, so treasured for their wool.[1] He and his wife have laid up abundant food, and, most important of all, his wife's family is wealthy. Rumours have spread that X will soon give a potlatch and perhaps one or more foreign chiefs has given him a large cone-shaped whistle, such as is used in swaok ritual (see Plate 12). These whistles, called qomo·ts, are often referred to as the "breath" or "voice" of a chief; they are also called sloptsta, the "heart" or "wind" of a chief; a third designation is nuhwinuts. X carefully conceals a whistle in one of his boxes. Such a present expresses the kindly feeling existing between those akin to one another in that they have risen to a position of eminence above the common crowd. Its receipt spurs a man to greater efforts to amass the wealth necessary for giving a potlatch by keeping before his eyes the realization of what another has done. A rival chief never gives such a present. X returns each whistle secretly at the time of his potlatch.

Early in the autumn X decides that he has almost enough wealth. To complete the essential amount he will not hesitate to borrow from his friends. It is most unusual to be refused, for it is incumbent on X, unless he wishes to lose the esteem of the community, to repay his borrowings with heavy interest, and when X distributes his goods at his potlatch it will be announced how he has obtained them, and the lender is proclaimed as a person of sufficient wealth to be able to spare some of it. Goods so loaned are termed "belt goods," a reference to the manner in which a man fastens up his cape with a belt before setting to work. The assumption is that X will have to labour to repay his indebtedness. Failure to repay is a serious matter, and the lender would be justified in seizing a canoe or other valuable article as surety for his debt; in fact, feuds are commonly caused by unpaid debts. Men of business

[1] Formerly, when goat-skin blankets were highly valued, goats were never shot for fear of the blood staining the wool. Instead, they were cornered by dogs, and choked to death in nooses. For presentation, each skin was laid out on the floor and then cut into longitudinal strips, two, three, or four fingers wide.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

ability are always seeking to lend goods to those who are planning potlatches or other rites, knowing that the investment is safe and lucrative.

X uses his own discretion as to how much wealth is necessary. He knows how much he owes for presents received on previous occasions, and would not dream of giving a potlatch until able to repay these. Failure to do so would hold him up to the derision of the whole countryside. But he acts upon his own judgment with regard to interest. If he continues to hoard goods until he is able to repay with great increase, he gains prestige from his generous returns, but meanwhile he does not enjoy the distinction which would have followed a smaller affair at an earlier period. Further, there is the uncertainty about how much his wife's family will contribute, though that can be estimated with a fair degree of accuracy; in Bella Coola every transaction is made publicly, so each man knows the wealth of his neighbour. The favourite month for a potlatch is October, before the kusiat dances, when there is abundance of food. At this season there is plenty of salmon roe, berries, and crabapples, all of which might be ruined by frost. Occasionally, a potlatch takes place after the kusiat period, but in that case the only foods available are olachen grease, smoked meat, smoked fish, dried hemlock-bark, and dried berries. If several men in one village decide to give potlatches in the same year there may be rivalry and dispute as to which shall be first. There is no satisfactory method of settling this point.

When all is ready X tells a herald (I, p. 244) to summon his fellow villagers to his house the following day for sldetsaw. It is customary for all to accept, but no social obligation is broken should a man or woman fail to do so.

The next morning no one eats in his own house, knowing that free food will be distributed. While his expected guests are adorning themselves by washing and painting, X, aided by his family and others, prepares large quantities of food, borrows boxes, and makes other necessary arrangements. Pre-

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

* 552 The siki returns to the house and tells the guests that Malakila has indeed been near and has promised to return [575] later on. Those who are not nuxsé, being steeped in the belief [781] concerning the omnipresence of supernatural beings and ignorant of the carefully coagulated whistles, readily credit the tale that they have heard the voice of a denizen of the land above, whose language is intelligible to the siki. Thus is the supernatural element of the potlatch first called forth.

After a final distribution of food, the guests return to their homes.

THE INITIATION OF Nuxsé NEOPHYTES

* 556 At a potlatch valuable presents are given to the foreign 575 guests, but it is unthinkable for the donor to give to his fellow- [609] villagers. Accordingly, if X desires to display his generosity towards them, he does so at a preliminary ceremony, when he begins the initiation, or re-initiation, into the nuxsé society of any number of young people. After elaborate counting and re-counting of his goods, both those actually stored in his house and those promised,[11] X decides that he has sufficient to initiate, for example, seven neophytes. His first choice will be his own children, failing those, the sons and daughters of a brother or sister, or of his wife's relatives, or, if none of these are available, those of a friend. X does not gain any pecuniary advantage from such a transaction, in fact he loses, but the prestige attached outweighs this consideration.

"Is it not the privilege of a chief to be generous?" say the Bella Coola.

He approaches the parents of those whom he has selected, always members of old-established families. As it is to the [553] social advantage of a young person to be a nuxsé, a father usually tells X a nuxsé name, dormant in his family, which he wishes to have conferred on his son, and how much he is willing to contribute for the purpose. In many cases, a man will [11] In spite of the care exercised, mistakes are frequent, giving rise to hurried borrowings from friends to make up the necessary amount.

[426]

553 without special places, X calls upon some eloquent friend to 556 direct the distribution of the money. This speaker orates how 575 X is carrying out the rites incumbent on his noble and exalted [537] station, how all honour him for so doing, and how all should strive to follow his example. He then says that to give strength to the name Qnaqnacila, for example, X will give away, say $100. He further announces who have contributed this amount: perhaps $50 from X, and the other half from various relatives of Y. If the sum in question be large it is always mentioned from whom, and how the donor has obtained the money. Thus every financial transaction becomes publicly known, and the more prominently a man figures, the greater is his prestige. Next, the amount to be used for the second initiate's name is announced, with the same details, and in like fashion the sums decided upon for each successive initiate.

Then the total amount is distributed among the guests by the heralds, under X's supervision. He usually gives everyone the same amount; men sometimes receive more than [562] women, but in every case members of the same sex receive an equal sum. The Bella Coola are not expert mathematicians, [303] so that faulty division is the rule. If X, for example, decides to give $1.50 to each person present, it is a time of considerable anxiety while the stack of bills is being reduced, to watch whether or not there will be the exact amount. If X finds out [426] he is short he will hastily borrow some money, as it would be [578] an insult to omit anyone. If the amount be too great, he will use the surplus in making presents to the more influential guests.

With the exception of this possible surplus, the money distributed is regarded as an outright present; "it has flowed away to make good the boys' names" is the Bella Coola expression. A chief will remember how much he has received, and if he wishes to uphold or to increase his own dignity, he will make a point of returning at least an equivalent to X on some future occasion. But though in effect he may make return, such is never said to be the case. "The money has flowed away."

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

not returnable by X to his wife's family. A question on this point was regarded as highly amusing. If used for investment-gifts, the presents received in return are given to X, not to his wife's relations. 552* 583

A speaker, acting on instructions from the brother or other member of X's wife's family, also announces what names, portions of myth-prerogatives, or other privileges she is bestowing on her husband. After that the people disperse, although they are free to re-enter the house, where, during the afternoon, arrangements are being made for the elaborate ceremonial which takes place that night. 556*

Towards dusk the guests reassemble and take their places as before. Part of the goods which X proposes to give away has been brought in, and, aided by members of his family, he busies himself recounting and making final plans for its distribution. As the Bella Coola have no system of writing, accurate division of goods at a potlatch causes considerable difficulty and worry to the donor. A slighted guest will feel aggrieved, and the sacred nature of the rite will have been subjected to insult if arrangements are not satisfactory. The first business is the settlement of debts by X to the members of his own village. He may perhaps have borrowed fifty blankets ten years previously from a certain individual whom he now intends to repay, with foreign guests as witnesses to the transaction. X always endeavours to reimburse with as large a premium as possible, because by so doing he displays his nobility of mind to the assemblage; but if he can restore only the amount borrowed, or the same with a small increase, there will be no trouble such as might occur should he fail to return at least the principal. When the debt has been settled with interest the matter is at an end, for there is no compulsion upon the man who receives the additional sum to repay this with interest in his turn. The amount previously lent, and the occasion, are always publicly announced, so that all are made aware of his generosity with regard to interest. [212] [578] 426 556*

In Kimsquit it was customary at this stage of the proceed- 556* 184

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 556 465 skill shown by those who assisted, as well as the generosity of X, regulates the disbursements.

The following presents of money were given at a potlatch held about 1890, and were considered reasonable.

For painting two designs[a] on the front outside wall of the house	$ 40.00
For the erection of four upright posts, supporting the walls and roof of the house	20.00
For each longitudinal beam with painting	20.00
For each cross-beam, without painting	10.00
For the planking of the side walls[b]	100.00
For painting the rear wall of house, which is also the outside wall of the back-room[c]	40.00

[435] An average totem-pole would cost perhaps $150, but the prices varied greatly with size, complexity of design, and skill displayed.

●426 *556 The next distribution is of goods to repay debts which X has incurred at previous potlatches, that is, to return "investment presents" then received (I, p. 232). This is known as lisdjut, "repay," and the word is applied to all kinds of repayments, including revenge. One of a chief's difficulties is to remember his indebtedness. He may have been a guest at twenty potlatches, and at each has received presents varying in value, not only from different donors, but from other people associated with them. To keep these accurately in mind is [867] hard but essential, and parents carefully train their children to do so.

As previously mentioned, the Bella Coola have no fixed scale of interest on debts. Careful inquiries made on that point disclosed the idea to be entirely foreign. The greater the interest, the greater does the donor show himself to be. If, for example, X received an investment present of one hundred blankets from a Bella Bella chief ten years previously, [532] [342] [a]When two are painted, that on the left of the central door on entering passways X's father's crest, that on the right his mother's.

[b]Four men would work together on this task.

[c]Two men would work together at this, the choice of designs corresponding to those of the outside front.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

he may now repay with one hundred and fifty blankets. The amount of the original present will be announced, so that it is made known that he is repaying with 50 per cent interest. This completes the transaction. The man who receives the additional fifty blankets is not required to repay these, though he may endeavour to do so, should he wish to add to his own fame. It is sufficient if X pays back the principal only, though in that case he does not increase his prestige. No claim is ever made for the repayment of an investment present; repayment is so obviously to the advantage of the debtor that there is no necessity for dunning. A man who did so would expose himself to the ridicule of the community; it would demonstrate that he thought in terms of goods, whereas a chief is expected to give presents as if they were a mere nothing.

On rare occasions a chief has been unable to repay his investment presents. In the autumn of 1921, a Bella Bella chief, aided by his son, prepared to give a potlatch, and the news spread far and wide. But during the summer the young man accidentally shot himself while deer-hunting. The father realized that, bereft of his son's assistance, he would be unable to repay even the principal of his indebtedness. He wept with grief. A disgrace of this kind affects the man and all who are in any way related to him, so he called upon his relatives, and they gave him sufficient money to save the situation. In such a case, nobody is compelled to contribute aid, but a feeling of companion is at work, as well as a vague sense of family pride. One Bella Coola gave this chief $10, although all that was remembered about his relationship to the Bella Bella man was that one of his ancestors had married a woman from the village of the Bella Bella chief. Particular inquiries were made to ascertain whether or not the disgrace of failure to repay would fall on the ancestral family and whether they were legally bound to contribute. Such is decidedly not the Bella Coola concept; only feelings of pride and affection govern the contributions. Assistance of that kind is given without witnesses,

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

hence repayment or non-repayment does not affect the standing of the debtor in the community. The giver expects no return, but should he come to financial straits he would have no hesitation in asking aid from the Bella Bella chief. He expects, moreover, that the latter will contribute to the expenses of his funeral. This would be optional, as repayment of a non-ceremonial present concerns the donor and recipient alone, without effect on the status of either in the community. In this instance, if the old man had died soon after his son, his debts would not have been paid, since there were surviving no immediate relatives. Sons or other near kinsmen always settle the debts of dead parents out of family pride, but it is considered most improper for the creditors to think about repayment. By giving they have shown their power, the question of return is the concern of the family of the deceased recipient.

Very rarely does the donor of a potlatch fail to return his investment presents except through oversight. In spite of every precaution, errors occur, and these are said to be caused either by a supernatural being, itself invisible, rising between the donor and his guest, hiding the latter, or by Sinxmulaxaiste stealing away his thoughts. Unless the donor wishes to insult a guest, he will give him presents later on, and that ends the matter. But if he does not do so, the slighted man may return the insult, and thus feuds are often generated that may lead to war between tribes. About 1860 it is said that a conflict between the people of Bella Bella and Rivers Inlet was caused in that way. In the autumn of 1911, a Bella Coola chief insisted on dancing at a Bella Bella potlatch, although it was commonly known he did not have the necessary goods for distribution to validate his dance. The hosts waxed sarcastic, taunts were answered by taunts, and only the presence of some white men prevented bloodshed. Relations between the two tribes are still strained as a result of this incident. The Bella Coola chief was subject to spells of insanity, and danced during one of them. According to the

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

426 556
[648]
[828]

Bella Coola, the Bella Bella should have taken this into account, along with the man's generosity on previous occasions, and overlooked his remissness.

Cases have been known of a "stupid" man endeavouring to increase his prestige by giving many potlatches when unable to pay his debts. Such a one is laughed at for his stinginess, which is not the attribute of a chief, and is given only small presents. [558]

It must be clearly understood that debts publicly incurred, in other words investment presents received at any ceremony, must be publicly returned, if the debtor is to gain the public esteem granted to one who pays back with interest. But everyone cannot give a potlatch; hence any young man desirous of returning his obligations, and of rising in public favour, can do so at a potlatch given by somebody else. Guests are present from abroad, so his discharge of indebtedness is made known farther afield than if he had done so at a local gathering, and the donor has the additional satisfaction of being able to give to these strangers. Sometimes as many as ten young men will ask X for permission to pay their debts at his potlatch. Such is never refused, because it means more ceremonial, and greater interest, which indirectly increase X's prestige. A young man who has been taken to a foreign potlatch as an adherent of a guest always receives presents, and if he repays these with interest his name begins to become known, especially as his return payments are unexpected. It is thus that a man whose chiefly name (or names) has been dormant for generations, can begin to restore it. Thanks to presents he gives at X's potlatch, he will in return receive large gifts, until finally he is able to give a potlatch himself. After X has paid his own indebtedness the debts of others are settled. In each case the speaker announces the amount received on such and such an occasion and the amount returned. Thus all present are able to estimate the generosity of the payer, a chiefly attribute. When a young man plans to give his first potlatch it is customary for the older chiefs of his village to advise whether he has sufficient goods, though every man is understood to be master of his own affairs.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

After paying his debts X still has many heavy expenses in connection with the nuxat initiates, and the young people for whom he is obtaining seats. Goods for these purposes have been put on one side. The remainder he now proceeds to give away as investment presents. His exhibition of ancestral prerogatives, and the guise in which his ancestors are now living, as eagle, raven, whale, or such like, have been duly validated by the presents given on the preceding evening, and his social status has been cared for by the payments to his craftsmen and other creditors. Thus investment presents are not essential, though a man always endeavours to give them, both for economic and social reasons. There are no definite laws regarding their distribution. X is guided in his choice of recipients[*] by the following considerations:

(1) If a certain chief is likely to give a potlatch soon he knows that a present given him will be returned with interest.

(2) He desires to give something to a chief from whom he has often received favours.

(3) He wishes to ingratiate himself with a powerful chief by presents.

(4) He wishes to give presents to a chief with whom he is not on friendly terms. Unless the latter reciprocates, it will be considered that X has shown his superiority.

(5) Usually an important chief will receive more valuable presents than one of lesser rank. This custom is not governed by any fixed scale, and an important chief may be deliberately slighted, if X thinks that he has not shown him, X, sufficient respect.

It is considered the height of folly to give presents without due regard to their return.

The amount of gifts depends entirely on the wealth and desires of X. If he wishes to increase his fame, he will endea-

[*] Only one present is given to each man, irrespective of the number of names he may have. The Kwakiutl are said to give a gift for each designation.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

vour to give valuable presents, but he need not give any. It is a deep disgrace to any man to be unable to return these presents. Nothing is said, nor does the donor take active steps to receive his returns, but the influence of the recipient perceptibly wanes. It is expected that a heavier rate of interest will be paid on presents received many years before repayment, but again this is a matter of individual volition. The debts of a man who dies while owing for goods received at potlatches are scrupulously discharged by his family. If they fail to do so, their own influence is lessened. 426 556* 558

One method of reducing the value of an investment present can be used by a man who feels unable to repay a large gift. The uncle of an elderly Bella Coola was once guest at a Kimsquit potlatch, where he received, as an investment present, a fine large canoe and two hundred blankets. Not wishing to incur so large a liability he at once returned fifty of the blankets to his host for distribution among the guests. Consequently, he was expected to make return for only one hundred and fifty blankets, with whatever interest he desired. This action tended to lower his prestige, since it acknowledged his inability or unwillingness to repay his present. The chief in question, being firmly established in his chiefly status, did not fear to do this, though one of lesser rank would have hesitated to confess his inferiority.

It is on the value of the goods distributed in these three types of presentation; namely, recompense for work done, repayment of debts, and investment presents, that the importance of the potlatch, and consequently of X himself, is virtually judged. These distributions of presents are for the potlatch as a whole, including the return of the dead and the intangible prestige of X; the donations which follow are to validate specific transactions which can be omitted. In one or two families the whole course of the potlatch is changed, since the members have the prerogative of distributing their presents outside the house. In such a case the giving is done during the day instead of at night. Details of this ritual, 426 556* [184 424]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

556 which is said to have come as a prerogative obtained through [426] marriage with a Kwakiutl woman, were not obtained.
[184] After the distribution of investment presents comes the [424] strengthening of X's seat.

His wife, aided by members of her family, has placed the necessary goods in readiness, though it is pretended they merely happen to be on hand. A herald takes his place near [203] the door, and another behind the fire. Beside the latter stands a chief, attired in a sisaok head-dress, who represents X. One of the heralds calls on this substitute to come forward, as if he were just entering the house, and shouts:

"There is no place for him to sit!"

Then he turns to X's wife, saying:

"See if you have not a few trifles in your room to strengthen him."

[196] The word for "strengthen" is ixkekuta, or qkəlulitsta, which means, "shoring up," as if X were wobbling on his chief-like base. The words have the other significance of "clothing." They represent the ethereal dignity wherewith a chief is garbed.

X's wife goes to her room, or to the place in the house where the goods are stored, and brings forth a large assortment of valuables, which are piled in a convenient spot. The substitute who is representing X then places himself in the latter's seat, which is to be made more solid by these goods. X's wife may tell the herald that they have still more goods for him, and in that case he calls out:

"His seat is too hard. Have you no soft cloths for it?"

The wife brings forward more goods to make her husband's seat more comfortable. The herald, who has been chosen for [203] his fluency, uses his originality in what he calls for from the wife; soft cloths for the seat is merely an example. In some cases, many presents are given; at other times, if the wife and her family be poor, these are few and of little worth. It is not essential that foreign guests witness this establishment or strengthening of a seat, though their presence means that X's

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

village at some ceremony, exactly as a child's name is conferred. Designations are chosen with respect to the appearance of the copper, or some incident connected with its history. Such a designation is Qwaixwos, "Begrimed," applied to a copper thrown many times into the fire. If, for instance, $50 be expended for a name, the value of a $30 copper is henceforth $80. 435 552 556*

(3) By Making Gifts. The owner of a copper can increase its value by calling together the other chiefs of his village, and sometimes of adjacent ones as well. After the customary meal, the owner expounds the history of his possession, giving details of its value. Then he passes it to one of his guests, who, unless he wishes to insult his host, must hold it upright, that is, with the broad end uppermost. The owner gives it in turn to each of his guests. To validate the display, the owner must bestow gifts on all present, and the total value of these is added to the value of the copper. Such gifts are not strictly returnable, although it is customary for chiefs to show their generosity and prowess to their fellows by a later repayment with interest. 435 556* [578] [426]

By these means the original purchaser of a worthless copper can increase its value to such a point that it can be used at a potlatch. There is no established custom about this. Coppers are not as valuable in Bella Coola as, for instance, at Fort Rupert, and it is unlikely that any are ever worth more than $300, and the average value is probably between $150 and $200. Considerable time is required to raise the value of a copper to this sum and the owner in many cases finds that he has all the other requirements before his copper is ready for use. In that case, he tries to buy another which has been raised to sufficient worth by its owner. Everyone knows the values of the different coppers in the community, and the intending purchaser calls his fellow-chiefs to his house and offers to buy one valued, for example, at $150. If the owner consents to sell, he usually endeavours to get as much as possible, perhaps $175. The sum is publicly paid and is henceforth the value of the copper, which is transmitted to the new [171] 435 437 556*

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

435 owner with a statement of its history and the amount expended
437 on it. The purchase of a copper is, therefore, a good business
*556 transaction, and it might be assumed that a chief with keen commercial instinct would endeavour to acquire as many as [171] possible. This is said to be the case in Fort Rupert, but in [183] Bella Coola public opinion is averse to the obtaining of coppers unless for use at potlatches. As every ambitious chief hopes to give potlatches, he can always claim that the acquisition of a copper is for this end, and that the sale of it is from a kindly desire to assist a fellow-chief who is nearer the desired goal than he himself. Consequently, the sale of coppers is tolerably common, and a chief is not considered to be mercenary unless he sells too frequently.

•426 The intending donor of a potlatch can now proceed to the ceremony, secure in the possession of a copper worthy to be
*556 thrown on the fire after the passage of his deceased relative. In addition, he may own another copper of too small value for this purpose. As described in the last chapter, he repeatedly calls together the inhabitants of his own village to rites which he validates by the distribution of presents, and at which he also gives away investment presents. He may decide to use his second copper for this purpose. All investment presents, [558] which are given only to men of standing in the community, must be repaid with interest unless the recipient is willing to decline in popular estimation; but when a gift of this kind consists of a copper, a return of 100 per cent is expected on the transaction. Bestowal of a copper in such circumstances is not spoken of as an investment present, kəlämkusnäm, but as änuxop', which has the definite significance of something that must be returned with 100 per cent interest. If the value of the copper were $25 before this bestowal, it is now $50, since the new owner must repay this amount to the chief planning to give the potlatch. The new owner can use the copper in any way he desires; if he repays a previous indebtedness, he cancels $50 by giving it; whereas if he bestows it as änuxop', announcement is made that its value is $50, and he expects to receive $100 in return. The last sum is now the value of the copper. This second bestowal may take place before the owner has paid the $50 that he owes to the original possessor. There is no time limit to Bella Coola debts since it adds to the debtor's prestige to pay off his indebtedness, publicly of course, when his creditor is giving a ceremony of any kind. At every change in ownership announcement is made of the history of the copper and of its value at every stage of its existence. In this way the worth of a copper increases until it is fit to be thrown into the fire after the passing of a dead kinsman. When one that has been used as ānuxop' is at last cast into the flames, and later rescued from them, it is customary for the new owner to use it once more as ānuxop'. On the other hand, a copper that has been raised to value by the gift of a name, painting, and so forth, is normally again revalued in the same way when rescued from oblivion. There is no definite rule about this; it is only a tendency.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

426 556* 435 556*

The value of a copper acquired from either a white man or a member of a foreign tribe is equivalent to its purchase price, and can be raised in any one of the ways employed for one that has been thrown into a fire.

In many cases the donor of a potlatch prefers not to be the actual possessor of a copper at the time of the entry of his deceased relative, though he always arranges to obtain one. When the masked figure has disappeared, the donor stands up and says:

426 556*

"I have nothing to make bone for my ancestor. Chief So-and-so, please give me your copper."

The chief so called upon transmits the copper with a statement of its value and the recipient throws it into the fire. Nothing is said about repayment, but the transaction has been public and everyone realizes that the chief must repay with 100 per cent interest when the seller gives his next ceremony. In this way the donor is able to use a copper without having had to pay for it at an inconvenient time when he needs all his wealth to give to his foreign guests. A chief often sells a copper

[432] [435]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

435 immediately before, or during the early stages of a potlatch, in order to receive goods immediately, but with the proviso that *556 it shall be returned to him for throwing into the fire. This [432] method has the advantage of providing the chief with goods [426] when required, and doubles the worth of the copper.

Coppers are not always rescued from the ashes and given to poor men. If one is still lying in the fire after several days, [764] the donor of the potlatch removes it and fastens it to the memorial-post over the grave of his deceased relative. It may be left there, or another chief wanting a copper may buy it from the donor and increase its value in the usual manner. Only a small price is paid in such circumstances, since the copper, having served its purpose, is practically valueless.

177 The Bella Coola state that in ancient times coppers were worth less than at present, and that the change in sentiment 435 regarding them is due to Kwakiutl influence. All agree that *556 the value placed upon them at Fort Rupert and Alert Bay is greater than elsewhere on the coast. The Bella Coola believe that the Kwakiutl distribute presents in respect to their coppers and that their values mount to enormous sums when the gifts are returned. It is clear that the importance of coppers, like the potlatch and other elements of culture, has increased in recent years through the influence of the coastal tribes.

556 It is almost impossible to define coppers in the nomenclature of economic theory. They are not mere articles of barter, since they have no practical use outside the ceremonies of chiefs. Nor are they standardized units of trade or cur- [436] rency, since each differs not only from all other coppers, but also at different periods. In a sense they serve as tokens of [211] what has been expended; representations of them may be carved and painted on totem-poles where they serve as marks [532] of the goods which the chief has given away, but this is only a minor consideration. A copper can perhaps best be described [426] as an investment which can be applied only to one purpose, [435] "the making of bone for a deceased" person. It grows more valuable at every transmission in accordance with the goods expended, so that it serves as a visible and tangible memorandum of the chief-like generosity of its owner. By means of these media, debts are passed from one individual to another without actual liquidation in goods; in fact, it is unlikely that the Bella Coola possess sufficient money to meet the sums represented by their coppers. 556 [435] [426]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Professional Prerogatives

The importance of prerogatives in the lives of the Bella Coola has already been noted in many connections. A man's name is his only because his ancestral family has the prerogative of using that designation; a kusiut dance can be performed only by an individual with the necessary prerogative; specific totem-pole designs, the portrayal of bird or animal on spoons, seats, house-posts, and other objects is a right dependent upon an ancestral prerogative; as is also the area on which a man can hunt or fish. The concept colours all Bella Coola life. Not only is a man's ceremonial life based on this principle, but on it depend his actions as chief, and the economic sources of his food-supply. No prerogative, even though it be the property of a man, is effective until validated by the distribution of presents. Much of a man's energy throughout life is expended on the validation and display of his prerogatives; most Bella Coola feuds are caused by the infringement of one individual on another's rights. 424 556* [532] [796] [431] [627] [578]

In addition to the various types already mentioned, there are a number of professional prerogatives on which depend a man's vocation. That of herald approximates this class, although the Bella Coola consider it rather as a right operative only during ceremonials. Professional prerogatives rest on the belief that a man's ability as a hunter, wood-worker, and so forth does not rest in his innate skill, but upon an inherited right which must be confirmed and validated by the distribution of presents. These can be given at any convenient time when the people have been called together, but, as it is to the man's advantage to have his right made known as widely 424 463 556*

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

533 of each song dances to it. Anyone who has enough food to 535 provide a meal for all is glad to invite his neighbours to such 574 an affair, but the singers and heralds can force a stingy man to act as host. Everyone knows his neighbour's resources and the singers have no hesitation in going to the house of a man with an ample supply of food and beginning to beat out songs [203] there. The heralds are quick to see what is happening and [626] call the people, with the result that the involuntary host is compelled to provide a meal in order not to be thought mean and churlish. Without waiting for the singers to take the [203] initiative, heralds likewise often invite people to the house of a man whom they know to be well provided with food.

During the summer, the necessity of laying in supplies of [221] salmon makes it impossible to hold many dances, although one [796] of the non-sacred type just described takes place whenever there is a lull in the fishing. In the early autumn, when ber-556 ries, fish, and game are abundant, the thoughts of chiefs turn 796 to potlatches and the lengthy preliminaries are begun. At this season, too, a chief who lacks sufficient wealth to invite foreign [221] guests, calls in his neighbours for a susaok dance and initiates [575] some of his young relatives into that society. The ritual, [535] described in the last chapter, resembles that of a potlatch except that no new house is constructed, there is no return of a dead relative, and the ceremonial connected with the coming of foreigners is necessarily omitted. In some cases a chief performs this type of rite a year before he proposes to hold a potlatch, and explains that he is doing so because he will be unable to give presents to the inhabitants of his own village [426] at the later affair. Gifts so distributed are returnable with interest, though it is not obligatory for recipients to do this in time for the donor to make use of their repayment at his potlatch.

Ceremonials of this nature occupy the Bella Coola during [575] the early autumn, while in winter kusiut dances take place [535] almost nightly. When they are over, it is time for the non-sacred variety of a'alk performances, and for another type of rrte, nusäxkämx.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

the same manner the fluent speaker outlines a myth belonging to the ancestral family of X's mother, again with emphasis on the dancers used by her ancestors. X, as a member of both ancestral families, can combine his rights from both sides, but it is customary for him to use no more than five or six performers. Should X have no claim to this privilege from either mother or father, an almost unthinkable situation, he is able to borrow the prerogative of using some from friends. The sentiment on which this oration of myths is based is the one so often mentioned; it marks the close relationship between the future children and their noble ancestors of old, a source of strength to the former. 537 585 [426]

X's father now names those whom he wishes to assist him on the following day. These are the dancers, who are chosen primarily for their skill in dancing, and secondarily in accordance with their rank. With them he selects a number of persons to stand near and help or "cherish" them as they perform. He also asks the services of some of the women who are professional droners; of the keeper of the marriage song of his ancestral family; and, finally, of a number of men to sit near the singers and assist them with suggestions. It would be most exceptional for anyone so called upon to decline the honour. It is near morning by this time and the guests depart. 585 [535] [614]

On the following morning, the actual wedding day, X's father calls to his house those selected the previous evening as dancers and their assistants. The former wear blankets decorated with small copper ornaments[1] and carry circular wooden rattles provided with handles. Their clothing and rattles may be their own, but if they do not possess suitable attire, it is incumbent on X's father to provide them. Skins are piled up within the house, and some of these are said to "make soft the [534]

[1]At the present time there is uncertainty as to the proper clothing of a marriage dancer. Several informants stated that it was a copper-decorated blanket, whereas others said that there was no special attire; one man claimed that an attempt was made to imitate the form and costume of X's first ancestor, and another that ziaool costume was used. Probably there was no uniformity in custom. [292] [535] [184]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

585 handles of the rattles"; symbolizing that they are pads to protect the hands, though the dancers derive no benefit from the pelts, which are stacked with others for later distribution to Y's family. A large amount of provisions has been prepared and placed in boxes, one for each member of Y's family. In many cases it is difficult to estimate how much food will be required, and if there is a surplus, it is eaten by the performers and other assistants.

When all are ready they rush forth; dancers, dancers' assistants, and young relatives of X, followed more sedately by his father. The rest of the villagers watch with interest, but do not take part in the ceremony. Choosing a position outside Y's house, the singers beat the time of the marriage [533] song used by X's ancestors; if the words are known they sing them. Like the prerogative of marriage dancers, there may [424] not be a marriage song embodied in every origin myth, but if [426] X lacks such he is usually able to borrow one.[4] The keeper of the song is stationed near the singers, ready to help them with the words or the tune, if necessary. Meanwhile the [535] dancers are performing on the sidewalk outside Y's house. Each uses whatever type of dance he chooses, kusiut, susook, a'alk, or even shaman's, but all dance simultaneously, though without paying greater attention to each other than is [533] necessary to avoid collisions. The professional droners accompany the singing with their high-pitched quaver.

Meanwhile Y's father, surrounded by his relatives and friends, waits in readiness within their house. Y herself is [4]The reputed origin of marriage songs has been described in vol. I, chap. vi. They are less strongly preserved as prerogatives than most elements of origin myths; in fact some keepers of the songs are willing to perform at any wedding, although this [614] may be a modern development. The keeper, either man or woman, is chosen by the senior members of the ancestral family, after discussion with the singers. It is his duty to remember text and tune, and the only pecuniary advantage is from the presents made by those to whom he teaches it. Some songs have words, others only a tune. The text of a song brought down by Alpuntim to Snaile-ol is:

"Hello, Snaile-ol! We do as we have done before. Please make good the path for those who are about to marry."

Alpuntim obtained this song from his heavenly namesake and used it at his own marriage, as his male descendants have since done.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

to whom they are going, and for what purpose. He says, for example: 556 * 769

"Fifty skins become nothing on the path of Kálákɛ."

Everyone knows that this means the expenditure of that amount for the singing of a mourning song in connection with [533] the myth in which Kálákɛ appears. Gifts must be given for each song, and it is the desire of the donor that they be of fitting value. So, too, is the validation of professional mourners confirmed. [425] The goods having thus been displayed, a first distribution, called "Tears" with reference to the donor's grief, is made, each guest receiving a gift of the same worth. It is not returnable, being the legalization of the ceremony he has just witnessed. This is followed by donations to the carpenters, the singers, the professional mourners, and all others who have [465] rendered assistance; in essence, these are pay, though they are always referred to as free-will gifts made in gratitude for services rendered. Like the last, they are not returnable. Finally, any goods remaining from the store that has been brought out are given to chiefs and other influential members of the audience. Though not clearly stated, the recipients know that these are really investment-presents; when they reciprocate, [426] they mention that they are repaying a gift made at a memorial potlatch. A plentiful meal is now served, during which several chiefs make complimentary speeches, and the gathering breaks up.

In former times, when features of the ordinary potlatch were banned from a memorial potlatch, the ceremony just described was the central point of the proceedings. It was this public song-recital of the journey taken by his deceased relative which alleviated the donor's sorrow and filled him with pride. A few days after, in the late afternoon, the heralds called back the guests and the songs were sung and re-sung. [533] Miniature totem-poles were not used, nor were professional mourners in evidence; the sole function of the gathering was to provide opportunity for learning the songs. They were repeated until far into the night, when a large meal was served and the guests though the cost of validating such a prerogative is less than a potlatch, yet a Cannibal dance, for example, entails considerable expenditure, so a man entitled to give such a ceremony frequently lends his right to another, or it may lie dormant for generations. Like other loaned prerogatives, failure to return is a frequent cause of feud. A man frequently gives away a kusiut name-prerogative, and if he should give away all of them, he becomes legally an uninitiated. In such a case it is customary for his wife, or some relative, to give him a new kusiut prerogative, as is likewise the case when a master causes a slave to be initiated. A name is sometimes given to a person who resembles a deceased relative of the donor.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

575* 424 425 553 556 578 426

(2) A Patron, omätuts. Little need be said on this point. The words of the songs used by the dancer often describe his patron, always couched in mystical terms for the benefit of the uninitiated. If the supernatural associate performs any type of dance at the gathering above, so can his protégé perform on this earth, otherwise his power is limited to singing of the being. If an individual inherits prerogatives with the same patron from two different relatives, he can merge these to give a composite dance, with consequent additional power. Greedy individuals sometimes illegally add features to which they are not entitled, a cause of bitter feelings. Or one individual may own several prerogatives with different patrons. Although most kukusiut have only one, yet two or three are not uncommon and one case is known of a man with six distinct patrons. The uninitiated believe that from any one of these may come the call giving him the power to perform.

575* 424 776 533 535 578

(3) A Repository. In this subterranean shelter his name remains, guarded by Änø'likwolsaix. An individual with several prerogatives has a repository for each.

575* 424 778

Although the kukusiut are aware that much of their ritual is deception, it is clear that they believe in the supernatural origin of their rites, and that their ancestors actually had the abilities which their descendants of today imitate. In time

773 781

*575 not considered necessary. With few exceptions, hereafter to 796 be noted, kwaiat masks are burnt at the conclusion of each 532 ceremony, a practice which probably originated in order to avoid the possibility of their being seen by the uninitiated.
[171] The Bella Coola state that this is one of the most striking differences between their rites and those of the Bella Bella.

*575 Next in importance to masks are whistles (see Plate 2).[1] 796 The large, cone-shaped form used in nuaá ceremonial is re-534 placed in kwaiat dances by a smaller type consisting of portions of wood glued together, which can be blown with ease from [237] beneath a concealing blanket. Another type has bellows consisting of a mountain goat bladder, which is held beneath the arm-pit so that it can be worked invisibly. During the summer the whistles are kept by one individual, usually a [422] marshal. Specific information concerning the ownership of these whistles could not be obtained; it appears that any kwaiat can make one, or have one made for him by a skilled carpenter, and that their retention by one person during the summer is merely for convenience. They are freely lent to [420] anyone for use in a ceremony.

*575 In some dances special objects are used in connection with 796 dramatic performances, such as bull-roarers, wooden repre-
532 sentations of animals, birds, or miniature human beings. One old man described a pipe formerly used at Tálio, which had [534] a carved bowl as large as a tea-cup with three radiating stems.
[124] It was carved from a knotty excrescence on a beech bole.
Little could be learnt of its history, except that it was supposed to have been carved by a chief with the design of his patron and displayed through pride.

*575 The usual guests at a performance of the type just sum-
609 marized are the dancer's fellow-villagers and any strangers 796 who happen to be present in the town. Great as is the desire of the kwaiat to impress their uninitiated relatives, they [648] are still more eager to impress strangers, hence the presence of Carriers adds piquancy to the rites. The writer believes [123] that his presence and interest encouraged the Bella Coola to

[1] [See category N6, p 84(B) - ANALYST]

[The Dance of NoaKanim]

773 approaches the Bella Coola River, and proceeds up it, beneath 124 the surface of the water, invisible to all. Its destination is 125 Smaiac-a, whence its captain leaps to Nuxpiwaiste to await the coming of Alpaxiów. The crew consists of a number of supernatural beings, who will be described in connection with the ceremonial on the night of nakaum. This canoe, which brings the salmon and berries to Bella Coola, has four masts but no sails, and is enormous. Whenever the weather is fine, Nuákynum lowers first one side and then the other of his craft so that the salmon may leave; after swimming around for a time they always return, refreshed by their exercise. In former [715 times when people were purified by ceremonial chastity, sev-
[151 eral succeeded in seeing the craft, and from them it is known [787 that it is almost six hundred yards in length, that it travels without leaving a wake, that any canoes passing near are sucked along after it, and that a mallard duck, perched on the bow, quacks continuously. Intelligent informants agreed that the bringing of the salmon during the autumn was inconsistent, but they could offer no explanation. One man believed that this was pointed out not many years ago by a man whose [620 patron was Nuákynum, but that the marshals requested him [776 not to upset established ritual by too much logic. Nuákynum is patron for several ítakaiat, who are believed by the uninitiated to be able to see his canoe. As he passes up the river 4 575 the ítaciat dances begin.
790
184

It is unnecessary to describe the full ritual in each village, as this is supposed to be identical, and probably contains only [424 slight variations, if any. In Tsowatl the ítaciat who has the [441 prerogative of seeing Nuákynum is a certain Sposlim-i,* in [551 Kimsquit, Alaxiwmaxum,* and in Skówl, Xowtum. Although,

[115 *Details of this dance were learned from the father of Sposlim-i, who intimated [424 that the name was a family possession. Several months later an old woman [578 referred to the loosing of this designation by her father and said that the property was had failed to secure it. Minor findings are often caused by disputes of this kind.

*Meaning "Cloud Covered," a reference to the invisibility of his person, as if the latter were hidden by clouds. Many ítaciat women have significations of this type.

This ejaculation is supposed to make the work of manufacture less difficult. The same procedure is repeated with every mask ordered, except that if the being to be represented is a woman, X's ejaculation is i ·····. Any kaciat can make a mask, but the preference is always given to a man who has shown ability in previous tasks. The carpenters endeavour to follow well-recognized designs for many representations, but a great deal of latitude is allowed, and a workman receives greater praise and fame for turning out a fine and distinctive piece of new design, than for rigid adherence to a former type. This, combined with the burning of masks and consequent loss of permanent patterns, is responsible for the variability in Bella Coola forms, and the difficulty which they themselves experience in recognizing portrayed beings.

As soon as all the carpentry has been allotted, the singers strike up one of X's eight songs. Whether or not he dances to them is a matter about which there is a difference of opinion among informants. In any case the re-singing on nacistilap is purely for rehearsal, made necessary by the large number of songs. Later on in the kaciat season, the songs of other dancers may be practised on this night, and if the owners wish to practice their steps, it is quite proper for them to do so. Finally, a meal is distributed, while the marshals discourse in the usual way. Feasts are features of all kaciat dances, and the food distributed is regarded as a free-will gift, without thought of repayment. After eating, the kakaciat disperse; X must sleep within his own house, but no longer remains within his platform-enclosure.

The next day, the twenty-sixth of the ceremony, is qaiim. Early in the morning a herald summons to X's house, where the blocks have been left, all those to whom work has been assigned. All morning they carve diligently. The speed with which masks are completed is surprising, although this has undoubtedly increased since the introduction of metal tools. In the middle of the day a few kakaciat men, no women, are invited to share "the carpenters' meal," as the food provided

(c) Brought from above as a present from Ḳpaxstem.
(d) One of the dancer's first ancestors.
(e) Combined themes such as this, referring both to the approaching potlatch and the dancer's origin myth, are common at potlatches and hahamat.

599*

ax̌'hi'a Song Used for Ḳmaxpaxstmem of Kimsquit(a)

A Ḳaiyc-tsqelem | chimsqemsqilidax | ḳimsis-tsudax | ax-tsem-ḳilaxiv Presently the people who lack prerogatives will cry(b) what I possess. Because dimsemsqelar | dem'ki'a-sudai

it increases usually, it is ax̌'hi'a(c).

[wawaxan caused]

B Ḳemil-tsmax-ndendax
In the beginning there came down

| Pempilxdimat
| Pempilxdimat(d)

| 'ax'ax'ximmy'ᵐmix
| with his crest(e).

Ḳemsemsqiv
He seen himself

| ispmsqawimdimix
| on the mouth

| mmdax-mix
| of the "Heavy One"(f).

[wawaxan caused]

C The last part has been forgotten(g).

(a) Recorded on song VII D 30a, National Museum of Canada; singer, Jim Pakard.
(b) The word mqam, which is translated as cry, is used only for the dance of ancestral prerogatives which can never be attained except by those who are members of the ancestral family concerned. [424] [614]
(c) It was impossible to obtain literal translations of the subdivisions.
(d) A name which Jimmas (I, p. 332) took for himself on earth. It is claimed that the composers of this song erred in using this designation.
(e) Jimmas came down to the Kimsquit River, but the grandiloquent phrasing expresses the sentiment that men and stream came together.
(f) The Kimsquit River is sometimes named Ḳ'mlax on its name as chief. This designation was obtained by Jimmas from Bella Bella, with his marriage to a woman of that tribe, and borrowed by him on the river. [103] [424]
(g) This song was used during the winter of 1923-4 and nearly led to friction. It is claimed that the right to the name Ḳmaxpaxstmem was lost to a Kimsquit man who failed to return it. The borrower has been dead many years, but when his son proceeded to dance, one of the singers who was related to the original leader refused to take part in the singing. [578] [426] [424]

Pasiyahem Song Used for a Kimsquit Man(a)

A ax-ilsqelin
I have obtained

| sipsdimmdzipsu
| the ancestral right

| dimimsdidade
| which displayed

| sipsmmmdzadzab
| my headdress(b).

[wawaxan caused]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

577 edly until complete confidence was established, simplifying
[124] work in the field to an enormous extent. Equal trust could be placed on these men in other respects; articles of value were repeatedly left in their houses with the absolute certainty that they would be guarded with care. Some few individuals there were, however, who were neither honest nor trustworthy.
[771] Bella Coola religion is not concerned with ethics, but public 626 opinion demands honour in dealing with relatives or friends.
577 In former times, for example, debts incurred by an individual were considered a liability by his relations. If a man died after [426] buying goods on credit for a potlatch, his family were disgraced [602] if they failed to pay his bills; now, unfortunately, nothing con-[177] strains the younger people, many of whom try to avoid settling even their own debts, much less those of dead relatives. Individual conscience has not replaced the tribal and, more specifically, family influence. Dishonesty in small matters is not [648] uncommon, particularly in dealing with white people who,
[177] according to the Bella Coola, were the first to transgress. The older people bitterly lament the lack of morality of the younger and state, probably with entire justification, that they would have been prevented by the open life which prevailed when several families shared a single house. On the whole, however, the average Bella Coola is probably no less honest than the average white man.

153 Individuals vary enormously in mental ability. In making 124 this investigation, it was necessary to interview all the older people of the tribe. Disregarding those unwilling to provide information, it was found that some absolutely lacked the ability to explain matters with which they were familiar; some did not have sufficient patience to be good teachers; some were so forgetful that they would omit necessary points in a story or account; some were downright stupid, whereas others displayed mental ability of no mean order. In reading ethnological literature, one is apt to think of the troubles experienced by the author, and to overlook the fact that natives have as

*192
[424] Alnachum: Excess of amount returned over that previously received as an investment present.
Anaklidzis: One of the nine supernatural siblings.
Anahum: 1—Supernatural beings who drove on the sun moons.
2—Name of the supernatural women, Intsimo-a, the term is sometimally applied to the being herself. The sound is produced by tactar whistles.
Anaklidzis: One of the nine supernatural siblings.
Anachum: "The Coming of Foul Weather," in the language of supernatural beings. The phenomenon is semi-anthropomorphized.
Ainsi-o: 1—Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
2—Affluent chief from whom the village is supposedly named.
Aqumtsumkiim: Earlier name of a Bella Coola man; the designation is of Kwakiutl origin.
[821] Aqumtsut: Supernatural beings who blacken the face of the moon or eclipses.
Alnamdzi: 1—One of the first women to settle at Tal-o in the beginning of time.
2—Daughter of an atsimq chief mentioned in an ancient story.
Anaki: 1—One of the designations of Kimsi-o, the mysterious supernatural women.
2—Envious, ever-inquiring, ulkstim.
[526] alnamqu: Swing consisting of two long cedar with cross-seats.
[824] alnakdzi-o: Spruce bower.
Ahamu: Earlier name of a Bella Coola man.
alqumum: Label.
Ahaldzi: 1—One of the first men to settle on Calvert Island in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Pacmdzi in the beginning of time.
3—One of the first men to settle at Ainsi-o in the beginning of time.
ahdzisim: Stake supporting clothes rack.
[796] ahnachum: Ritual repeated at intervals between the allotment of tasks for a potlatch, and the coming of a supernatural being to the first sunrise initiate.
ap, plural, aaalt'ax: Shield.
Ahkimum: Earlier name of a Bella Coola man.
[588] ahm: Third part of song.
ahm: Pleasure expedition of boys and girls to the forest.
[517] Ahm: Name of an initiated man.
[821] Aqumtsut: Supernatural man-eater, partner of Cannibals.
Aqumtsut: Stick decorated with abalone shell used by one of the settlers in the upper Bella Coola valley in the beginning of time.
Aqumtsut: Supernatural female berry-picker resident in the land of the dead.
ahum: Summons.
Ahatsdzi-o: Boy of the Thousand Islands near Pierce.
Ahakimum: Earlier name of a Bella Coola man.
alnakdz: Cannibal.
[379] alnamdzi: Marriage with sister of a deceased wife, the word is undoubtedly associated with the verb, a-lqumtsh.
Ainsi-o: Supernatural creature similar to a human being.
Alnik: Supernatural woman, wife of Cold Wind and mother of Ice.
Anaki: Bella Bella man mentioned in an ancient story.
[425] ainl-tum: The mouthwater of a man, during the period of engagement, from the father of the future bridegroom to the father of the future bride.
[539]
[574]

#142

Ala: some village.
Alacoli, "Ala of the Tied-up Feet": Name given to a lad whose are was disjointed in infancy.
alacumcular: Refusal to lend to an outsider a lovely perspective such as the employment of marriage dancers. [426] [374] alaqulcumu: Shed erected when a chief's fellow villagers are called in, preparatory to an announcement of his coming potlatch.
Alaxcumu: Name of a lowly shaman.
Alex, "The Opening of the Sky":
1.—One of the first men to settle at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.
2.—One of the first men to settle at Dean in the beginning of time.
3.—Name of a Snake-it-chief.
Alexkulaka: Earlier name of a Bella Coola man.
Alexmuxkuam: One of the first men to settle at Nuxalk in the beginning of time.
alexmumu: Amulet having the ability to enter the back-room and read intimate concealed there. The function probably constitutes the employment of lai-shield. [375] Alqlaxu: Hidden, supernatural beings who remove supernatural Cannibals.
alsumu: Ceremonial hoeing of sticks. [399]
Amamuxtu: Wife of Tsaxlaiu, the supernatural hunter.
Amaqulaka: Husband of Ala'Uhualaiu, he is known only to Kimsquit.
amaxlaxuk: Earlier name of mystery. [375] amaxumuxu: Visit paid to a sick person, especially the coming of foreign guests to a mourning ceremony. [374] amaxumuxumu: Call used by heralds when announcing to a mourning ceremony.
amaxumlaiu: The "Dragging Across" of a name, crest, or other intangible property from wife to husband either on marriage or later or a repurchasing of the wife. [425] [374] amaxum: To drag a heavy burden.
amaxlaxu: Conference mixed with shaken grease. [442]
amayxu: Visit to his squaiteny by a lavish initiate. [421] Amaxlhum, "Doing Both Work": Second moon after the winter solstice.
amlqumuxu, "The Attention Time": Stalled assemblage of the Sulaxlai after departure of a Cannibal.
amulaiu: Adoption of a person resembling the deceased to replace the latter. [377]
Amulaiu: 1.—Supernatural being who revives mortals.
2.—Name received by a shaman from this being.

alp: Food.
alpaxum, "Food Supplier": The term applied to the giving of the use of land at marriage. [425] Ayalkul, "Sheltered": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
alqmu: Shaman's robe of dyed and undyed cedar-bark, arranged in chevron crests. [152] alqumk: Guardian, term applied to a girl secluded at adolescence. [382]
Alqumlaxu: Supernatural name of shaman, applied to those brought by the first people in the beginning of time. [425]
Alqumlaxu, "A Chosen Descendant": Name given to an Ayalkul man in the beginning of time.

2: McDowell E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEB Bellacoola NEB

Anahlik: Village near mouth of the Dean River.
Analaiow: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Anatawa yet, "Laborers": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
Anawindzin: Name obtained by an Ayahlini man in the beginning of time.
Angalkmen, "Quivering To and Fro": One of Dzagalim's canoes and hence a designation given to shamans.
Anawindzin: Earlier name of a Bella Coola man.
Anawinsa: 1—Earlier name of a Bella Coola woman.
2—"Left Hand": Area repository carved from part of a supernatural creature.
[331] [424] anaxaq: Term applied to the giving of a copper, indicating that 100 per cent interest is expected in return.
Anaxlamalmut: One of the names of Great Blue Heron as chief.
[463] anaxmalaka-ats: Earlier pronunciation, at Kimsquit only, of throwing wands on the fire.
Anawalalaqoli, "The Moving House": One of the names of the supreme god's pavilion.
anqas: 1—Owner of a puppet person.
2—Synonym for Anawalalaqoli, q.v.
Anqulthalaic: Supernatural being who rules behavior of their daughts on the Mountain Goats.
as-ala: 1—Name obtained by women by one of the four members of Ayahlini in the beginning of time.
2—Bella Bella chief.
ala: Eagles.
Ayala, "The Petty One": Name taken by a chief for himself in spite of the remarks made about his height.
Ayalaic: Second name of a Kimsquit man.
[225] [324] [425] ayaw: Moving upon.
ayawaqla: Concerned.
ayaw: Type of sea-going canoe.
ayaw: Harlequin duck.
Ayatayatmamen, "The Concave Eyes": Term used by hunters to Eagle.
Ayatawa, "Concave Town": Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.
ay-ayamay: Canoes lashed together.
Ayaw: Locality on south side of North Bentinck Arm, about one-quarter mile from its head, including the area beneath the surface of the water.
[601] [777] ay-ala-ik: 1—Second stolen sibling.
2—Second part of song.
ayatamen: 1—"They Who Have Become Supernatural": Title performed by ghosts.
2—Women living in the moon.
Ayatamay: Inhabitants of the village of Ayaw.
[424] ayatamatsis: Person with good memory entertained to remember family genealogies.
Ayaw, "In the Head": Village southwest of the head of South Bentinck Arm.
ayaxalk: Totem-pole, literally, "Outside Post."
ayaxalaqa: Shaman with power derived from ghosts.
ayakawa: Ceremonial backing up down.
[156] [318] Ayakamalaic: Earlier name of a Bella Coola woman.
Ayakalik: Earlier name of a Bella Coola man.

2:McDougalth R-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

142*

S

sqwa'ni sqwal'a: Medicine; generic term for all remedies of a magical or medicinal nature. [278] s'ac: Cotton, term in common usage.
smo: Hopkins or moss. [601]

T

t'ancla: Ancestral name of a Gwalis'ai man.
'ustlalica: Daughter of the first settlers at Green Bay in the beginning of time.
ustlatelcla: Moon, semi-anthropomorphized.

U

ut'ckiila: 1—Bella Bella term, commonly used in Bella Coola, the exact official 2—Kwiat name of a Bella Coola man.
ustiti: Type of sea-going canoe used by the Haida; the word may be a corruption from English.
Ut'a-kula: Man who descended to the upper Bella Coola in the beginning of time.
ut'ac-a: One of the first women to settle at Sclemon Pass in the beginning of time.
ituskas: Mythical, supernatural bird. [825] Ituscu: 1—One of the first men to settle at Nuxalk in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Qaiyai in the beginning of time.
ulc: Pipe.
ulcip: Call used by members of the Ituscu society to strengthen their fellow members.

Y

ya': Powdered cedar-bark, undyed. [824] ya'a: Zigzag course up or down a mountain slope.
Yaiyai: Twaldin's dog.
Ya'kwa-c: One of the first women sent down west of Kwatna in the beginning of time.
Ya'kwa-c-da cola: Bandage of undyed cedar-bark placed around an infant's head to produce cranial deformation. [856] ya'acum, Bandages: Term applied to grasses distributed as validation for the bringing of a sell Cannibal. [431] yk: One of the Ya'ykwa.
yaakwa'ayaakwa: Abbreviated rite of Nuxlayam dance.
yacum: Nun.
Ya'ccilch: Search name of a Kwaguit man.
Ya'ccilchum, "The Mouse": Male supernatural child who famous Nuxlayam's uncle.
yamag, "Child Who Dance": Cry used in Cannibal dance.
yamilci, "Scoop": Solid to spring salmon during the ritual connected with the first taking of these fish. [226] yakwa'ccum: Alleged singing of a sound imitator's song by the supernatural being, Mamalilla.
ya'k'a-yum: Reduction of the value of an investment-property by immediate return of part of it. [426] yakc: Man. [824] yaakwa'aaakkilas: Polyandry.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

[illegible]: Tail.
[illegible]: Arm.
[illegible]: Black hawthorn. [825]
[illegible]: Kwakiutl name of a Kimsquit man. [824]
[illegible]: Ancestral name of the wife of Swaky who was changed to stone in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Region.
[illegible]: Kitlala chief living in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: 1—Marriage, properly arranged and legalized. [585]
2—The actual wedding day.
[illegible]: Kwakiutl name of a Kimsquit woman.[1] [415]
[illegible]: Bark basket for holding liquids.
[illegible]: The seeking of assistance from a man who owns a curing repository.
[illegible]: Investment present, i.e., one for which a return is expected. [426] [illegible]: Back room in which most initiates and others are concealed.
[illegible]: Woman during ceremonial. [431]
[illegible], "What Was Sent Down": Intangible possession, such as a myth or a prerogative, inherited from the distant past, usually from the coming to earth of the first settlers in the beginning of time. [424]
[illegible]: Wooden tongs such as are used for lifting hot stones. [412]
[illegible]: Kusiutem rite in which the performer appears to be drowned.
[illegible], "The Gainer": One who has been initiated as a member of the kusiutem society but has not yet danced, especially one admitted through unauthorized knowledge or through successful participation in either a kusiutem or a Mystery dance. [575]
[illegible], "Hundred Incapable of Returning": Said of an uninitiated person who is alleged to have stumbled on a repository.
[illegible]: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
[illegible]: The dancers waiting for power by a shaman who, having had one visitation, awaits further manifestations before displaying his ability. [756]
[illegible], [illegible]: Grandmother. [601]
[illegible]: Ceremonial marriage of a female child to an adult man.
[illegible]: Name given to their canoe by the first settlers at Stuix in the beginning of time.
[illegible], "The Wise One": One of Raven's names as chief.
[illegible]: One of the first women to settle at Alpalxel in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
[illegible]: 1—Cock.
2—Enormous crab-like creature, alleged to be found far in the forest. [825]
[illegible]: Name of a shaman who received his power from ghosts. [824] [illegible]: Red elderberry.
[illegible]: Wooden implement used in the pounding of cedar-bark. [413]
[illegible]: Unidentified place. [252]
[illegible]: To meet dried salmon.
[illegible]: Supported, in the sense of held in place by physical assistance.
[illegible]: Located on Dean Channel, west of Sacaulk.
[illegible]: Place on south side of North Bentinck Arm, about one-quarter mile from its head.

---

[1] This name appears to be an entirely different word from Kalsa-i.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192

Kitlmnstämem: The chasm that keeps a foolish man from success as a chief; the concept is semi-anthropomorphized.

kitsän: First catamenial discharge.

Kuldr-t: ustämy village.

kłxta: Supernatural creature dwelling in the ocean.

[756] Kłyekłmat: Shaman who received power from ghosts.

Kumłkwalxststa: Bella Coola hunter.

[103] Kimykmt, "Canyon": Bella Bella designation for the Dean River, whence the anglicized Kimsquit has been derived.

Kindust: Nass River.

Kinłkmł: Kimsquit man mentioned in an ancient story.

[825] łmts: 1—Whale.
2—Ancestral name of a Tal'ie woman; this is said to be an exclusively feminine designation.

Kłst"amat: 1—Name acquired by a Bella Bella man in the beginning of time.
2—Influential Łempo-ts chief, who died about 1910.

[825] V'lax"': Muskrat.

[824] łłp: White fir (?).

łmtw-i: Herring.

łmndjut: Prerogative of biting oneself.

łnum: Dried salmon.

łnumdjut: Synonym for ähnkla: one of the days of a potlatch, probably that following the appearance of masked representations of the deceased. The word is derived from łnum.

[825] łokolikm: Porpoise.

[845] Koksłnm: Supernatural being who behaves in an erratic manner.

ko'la: Twin whose birth is attributed to salmon.

[824] Ko'laistsi: Man mentioned in an ancient story.

kolulaxo: Unidentified berry (strawberry?).

Kolxsta: Supernatural female shaman who guided Winwina.

Kol-iaiyuhmy: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola Cannibal.

kolku"ähmy, "Earthy Ones": Ghosts.

[533] kolukmy: Land, region, earth.

kolulo-s: First part of song.

Kotuk': Treeless mountain about forty miles up the Bella Coola valley.

[825] Kpupstustusailaix, "The One Who Makes Us Fat": Supernatural name of coho salmon.

[765] łpustnm: Goods distributed to validate songs used at a mourning ceremony when no representation of the deceased has been employed.

[578] łpusnäm: Insult offered to foreigners at potlatches concerning their manners or food.

[609] krämkusaix or krämkusnäm: Synonym for kstämkusnäm, investment-present.[1]

[42] Ksnusmmdmat: Woman mentioned in an ancient story.

kukpi, sucatin, kukpai: Grandfather.

[601] kukustunk: Kusiut ceremonial at which foreigners are present.

łukx: The construction of salmon-weirs.

---

[1]This was the pronunciation of the word by the individual with an idiosyncratic r sound.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192

L

[825] Lakloklis: Kimsquit man mentioned in ancient story.
la·kis: Squirrel.
Lagwumais: 1—One of the first men to settle at Qamqo·ts in the beginning of time.
2—Man sent down west of Kwatna in the beginning of time.
[463] Lamiyas·k': Name of a professional warrior; the word is said to have originated in Kitkatla but has remained for many generations in Kimsquit.
La'qila: Atnarko River, northern fork of the Bella Coola.
Lalamsk: Susook name of a Kimsquit man.
Lalaimkila, "The Brusher Off [of Goats]": Professional name of one of the first settlers at Snuiali in the beginning of time. This may be the same word as Lalemkila.
Lalemkila: Another name for Twalalit, the supernatural hunter. This may be the same word as Lalaimkila.
[825] Lilirwumlais: 1—"The Beautifier": Supernatural name of Otter.
2—Kusiut name of a Kimsquit woman.
[886] lipljudils: Return in old age to the thoughts and actions of infancy, senile decay.
[426] lisdjut: To repay indebtedness of any kind, especially presents received at potlatches.
[583] lisliwadjut, "A Paying": An arrangement by which a man's sons-in-law give him as "wife" an infant female relative by way of repayment for his expenses in connection with the weddings of his own daughters.
listmax: Wrestling or shoving.
lilstom: Abbreviated Cannibal rite.
La·qwa·t: 1—Famous Bella Bella chief.
2—Ancestral name of a Kimsquit man.
lulusta: Mask.
luts: Tool for making vertical incisions in the bark of cedar trees.

Ł

Łakwakila: Tsawat man living in the beginning of time.
Łalaiuks: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man.
[823] łalia: 1—Copper.
2—Unidentified town on the outer coast, mentioned in a story of the beginning of time.
3—Chief of this town.
łaliasiuts: Daughter of chief of the town of Copper.
łaliselotl: Copper cane acquired by the first settlers at Stuix in the beginning of time.
łaliskis: Man's name, created by the first settlers at Sałlia, in the beginning of time.
łaliskdja: Name taken for himself by one of the first settlers at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.
łaliaks: Ancestral name of a Kimsquit woman.
łaliamy: Susook name assumed by one of the first settlers at Alpałał in the beginning of time.
łaliaus, "The Copper One": One of the first men to settle on the upper Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

nixokasta: Intangible kusiut prerogative consisting of the insertion of some object into the digestive tract. [424]

Nixḷs: Expert supernatural dancer; to his associates he is a yearling mountain goat.

nmly or nmlpkmut: First complete dance given by a kusiut initiate.

nmmmk: Mammal, any kind. [825]

Nniwonuix: One of the names of Great Blue Heron as chief.

Noakila: 1—One of the first men to settle on the upper Dean in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Snuisli in the beginning of time.

Noakynm: Supernatural being who brings the salmon.

Noomtaxaik: Name given to his grandson by one of the first settlers at Siskiut in the beginning of time.

nokista: Kusiut prerogative as a Breaker; this is said to be a Bella Bella term.

nolyakta: Sloping stick extending from floor to roof behind the fire on which, at Kimsquit, kusiut masks are hung.

nomuuk: The making and use of hand nets for olachen.

Nomdjumstem: 1—"The Adviser": One of the names of the supreme god. [622]
2—Chiefs of a village, collectively; virtually, "The Sages."

no'ematlm: 1—Ceremony at which nsook names are validated in the eyes of the fellow-villagers. [553]
2—Any ceremony at which all kinds of dances are performed. [796] no'endjut: Assemblage of the kukusiut to practise difficult rites.

No-ḳum, "The One with Thick Pubic Hair": Tlaiyakam name given to a deserting wife.

Nowakila: One of the names of Raven as chief.

nowlxibltum: Sentence of death passed by the kukusiut on one of their fellows as punishment for an error. [688]

nuaiyao: A loan, especially of an ancestral right. [426]

Nuhulnum: Synonym for Noakynm, the supernatural being who brings the salmon.

Nu'aos, "Inhospitable": Name taken by a woman in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.

nuḳsuta: Toilet-hole.

nuasta: Birth.

Nuskaqos: Anthropomorphized evil cold wind. [821]

nuhk-an: Rhetorical term of respect for aged dead. [769] nuhk-an du ikmsta: 1—High tide.

2—Long life. [823]

nudjiqasta: Cross-piece tied to canoe to hold olachen-net post steady while being driven.

Nu'qmaḳ, "Place of Foul Water": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.

Nuk": 1—Village at head of South Bentinck Arm, on the east side.
2—River flowing into head of South Bentinck Arm from the east.

Nuakmalsaix: Synonym for Sximsimuk, an immoral supernatural woman.

nukal: The achievement of success against supernatural odds; the term is used with reference to the solutions of the riddles of the Mystery dance.

nukamlmdamam: Any non-sacred dance held at the conclusion of the kusiut season. [535]

Nukw-se: An influential Kwakiutl chief.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

+192

Nuxnhnam: An influential Kwakiutl chief.
Nuxoro: Bella Coola pronunciation of a Carrier village; the Anglicized form is Ulkatcho.
nuxsem: To lose something through faulty concealment; the term is used to describe a ɬaxiut who is alleged to have suffered loss through the discovery of his repository by an uninitiated person.
nuxlomsil': Grease extracted from sockeye salmon heads.
[825] Nuxiadji: Ancestral name of a Stax chief; the designation is of Kwakiutl origin.
[778] nuxlo sta: 1—Spider.
2—Place on the east side of South Bentinck Arm where cures are effected; the power is derived from a spider petrified there.
Nuxil, "Place of the Whirlpool": Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.
Nuxkwisadjax, "The One Whose Seat is Dusty": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.
[552] Nuxlqumatl di mnk', "The Rolling Down of Excrement": Dog's name.
Nuxlomnam: 1—Supernatural being who leaves his home at the time of Nuxlqmm's departure to warn ɬuɬaxiut to tidy their houses for the ceremonial season.
[356] 2—To tidy the houses preparatory to the ceremonial season.
Nuxlulukt, "The One Whose Eyes Are Hungry": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.
[431] nuxsem: Presents given by a chief to his fellow-villagers prior to a potlatch.
Nuxlisqalank, "Place of Many Boulders": Ancient village on the Kwatna River.
Nuxsumankta: One of the first women to settle at Tal-is in the beginning of time.
nuxmkmankdas: Fastenings, especially those of plumage or skins worn by the first settlers when coming down to earth in the beginning of time.
Nuxkitl: Poverty-stricken chief mentioned in a song.
nuxmakdas: Bonds used to fasten a Cannibal; the word is etymologically connected with nuxmkmankdas.
[428] nuxmastmax: Succession, as applied to the assumption of a marshal's prerogative by a son or other relative.
nuxlostnik-sta, "Forehead Thing": Small mask worn on a nsask head-dress.
nuxl: Landslide, such as is caused by Tsuxlitit or xsiutl.
Nuxqunlaix: Name given to their sister by the first settlers at Nuxqualt in the beginning of time.
nuxqunta, "To Have Become Nothing For": Said of a poultice which is thrown away after serving its purpose.
nuxqstas: House-posts nearest to front door.
nuxnikta: Posts extending from this world to the land above down which swarmed some of the first settlers in the beginning of time.
[426] nuxmamamum, "Belt Goods": Goods borrowed during a potlatch by a donor who finds himself deficient. The implication is that he will have to fasten up his [556] clothing and work industriously to repay his indebtedness with heavy interest.
nuxsadjim: Cry uttered by a nsask official to free a house from the intangible influence of the supernatural after the initiation of nsask novices.
[342] nuxsqailaix: The alleged entrance of a supernatural being into a nsask novice.
nuxwalkal: Semi-subterranean house with two levels for seats.
nuxalkal: Semi-subterranean house with a single level for seats.
Nuxsw-ut, "Place of Fins": Place on north side of North Bentinck Arm, about one mile from its head.

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

represent. Every time the sacred objects of a gens are shown to the people a potlatch is given. The sacred objects, although the property of the various gentes, must nevertheless be acquired by each individual. That is to say, every free person has the right to acquire a certain group of carvings and names, according to the gens to which he or she belongs. Slaves and slaves' children, also illegitimate children, could not become Sisau'kH. A person cannot take a new carving, but must wait until it is given to him by his relatives—father, mother, or elder brother. Nusk'E-la'sta, to whom I owe my information regarding the gentes, and who is a member of the gens Ialo'stimôt of the Talio'mH, stated that he had received the raven when he gave his first potlatch. At his second potlatch he received the eagle. He hopes that his mother wil give him the whale at his next potlatch, and will at the same time divulge to him the secrets connected with it. In course of time, he said, he might get even others from his brother; but if the latter's children should prove to be very good, and develop very rapidly, his brother would proably give his secrets to his children. At festivals, when a person acquires a new secret, he changes his name. Each person has two names, a Kû'siût name, which remains the same throughout life; and a Qê'mtsion name, which is changed at these festivals. Thus, Nusk'slu'sta's (which is his Kû'siût name) present Qê'mtsion name is Atl'itlemas'has'ain, but athis next potlatch he intends to take the name of Kalia'kia. These names are also the property of the various gentes, each gens having its own names. In the list of gentes given above, the names enumerated are the Kû'siût names of the ancestors. In two cases only the Qê'mtsion names have been ascertained (see p. 409). When a man possesses several Sisau'kH secrets he will distribute them among his children. When a girl marries, her father or mother may, after a child has been born to her, give one or several of their Sisau'kH secrets to her husband, as his children make him a member of the gens. When a person gets to be old he gives away all his Sisau'kH secrets. After any secret has been given away the giver must not use it any more. The crest and the Sisau'kH carvings must not be loaned to others, but each person must keep his own carvings. The only exceptions are the carved headdresses and the raven rattles, which are not the property of any particular gens.

The laws regarding the potlatch are similar to those of the Kwakiutl. The receiver of a present becomes the debtor of the person who gave the potlatch. If the latter should die the debts become due to his heirs. If the debtor should die his heirs become responsible for the debt. Property is also destroyed at potlatches. This is not returned, and serves only to enhance the social position of the individual who performed this act. It is not necessary that all the property given by a person in a potlatch should be owned by him. He may borrow part of it from his friends, and has to repay it with interest. I was told, for instance, that a man borrowed a large copper-plate and burnt it at a potlatch. When doing so he had to name the price which he was going to pay to the owner in its stead. Since that feast he died, and his heirs are now responsible for the amount named at the potlatch.

The Kû'siût is presided over by a female spirit, called Anaûlikûtsai'H. Her abode is a cave in the woods, which she keeps shut from February till October, remaining all the while inside. In October she opens the door of her cave and sits in front of it. A woman is said to have been the first to find her. Anaûlikûtsai'H invited her into her cave and taught

575 her the secrets of the Kû'siût. She wore ornaments of red cedar-bark
773 around her head, wrists, and ankles; her face was blackened, her hair
776 strewn with eagle-down. She commanded the woman to dance in the same way as she saw her dancing. The people should accompany her dance with songs, and, after she had finished, they should dance with masks. She said, 'Whenever a person sees me your people shall dance the Kû'siût. If you do not do so I shall punish you with death and sickness. In summer, while I am in my house, you must not dance the Kû'siût.'

575 Ever since that time the Bilqula dance the Kû'siût. When a man has 776 seen Auaûlikûtsai'ʜ sitting before her cave he will invite the people to a Kû'siût. A ring made of red and white cedar-bark is hung up in his house, and the uninitiated are not allowed to enter it. Only in the evening, when dances are performed, they may look on, standing close to the door. As soon as the dances are over they must retire from the taboo house. Each Kû'siût lasts three days.

535 The various dances performed by members of the Kû'siût are also the 575 property of the gentes, and the right of performing them is restricted
614 to members of the gens. They must not be given to a daughter's husband, 424 as is the case with the Sisau'kʜ dances (see above), but belong to the members of the gens alone. They may, however, be loaned and borrowed
[426] by members of the gens, who have a right to a particular dance, but who do not own it. Permission to use a mask or dance is obtained from the owner by payments. The owner may reclaim the dance or the borrower
575 may return it at any time. Membership of the Kû'siût is obtained through an initiation. At this time the novice is given his Kû'siût name, which [551] he retains throughout life. Each gens has its peculiar Kû'siût names,
[428] which are inherited by young persons from their parents or from other relatives. Thus a young man who had the name of Pō'pō until he was about seventeen years old obtained at his initiation the name of Tl'akō'otl. I have not reached a very clear understanding of the details of the initia-
[556] tion; it seems that the dance is simply given to the novice in the same way as the Sisau'kʜ, this initiation being connected with a potlatch. But [787] still it seems possible that he must 'dream' of the dance which he is to perform. Only the highest degrees of the Kû'siût have to pass through a religious ceremony of some importance. The highest degrees are the [554] ʟlaqō'tla (the Hā'mats'a of the Kwakiutl), the Ō'lʟq (the Nū'tlmatl of the Kwakiutl), and the Dā'tia (the Nō'ntaistatl of the Hē'iltsuk). These grades are also hereditary. A Kû'siût novice may acquire them at once at his first initiation.

575 When the ʟlaqō'tla is initiated he goes into the forest, where he 785 encounters his guardian spirit. It is believed that he goes up to the sun, 787 and formerly he had to take human flesh along for food. The chiefs held a council the night preceding the beginning of the ceremonies, and anyone who wanted to show his liberality offered one of his slaves to be [266] killed, in order to serve as food for the ʟlaqō'tla. The offer was accepted and a payment of from ten to twenty blankets made for the slave. The latter was killed, and the members of the ʟlaqō'tla order devoured one-half of the body before the departure of the novice to the woods. There the latter is tied up and left to fast. He may stay there for twenty or thirty days until the spirit appears to him and takes him up to the sun, 575 where he is initiated. Early one morning he returns, and is heard outside the houses. He has lost all his hair, which, it is believed, has been torn

8:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1897
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

424 owe my information regarding the clans, and who is a member of the 532 gens Ialô'stimôt of the Taliô'mx·, stated that he had received the raven 614 when he gave his first potlatch. At his second potlatch he received [115] the eagle. He hoped that his mother would give him the whale at his [556] next potlatch, and would at the same time divulge to him the secrets connected with it. In course of time, he said, he might get even others from his brother; but if the latter's children should prove to be very good, and develop very rapidly, his brother would probably give his secrets to his own children. At festivals, when a person acquires a new 424 secret, he changes his name. Each person has two names, a kû'sint 551 name, which remains through life, and a Xê'mtsioa name, which is 556 changed at these festivals. Thus, Nsak'Elu'sta's (which is his kû'sint 575 name) Xê'mtsioa name was AL'ILEMNE'lus'aix·, but at his next pot-
614 latch he intended to take the name of Kaliâ'kis. These names are also the property of the various clans, each clan having its own names. When a man possesses several sisan'k· secrets, he will distribute them among his children. When a girl marries, her father or mother may, after a child has been born to her, give one or several of their sisan'k· secrets to her husband, as his children make him a member of her clan. When a person grows old, he gives away all his sisan'k· secrets. After any secret has been given away the giver must not use it any more.
● [426] The crest and the sisan'k· carvings must not be loaned to others, but each person must keep his own carvings. The only exceptions are the carved headdresses and the raven rattles, which are not the property of any particular clan.

426 The laws regarding the potlatch are similar to those of the Kwakiutl.
556 The receiver of a present becomes the debtor of the person who gave the potlatch. If the latter should die, the debts become due to his heirs. If the debtor should die, his heirs become responsible for the debt. Property is also destroyed at potlatches. This is not returned, and serves only to enhance the social position of the individual who performed this act. It is not necessary that all the property given by a person in a potlatch should be owned by him. He may borrow part of it from his friends, and has to repay it with interest. I was told, for instance, that a man borrowed a large copper plate and burnt it at a potlatch. When doing so, he had to name the price which he was going to pay the owner in its stead. Since that feast he died, and his heirs are now responsible for the amount named at the potlatch.

575 The kû'sint is presided over by a female spirit, called Anaâlikuta'- 773 ai'x·. Her abode is a cave in the woods, which she keeps shut from 776 February till October, remaining all the while inside. In October she opens the door of her cave and sits in front of it. A woman is said to 535 have been the first to find her. Anaâlikuta'ai'x· invited her into her cave and taught her the secrets of the kû'sint. She wore ornaments of red cedar bark around her head, waist, and ankles; her face was blackened, her hair strewn with eagle down. She commanded the

8:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1897
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

woman to dance in the same way as she saw her dancing. The people should accompany her dance with songs, and, after she had finished, they should dance with maaka. She said, "Whenever a person sees me, your people shall dance the kū'siut. If you do not do so, I shall punish you with death and sickness. In summer, while I am in my house, you must not dance the kū'siut." 575 773 776 535

Ever since that time the Bi'lxula dance the kū'siut. When a man has seen Anaūlikuta'al'x· sitting in front of her cave, he will invite the people to a kū'siut. A ring made of red and white cedar bark is hung up in his house, and the uninitiated are not allowed to enter it. Only in the evening, when dances are performed, they may look on, standing close to the door. As soon as the dances are over, they must retire from the taboo house. Each kū'siut lasts three days. 575 776 535

The various dances performed by members of the kū'siut are also property of the clans, and the right to perform them is restricted to members of the clan. They must not be given to a daughter's husband, as is the case with the sisau'k· dances, but belong to the members of the clan, who have a right to a particular dance, but who do not own it. Permission to use a mask or dance is obtained from the owner by payments. The owner may reclaim the dance or the borrower may return it at any time. Membership of the kū'siut is obtained through an initiation. At this time the novice is given his kū'siut name, which is inherited by young persons from their parents or from other relatives. Thus a young man who had the name of Pō'pō until he was about seventeen years old, obtained at his initiation the name of L'akō'oL. I have not reached a very clear understanding of the details of the initiation; it seems that the dance is simply given to the novice in the same way as the sisau'k·, this initiation being connected with a potlatch. But still it seems possible that he must "dream" of the dance which he is to perform. Only the highest degrees of the kū'siut have to pass through a religious ceremony of some importance. The highest degrees are the ELaxō'LA (the hā'mata'a of the Kwakiutl), the ō'lEX (the nū'LmaL of the Kwakiutl), and the dā'tia (the nō'ntaistalal of the Kwakiutl). These grades are also hereditary. A kū'siut novice may acquire them at once at his first initiation. 535 575 614 575 [426] [551] [428] [556] [171] [554]

When the ELaxō'LA is initiated, he goes into the forest, where he encounters his guardian spirit. It is believed that he goes up to the sun, and formerly he had to take human flesh along for food. The chiefs held a council the night preceding the beginning of the ceremonies, and anyone who wanted to show his liberality offered one of his slaves to be killed in order to serve as food for the ELaxō'LA. The offer was accepted, and a payment of from ten to twenty blankets was made for the slave. The latter was killed, and the members of the ELaxō'LA order devoured one-half of the body before the departure of the novice to the woods. There the latter was tied up and left to fast. He may stay there for twenty or thirty days until the spirit appears 575 785 787 [266]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

names are also willed, but since their value depends on the goods expended to validate them, there is seldom bitterness about their allotment. Indeed, a chief who is the legal owner of a designation which came from above in the beginning of time, will in many cases choose to elevate his position with respect to a title of comparatively recent date. But if any person who is not a member of the ancestral family should dare to use an ancestral name, all the members rise to avenge the theft, for such they feel it to be. In recent years, however, this practice has become comparatively common. In such cases a man, eager to share in the glories of a myth and able to give a potlatch, has validated an ancestral name to which he has no right. The presence of the white man alone restrains the injured ancestral family. Names are sometimes lent or hired to those who are not members of the group for definite sums; the recipient recompenses the individual. If such names are not returned for several generations quarrels are apt to arise since the recipient claims to be the real owner and not the temporary possessor. During his tenancy of the name he is entitled to any prerogative attached to it, but he is not considered a bona fide member of the ancestral family.

578 614 553 [428] [685] [178] [426] [427]

Instances have occurred in which an old man or woman, believing himself to be the last survivor of an ancestral family, has donated his names and myth to those who have befriended him, or these have been taken by those who buried him. Some individuals are constantly watching to conduct the funerals of friendless old people in the hope of so obtaining names. But in almost every case this leads to friction, since it is virtually impossible for an ancestral family to die out. Perhaps in the next generation, perhaps in the following one, some youth will claim descent from the first ancestors of the supposedly defunct family, and claim the myth and names embodied therein. This leads to a feud with the person, or his descendants, who has received the names through aid given to the "last" of the family.

[428] [557] [628]

Such instances of an ancestral family becoming practically

614 621

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

423 614 [773] [226] sumed that ten is the largest number of traps possible at that weir. Those who have the right to that weir are the members of the ancestral family with the names of those first users. At this point the logic of the Bella Coola fails to uphold the mythological pattern. No salmon-weir has remained in existence since the beginning of time; when one broke, owners were sometimes infants, and those who repaired the break became regarded as the rightful possessors. The system of ownership prevailing at the time of abandoning the weirs, was that individuals, not groups, had rights to certain sections of the weir [428] which were willable like other personal property. In most [431] cases this right was transmitted with a name, marking the section of weir, which had to be duly validated by presents. [428] In other cases, the intangible ownership was willed without any mark whatever.[6] Unless bequeathed in this way, disputes were frequent. Rights of this kind were never sold although [427] an owner often leased his section for a night, or longer period, receiving goods in return, and not forfeiting his ownership [431] thereby. This was particularly common when the renter was planning to give a potlatch. No case was heard of in which the right to a certain section of salmon-weir was given to a non-member of the ancestral family. Theoretically, this was possible, but practically it would be so inconvenient that it is most unlikely ever to have occurred, since the Bella Coola is [671] never such a slave to legal privileges that he fails to be guided by common sense.

226 Although individual ownership is thus recognized with [423] regard to sections of salmon-weirs and suitable places for olachen-nets, the owner is bound to share his haul. When he [577] catches a large number of fish, anyone, whether related to him [626] or not, can demand some. He cannot refuse, since to do so would brand him as selfish. The effective check on this system

[128] [6]Great difficulty was experienced in learning about the distribution of rights to sections of salmon-weirs. The evidence is conflicting, and though every effort was made to verify and check the above, there may be further regulations which were not learnt.

This endogamic principle will be described in greater detail 582 in vol. I, chap. viii, but mention of it here has been necessary [614] to explain the composition of the ancestral family.

In recent years there has been a tendency for some men to marry foreign women in order that they, or their children, might obtain new prerogatives. Thus a trend towards exogamy has arisen from the same reason which is supposed to [554] have caused endogamy. The offspring of such marriages cannot enjoy the feeling of strength and comfort that comes from the membership of both parents in the same ancestral family, but some individuals have felt that this was offset by the gain of highly desirable foreign prerogatives. It is said that this practice was initiated by a certain Pathe, father of a man about sixty years old in 1923. White influence probably [777] had nothing to do with this radical innovation, although its [illegible] of peaceful conditions on the coast.

Strong as is the belief in a common ancestry, it is unlikely 614 that this would have sufficed to hold together the members of 554 the ancestral family, without some definite prerogatives. These are of two kinds: names and land.

NAMES

The fundamental principle governing Bella Coola nomen- 551 clature is that each name must have originated in connection with some event of comparative importance. It is unthinkable to apply a casual designation to a child. At a person's death [768] his name, or names, may be transmitted to a relative, and it [553] is proper that the owner of a name should know when, by [773] whom, and for what reason, it was first created. Tradition affirms that, before coming to this earth, the first people were all given designations by Alquntam; these have been carefully handed down and are still in use. One name cannot be given to two individuals; instances occur of two people having the same one, but in such cases they have different origins. One person may have several names of different kinds, each carrying [838] with it some definite prerogative of a dance or other function, but all are transmissible, and at the owner's death these may fall to different relatives. A name may pass from man to woman, or vice versa, in some cases with a minor alteration. The only non-inheritable appellations are those obtained by shamans as a result of their supernatural experiences.

Not only did each group of first ancestors bring with them a number of designations from above, but they also created a number on this earth and bestowed them on their children, and on the children of their sisters or brothers, in whom they felt an almost personal interest. To mark the dignity of the names, all present at the ceremony of bestowal received gifts from the creator of the name, the person who called them together for the rite. The importance of the individual depended largely upon the value of the regalia distributed with respect to his name, a concept which will be elaborated in the following chapter. The descendants of these first people likewise created new designations and established their dignity by distributing presents, a practice which still continues. It follows that any complete origin myth should include a large number of names, those brought down from the land above[1] and also those created by the powerful first people on this earth itself.[2] Both types of cognomen will be referred to henceforth as "ancestral names," no distinction being made between those actually brought from above and those made on earth. This is in accordance with Bella Coola usage.

Soon after the birth of a child his father, uncle, or other near relative,[3] either on the paternal or maternal side, calls the members of the village together to bestow a name on the infant. The one selected must be embodied in the origin myth of one or other of the parents, and must be one not then in use by any other member of the ancestral family. A relative may give the

[1] Such a name is a mythic character, or "Supernatural Name."
[2] Such a name is a created character, or "Earth-Made Name."
[3] The most careful investigation failed to show that it was hereditary on any particular relative.

b:McDowell E-5 (1922-1924)948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

The ancestral family consists of those whose ancestral names, embodying definite prerogatives, are embodied in a single origin myth. 614 424 551

A stranger finds it easier to understand why names are so carefully maintained within the ancestral family by thinking of them as symbols of prerogatives, but it must be emphasized that the Bella Coola preserve with equal jealousy those designations of which the only prerogative is the marking of this actual membership. [554]

If, then, the ancestral family be regarded as a group possessing a large number of name-prerogatives, it may well be asked how these are distributed among the members. The first point to be emphasized is that the ancestral family is a unit held together without definite social mechanism. There is no accepted "head" of the family, nor are there any clearly formulated laws governing the transmission of the name-prerogatives. 614 553 When wealth a man usually calls together his relatives and bequeaths,[9] according to his desire, his personal property in slaves and canoes, and his intangible property in names. Such a designation does not become the property of the new owner unless he is able to validate his ownership by a distribution of presents; meanwhile the name is "dead." If, during this period, some other member of the ancestral family should desire it for a child, or for himself, he can take possession of it by the customary distribution of presents. In doing so he would anger the legatee, but the latter cannot himself use the appellation since it is already in use. Even at the present time there are bitter quarrels over the assumption of names, and such have certainly occurred for many generations. If a man can validate fairly promptly a name willed to him, it is most unusual for anyone else to try to forestall him. 428 553 431 [578]

If a man dies intestate, his sons consider themselves his normal heirs, and the most respected of them validates for himself as many names as he desires or is able to assume. Disputes are not as common as might be expected since the 428 553 [578]

[9] In case of sudden death or failure to make a will confusion sometimes occurs.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

428 influence of a chief is usually sufficient to settle claims as to 553 which of his brothers shall receive which name. Even if none
[578] of them is a chief, some one of them is certain to have greater influence than the others. If a dead man has no sons, his daughters can assume his names, which they may transmit to their children. Failing both sons and daughters, a man's brothers and sisters are his heirs, as usual, the one of influence being the one who really arranges matters.[6] None the less, it [614] must be emphasized that if the members of the immediate family are slow to validate a dead man's names, they may be taken by any member of the ancestral family.

463 In former days it was customary to create a "remem-869 brancer" to preserve the ancestral myth. The older and more influential members of the ancestral family would choose an [614] intelligent young relative to whom to relate the myth in great detail. One informant described how her mother, the last official "remembrancer," had been instructed by her grandfather. The old man had been accustomed to take his granddaughter, a girl about twelve years of age, to bed with him, and whisper to her the myth, with his hand pressed over her nose to prevent escape of his words. At the conclusion of the recitation [789] he always spat in her ears to make the words stick. The members of the ancestral family, recognizing that the "remembrancer" was the person best acquainted with the myth, were wont to consult him or her about it, and, of course, about the [553] names embodied in it. A "remembrancer" had no authority to decree who should receive names, but appeals were often made to him, and a tactful individual was frequently able to settle disputes.

578 Considering the extreme fluidity of the whole system it is 428 surprising that quarrels are not more common. These are limited by the system of wills, through which a man bequeaths
614 his most valuable personal property, especially his intangible 553 property in kuxiut name-prerogatives (II, p. x). Ancestral names are also willed, but since their value depends on the goods expended to validate them, there is seldom bitterness about their allotment. Indeed, a chief who is the legal owner of a designation which came from above in the beginning of time, will in many cases choose to elevate his position with respect to a title of comparatively recent date. But if any person who is not a member of the ancestral family should dare to use an ancestral name, all the members rise to avenge the theft, for such they feel it to be. In recent years, however, this practice has become comparatively common. In such cases a man, eager to share in the glories of a myth and able to give a potlatch, has validated an ancestral name to which he has no right. The presence of the white man alone restrains the injured ancestral family. Names are sometimes lent or hired to those who are not members of the group for definite sums; the recipient accompanies the individual. If such names are not returned for several generations quarrels are apt to arise since the recipient claims to be the real owner and not the temporary possessor. During his tenancy of the name he is entitled to any prerogative attached to it, but he is not considered a bona fide member of the ancestral family.

[6] At the present time the same principle governs the disposal of houses and gardens on the reserve.

Instances have occurred in which an old man or woman believing himself to be the last survivor of an ancestral family has donated his names and myth to those who have befriended him, or these have been taken by those who buried him. Some individuals are constantly searching to conduct the funerals of friendless old people in the hope of so obtaining names. But in almost every case this leads to friction, since it is virtually impossible for an ancestral family to die out. Perhaps in the next generation, perhaps in the following one, some youth will claim descent from the last ancestors of the supposedly defunct family, and claim the myth and names embodied therein. This leads to a feud with the person, or his descendants, who has received the names through aid given to the "last" of the family.

Such instances of an ancestral family becoming practically the Germans it would have been moral and proper according to Bella Coola ethics, but to take land was unheard of.

Since land is only valued for hunting or collecting purposes, it is not divided into small areas. Any man can build his house as will near the village. It is said that at Kitlaba the crab-apple trees are the property of different unrelated families, themselves members of different tribes, but this is unknown in Bella Coola. It may be mentioned that the Bella Coola somewhat naively assume that all other coastal tribes have unrelated families similar to their own, although they recognize that some of them also have a clan system which has no counterpart in their social organization. Since the construction of the tribe on a small reserve and the beginning of agriculture, a system of individual ownership of cultivated land has sprung up. It is realized that if a man clears and cultivates a field, the produce is his own, and he can will this land to whomsoever he pleases. Likewise a man who traps a bear to kill it for firewood is the sole owner. The Bella Coola regard uncultivated land in the reserve as being at the disposal of anyone, a concept which appears not to have been taught them by any white administrator. Its origin suggestion is in the old belief that any unappropriated land, far removed from a village, can be used by anyone. It is recognized that the reserve cannot be considered as a ut when belonging to any unrelated group, hence it is free to all. One corner of it, however, includes the lower part of a side-valley formerly used by the people of Tsomail. An old man, whose unrelated family lived in that village for generations, has set his bear-traps in this corner of the reserve for a number of years without interference from other hunters, who go far afield with their traps. Even within the limits of the reserve it is felt that this man has the prime right to that area for the use of himself and his family.

Theoretically an unrelated family may die out. Several instances were received of old men who, believing themselves to be the sole survivors of their family, bequeathed their custom and hunting-grounds to those who had helped them in their old age. But in every case the gift turned out to be of doubtful value, since young men grew up who claimed membership in the supposedly defunct ancestral family and contested the right of those to whom it had been given. This always led to war.

The following is an instance of a feud which arose from the bestowal of a hunting-area.

It is said that about 1850 the people of Tsawat (probably Bute Inlet) captured a Bella Bella woman as a slave. She escaped and fled up the Tsawat River, hoping to come in contact with the Bella Coola, who often hunted in that area. The woman was found by the mother's father of an informant who carefully looked after her while he was hunting beaver and brought her back to Bella Coola, thence sending her to Bella Bella. In gratitude for father, a Bella Bella chief, gave her captor the hunting-area known as Nalum, near Kwatna Inlet, with the consent of the members of his ancestral family. The land so alienated should have remained permanently in possession of the Bella Coola ancestral family, but was too far removed from Bella Coola to be used regularly by the new owners. After the death of the Bella Bella chief, a number of individuals who claimed membership in his ancestral family asserted their rights to it. Many years later, after white traders had made their appearance on the coast, a Bella Coola went to Nalum and killed a large number of beaver. As he was leaving with their pelts he was murdered by some Bella Bella, ostensibly as a trespasser. But for the restraining influence of the white man this incident would undoubtedly have led to war. The informant still feels that he is entitled to hunt at Nalum, and did so several times when he was a young man; but his sons have never exercised the right, and it has practically lapsed.

It is unfortunate that the above incident is drawn from Bella Bella, where the power of chiefs is much greater than among the Bella Coola. Consequently it is impossible to say owned that one is the largest number of traps possible at that weir. Those who have the right to that weir are the members of the ancestral family with the name of those first seen. At this point the logic of the Bella Coola fails to uphold the mythological picture. No salmon-weir has remained in existence since the beginning of time; when one broke, owners were sometimes inferior, and those who repaired the break became regarded as the rightful possessors. The system of ownership prevailing at the time of abandoning the weirs, was that individuals, not groups, had rights to certain sections of the weir which were willable like other personal property. In most cases this right was commitred with a cuse, marking the section of weir, which had to be duly validated by presents. In other cases, the intangible ownership was willed without any mark whatever.* Unless bequeathed in this way, disputes were frequent. Rights of this kind were never sold although an owner often loaned his section for a night, or longer period, receiving goods in return, and not forfeiting his ownership thereby. This was particularly common when the owner was planning to give a potlatch. No case was heard of in which the right to a certain section of salmon-weir was given to a non-member of the ancestral family. Theoretically, this was possible, but practically it would be so inconvenient that it is most unlikely ever to have occurred, since the Bella Coola is never such a slave to legal privileges that he fails to be guided by common sense.

Although individual ownership is thus recognized with regard to sections of salmon-weirs and suitable places for eulachon-nets, the owner is bound to share his haul. When he catches a large number of fish, anyone, whether related to him or not, can demand some. He cannot refuse, since to do so would brand him as selfish. The effective check on this system

* Great difficulty was experienced in learning about the distribution of rights to sections of salmon-weirs. The evidence is conflicting, and though every effort was made to verify and check the above, there may be further explanations which were not learnt.

I:Mc Dermith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

as far [illegible] rules are concerned. In this particular instance the woman did not show any interest in her new relatives, failed to visit them, or to take part in their ceremonies, so that the adoption, though still legal, has practically lapsed. When this man dies his children will not consider the claims of their father's "sister" to inherit any of his possessions, as they would have done if she had showed herself appreciative of her adoption. 597 [428]

It will thus be seen that the size and composition of the family vary according to the wealth and influence of the father. The duties of the members are difficult to define since they concern almost entirely the routine of life. The father, head of the family, directs the gathering of firewood, repair of the house, obtaining of food supplies, and other matters of the same sort. If he gives a potlatch his children must help him, which they do willingly since they gain from the ceremony. If a father is too autocratic, his older, especially his married children, simply move away. Nor is his power over his younger children unbounded, since their mother's relatives take great interest in their welfare and would resent any ill-treatment. 592 [431] [602]

If a person is killed or wounded, revenge is the affair of his family. Just how many individuals are involved depends on the composition of the family. In the case of the killing of a child, living with his parents alone, none but the father would feel it incumbent to retaliate. If an adult person is murdered, his or her brothers feel and avenge the insult. But should an important member of the community be slain, an old man surrounded by a numerous family, it is the affair of all. Every effort is made to slay the murderer, but if he should escape from the country, the injured group is satisfied by killing one of his family. Thus again the same inexact composition is found. A man's son, brother, or father are the only persons actually liable, and even here the common sense of the Bella Coola outweighs their theoretical laws. A murderer's brother, living in another village, would not be held liable; but more distant relations living with the offender and considered as his 593 627 682 [678]

family are liable

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

of the father or the mother. In June, 1922, a Bella Coola girl had reached the age of about six months without having received a name. There was much adverse criticism about the parsimony of her father's father and her mother's father, who were held equally to blame, but who had really been deterred by fear of the law prohibiting the potlatch. 612 614 553

As a child grows older he is helped in the performance of ceremonial rites by his parents and by their brothers and sisters. In this, too, it is considered a mark of poverty if only the parents take part. If a man's own children do not appear likely to carry on the traditions of his ancestral family, he has no hesitation in favouring the children of either a brother or sister, since, like his own, they are all members of the same ancestral family. Especially in Kimsquit* it is customary for a man to help his sisters' children; not that there is any lack of knowledge of the real father, but rather as a mark of respect and family feeling displayed by a man to his sister. Moreover, in both Bella Coola proper and in Kimsquit, it is most improper for a name which a man has raised to a position of dignity by the expenditure of much goods to be passed to his own son; it should go to a distant relative. When a father validates a name for his child it should be one long dormant. 593 604 852 [558] [614] [553]

One aspect of the manner in which the family merges imperceptibly into the ancestral family can be seen in the inheritance of names. When a man calls his relatives together to make his will he is guided in the choice of recipients by the characteristics of his children. An able son receives much from his father, but lazy children are slighted without hesitation. This is particularly true of names with which are bound up valuable dance prerogatives, whereas, as previously mentioned, ancestral names of which the importance depends 593 614 428 553

*According to an intelligent Bella Coola informant, a Bella Bella pays greater attention to the children of his brothers and sisters than to his own offspring, and the same man expressed the opinion that the Kimsquit practice was due to Bella Bella influence. Kimsquit informants denied this, though emphasizing the important part taken by an uncle in obtaining prerogatives for his sisters' children, in some cases to the detriment of his own, which is rare in Bella Coola. [184] [177]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

593 on the value of the goods distributed in connection with them, 614 usually revert to the ancestral family and can be revived by 553 any member of it. It seems needless to publish lengthy pedi-428 grees, illustrating the transmission of ancestral names; it will suffice to say that such sometimes pass from father to son, from a man to his brother's son, his sister's son, his sister, his daughter, or to other relatives belonging to the immediate family. On the other hand, with equal frequency, names pass from a man to distant relatives of the same ancestral family.

59 Thus the Bella Coola family, important though it is in the life of the individual, cannot be defined with exactitude either as regards composition or functions; it varies according to the importance of its head, and tends to merge in the ancestral families of the parents.

Kinship Terms

601 In Bella Coola, as in so many parts of the world, kinship terms mirror the social life of the community. The Bella Coola system of nomenclature is not as clear-cut in its application as in other regions, and requires considerable explanation concerning the uses of many of the terms. It will be seen that the system, although fundamentally founded on the family, presents many classificatory features. Whether or not these are to be ascribed to an ancient clan system is most doubtful; a short discussion of that point will be found at the end of this section.

The terms are arranged in the following order: first, an individual's relatives of the preceding generation, then those of the next preceding, with their parents, then those of the present generation, followed by terms for kin of the generations following. Finally come relations by marriage.

Term	Speaker address	Speaker address
	Male	Female
Father	This term is properly used only by a small child, though often mentioned by an adult as a term of endearment.	Term used only by a small child.

[195]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

to arrange his marriage with some female slave; once this had taken place, the actual treatment meted out to him differed only slightly from that shown to a member of the family. In former times it would probably have been difficult for a stranger to tell married slaves from the members of the Bella Coola community until he had been long enough in the country to understand more than appeared on the surface. 527 582

Marriages between Bella Coola men and slave women were not infrequent, while like partnerships between slave men and even the daughters of chiefs were not unknown. In such cases the status of the children depended on the performance of ceremonies to wash from them the stain of their slave blood. While the mother was still pregnant her husband would call guests, not only from his own village, but from foreign tribes as well. Presents were given, according to the wealth of the donor, often aided by his immediate family, to "wash the child." Such ceremonies would be repeated several times before birth, and again at that time. Bella Coola sentiment was that such presents gagged the recipients; they knew of the dishonourable ancestry of the child, but the receipt of gifts on his account had wiped away the disgrace. Such a child was able to inherit prerogatives from his mother's old home, duly validated in Bella Coola by valuables, and by his own lavish presents he could silence those who remembered the blot on his ancestry. Similar procedure was carried out if a free woman married a slave. Unless her husband were already owned by one of her family, the woman's father or brother would arrange to purchase him. Then, aided by him, they would give the same type of presents to clear the children from the taint of slavery. If this were not done, the children had only the status of slaves, though, born and brought up in Bella Coola and associating from infancy with their master's children, they were virtually considered members of the family. 431 567 [428]

"Washing the child," during pregnancy and at birth, sufficed to cover the taint on its history, but in later years if such a person failed to continue to give ceremonies, people would again talk of his short-comings. So, too, for the child or grand- [554] [578]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

all that he sits in an enviable spot, irrespective of its location in the house. 554 556*

In precisely the same manner a man may take for himself a seat in the central part of the row behind the fire, but he is laughed at for endeavouring to assume a dignity, unworthily, unless he can validate his position by lavish presents. The Bella Coola are always ready to make fun of a person who fails to maintain his seat. On the death of the occupant of the central position it is taken for granted that whoever inherits his name will assume that location and give the essential presents, but it is not incumbent upon him to do so. He may choose to establish his new name at his old station, beside, instead of behind, the fire. Thus it has come to pass that the seat of the most important chief of a village is often at the side of the house. When all are seated the chiefs may be widely separated, and a parent may have obtained for his son a seat in a better part of the house than his own. But as a rule the chiefs sit in a row at the back of the fire, the most influential one in the middle. There must have been feuds when two men desired to seat themselves in the central position at the same time, but disputes about this were uncommon, because a man's seat was, and still is, primarily regarded as the intangible goods wherewith he is clothed, rather than his right to sit at any particular spot. It is these non-material coverings that enable a man to be bold and assertive in argument or suggestion, in fact to be a chief. A young man may have had conferred on him one of the noblest names, but his influence depends on the value of the goods expended on his behalf, subject of course to the universal characteristic that a man of forceful character may have more influence than his actual position warrants. [424] [428] [622] [424]

Jealous feuds are common when the man who owns the name of the first chief, first ancestor of a village, has duly validated it, but is being eclipsed in the giving of potlatches by a man whose name is of less intrinsic importance. Such a complication recently arose at Kimsquit, and the Bella Coola [578] [612]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

177 from the Bella Bella, a fact emphasized by all. It is not diffi-424 cult to understand, therefore, why elaborate myths are lacking,
551 even if such were possessed by the Bella Bella. The Bella
575 Coola possessed certain similar rites to which the Bella Bella [773] prerogatives were in the process of being grafted at the time of the coming of the white man. There has since been general decay of ceremonial life, with the result that the whole situation is in a state of flux presenting great difficulties to the investigator.

428 Sisaxt names are willed and inherited in the manner already 551 described for other prerogatives. The type of dance, and the 595 time of use, will be described in the following section of this chapter.

The Potlatch

556 It is unfortunate that an adequate treatment of Rank
128 among the Bella Coola requires a description of the potlatch since this ceremony, or rather group of ceremonies, includes a number of features which, logically, should have been postponed until a later stage of this monograph. An effort has been made to lessen references to non-ritualistic features by the description, just given, of the basic concepts of chieftainship and the sisaxt society. Other ideas will require rather lengthy digressions, a method of presentation which seems preferable to the use of many footnotes, its only alternative.

General Observations

104 In scientific and popular writings alike, the term "pot-
556 latch" has been applied both to the public giving of presents, [431] and to the rites at which this occurs. But among the Bella Coola, such distribution of gifts is necessary at every ceremonial; accordingly, each is essentially a potlatch. There is one, however, which the inhabitants regard as the most important of all, the goal which every ambitious man aims to reach, the rite in which his ancestral myth can be displayed. In this

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 556 adopted, probably as a prerogative obtained through mar-575 riage, from the Bella Bella or Rivers Inlet people. The diver-177 sity in ritual supports this view. There was not sufficient [776] time for the procedure to become stabilized between the introduction of the concept and the dislocation of Bella Coola social life through the influence of the white man. It is also possible that the tutwinam was added to susask rites from the older a'alk society (I, p. 273).

532 Whatever may have been the history of the tutwinam, it
* 556 provides Y with a mask, or with two, if two figures have ap-575 peared. He guards them jealously, though secretly, throughout his life and uses them only on rare ceremonial occasions.
[769] It is one of these masks which will be brought out if one of his family gives a dramatic representation of his return after death.
● [428] A mask of this type is sometimes willed, but the legatee alters the design before using it.

* 556 A short pause follows the singing of the second, or third, 575 song, during which some chief or chiefs may make a laudatory speech concerning Y's family history. Then the singers again [537] sing the first song, and susask members of the audience join in.
[533] Similarly, the second song is practised. These two are sung, time after time, until the susask have thoroughly mastered them. When the singers consider that this has been accomplished, they tell X, who communicates with the susask man outside who has the whistle, and again its eerie notes are heard.
[781] Some of the uninitiated, believing that the supernatural being who gives potency to the ritual is at hand, hurriedly leave in fear. At the same time some of the susask conduct to the back-room the second initiate whose songs are to be sung that night. The procedure in his case is identical with that described for Y. Usually it is considered sufficient to seclude two on one night, though three may be attempted. When the songs of the last have been sung, food is distributed and the people disperse.

A few nights later the same ritual is repeated for two more initiates, who join their predecessors in the back-room. Here they spend their time in idleness, the only essential being the

I:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

turns, clad in his ceremonial costume, including a long cape with pockets. With him come the four or five young men who have just finished dancing. The singers beat time furiously with their sticks, and the siki whirls round and round, working himself into a frenzy with twists and gyrations. Gradually, he approaches one of the initiates, and pretends to pluck something from his body. As he opens his hands the spectators see that there is something in them, what exactly, they cannot distinguish. Only those who are ɬsaek understand that, whatever it is, it has been palmed from one of his cape pockets. He pretends to throw this object upwards, at the same time slipping it back into his cape. As the article is, theoretically, thrown aloft the sound of whistling is heard, which grows weaker and weaker till it finally ceases. Meanwhile the heralds discourse loudly with one another about how the "eagle" or whatever it is, has been extracted, and is now returning above. The same procedure is repeated for the other initiates. This concludes the night's ceremony. Food is distributed and the people disperse. 556* 575 789

The employment of a foreign siki to expel the power from the initiates is necessary since this particular prerogative is not native to Bella Coola. Formerly the expulsion was done in the back-room without any elaborate ceremony. This rite marks the admission of initiates into the ɬsaek society although they cannot yet leave the back-room. It must be understood, however, that a youth may be initiated several times, on each occasion receiving new songs and perhaps a different mask. In this way his prestige as a ɬsaek is increased, and the son of a powerful chief will often be initiated ten or more times. A mask so acquired is preserved in concealment as the personal property of the owner who may use it at potlatches on future occasions. It will be the guise in which a dead person returns to visit the living. After being used for this purpose, a mask may be burnt, or willed to a near relative of the deceased, who slightly alters the painting before using it himself. [424] [177] 556* 575 [422] [532] [428]

It is somewhat difficult to understand the attitude of those [781]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

first established on his seat, he must reward the heralds lavishly for their remarks. 203 556

As with so many elements of culture, the Bella Coola ascribe the origin of heralds to the wish of Alqantám as expressed to the first people in the beginning of time. Some groups of these early settlers brought with them heralds whose games had been created by the supreme deity himself in his house in the land above. Such a one was Qāqā'lī who was a member of Xemcua's (I, p. 326) party at Kimsquit, another was Olḑimut who came with uyuyuyut (I, p. 329). These heralds functioned in the manner of their descendants of today; others of the first chiefs appointed certain of their relatives to perform this service, and by means of the power with which they were endowed, created names with respect to their functions. Besides his ordinary name every herald must have an ancestral appellation of some kind, as well as the probability of possessing kuxiut ones in addition to those of a professional nature. Either by bringing with them from above, or by creation on this earth, each group of first settlers became provided with a herald, whose name is embodied in the ancestral myth describing their experiences. As each of the first heralds died, his name was passed to a successor, and this practice has been carried out from generation to generation until the present. The Bella Coola state that no new names for heralds have been created since the time of the first people, and it is certain that none has been made for many years. Consequently, the number of heralds is strictly limited in accordance with mythological beliefs, and every man who owns one of the ancient designations embodied in an origin myth knows the name of the herald associated with his first namesake. 203 773 551 [428]

At the death of a herald his name becomes dormant. Since heralds function at all ceremonies, whether or not the donor belongs to the same ancestral family as themselves, the members of the group sustaining the loss are not deprived of their 203 553 556 614 424

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

701 difficult to estimate the former influence of such warriors. The belief of all in their ability must have given them some prestige, although the requirements of practical qualifications in fighting must often have prevented them from functioning as military leaders. In other words, a man may be, socially, a warrior, even though he lacks ability as a fighting man.

701 The functions of warriors are not limited to fighting with 699 enemies of other tribes. Each has the power to kill and must [688] exercise it when requested. If a mistake is made in a cere-[575] monial kusiut dance, the offender must be killed, and one way [428] in which this is accomplished is by the senior members of the [411] society requesting a professional warrior to act as executioner.
[754] One of these men, who lived at Aóin-ów-i, always used a stone club which had been handed down from generation to generation, becoming the property of each new incumbent of the name and prerogative. In other cases, the killing is said to have been done with the aid of magic. The power of the Aóin-ów-i warrior had been confirmed with so much goods that he was the most powerful professional killer known to the Bella Coola. He acted on instructions from the senior members of the kusiut society or when called upon by anyone. If,
[684] for example, a man found that his wife had been faithless and wished to kill her lover, it was only necessary to tell the professional warrior, who was bound to act in accordance with his prerogative. He received no pay, since he was merely [682] exercising his right. The relatives of the murdered person never took revenge on the slayer, realizing that he was powerless in the matter, though they frequently requested him to slay the person who had asked him to kill the first victim. He could never refuse to do so, even if the victim were his own brother, or if he knew that the person he was to kill was guiltless. The underlying principle was that this man's power had [761] been increased to such a pitch by the distribution of presents that if he failed to exercise it on demand, it would react upon himself and cause his own death. This Aóin-ów-i warrior began in time to have an aversion for his vocation, since he

1:Mc(Dowalth K-7 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

901 than that of anyone else. The Bella Coola do not rationalize 156 in a scientific manner; if a man holds a belief firmly, he acts on it without questioning its logic. Moreover, if a professional warrior functions a number of times, this in itself is enough to strengthen his conviction that he must act henceforth in the same way. It can be said with confidence that the owner of [463] a professional prerogative has considerable belief in his own powers, that this acts on himself to render him proficient, and that the majority of the community have respect for his capabilities.

555 THE PROFESSION OF SINGER

424 Singing is one of the professions open to a Bella Coola 598 either through natural ability or an ancestral prerogative. There is a constant need for men able to sing and compose [464] songs for every kind of ceremonial, so a young man of talent has little difficulty in gaining admittance to the choir. He may even win great distinction and become recognized as the leading authority on musical matters. None the less, his success is considered to be accidental and unauthoritative, lacking the foundation that comes from the possession of a duly validated professional prerogative. A person made a singer by the latter means may be entirely unable to compose; in this case he is not a member of the choir, although he enjoys the social distinction which he has won by distributing goods to confirm his professional status. The singer most respected is he who combines with natural ability a confirmed prerogative to give substance and power to his position and composi-[555] tions. At the death of such an one, an effort is always made [424] by the members of his ancestral family to transmit the name [598] to a youth who has shown musical promise. Arguments and differences of opinion are common among the members of the choir and in such cases the self-assurance and influence of a man whose position has been made strong by the distribution of presents often outweighs that of one who can rely only on his actual ability.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

MODERN SHAMANISM

Although the powers ascribed to modern shamans are less than those attributed to their fellows of old, yet a shaman is a person endowed with mysterious ability and wonderful knowledge, due to personal contact with supernatural beings. Hence, he is regarded as somewhat uncanny and, though respected, is likewise feared. The power is not inheritable. There is a tendency for the descendants of a shaman to have like favours granted to them, but this is nothing more than a tendency on the part of the supernatural beings to confer their boons in this manner; it is not a right. Thus anyone, man or woman, rich or poor, young or old, slave or member of an ancient family, may become a shaman.

The Obtaining of Shamanistic Power

A shaman obtains his power from a supernatural visitant, usually the mythical woman Tlitsqilila-a (also called Ladak-waletsum) bringing him a name, four songs, and sometimes the ability to cure a specific disease. No methods are sure to attract her, but by means of magical rites a man may so purify himself that she will be likely to visit him. A second, and the most usual manner of becoming a shaman, is to receive a visit from Tlitsqilila-a when grievously ill. In either case a shaman is often termed a kaciut, "A Learned One."

In the first case, the wooing of shamanistic powers by magical means, it is often a matter of years before a man becomes a shaman. Sometimes the parents of a mere boy will notice that he is fond of lying around the house with a far-away look in his eyes, and appears unwilling to take part in the games of the other lads. Especially if the father is a shaman, or if one of his ancestors has had the ability, the parents watch carefully to see whether or not this is merely a passing mood. If it continues, they realize that their son may become a shaman. Although there are dangers attached to the profession, they will usually assist their child in every possible way. They may know how one of their ancestors obtained

1:Mc:Dwatth E-1 (1922-1924)948
NES Decimals NES

756 *
755
782

shaman pours the grease on the central fire, and throws on it also the figures and some dried salmon. Thus propitiated, it is believed that the dead will be more likely to allow the soul-souls to be sucked forth.

756 *
556
[576]

Shamans from the dead perform conjuring feats and dramatic performances of the same type as ordinary shamans. Until he gives his first dance a newly created shaman is known as a hoax, the same word that is used for a hoxiut initiate, and during this period he wears the shaman's collar of interwoven dyed and undyed cedar-bark. If he is wealthy and influential, a shaman will repeat his dance every fourth year. Such a performance can be held at any season, although the usual time is after the hoxiut ceremonies. The dramatic representations are of scenes witnessed in the land below, though sometimes they are done in a reverse manner, following the practice of the dead in doing things oppositely. Thus one shaman reported that the ghosts were very long blankets, but when he danced he wore one that came only to his hips. The method of singing is the same as that employed by ordinary shamans, but one whose power is derived from the dead dances with head bent downwards, his free hand pointing to the ground with four fingers extended. Also his cry of "ewai, ewai, ewai," uttered in intervals with a deep cadence, differs from that used by ordinary shamans. A dance always terminates with the distribution of food to validate the ceremony.

[746]

[536]

Like ordinary shamans, those from the dead cannot transmit their power. At death their songs too are lost, unless they choose to give them to a friend who is also a shaman from the dead. This is obviously contrary to the theoretical belief that all songs have been obtained during revelations, but is not at all contrary to the Bella Coola practice of having the singers assist the visionaries in "remembering" their visions.

756 *
556
[576]

The following tale, although drawn from the distant past, is a typical illustration of one of the many ways in which shamanistic power is received from the dead.[9]

[9] Six stories of similar type have been included in vol. 1, chap. xxx to explain the life of the dead, and others are grouped together in the next chapter.

556
756 *
778

Several Bella Coola were questioned concerning the Cannibal spirit which Boas has described for the Kwakiutl. Some had never heard of such a creature, others had vague knowledge concerning it, and two men were able to give it a name. The one called it Sâxâlqamaxâlîxtim, the other Sâxâlqamaxim. All informants agreed that this creature was not a part of the Cannibal cult of Bella Coola and one man suggested that the cannibalistic incubus method is unnecessary. The Bella Coola believe that the Cannibal spirit is used in Bella Bella. During 1913 there came to Bella Coola an old Kitsaqut Indian who had left his home many years ago and had since been living at Smith Inlet(?). With him came his son, a grown man, who had inherited from his mother a Kwakiutl Cannibal prerogative which he displayed in the winter of 1913-4. After the dances had, theoretically, returned from the regions above, a large masked figure representing Sâxâlqamaxim entered through the front door. As the singers beat time, it hopped to and fro, up and down, with snapping beak. The Bella Coola were mentally measured, and one had only to listen to their remarks when wondering what it might be, to be convinced that the Cannibal spirit is a strange concept to them. The most frequent hypothesis was that it was a hawk, since the masked figure did resemble this supernatural bird. The Bella Coola greatly admired the dance, and were by no means ashamed to confess their inferiority as dancers to the Kwakiutl. After the disappearance of the masked figure, the singers sang the Cannibal's song and he danced in normal fashion, which was commented upon as another difference in custom.

THE SCRATCH DANCE

Only less awe-inspiring than the Cannibal dance is the Scratch dance. Those Sâxâlîx who have this prerogative are able to scratch the bodies of their fellows, as their long, bloody wails vanish. The privileges and restrictions of Sâxâlîxes are closely akin to those of Cannibals, as the following points show:

533*

[illegible] Sagh dawn on his head(1)	[illegible] on children	[illegible] of chiefs.

[illegible]
(musicians concluding here.)

(a) Sun songs complained means this song has been sung without change for three generations. It was composed for a certain Gaidowa, called by him to [illegible], who connected it to the present day. [224] [225]

(b) Recorded as song VII D 10, National Museum of Canada, singer, Jim Dakota.

(c) All [illegible] of the should probably be dots, but in singing the final a sound is usually indistinguishable and has accordingly been omitted throughout. The d sound in other song on d but the one spelling has been used consistently. [145]

(d) The medium theme of this song consists of a series of grunts which are said to be the voice of a horse, the crest of [illegible].

(e) The meaning of this is: When my grandfather brought down.

(f) The grandfather of [illegible] had called to him the right to use this crest. [224] [225]

(g) The man from whom this song was obtained did not know which was the crest of [illegible]. He judged from the fact that it must have been the horse, although this is not one of the generally recognized birds.

(h) Meaning: The horse which has failed to jab its prey. When this song was sung, a medical figure of a horse appeared and enabled several of the spectators, who were later rewarded for having permitted a passageto be displayed. [231] [226]

(i) No analogous expression for comparison.

Song of Jigskin of Eagwept when initiated into the Guest Society(a)

1. [illegible] Be of good courage	[illegible] ye of the gaiwah(b).	[illegible] Use up evil dreams(c)
[illegible] your head.	[illegible] They have met with an accident(d).	[illegible] the house being flooded (e).

(musicians continue)

2. [illegible] Would their lives be not	[illegible] children's people whom will become entered	[illegible] whom rises to food
[illegible] the Eagwept Street(f).	[illegible] They who are fishes (g)	[illegible] will prepare their biggest [illegible]

(musicians continue)

3. The third part has been forgotten.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 10a, National Museum of Canada, singer, Jim Dakota.

(b) The wording shows that the song was to be used at a potlatch.

(c) Meaning: Make use of in all directions.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Nalqkaiaw: An influential Kwakiutl chief.
Nakaiai: Bella Coola pronunciation of a Carrier village; the Anglicized form is Ulkatcho.
nalpaum: To lose something through faulty concealment; the term is used to describe a lender who is alleged to have suffered loss through the discovery of his repository by an unauthorized person.
nalskwalil: Grease extracted from sockeye salmon heads.
Nalwadi: Ancestral name of a Tsaxo chief; the designation is of Kwakiutl origin.
nalkla ene: 1—Spider.
2—Place on the east side of South Bentinck Arm where caves are of-[825] [778] fected; the powers is derived from a spider petrified there.
Nalsis, "Place of the Whirlpool": Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.
Nalskwaqalya, "The One Whose Feet is Dusty": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.
[559] Nalqawaud di mud, "The Rolling Down of Excrement": Dog's name.
Nalskwaqaw: 1—Supernatural being who leaves his home at the time of Naskyaw's departure to warn debauchees to tidy their houses for the ceremonial season.
[352] 2—To tidy the houses preparatory to the ceremonial season.
Nalskiskis, "The One Whose Eyes Are Hungry": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.
[431] nalsum: Presents given by a chief to his fellow-villagers prior to a potlatch.
Nalliqalsiel, "Place of Many Boulders": Ancient village on the Kwatna River.
Nalsnamaskis: One of the first women to settle at Tal'ai in the beginning of time.
nalsnakwalskis: Footwraps, especially those of plumage or skins worn by the first settlers when coming down to earth in the beginning of time.
Nalsiai: Poverty-stricken chief mentioned in a song.
nalsnaskis: Beads used to lasso a Cannibal; the word is etymologically connected with nalsnakwalskis.
[428] nalsnqaiaw: Succession, as applied to the assumption of a marshal's prerogative by a son or other relative.
nalsnaxwalaxa, "Forehead Thing": Small mask worn on a naxal head-drum.
nalq: Landslide, such as is caused by Tsaskilis or naxal.
Nalqaskis: Name given to their water by the first settlers at Naiqwaik in the beginning of time.
nalqwa, "To Have Become Nothing For": Said of a poultice which is thrown away after serving its purpose.
nalqwaiaw: House-posts sunrise to front door.
nalsaskis: Posts extending from this world to the land above down which swarmed some of the first settlers in the beginning of time.
nalsnaxwalaxa, "Belt Goods": Goods borrowed during a potlatch by a donee who finds himself debtorn. The implication is that he will have to fatten up his [426] [352] clothing and work industriously to repay his indebtedness with heavy interest.
nalsnqiaw: Cry uttered by a naxal official to free a house from the intangible influence of the supernatural after the initiation of naxal novices.
[342] nalsnqaskis: The alleged entrance of a supernatural being into a naxal novice.
nalsnskis: Semi-subterranean house with two levels for seats.
nalsnkis: Semi-subterranean house with a single level for seats.
Nalsnaw, "Place of Flies": Place on north side of North Bentinck Arm, about one mile from its head.

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NEá Bellacoola NEá

575 her the secrets of the Ka'aitt. She wore ornaments of red cedar-bark
773 around her head, wrists, and ankles; her face was blackened, her hair 776 strewn with eagle-down. She commanded the women to dance in the same way as she saw her dancing. The people should accompany her dance with songs, and, after she had finished, they should dance with masks. She said, 'Whenever a person sees our people shall dance the Ka'aitt. If you do not do so I shall punish you with death and sickness. In summer, while I am in my house, you must not dance the Ka'aitt.'

575 Ever since that time the Bilqula dance the Ka'aitt. When a man has 776 seen Amklikstsai'n sitting before her cave he will invite the people to a Ka'aitt. A ring made of red and white cedar-bark is hung up in his house, and the uninitiated are not allowed to enter it. Only in the evening, when dances are performed, they may look in, standing close to the door. As soon as the dances are over they must retire from the taboo house. Each Ka'aitt lasts three days.

535 The various dances performed by members of the Ka'aitt are also the 575 property of the gentes, and the right of performing them is restricted
614 to members of the gens. They must not be given to a daughter's husband, 424 as is the case with the Sisaa'ka dances (see above), but belong to the members of the gens alone. They may, however, be lented and borrowed
[424] by members of the gens, who have a right to a particular dance, but who do not own it. Permission to use a mask or dance is obtained from the owner by payments. The owner may exhibit the dance or the borrower
575 may return it at any time. Membership of the Ka'aitt is obtained through an initiation. At this time the novice is given his Ka'aitt name, which [551] he retains throughout life. Each gens has its peculiar Ka'aitt names, which are inherited by young persons from their parents or from other
● [428] relatives. Thus a young man who had the name of Pa'pi until he was about seventeen years old obtained at his initiation the name of Ta'ka'ail. I have not reached a very clear understanding of the details of the initia-
[552] tion; it seems that the dance is simply given to the novice in the same way as the Sisaa'ka, this initiation being connected with a potlatch. But [787] still it seems possible that he must 'dream' of the dance which he is to perform. Only the highest degrees of the Ka'aitt have to pass through a religious ceremony of some importance. The highest degrees are the [554] tlaqó'tla (the Ha'mats'a of the Kwakiutl), the O'lag (the Ha'mamai of the Kwakiutl), and the Da'tin (the Ha'ametsai of the Ha'mats). These grades are also hereditary. A Ka'aitt novice may acquire them at once at his first initiation.

575 When the tlaqó'tla is initiated he goes into the forest, where he 785 encounters his guardian spirit. It is believed that he goes up to the sun, and formerly he had to take human flesh along for food. The chiefs held
787 a council the night preceding the beginning of the ceremonies, and any one who wanted to show his liberality offered one of his slaves to be [266] killed, in order to serve as food for the tlaqó'tla. The offer was accepted and a payment of from ten to twenty blankets made for the slave. The latter was killed, and the members of the tlaqó'tla order devoured one-half of the body before the departure of the novice in the woods. There the latter is tied up and left to fast. He may stay there for twenty or thirty days until the spirit appears to him and takes him up to the sun, where he is initiated. Early one morning he returns, and is heard outside 575 the houses. He has lost all his hair, which, it is believed, has been taken

Scans E-5 (555-co, 555/557)
NEA Reliance NEA

[575] [576] [577] [578]

wanted to dance in the same way as she saw her dancing. The people should accompany her dance with songs, and, after she had finished, they should dance with women. She said, "Whoever a person sees me, your people shall dance the kwain. If you do not do so, I shall punish you with death and sickness. In summer, while I am in my house, you must not dance the kwain."

[575] [576] [578]

Ever since that time the Ki'tsile dance the kwain. When a man has seen Asatilkatsi'a sitting in front of her cave, he will invite the people to a kwain. A ring made of red and white color beads is hung up in his house, and the uninitiated are not allowed to enter it. Only in the evening, when dances are performed, they may look on, standing close to the door. As soon as the dances are over, they must retire from the taboo house. Each kwain lasts three days.

[579] [580]

The various dances performed by members of the kwain are also property of the clan, and the right to perform them is restricted to members of the clan. They must not be given to a daughter's husband, as is the case with the steel's dances, but belong to the members of the clan, who have a right to a particular dance, but who do not own it. Permission to use a mask or dance is obtained from the owner by payments. The owner may rehire the dance to the borrower, may return it at any time. Membership of the kwain is obtained through an initiation. At this time the novice is given his kwain name, which is inherited by young persons from their parents or from other relatives. Thus a young man who had the name of Pigin until he was about seventeen years old, obtained at his initiation the name of Ukwa'a. I have not reached a very clear understanding of the details of the initiation; it seems that the dance is simply given to the novice in the same way as the steel's, the initiation being connected with a potlatch. Not still it seems possible that to most "dances" of the dance which he is to perform. Only the highest degrees of the kwain have to pass through a religious ceremony of some importance. The highest degree are the Sisu'a (the ut'mata of the Kwakiutl), the o'ala (the ut'ksam of the Kwakiutl), and the ki'ta (the ut'mentalis of the Kwakiutl). These grades are also hereditary. A kwain novice may acquire them at once at his first initiation.

[581] [582]

When the Sisu'a is initiated, he goes into the forest, where he encounters his guardian spirit. It is believed that he goes up to the sun, and formerly he had to take bones back along for food. The chiefs held a council the night preceding the beginning of the ceremonies, and anyone who wanted to show his liberality offered one of his slaves to be killed in order to serve as food for the Sisu'a. The offer was accepted, and a payment of from ten to twenty blankets was made for the slave. The latter was killed, and the members of the Sisu'a order devoured one half of the body before the departure of the novice to the woods. There the latter was tied up and left to fast. He may stay there for twenty or thirty days until the spirit appears

[583] [584] [585] [586]

[575] [576] [577] [578]

[579] [580]

[581] [582]

[583] [584] [585] [586]

● 631, 796

/For information on the potlatch as a means of gaining prestige and a description of the ceremonies, see category 336./

5/06/Danish E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

that tally pots have mortality, and suggested that it might be those which attend the gathering of the supernatural beings at the winter solstice instead of an element from the human body itself.

One elderly Bella Coola, of philosophical temperament, described pentlacate in terms far removed from the accounts of tally pots. According to him, every individual receives this supernatural possession at birth, and it remains with him, in close association with his body, throughout life. It stays in front of its face, invisible, yet having substance, and constantly dodging from side to side. If a man fails to receive a pentlacate or a potlatch, it is because his pentlacate has ceased to move. When stationary it is not transparent, and not only tends to cower from the donor's sight, but acts as a barrier to his thoughts. The same man stated that this element can leave the body, can be seen by shamans, and that it is the one which accords at the winter solstice to Nacmidi-a. At death it is believed to accompany the spirit and the life to the land above.

There seems no reason to doubt that the concept of tally pots is aboriginal belief. Nor does the application of the term pentlacate to another immaterial possession of quite another type destroy this probability. It must be remembered that within the last eighty years the Bella Coola have suffered not only from the tremendous upheaval caused by the coming of the white man, but have been reduced to a mere fraction of their former numerical strength by various epidemics. These factors have led to the partial forgetting of ancient rituals, with consequent confusion. It is probable that the use of the same term for the tally pot, intimately concerned with an individual's life although situated in the land above, and for an invisible and intangible possession which grows front of him, is due to this recent decay of ancient revelations. If this be true, it merely means that in former time the Bella Coola had yet another supernatural element to prove and influence their lives.

Lib:Dewalt E-5 (1922-1924)948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

Ceremonial chastity is considered almost a necessity to hunters, and in former years a man would rarely, if ever, set out to seek game without fortifying himself by at least several days of continence followed by washing. In the few cases known of a female assuming the clothing and activities of a male, she has been forced to hire a man to sleep with her on the proper nights before starting to hunt. But hunters are by no means the only ones to observe ceremonial chastity. If a man wants to build a salmon-weir, it is by this means that he makes himself strong enough to succeed; if he plays cards, good fortune is sought in the same fashion. The guests at a potlatch observe ceremonial chastity so that their host may not forget them in his distribution of presents, the host, that his guests may arrive on time. The tsaxiat dancer thus fortifies himself for the performance of a dangerous ritual. In this way a man experiences dreams foretelling the future. In every desire or activity of life, ceremonial chastity is a potent means of success, not infallible, usually combined with prayer and in many cases with sacrifice, but a background and accompaniment to every means of propitiation. If a man has conspicuous ill-luck, it is because he has failed to observe ceremonial chastity; if he succeeds, it is because he has done so. At the present time there is living in the Bella Coola valley an old white man who for years has ranged the mountains in search of gold; he has been unsuccessful, and the Bella Coola believe that he will never succeed until he observes ceremonial chastity.

The strength which a man may acquire through the practice of this vice is almost limitless. A man may be ailing on account of the leaning of his ugly post, but, if he energetically and faithfully observes chastity, it will become straightened, whether automatically or through the agency of Hamatsa is uncertain. After the cessation of a long period of continence, a man's spirit is so strong that his friends place their hands on the back of his neck in order to absorb some of the power radiating from his spirit. Ancient myths record how the mere force engendered in a man's body by lengthy absti-child one of his own names, in which case the donor surrenders all claim to it. This designation is the obvious mark of the position of the child in the ancestral family. Without such a formal conferring of an ancestral name an infant would be without status in the community, but, as children are always welcome, some relative is invariably ready to confirm the borrowal by the necessary distribution of goods, a feature that is present in every Bella Coola ceremonial. On such occasions the guests are called by their ancestral names. An effort was made to learn what would happen if the number of children born into an ancestral family exceeded the number of ancestral names embodied in its origin myth, but no answer was forthcoming. Established custom demands that a name be provided for every child, and one is always provided. Without question designations must be invented, usually from some event in the origin myth, but it is always claimed that such were used by a long-deceased ancestor. In fact, the social custom agrees with the requirements of the mythological concept. Since borrowal of names is a matter of pride, it follows that a child often receives several from the ancestral families of which he is a member; the possession of these is a source of gratification to the owner.

An ancestral name given to a child is spoken of as an dogbud name, and the recipient as an dogbud, which may be translated, "commoner." He may be given several names from one origin myth, or some from diverse origin myths if his parents are members of different ancestral families. These designations may either be those brought down from above by the first people, those made on this earth by them, or those made at some important event by later persons. Irrespective of what combination of these possibilities a child may have, he is still a commoner, and his ability to rise to the position of chief depends on his own, or his parents', ability to give potlatches, as will be described in the next chapter. In such a case his dogbud name is said to have been elevated to that of a nilkamp (chief's) name.

553

[331]

[334]

b:Mc:Dewalt E-5 (1922-1924)948
MEA Bellacoola MEA

The ancestral family consists of those whose ancestral names, embodying definite prerogatives, are embodied in a single origin myth.

A stranger finds it easier to understand why names are so carefully memorized within the ancestral family by thinking of them as symbols of prerogatives, but it must be emphasized that the Bella Coola preserve with equal jealousy those designations of which the only prerogative is the marking of the actual membership.

If, then, the ancestral family be regarded as a group possessing a large number of name-prerogatives, it may well be asked how these are distributed among the members. The first point to be emphasized is that the ancestral family is a unit held together without definite social mechanism. There is no accepted "head" of the family, nor are there any clearly formulated laws governing the transmission of the name-prerogatives. Before death a man usually calls together his relatives and bequeaths,[7] according to his desire, his personal property in slaves and canoes, and his intangible property in names. Such a designation does not become the property of the new owner unless he is able to validate his ownership by a distribution of presents, meanwhile the name is "dead." If, during this period, some other member of the ancestral family should desire it for a child, or for himself, he can take possession of it by the customary distribution of presents. By doing so he would anger the legatee, but the latter cannot himself use the appellation since it is already in use. Even at the present time there are bitter quarrels over the assumption of names, and such have certainly occurred for many generations. If a man can validate fairly promptly a name willed to him, it is most unusual for anyone else to try to forestall him.

If a man dies intestate, his sons consider themselves his normal heirs, and the most respected of them validates for himself as many names as he desires or is able to assume. Disputes are not as common as might be expected since the [7] In case of sudden death or failure to make a will confusion sometimes results.

tions on this subject always excited them, but every effort was made to verify the following statements.

As with names, the easiest way to understand the rights of the ancestral family in land is by first considering the mythological explanation, which accounts conditions as they existed at the coming of white men. On reaching this earth the first people are believed to have prospected for suitable settlement sites, places where salmon and eulachon could be caught, and if possible, near side valleys where berries were abundant. There they released the animals and plants which they had brought with them, on which they thenceforth subsisted, in accordance with the supreme deity's instructions. The members of the group pre-empted these areas for themselves. Waste land, far from any village was, and still is, free to anyone. A few years after the first settlements had been made, according to the myths, the supreme god sent down to Kimsquit a certain Ripamim who allotted and marked the territory which was the property of each community; so that since a village consisted merely of a group of the first settlers. No similar myth was recounted for either Bella Coola or Tal'ts, although their concepts with regard to land are identical with those of the Kimsquit. This really gave a sacred sanction to the possession of land, an important matter to a people so religiously inclined as the Bella Coola.

The system of land tenure follows the same somewhat obscure principles that govern the possession of names in an ancestral family. Hunting and collecting grounds appropriated by the first people, or by their immediate descendants, are the property of their offspring, the ancestral family. The Bella Coola term for such an area is ut'lum, also called, ximmeta, which means "Food Supply."

It will thus be seen that a hunting area is not the property of any single individual, but belongs to a group of persons, most of whom live in a single town. The relatives of a man who intends to give a potlatch usually give him, temporarily, exclusive rights in the hunting-ground. As with names, there

Twelfth E-0 (1922-1929) 1948
NES Bellacoola NES

[423] [424] [425] [426] [427] [428] [429] [430] [431] [432] [433] [434] [435] [436] [437] [438] [439] [440] [441] [442] [443] [444] [445] [446]

owned that one is the largest number of traps possible at that weir. Those who have the rights to that weir are the members of the ancestral family with the names of those first users. At this point the logic of the Bella Coola fails to uphold the mythological persons. No salmon-weir has remained in existence since the beginning of time; then one broke, owners were sometimes infirm, and those who repaired the break became regarded as the rightful possessors. The system of ownership prevailing at the time of abandoning the weirs, was that individuals, not groups, had rights to certain sections of the weir which were salvable like other personal property. In most cases this right was connected with a name, marking the section of weir, which had to be duly validated by presents. In other cases, the intangible ownership was willed without any mark whatsoever.* Unless bequeathed in this way, disputes were frequent. Rights of this kind were never sold although an owner often loaned his sector for a night, or longer period, receiving goods in return, without forfeiting his ownership thereby. This was particularly common when the owner was planning to give a potlatch. No case was heard of in which the right to a certain section of salmon-weir was given to a non-member of the ancestral family. Theoretically, this was possible, but practically it would be so inconvenient that it is most unlikely ever to have occurred, since the Bella Coola is never such a slave to legal privileges that he fails to be guided by common sense.

Although individual ownership is thus recognized with regard to sections of salmon-weirs and suitable places for chicken-nets, the owner is loath to share his haul. When he catches a large number of fish, anyone, whether related to him or not, can demand some. He cannot refuse, since to do so would brand him as selfish. Ineffective check on this system

* Great difficulty was experienced in being about the distribution of rights to sections of salmon-weirs. The subject is confusing, and though every effort was made to verify and check the data, there may be further explanations which were not known.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

226 lies in public opinion which expresses contempt for a lazy man 626 who is constantly begging.

To anyone familiar with the definite social groupings of a 614 tribe divided into class or land-owning families, the ancestral family of the Bella Coola must appear as a vague and unreal unit, only distinguished by its intangibility. So it was found when investigating in the field. When information began to accumulate, it seemed as if there must be some definite obligations incumbent upon all members of the ancestral family, but none could be found. Without asking a direct question, the point was raised whether, if a man were killed, the members [629] of his ancestral family would unite to avenge him. Conversely, were they liable for the deeds of any member? In each case the reply was in the negative; these matters concern only the immediate family. In regulating marriage the ancestral family [582] is important, since it is wise for a man or woman to seek his mate within the members of that group, though it is not compulsory. Theoretically, the terms of kinship applied to mem- [601] bers of the immediate family may be extended to members of [178] the ancestral family, but in practice this is rarely the case, and, if so, is functionless. It might be argued that this somewhat wide application of kinship terms, verging on the classificatory usage, is a relic of an earlier, and now broken-down, clan system. It is impossible to prove or to deny such a connection. When trying to discover whether the members 614 of an ancestral family ever contributed to a potlatch whereby 622 one of their fellows established himself as a chief, the following 431 interesting comment was received. The previous winter the 171 informant had been in Bella Bella, and there the point was raised by a Bella Bella chief whom he quoted as follows:

"We laugh at you Bella Coola because each of you is always trying to be chief. Our system is much better; we all help our chiefs."

The man agreed with the Bella Bella man that there was an important difference between the practices of the two tribes.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NEA Bella coola NEA

507 796 Ignorant of his ancestral names, and lacking the means to validate them even if someone should tell them to him, owning no hunting grounds, the unfortunate infant is little better than a slave. This is almost unthinkable except in the extremely rare contingency of a child being left without relatives.

Although public opinion does not impel kindly treatment to orphans left without kindred, yet many Bella Coola have charitable dispositions and it is not unknown for a family to adopt and tend an infant without reason or hope of reward. One old man mentioned how his mother and a Chilkotin child had been born on the same day when a party of the latter had been encamped near Nacipalit. A few days later they left for the interior, abandoning the infant. The grandfather of the old man chanced to pass their camp while the ashes of their fire were still warm and found the baby, whom he brought back, to be a brother to his own daughter. His wife suckled the two, giving each a breast, and treating the foundling as her own. When the boy grew into manhood, he went back to his own people, but never forgot his adopted parents. Forty years later he visited Bella Coola, bringing with him his own wife and family. The old man who related this incident recalled the manner in which the Chilkotin had instructed his children to regard him as their brother.

507 [76] Children are not the only persons to be adopted. On the death of an adult his relatives may "adopt to replace" someone who has a striking facial resemblance to the deceased. Thus, some time after the death of his sister, a certain man was in Bella Bella and saw a Bella Bella woman who closely resembled her. He desired to adopt her, and since he was a man of importance, his wish was granted. To legalize the transaction he distributed valuable presents among the Bella Bella. A person so adopted does not usually change his abode, nor does he lose membership in his own family; instead, he becomes a member of two, with full rights to names and prerogatives in both, is addressed with the same kinship terms as if related by blood, and is likewise considered a member of the family as far as inherit rights are concerned

1:56:Dwrwth E-5 (1922-1924)948
NEA Bellacoola NEA

as far as incest rules are concerned. In this particular instance the woman did not show any interest in her new relatives, failed to visit them, or to take part in their ceremonies, so that the adoption, though still legal, has practically lapsed. When this man dies his children will not consider the claims of their father's "sister" to inherit any of his possessions, as they would have done if she had showed herself appreciative of her adoption.

It will thus be seen that the size and composition of the family vary according to the wealth and influence of the father. The duties of the members are difficult to define since they centers almost entirely the routine of life. The father, head of the family, directs the gathering of firewood, repair of the house, obtaining of food supplies, and other matters of the same sort. If he gives a potlatch his children must help him, which they do willingly since they gain from the ceremony. If a father is too autocratic, his elder, especially his married children, simply move away. Nor is his power over his younger children unbounded, since their mother's relatives take great interest in their welfare and would resent any ill-treatment.

If a person is killed or wounded, revenge is the affair of his family. Just how many individuals are involved depends on the composition of the family. In the case of the killing of a child, living with his parents alone, none but the father would feel it incumbent to retaliate. If an adult person is murdered, his or her brothers feel and avenge the insult. But should an important member of the community be slain, an old man surrounded by a numerous family, it is the affair of all. Every effort is made to slay the murderer, but if he should escape from the country, the injured group is satisfied by killing one of his family. Here again the same incest composition is found. A man's son, brother, or father are the only persons strictly liable, and even here the common sense of the Bella Coola outweighs their theoretical laws. A murderer's brother, living in another village, would not be held liable, but more distant relatives living with the offender and considered as his family are liable

Coola social organization, and of the absence of standardized obligations based upon specific relationships.

Slaves

Since a slave was* without status in the Bella Coola community, it is perhaps incorrect to include a description of slavery in a chapter on social organization; but as slaves lived in the Bella Coola villages, it seems reasonable to include them when dealing with the different units of the tribe. It was impossible to obtain an accurate estimate of their number in Bella Coola; slavery has been so long abandoned that the present natives could only hazard vague guesses. Judging from conversational remarks by elderly men, it seems probable that in the old days there was a considerable slave population in every Bella Coola village, comprising at times as much as thirty to forty per cent of the total population.

When a party raided a village most of the inhabitants were slain, but some, especially children, young adults, or famous chiefs were captured. As far as could be learned, once a captive had reached Bella Coola he was in little danger, since torture or systematic slaying after the heat of battle had subsided was not a Bella Coola characteristic. The leader of the expedition retained many of the captives as his own slaves, and distributed others among his followers. Anyone, chief or commoner, could own slaves in the same way that he could own any other type of goods.

Like any other commodity, slaves were bought and sold. The Bella Coola were usually so well provided with salmon that they were able to exchange dried fish with the members of other tribes for slaves. Lack of strong clubfoodship among the Bella Coola hindered their success in war, so their most of their slaves were obtained by trade. To the same category belong those obtained as prisoners or pallachies. If, however, a member of one of the tribes on the lower Fraser River was friends, a further cause for their preferential treatment. A Bulla Cuela who had been ordered and removed had to undergo a cleansing ceremony to remove the taint of slavery before he could take part in the ceremonies of the community. It was impossible to learn the details of this rite.

* One of the few slaves of the white man's civilization in British Columbia was the finding of all slaves. Consequently the past tense is used in this section.

A master had complete power over a slave, unaffected by the force of public opinion, since the effects of a slave, being without relatives, were of no consequence to anyone. Accordingly, the lot of a slave depended on the character of his master, and on his own ability and industry. An industrious slave was valued, such as one would not be traded or sold except through dire necessity, and in course of years he became, so far as actual treatment was concerned, one of the family. Many masters gave their slaves Bulla[illegible] dance perquisites, expending large sums for the purpose. In such a case the slave might become an influential member of the community, though the fact that he was not free was never forgotten. On the other hand, a master had not the slightest compunction about beating a lazy slave, and could kill him if he so desired. None of the present Bulla Cuela has heard of such a case. It was considered more sensible to sell or give away an unsatisfactory slave. It was accepted as a matter of course that a master should provide his slaves with food and clothing, since everything produced or obtained by one belonged to him. A slave-owner had full rights to his female slaves, and unquestionably exercised them. The only restrictions were the jealousy of his own wife, or wives, and the feeling that it was undignified for a free man to demean himself. It was impossible to learn with even approximate accuracy to what extent intercourse took place between masters and slaves. Probably not a great deal, though there was considerable freedom of relations between slave women and the young men of the community, unrestrained by the pride of chieftainship. When a slave had been faithful for a number of years of had become almost a member of the family, his master would try [illegible] privileges [illegible] were not [illegible] given.

1:McDowell E-1 0922-0924/968
JEA Bellacoola MSS

to arrange his marriage with some female slave; once this had taken place, the actual treatment meted out to him differed only slightly from that shown to a member of the family. In former times it would probably have been difficult for a stranger to tell married slaves from the members of the Bella Coola community until he had been long enough in the country to understand more than appeared on the surface. 567 562

Marriages between Bella Coola men and slave women were not infrequent, while like partnerships between slave men and even the daughters of chiefs were not unknown. In such cases the status of the children depended on the performance of ceremonies to wash from them the stain of their slave blood. While the mother was still pregnant her husband would call guests, not only from his own village, but from foreign villages as well. Presents were given, according to the wealth of the donor, often aided by his immediate family, to "wash the child." Such ceremonies would be repeated several times before birth, and again at that time. Bella Coola sentiment was that such presents gagged the neighbors; they knew of the dishonourable ancestry of the child, but the receipt of gifts on his account had wiped away the disgrace. Such a child was able to inherit prerogatives from his mother's old home, duly validated in Bella Coola by valuables, and by his own lavish presents he could silence those who remembered the blot on his ancestry. Similar procedure was carried out if a free woman married a slave. Unless her husband were already owned by one of her family, the woman's father or brother would arrange to purchase him. Then, aided by him, they would give the same type of presents to clear the children from the taint of slavery. If this were not done, the children had only the status of slaves, though, born and brought up in Bella Coola and associating from infancy with their master's children, they were virtually considered members of the group. 431 567 [428]

"Washing the child," during pregnancy and at birth, sufficed to cover the taint on its history, but in later years if such a person failed to continue to give ceremonies, people would again talk of his slave ancestry. So, too, for the child or grand- [554] [571]

[431] child of a mixed Bella Coola and slave marriage. As long as such as one maintained a position of importance in the community by the distribution of presents, nothing was said, but [527] if he should fail to do so, he could be, and frequently was, [578] insulted by having references made to his ancestry. In case [554] of dispute or rivalry it was always a temptation to refer to such a blot, but if he had stood for it with presents, references were considered improper. Unquestionably, memory of slave ancestry was forgotten in course of time if the line was influ- [539] ential, although recollections of the origins were always cur- [567] rent for at least two or three generations. At the present time the most influential woman in Bella Coola, the one who has given most presents, is the granddaughter of a Smith Inlet slave. This man had lived in Bella Coola for many years and had married another slave, by whom he had a son. This latter became the husband of an influential Stuo woman. When she became pregnant, her family secured the disposition of her husband, and gave many presents to "wash the child." One daughter was born to this couple, the woman just mentioned. Her mother's relatives were influential, and her father was [555] such an expert canoe-maker that he was able to win at honorable position for his daughter by presents of his handiwork. The woman, possessed of considerable ability herself, has been able to give many ceremonies and so reach a position of eminence. No one dares insult her by mentioning her ancestry, but everyone knows about it and if her children should fail to hold their position, they would be open to insult on this score. The woman has exhibited masks and myths derived both from her mother and father, without explaining how the Smith Inlet traditions came to Bella Coola.

The slave caste, as among the many other class gradations of which we [illegible] in Bella Coola was not particularly onerous, though it depended entirely on the will of their masters. Without status in the community, a slave could have been abused by a cruel owner, [169] though the public life of the village, where all lived and ate together, tended to break down the supposedly enforced differences of rank.

[illegible]

CHAPTER IV

RANK

Chieftainship—Secret Society—The Potlatch

Chieftainship

IN the previous chapter have been described the beliefs of the Bella Coola concerning the origin of names, and the attitude of pride with which they regard those embodied in ancestral myths, which carry with them primal prerogatives. But the unsystematic method by which ancestral names are inherited is sufficient to show that their possession, though valued for sentimental reasons, is not enough to make the owner a chief. On what, then, is Bella Coola chieftainship based? Expressed briefly, it depends on the number and value of presents distributed at any kind of ceremonial. To the Bella Coola, every rite, whether it be a marriage, the honoured of a name, a dance, a sign of funeral, or admission into a secret society, is a prerogative intimately associated with the myth by which the performance is authorized. Accordingly, the host is really displaying the glories of his ancestors before the eyes of guests present at the ceremony. To the Bella Coola it is unthinkable for such to be performed without the giving of presents to all; failure to do so would destroy the value of the prerogative. The potlatch is the ceremonial at which the most lavish generosity is displayed, but the principle of the acquisition of prestige by the giving of presents is the same for all other rites; the only difference is that at a potlatch a man is able to display his generosity to a larger number of recipients. In consequence, the aim of every ambitious man is to hold potlatches, since his status in the community circulates more on his ability in this respect. The ritual of a potlatch will be given in detail in the latter part of this chapter, but its complications will be intelligible only after a description of the broader principles of chieftainship. The first essential is to consider the principles of present-giving.

PRESENTS

Consider, for example, a man who wishes to take for himself one of his ancestral names, and at the same time to display certain features of his ancestral myth—a particular type of house, totem-pole, or dance used by one of his forefathers. He invites guests to his house, displays the feature of his myth, and must give a present to each to show the value of his prerogative and to demonstrate that he has not merely casually usurped the function in question. In giving a present of, for instance, $10, it is as if he said to the recipient:

"See! These are the glories of my ancestors of whom I am the descendant. I have a part in their fame. To make this valid I give you from my wealth a mere trifle, a matter of no consequence to me, who am so firmly established in the path of my ancestors."

The guest receives the money with mixed feelings. On the one hand he has received $10 as a "present." But if he wishes to observe his own position and his own prestige, together with that of his ancestors, it is incumbent on him to repay this sum with interest. Contrary to the practice among some other coastal tribes, there is no fixed rate of interest among the Bella Coola. An ambitious man who seeks to become a chief will strive to the utmost to pay back with heavy interest when he himself gives a ceremony so that his fame will be carried far and near. If he should repay only the principal, he would be regarded as having done all that was obligatory, but should he fail to do even so much, he would soon sink to a position of little consequence, no matter how lofty and distinguished his ancestral name might be.

In this respect there is a parallel between the Bella Coola and ourselves. A man invited to a dinner party is not compelled to return the compliment, but if, in the course of

b:Mc:Dwelth E-5 (1922-1924)948
NE5 Bellacoola NE5

554
556 *
622
[183]

ened by the age-long power of his ancestor. Finally, in old age a powerful chief is careless where he seats himself; his fame is so great that he can afford to disregard all conventions.

POWER OF CHIEFS

It will be seen from the foregoing that chieftainship among the Bella Coola does not depend on hereditary rank, still less on an elective principle, but on the individual's prestige as displayed, especially in his ability to acquire for himself a firm seat by the giving of presents. As he continues to do so his influence becomes ever greater. Consequently, it is impossible to state clearly what are the powers of a chief; such depend upon his prestige and influence. For a Bella Coola chief has no executive or judicial authority; what deference is shown to him depends on his success as a man, a factor which is constantly rising or falling.

The coming of the white man has enabled the Bella Coola to earn comparatively large sums of money by trapping and fishing. This in turn has enabled nearly everyone to give at least one potlatch, a very different state of affairs from that which prevailed in the last century when it required years of toil for a man to amass the necessary food and skins. Consequently, in many towns there were no men who had given potlatches, so that a man's prestige was estimated by the presents he had given at smaller ceremonies. Sometimes, moreover, a man preferred to increase his fame by giving rites of a different nature, such as kwiat dances, and the presents then distributed might elevate him in the eyes of the community, to a position above that of a man who had given a potlatch. This, however, was unusual.

[434]
[431]
[535]

After a fourth potlatch a man is accorded a position of eminence, and is termed a nemit chief. Nemit is an untranslatable word, with the significance of "passage," an allusion to the amount of goods which have passed through his hands. Jealous and vulgar-minded persons pun on the word, applying

[578]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

177 from the Bella Bella, a fact emphasized by all. It is not diff-424 cult to understand, therefore, why elaborate myths are lacking, even if such were possessed by the Bella Bella. The Bella
551 Coola possessed certain similar rites to which the Bella Bella
575 prerogatives were in the process of being grafted at the time [773] of the coming of the white man. There has since been general decay of ceremonial life, with the result that the whole situation is in a state of flux presenting great difficulties to the investigator.

428 Susook names are willed and inherited in the manner already described for other prerogatives. The type of dance, and the 551 time of use, will be described in the following section of this 575 chapter.

The Potlatch

*556 It is unfortunate that an adequate treatment of Rank 128 among the Bella Coola requires a description of the potlatch since this ceremony, or rather group of ceremonies, includes a number of features which, logically, should have been postponed until a later stage of this monograph. An effort has been made to lessen references to non-ritualistic features by the description, just given, of the basic concepts of chieftainship and the susook society. Other ideas will require rather lengthy digressions, a method of presentation which seems preferable to the use of many foot-notes, its only alternative.

General Observations

104 In scientific and popular writings alike, the term "pot-
*556 latch" has been applied both to the public giving of presents, [431] and to the rites at which this occurs. But among the Bella Coola, such distribution of gifts is necessary at every ceremonial; accordingly, each is essentially a potlatch. There is one, however, which the inhabitants regard as the most important of all, the goal which every ambitious man aims to reach, the rite in which his ancestral myth can be displayed. In this

He is especially rich in caribou-skins, used for foot covering, and goat-skins, so treasured for their wool.* He and his wife have laid up abundant food, and, most important of all, his wife's family is wealthy. Rumours have spread that X will soon give a potlatch and perhaps one or more foreign chiefs has given him a large cone-shaped whistle, such as is used in sacred ritual (see Plate vi). These whistles, called gano'o, are often referred to as the "breath" or "voice" of a chief; they are also called skqoxa, the "heart" or "wind" of a chief; a third designation is nuhwinuk. X carefully conceals a whistle in one of his boxes. Such a present expresses the kindly feeling existing between those akin to one another in that they have risen to a position of eminence above the common crowd. Its receipt spurs a man to greater efforts to amass the wealth necessary for giving a potlatch by keeping before his eyes the realization of what another has done. A rival chief never gives such a present. X returns each whistle secretly at the time of his potlatch.

Early in the autumn X decides that he has almost enough wealth. To complete the essential amount he will not hesitate to borrow from his friends. It is most unusual to be refused, for it is incumbent on X, unless he wishes to lose the esteem of the community, to repay his borrowings with heavy interest, and when X distributes his goods at his potlatch it will be announced how he has obtained them, and the lender is proclaimed as a person of sufficient wealth to be able to spare some of it. Goods so loaned are termed "belt goods," a reference to the manner in which a man fastens up his cape with a belt before setting to work. The assumption is that X will have to labour to repay his indebtedness. Failure to repay is a serious matter, and the lender would be justified in seizing a canoe or other valuable article as surety for his debt; in fact, feuds are commonly caused by unpaid debts. Men of business to a complicated figure such as a whale, and in this case an copper dancer among the guests is called upon to perform. It is announced that this is, "to make clear the road for the dead."

* Formerly, when goat-skin blankets were highly valued, goats were never shot for fear of the blood staining the wool. Instead, they were captured by dogs, and clubbed to death by women. For preservation, each skin was laid out on the floor and then cut into longitudinal strips, two, three, or four fingers wide.

After such masked figure has disappeared, the sound of whistling from without grows gradually weaker, as the supernatural returns whence it came. In solemn silence X takes a copper* which he has had in readiness, breaks it across his knee,* and throws it either into the fire or down on the ground in the exact that the figure has taken. Then the announcer calls out loudly:

"It is for his cross.. It has 'made bare for the dead.' Then he continues, speaking for X and using the first person:

"My heart is glad at seeing my father.* He death he returned back on the path of my family's ancestors and destroyed our ancient cross. He now lives in Waiwaik, whence he came to visit us and whither he has now gone back."

The significance of the throwing down of a copper is anciently unknown to the modern Bella Coola, although they still perform the ritual. In some vague way it is felt that "bare," which may imply nudity, has been provided for the deceased. The act thus appears in the light of an offering to the dead, but this sentiment is not clearly appreciated by the participants in the rite; the present has been made for, rather than to, the one being mourned.

The copper, now valueless, is picked up by any chief and given to a poor man.

After a short interval a number of youths begin to distribute presents provided by X, which have been placed in readiness. Gifts of equal value are given to all foreign male guests, while the women receive cow hair valuelle. These presents

---

*One of the plaques of native copper, such as were formerly known and sold and used as tokens of value by the coast tribes of British Columbia. This emblem, by the Bella Coola, will be described later in greater detail (i, p. 55).

*The breaking is sometimes omitted.

*Phrase in "For the dead man, now is bare of his cross."

*In whatever relative the deceased may have been.

are usually non-consumable, being regarded as "magic doors,"* and having, therefore, a ceremonial significance. They validate and mark the importance of the representation just displayed. They are spoken of as having been shaken off by the dancers as he departed to return to his home above.

If there are many cumil initiates concealed within the back-room, some of them may now be called upon to dance, but usually this is reserved for the following night. Unless some of those excluded are going to dance, food is distributed and all dispersed.

THE SECOND NIGHT

This is the day when presents are given and, with the previous, is the most important of the whole ceremonial. The following are its features.

Dawn to Day

(i) Distribution of much food, and sometimes of maize to the guests by successive presents, or by the destruction of valuables.

Dawn to Evening and Night

(ii) Dramatic representation of some object connected with Ñ's ancestral myth.

(iii) Distribution of presents by Ñ to recompense the craftsmen who have assisted in the potlatch.

(iv) Repayments by Ñ of gifts received at previous potlatches.

(v) Giving of presents by Ñ to some of his guests.

(vi) Distribution of presents to strengthen Ñ's men.

(vii) Distribution of presents to strengthen, or establish, ones for a number of young men.

(viii) Dancing of the cumil initiates.

(ix) Distribution of presents to recompense those who have assisted the cumil dances.

(x) Distribution of presents to validate the cumil dances and the names thereby acquired by the initiates.

---

*The Sale Code [illegible] that the Kwakiutl use to the [illegible] [illegible] example, there is a description of the totem-pole with a bull on the top, and beneath it an eagle's nest containing two fledgling nestmate which a grizzly bear is endeavoring to climb. This is the only known instance of a pole on which the different figures need to indicate relationship to one another. No explanation is offered beyond the statement that this was the form used by Ahbet in the beginning of time. Another totem-pole, used by one of the ancestral families of Kyah, consists of a simple shaft surmounted by a sphere. This represents a mountain which arose into that ancestral myth as supporting the sky.

As with all features embodied in ancestral myths, a chief can use his own discretion in cases where he has a choice of designs. A totem-pole with specific figures is a common gift from a chief to his son-in-law, and it is a mark of respect for the latter to use and validate this at the first opportunity, in preference to one belonging to his own ancestral family. Hence the pole erected on a potlatch may have no association with the ancestral name and myth of the donee. The underlying principle in all cases is that the value of the pole depends upon the quantity of gifts distributed in validation to erection. One case mentioned as instance in which he had become confused with regard to the proper design for the totem-pole connected with the ancestral myth, and had used one belonging to a second myth in association with a name from the first. Both were his property, the connection was duly validated, and the matter passed off without question. It is possible that the theory of totems which has followed the coming of the white men may have been partly responsible for this error, which was regarded as a convention simply, though not improper notwithstanding. It is clear that even when designs are remembered as portions of ancestral myths, they can be eliminated from them and validated as isolated objects in the same manner as totems and all other features of ancestral myths.

There often, the exact details of a pole are not included in the ancestral myth and a chief wishing to have one erected can possible, so that it serve as a visible and tangible memorandum of the deed the primary of its owner. By means of these marks, titles are passed from one individual to another without formal legislation to make, in fact, it is unlikely that the Bella Coola possess sufficient money to meet the sums represented by their coppers. 556* [456] [424]

Personal Prerogatives

The importance of prerogatives in the lives of the Bella Coola has already been noted in many connections. A man's status in his own tribe, his ancestral family has the prerogative of using that designation; a factor dance can be performed only by an individual with the necessary prerogative; specific crests with designs, in possession of land or animal or spouse, many house posts, or other objects is a right dependent upon an ancestral prerogative; so is also the area on which a man can hunt or fish. In concept colours all Bella Coola life. Not only is a man's commercial life based on this principle, but so is dispute his status as chief, and the economic success of his food supply. Prerogatives, even though it be the prerogative of a man, is always until validated by the distribution of presents. Much of a man's energy throughout life is expended on the exhibition and display of his prerogatives; most Bella Coola feuds originated by the infringement of one individual on another's rights. 424 556* [335] [776] [431] [427] [578]

In addition to the various types already mentioned, there are a number of professional prerogatives on which depend a man's livelihood. The ol hemlil approximates this class, although the Bella Coola consider it rather as a right operative only during ceremonials. Professional prerogatives rest on the belief that a man's ability as a hunter, wood-worker, and so forth does not owing his innate skill, but upon an inherited right which must be confirmed and validated by the distribution of presents. These can be given at any convenient time when the people have been called together, but, as it is to the man's advantage to have his right made known as widely 424 463 556*

[illegible] his relatives. This punishment is customary in cases of the upsetting of a canoe. Death is the penalty for throwing refuse into the river, particularly during the summer, and until the coming of the white man the River Guardian exacted it without hesitation.

THE PREROGATIVE OF WEARING A BRONZE DISC

[illegible] To the appearance of masked figures representing supernatural beings, whether in small or Dance dances, many of the women apparently attach a peculiar, high-pitched, droning cry which adds considerably to the weirdness and impressiveness of the occasion. Ability to do this depends on an ancestral prerogative duly confirmed by the distribution of presents. Many ancestral myths describe how some of the first women were given by Hamatsa, or acquired in other ways, the right to drone, and mention is made of the name used by each with respect to this prerogative. Unlike the one previously described, many of the first women possessed this privilege, which is accordingly common at the present time. A name of this type is usually conferred in girlhood, sometimes even in infancy, and being of relatively slight importance may be validated at a ceremony of less dignity than a potlatch. One of these names is Nanaqamtlidzaqa, which has reference to the blue-green shaft of some shellfish-shell brought from the sea by Raven in the beginning of time, as described in the ancestral myth in which this name is included. For many years there has been considerable laxity with regard to this prerogative, and women lacking it have even been urged to drone in order to add to the solemnity of the occasion and to increase the number of the uninitiated.

[illegible] There is another similar prerogative, enabling the incumbent to drone at mourning ceremonies. In the beginning of time, Raven of Kimsquit married Tlitsamilt, the daughter of a Bella Bella chief, who had this right. It has since been transmitted from one of her descendants to another at Kimsquit.

[illegible] ASSOCIATED WITH THE PUBLICUS [illegible] gain. Details of this prerogative were not obtainable, but it seems to follow the general type.

THE PREROGATIVE OF PICK-BERRY PICKER

All women can pick berries, but in every village there is at least one who has the prerogative of picking the first of every kind. The origin of this right is lost in dim antiquity, but, like all others, each first berry picker has a special professional name embodied in her ancestral myth which must be duly recited before she can function. One of these is Dirwanwah, another is Ka'ye. Though normally reserved for women, one of these names is occasionally given to a male child, in which case it is said to have been hermaphroditical. He can could then go pick berries until the legal picker has paraded up and down the sidewalk carrying on her back her picking basket decorated with a representation of the sun, an act which is believed to cause the berries.

"Get ready to pick red strawberries for whatever species is ripe tomorrow," she keeps calling out.

The berries may then be picked by anyone. This is repeated for every variety. So far as could be learn, there was no social mechanism to punish a woman who picked berries before the announcement of the official picker, although seems to have been so universal that infractions are said to have been unknown though formerly there may have been some penalty of which even the memory has disappeared.

THE PREROGATIVE OF WOMEN

The profession of matrix is another prerogative handed down from the distant past and requiring recitation before it can be used. As with other rights of this type, magical means are in many cases employed to make any young man brave and successful, but there are a number of matrices confirmed as such by the distribution of presents at the time of bestowal as there of professional names. At the present time, it is performance of rites of this kind. Our sociological and ethical concepts, shorn of their highest development in the schools, are not limited to a few weeks of the year, or to any class of the community. Generosity on a large scale can be publicly displayed by chosen alone, but to a lesser degree this virtue must be practised by everyone, since avarice is considered a major sin. Persons who happen to pass a house in which a meal is taking place must be invited to share it; to do otherwise would be considered rude. The person concerned must take at least a sip to show that he is not churlish and too proud to eat with his kind, while if he is hungry, he shows otherwise is being served as a matter of course. The head of the family should be the first to taste any food[1] as proof that it is not poisoned, but otherwise he farts little, if any, better than his guests. This custom is now rapidly falling into disuse through the construction of individual family houses with doors and locks. The fisherman who has exclusive rights to a suitable place for setting shelves or nets must give some of his catch to anyone who asks him. If he has landed four salmon, the first solution is given one, two corners, none at all. When a net is set in the river, anyone passing is allowed to take it and take some of the contents. If there are ten fish, he may remove one, if many, three or four. To take all would be a despicable theft, sufficient to brand the transgressor as greedy; hence public opinion prevents the system from being carried to excess. A hunter who brings back several mountain goats or other large game is expected to invite his neighbours to a feast, which virtually means that he must share his takings.

Presents of this kind increase the prestige of the donor who has thus acted in accordance with Bella Coola ethics, and are advantageous investments since others must reciprocate. The system is carried to such lengths that, until recent years, it was more profitable to give away goods than to sell them. In the case of a sale, the purchaser endeavours to give as little as possible, whereas the recipient of a gift secures as much as be rare. Several of the older people mentioned that early white traders would have received more for their goods by giving them away than by selling.

[1] This is a taboo practice, dating from the introduction of foreign food.

Even at the present time the Bulu Cards sometimes carry out a practice which was more common. Particularly in the early autumn or in spring, a chief who has large supplies of food may decide to show his wealth or the wealth of a neighboring tribe such as the Bulu Bulu. Then, or with a few friends, he goes to a foreign village where he is sure to find accommodation in the home of some friend, relative, or important chief. In the evening he invites the inhabitants of his host's village to the house in which he is staying, and now the food he has brought with him is provided them with an elaborate meal. His guests are full to overflow so then to repay his generosity, and one of them who the singers in honor of one of his songs, the Bulu Bulu equivalent to credit, craft, or even flatter. The other dances in it and then gives presents to the singers to validate the performance to his just estimate. This is repeated by everyone to whom he has given food, and although each present may be small, that said is greater than the original outlay. Sometimes a poor man, feeling himself too insignificant to give a ceremony of this kind, sells a supply of food to a foreign tribe to sell. If the host wish to show their generous dispositions they proceed him to give it away in the fashion just described, which always brings in more than he could obtain by sale. It is even customary for the hosts to feed such a stranger enough food for public distribution if the case such is too small.

Although the most important Bulu Cards dances are performed in preparation or during the harvest season, they are not confined to these periods. Professional singers do nothing else and, except during the use of salmon when everyone is busy fishing, is there never every few nights. Experienced beings are not called down, consequently there is little adversity and everyone has a good time. On these occasions, twelve songs are first heard, followed by credit and craft, and the remain

[illegible] children. They grow up in a open environment of the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] ing them by social interaction. Their care devolves chiefly [illegible] on the mother, although it is unusual the father will be [illegible] seen serving with the baby in a sling, while his wife heals another child. Nurses are unknown and the parents take their children with them on excursions. If it is necessary for a mother to be absent on her arduous toil, her child will be entrusted to a grandfather or other elderly relative. There are no evidences known the young people and their parents to lack [illegible]

[illegible] The obligation of gift-giving does not stop with the [illegible] marriage ceremony. Whenever, given a farmer dance or other [illegible] ceremony, Ti's relatives are expected to contribute. It is felt that the weight of the presentations made during the period of engagement and at the nuptial has become too heavy, and they down this all by lavish gifts. No count is kept of the value of gifts bestowed or received, though it is known that the family of the women fare frugally in the end. The father of many daughters is regarded as unfortunate individual, who is always poor and overtaxed through the necessity of providing for them. By so doing, however, he increases his own prestige, and the Bella Coo have the happy sentiment that such a man manages to a along some way; perhaps necessity comes his assistance. Assume Ti's relatives contribute to any ritual carried out Ti's father. If, for example, one of his wife's relatives dies, and his friends may wish to contribute towards the funeralpenses. In fact, any ceremonial serves as an excuse for larges by marriage to donate goods and thus demonstrate jointly their influence, importance, and generosity.

[illegible] The concept of mutual bit between families who have intermarried is one that lasts a generations. In 1900 there was in Bella Coola an old Tsimpsian man who had left home some forty years earlier and of whom lived in South Islet where he married and had a boy. On the death of his wife, this old man came back to Bella Coola with his son, a man about twenty-five years of age. During his absence all his relatives had died, and he was forgotten. He went to the house of a man with whom his ancestors had intermarried generations ago, explained who he was, and was welcomed. The old man and his son have since lived there, although it is doubtful if the owner of the house had ever heard of their existence, and the son cannot even speak the Bella Coola language.

X and Y themselves are not entirely overlooked in the exchange of presents between their two families. If Y's father is well pleased with his son-in-law he may show this not only publicly, which redounds to his own credit, but by the communication of secret lore such as a special number of rights for ceremonial chastity. Conversely, if Y should not be a favorite, his father-in-law often asks his father's permission to make his a member of their society. The women's father is naturally pleased and makes no objections, so she is initiated, using a name and prerogative embodied in her husband's family. Commonly too, they give her one of their ancestral names at any convenient ceremony later than the wedding. In consistency with the rules already explained, if Y should die children the names return to X's relatives, but if there are children they pass to them. It is said that could names can never be transferred in this manner.

Y's father and other relatives continue to take an interest in her ceremonial welfare and in her personal comfort. If Y leaves or otherwise abuses her, they reproach, and if her cruelty becomes unbearable they shelter their daughter when she runs away from her husband. If Y should murder Y, she would be avenged by her family. Only one instance of this was known, when the murderer avoided his pursuers by fleeing from the country. As a rule a wife is fairly well treated, though this depends on the character of the husband, the importance of her relatives, and the amount of goods expended to validate the marriage. Among slaves and persons of no influence, it is assumed that a husband may sell his wife as a ceremony, they can part at discretion without anyone being affected.

When a wife runs away and seeks refuge with another man, her husband sometimes tries to kill his rival, but frequently both families endeavour to heal the breach amicably. Some of her relatives, particularly those who played an influential part in the marriage, first ask the husband whether or not he is willing to take her back. If the answer is in the affirmative, they next try to persuade her to return. Every argument is used, in many cases combined with threats against her relatives, and the intermediaries often succeed. But she must never go back without presents, "to do with her the same that has covered the marriage." The husband invites all his fellow-villagers to his house to a ceremony which is said "to uncover the house [of conflict]." The singers are in attendance and sing in succession many Dorlit songs, followed by wadi songs, and to each the owner of the song dances, but since the supernatural beings are not present, the effect is of a non-sacred nature. The goods received from the family of the erring wife are distributed and the matter is at an end. Those who persuaded the wife to return are especially remarked.

If the faithless wife should refuse to return, or if she should bear a child to her lover, reconciliation is not possible. There is a tendency on the woman's relatives to return to the husband as much goods as he has expended, with additions if they wish to uphold their own reputation. If the husband is cheaply to blame, or if he is the deserting person, his wife's family are not required to return the gifts they have received. There is no judicial tribunal of any kind, the force of public opinion alone imposes restitution if the offender wishes to maintain his reputation in the community. Acting on this principle, the relatives of a deserted wife sometimes return to her husband's family the presents they have received, thereby demonstrating their solidity and at the same time shaming the offender.

Formerly there was an elaborate ceremony to dissolve the Marital and cases of rape were either unknown or very rare. The daughters of chiefs, too, were guarded with great care and any effort to seduce one of them would be punished by her father. The parents of a girl used to watch her carefully, and the opportunity for immorality was not given to the days when everyone seem to feel an uniform except on the occasion of a ceremonial dance. As one informant described it:

"The daughters of chiefs used to be looked after as if they were in house, clothed and guarded by their parents and relatives. No one would dream of molesting them. And a chief's daughter used to be proud and look after herself. Nowadays girls don't care, and everything has become degraded."[1]

If the daughter of a chief did dishonor herself, the parents had income to her, as one who was spoilt. It was always assumed that a girl of such was a virgin at marriage, and if it was discovered that she had been living an immoral life, her husband in many cases returned her to disgrace to her parents who, equally shamed, were expected to send back to him the goods he had expended for their daughter. Cases of crime were judged only from indirect information. If the daughter of a chief was found pregnant before marriage, she was almost ostracized by her family. No ceremonial marriage could be arranged for her, and the child could not be cleansed from the stigma of illegitimacy.

On the other hand, it appears certain that there was a good deal of intercourse in the old days between chiefs and slave women, as even between slaves and the daughters of chiefs. In the latter case the woman was often sent back by her father, even though they sometimes yielded to the inevitable and tried to hush away the disgrace with gifts. In the same time, public opinion was unfavorable to a man who connected with many women, as to a woman who showed herself to be at the disposal of many men. Any regular union of women with their slave women for the deliberate purpose of having children was unknown. A girl's consent was always necessary, given either personally or through an intermediary. Even a chief hesitated sing of time. The following speech was made by an elderly Bella Coola chief at the funeral of his great-granddaughter in June, 1900:

"Granddaughter![1] Go with your grandmother[2] to the mountain above Tsimsil where my first (patrilineal) ancestor came to earth. Go to the mountain across the river where Qa'l[3] descended; go to the earth where your ancestor found a copper house with a raven inside; go to the Dawn where another of your early ancestors found a whale; go to all the places where your forefathers experienced the incidents recorded in our myths; go and be happy.[4] If do not mourn these ever-recurring deaths in my family, for I am helpless. I hope that Christmas will come hunting us."[5]

Turning to the Chinese Indians who were present, the old man continued: "Thank you for coming here within two days to share our grief."

Turning back towards the grave, he went on:

"I have made ready the road for you.[6] Your grandfather[7] and I are grieved, our families become extinct when your parents married, and the land was removed by your birth. Now it is lost. When you were born, I rejoiced, now I am sorry. You are all right; you cannot fall because you are supported[8] by the names and fame of your father and mother, your grandfather and grandmother, your uncles and aunts, and your other ancestors who have passed away here to Qmoqs'a. You are with them in your own village where is located your power from the experiences of your forefathers,

[1] The term, literally, was used, although the child was only a great-granddaughter.

[2] The grandmother had been buried two days previously.

[3] One of the five sounds in myth-land's world.

[4] This phrase was possibly considered from the standpoint of the myths of the dead which relatives tell.

[5] The reference is equally significant to the speaker's own expectation (with a few days previously, when he had actually lost his child) and to the death of the child.

[6] The speaker's spirit's journey.

[7] Supposedly, a male being the head of physical ancestry. The relationship of the two grandfathers [illegible] to [illegible] the [illegible] of the [illegible] to [illegible] the [illegible] of the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

and recompense to funeral mourners is usually delayed until that time. Such was often was even in former years, although poor people used to call their fellow-villagers together for the express purpose of publicly rewarding those who had helped to bury one of their relatives. It is probable that a ceremony of this kind was of a simple type. Another expedient is, and was, to give gifts to the grave-diggers and others at any convenient ceremony, such as a non-sacred round dance. As repeatedly mentioned, when the people have been called together for a ceremony, advantage is often taken of the gathering to settle debts or to perform rites of an entirely different nature. It is probable that the summoning of guests solely to witness the payment of helpers was always unusual; at present it never occurs. On those occasions when a body was buried in secret after the carrying away of a dummy figure by the crowd, the goods of the deceased were deposited as usual in the cemetery. Those who carried them were the men who had performed the secret interment, and when publicly recompensed for taking articles to the grave it was possible to increase the value of the gifts as reward for the hidden rite without exposing the subterfuge.

Another type of ceremonial taking place after a funeral is the cleansing from the contamination of death of near relatives of the deceased, and of those who have handled the corpse. If spring salmon or sturgeon are running, pall-bearers must not go near the river for ten days, or twenty according to some informants, after taking a body to the grave. They have become tainted with ceremonial uncleanness which, if brought to the river bank, would poison the salmon. Unwillingness to become affected in this way led, on at least one occasion, to an elderly, friendless dame being carried out to the cemetery by some old women who covered him with boards. The rule on grave-diggers cannot be removed, but automatically lapses after ten days.

The individual in greatest danger is the husband or wife whose consort has passed away. It is believed that [illegible]

The making of the masks is allowed to different kakaxtas, usually in accordance with the dancer's wishes, although a mandel normally gives out the actual masks. The dancer, or one of his relatives, bestows presents on each person to whom work is allotted. The evening of nuxnalkiya is called mulimulum.

The third day is gulum. Those to whom work nothing has been entrusted assemble early in the dancer's house to start their work. About noon they are provided with a meal, to which other kakaxtas may be invited. By late afternoon, when most of the work has been accomplished, the ships are carefully swept up and burnt, and the house tidied, ready for the uninvited who will be invited during the evening. On either this day or the one preceding, a platform, with raised sides, is built behind the fire on which the dancer can conceal himself and where he is supposed to remain during the remainder of the four days. About dusk the kakaxtas are called in; the singers take their places behind the fire, Cannibals, Swallows, and Scratchers are in one of the back corners, where a matting enclosure may have been constructed for them, and the ordinary group themselves without distinction around the walls. In Kimsquit, though not in Bella Coola, one or more of the masks may be displayed, suspended from a dipping pole behind the fire. If the singers think it necessary, they may practise the dancer's two songs once more. Then the uninvited are called in, taking their places near the doorway. The singers beat out one of the dancer's songs and he dances to time to it, and the same is repeated for his second song. After some delay, which appears to be one of the requisites of every kaxtas performance, the singers strike up the songs of either a novice or a kaxtas, especially one who has already had a call during the ceremonial season, and the one thus summoned dances to his two songs. Late in the season, when many kakaxtas have performed, only one song may be used, to prevent the ceremony dragging out to an interminable length, and songs of previous years are omitted. In any case, the ritual lasts for most of the night. When all have danced, the perform several ancient rites through a desire to "show off" before someone who was ignorant. In recent years there has been a tendency to concentrate on hactai ceremonials, and to judge a man's worth by his invitations to them, but this is only a modern development due to the prohibition of the potlatch. Nevertheless, even in former times some individuals preferred to invite foreign guests to hactai dances and to give them valuable gifts rather than to save them for potlatches; such a ceremony is called a tahactaiak. Whenever strangers are present at a hactai dance they receive small pieces of dried cedar-bark as proof of the friendly intentions of the host. The general consensus of Bella Coola opinion is that it is foolish for a man to concentrate on hactai performances, particularly if he impoverish himself to the detriment of potlatches.

Although foreign guests are seldom invited to hactai rites, a dancer frequently calls in his fellows from adjacent villages. But as the ceremonial season is simultaneous in the different settlements, with almost nightly performances, it is often impossible to avoid conflict in dates. Which invitation shall have preference is decided in the following manner:

During the days of gulus and tahactai the dancer sends a herald of powerful physique to invite guests from as many villages as he wishes. Simultaneously, a messenger may be approaching from the opposite direction with a similar invitation. Each envoy watches carefully around each bend in the path for his rival, and whichever can first call out his message is entitled to continue to give his invitation in the village of the surviving herald. It is considered exceedingly bad form to decline a summons, so the ceremony to which the defeated herald was bearing an invitation must be postponed. Sometimes the two messengers sight one another simultaneously, and the relative priority of their messages is then decided by a contest of strength. The rivals stand in the path, shoulder to shoulder, arms close to their sides, and shove with all their strength, the winner being the one who can force his opponent to move his feet. This last means of deciding is used exclu-

[The Dance of Nuxalkmim]

any omitted from their path. The kukwiut also call hoip 575* repeatedly, a further deterrent to the inquisitive. Alder and 746* birch trees are selected and the beavers start to work. When 532 ever a tree falls, one of the party calls out: [784]

Ewe [313]

This meaningless ejaculation, spoken as if by X, has the [719] virtue of causing the tree to fall gently. The logs are cut into sections and as many provided as will be needed, since it is contrary to kwiut custom for more than one trip to be made for wood. Towards dusk the curtain rises, each carrying a [882] burden by means of a tumpline across the forehead. The wood is laid softly on the floor, for it would be a great insult to throw it down roughly. Meanwhile heralds are summoning [203]* the kukwiut with a call of:

Nuxwalkmim kukwiut.

X has long since consulted his relatives on the one hand and the marshals on the other, concerning the number of masks to be used, and the beings to be portrayed. A mask of Kwiklamkum is prepared for every kwiut dance, but with this exception there is no uniformity in the representations. A man always shows his person, as well as any beings intimately connected with him. Thus X must have a mask of Nuikymm, many of his passengers, and the supernatural beings who meet him at the mouth of the river. A present must be given to [431]* the carver of every mask, hence their actual number depends [465] upon the expenditure X and his relatives are willing to make.

At dusk the kukwiut are summoned by the heralds. X is [203]* with the marshals behind the fire and he heeds their advice as to the best carpenter for any special mask. When all have assembled X holds up one of the blocks of wood, calls on one of the kukwiut by name and says:

"For Nuikymm," or whatever may be the figure required.

As the carpenter comes forward to take the billet the [203]*
heralds call out: [719]

"Pay attention to him," and as the carpenter takes the wood, X calls out at the top of his voice, ewe.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

This ejaculation is supposed to make the work of manufacture less difficult. The same procedure is repeated with every mask ordered, except that if the being to be represented is a woman, X's ejaculation is i ·····. Any kusiut can make a mask, but the preference is always given to a man who has shown ability in previous tasks. The carpenters endeavour to follow well-recognized designs for many representations, but a great deal of latitude is allowed, and a workman receives greater praise and fame for turning out a fine and distinctive piece of new design, than for rigid adherence to a former type. This, combined with the burning of masks and consequent loss of permanent patterns, is responsible for the variability in Bella Coola forms, and the difficulty which they themselves experience in recognizing portrayed beings.

As soon as all the carpentry has been allotted, the singers strike up one of X's eight songs. Whether or not he dances to them is a matter about which there is a difference of opinion among informants. In any case the re-singing on nuxiutâlsap is purely for rehearsal, made necessary by the large number of songs. Later on in the kusiut season, the songs of other dancers may be practised on this night, and if the owners wish to practice their steps, it is quite proper for them to do so. Finally, a meal is distributed, while the marshals discourse in the usual way. Feasts are features of all kusiut dances, and the food distributed is regarded as a free-will gift, without thought of repayment. After eating, the kukusiut disperse; X must sleep within his own house, but no longer remains within his platform-enclosure.

The next day, the twenty-sixth of the ceremony, is qoltm. Early in the morning a herald summons to X's house, where the blocks have been left, all those to whom work has been assigned. All morning they carve diligently. The speed with which masks are completed is surprising, although this has undoubtedly increased since the introduction of metal tools. In the middle of the day a few kukusiut men, no women, are invited to share "the carpenters' meal," as the food provided

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*575 shals tells a herald to call them in; they enter joyfully, though
*796 somewhat fearfully, and stand or crouch on either side of the doorway. In Kimsquit they gaze on the masks, wondering *[203] what they are. The singers strike up the first of X's songs and he dances, while singers and kukusiut men sing the words and *575 the women drone. To the uninitiated it appears most impres-
*796 sive and desirable, while even the prosaic white man can hardly remain indifferent. At intervals a whistle, which the 533 uninitiated believe to be the voice of the call, sounds eerily from beneath the armpit of a reliable kusiut. After a short interval, X's second song is sung, and so in succession the eight. Then the singers strike up any well-remembered tune, perhaps one used last year, and the owner dances. This is repeated for eight or ten songs. At later qotlim, every kusiut who has had a call during the season must dance; the ceremony tends, therefore, to become longer and longer as time goes on, although the singing of the songs of a previous year is omitted. When enough performers have danced, a shaman's song is often sung and the owner dances "to clear the house." At this point the *575 uninitiated spectators are told to withdraw. Then a meal is *796 served to the sisaok who, as members of a similar organization, [301] are honoured guests and have been seated together in a corner,
[237] resplendent in their weasel-skin ornaments. After their departure, the kukusiut eat more leisurely, while one marshal [431] after another advises them as to their conduct. Then presents of comparatively small value are distributed. The marshals would consider it unbecoming for X to provide over-laviahly.
[465] The first gifts are to the singers, the next to the makers of the masks. Though these presents are, in essence, pay, they are never thought of in that light; X is under obligations, X has cleared himself of those obligations, is the Bella Coola attitude. When all is over, X once more dances to one of his softly sung songs. Then one of the marshals calls out to open the door and the guests disperse, except the novices who sleep in X's house.

[The Cannibal Dance]

X, now almost sane, rushes around the house, shouting cuse, cuse, cuse, while his call sounds loudly, as the whistle is pressed firmly beneath his armpit or against his stomach, tied under a belt. Often the kukuxiut slip a rope over his shoulders to prevent him escaping again. Finally, he rushes from the house and all the kukuxiut crowd close about him on the sidewalk without. As many as possible press upwards against his body with their hands, while they shout, ye —, trying to expel the call upwards. On the fourth repetition it is supposed to have been driven forth, and in answer to the tumultuous shout of the kukuxiut, there is heard the sound of a whistle from above. The uninitiated do not know that a kuxiut has been dispatched with one to a mountain peak for this purpose.

The kukuxiut now return to X's house for a meal. The first dish of food is placed before X himself, while one of the marshals addresses him and the audience in the following strain:

Yikmandjinamc, ckiowa ki! Ilaxis di pacatlat Greetings, comrades! Hail to the dreaded one [the Cannibal]!*
*Wai, pacatlat Nuxim. Nuqkimicikdudaqa.
More, dreaded one, Nuxim.* Eat to repletion.

There is no ritual significance attached to any particular words; marshals use their own discretion as to what they say, but the above may be considered a fair example of the kind of remarks addressed to a Cannibal at his first meal. After X has started eating, the other kukuxiut commence and the marshals deliver their usual admonitions, praising X for what he has done and urging others to emulate his example. Then presents are distributed to those who have been bitten. It is considered that a Cannibal compliments a man by taking a piece of his flesh, and that he is under obligations to the one bitten for the latter having allowed him to exercise his preroga-

*Pacatlat means "The Dreaded One" or "The Fearless One." X is so called on account of the uncanny cannibalistic incubus that has taken possession of him.
*This is the vocative form of the word.
*Nuxim was the name of the performing Cannibal on the occasion that this speech was recorded.

tion. Hence compensation must be given. Payment for wounds inflicted is really parallel to payments to witnesses of any other ceremonies; without their assistance X would not have been able to display his right. Long ago Cannibals are said to have had teeth of such sharpness that they were able to take pieces from the bodies of their victims with ease and quickness. In more recent years, it has been customary for a person about to be bitten to cut himself with a knife so that, when the Cannibal seizes him, a simple nicking at the chosen part will bring forth blood. In view of the honour attached to being bitten, no person to whom such a proposal is made would think of refusing. As previously mentioned, Cannibals do not bite other Cannibals, Scratchers, Breakers, or those whose patrons are ghosts, otherwise their victims may comprise any Indecint.* Presents received by those bitten are called "Bandages." At the time of such payment gifts are usually given to all Indecint, with additional compensation for the sufferers.

Now that X has eaten ordinary food it is supposed that he is again normal, although special precautions must be taken for the rest of the winter since he is subject to recurring fits of frenzy. Consequently, he is never allowed to be alone, but is always followed by a number of Indecint whose function appears to the uninitiated to be to guard them from the Cannibal. The sight of strangers suffices to rouse him, so that when a canoe from Tâl-is or Kimsquit approaches, a herald bids the uninitiated conceal themselves. On their arrival X rushes to the beach, apparently in spite of his guardians' restraint, and honours several of the strangers by biting them, as he did before he was able to eat ordinary food. On such occasions he then visits every house, attended by his escort, before returning to his own. Inside each dwelling he growls, cries out xwa, xwa, xwa, and sometimes shakes or tears off the plashing around the walls, much to the terror of the uninitiated who cower in their blankets, afraid to peer out lest they be bitten. If X should step upon a loose board on any of these rounds of the village, either before or after the expulsion of his cannibalistic brothers, he is partially deprived of the power of movement. He can only stand up and down, marking time on the swaying plank, until repeated cries of hoip have finally startled him so that he can proceed. Sometimes the stomach of a seal must be shown him before he can leave the spot. Although no one knows why this should so affect Cannibals, an sight of it he rushes forth immediately.

*Every effort is made to convince the uninitiated of the accuracy of the wounds inflicted. For example, if a Indecint woman is suffering from some malady of the breast which requires an operation, a Cannibal bites her there and non-members are told that the incision, made about the same time, was caused by his teeth.

That evening the herald summons the kakwitsa and the strangers to X's house. His songs are sung, whereupon X becomes excited and must be cured by the beating of sticks and the four times repeated hoip before he can be induced to sit down. Food is then distributed, while a ceremonial speech, and presents are given to the house strangers, provided by X or one of his relatives. Such gifts are often of trifling value but the recipients must never show that they think so.

For the remainder of the ceremonial season X goes to all dances under the guardianship of a number of kakwitsa. His apparent wildness and ferocity overawes the uninitiated and helps to convince them of the force of the rites. Sometimes in sheer bravado and with an overweening desire to terrorize, X's guardians will cry out that he has become excited; the uninitiated hastily hide and the Cannibal rushes from house to house, ripping off boards and acting as if demented. If friction should arise at some ceremony when only members are present, X often plays a prominent part. For example, in one dance the kakwitsa rush around the fire, guided by a rope; sometimes a mischievous man will double it so that the participants are thrown violently against each other. Everyone is excited by the noise of the beating sticks, and the growling of the Cannibals, so that loss of temper is not uncommon. But if X rushes out of the door, the necessity of maintaining his prestige with the uninitiated overrules every other considerathrough the village commencing often has taken place. Meanwhile X, maddened by the taste of blood, dashes from the house, closely guarded by a number of Initiates. Growling, he enters the lowest house of the village and, to the uninitiated there, it appears as if the memory of his questions is all that prevents the biting demon from breaking loose among them. This is repeated at every house in the village, and then X comes to that in which galas is taking place, where he is guided to his usual corner and a bowl of water thrown cold water over him. Any more bowls, often one after a dancer, calls to these powers to leave him, and the frenzied orchestra of sticks sounds forth. X remains quiet and more water is thrown over him. This pounding of sticks is four times repeated, and after each more water is thrown over the Cannibal, until at last his temporary fit of frenzy is stilled. Then the Initiates are to comfort and leave. It must be remembered that the uninitiated hear the beating of sticks from adjacent houses, and their awe is perhaps increased by the fact that they cannot actually see what is taking place.

[The Cannibal Dance]

This inability to endure here throughout the ceremonial season, effectively suppressing any nonsense uninitiated, and at the same time serving as a bond of union among the Initiate themselves, who must sink individual differences of opinion in face of the absolute necessity of upholding X's prestige. A Cannibal novice can likewise become frenzied at any time during the summer following his initiation.

The Cannibal dance entails a considerable amount of physical and mental effort, while if X bites many individuals, as he likes to do as a means of demonstrating his prerogative, he is forced to expend a considerable amount of goods as "Bordages." These two factors often deter a man from performing this dance. A Cannibal who has just been initiated as a dancer at once begins to bite, and is carried away to the upper regions. He is required, moreover, to give his ceremony the following winter, like any other novice. During the summer he generally remains hidden within his house, and when he goes his song, which they now proceed to sing as though they had obtained it from X in his vestige; they have, of course, composed it themselves in advance. The words describe the appearance of X in the regions aloft. When the song has been practised, food, and later presents as "bandages" for the wounds, are distributed. Other gifts are often given to everyone, irrespective of whether or not the recipient has been bitten. A meal functions as usual; then the people disperse.

[The Cannibal Dance]

Presently as night falls and the people are preparing for sleep X goes outside with a number of kukusiut followers. On the sidewalk the singers, a number of kukusiut women, and men with drums have assembled. X begins his high pitched call of ewe, ewe, ewe, as if longing for meat; the whistle sounds at intervals and the singers begin their song with the women joining in. When the melody has ended, the party move to a position outside another house where the same ceremony is repeated. X suddenly becomes frenzied, rushes madly from place to place, his ewe, ewe, ewe resounds, and he dashes into a dwelling, growling ferociously. The musicians pay no attention to his actions, but complete their singing of the same song outside every house. When this has been finished, the kukusiut gather in X's home to make him sufficiently heavy so that he can lie down. This is done by calling upon those individuals who have the prerogative of using the crystals at initiation. They come forward and, with wild gyrations, extract them from their stomachs and insert them into X's body through his ears, thus partially deafening him so that he can relax. The people disperse when this has been accomplished. As usual, the heralds have informed those living in the other houses of what has been taking place.

The next morning the kukusiut construct a strong platform behind the fire on which X is supposed to rest for the next four days. In practice he can do almost anything he likes, provided that he is not seen by the uninitiated. The crystals pressed into his ears deafen him to small noises, but if he hears people talking loudly together, he at once becomes excited and rushes forth, followed by a number of kakaciai who remain constantly in attendance on him. 575* 796*

[The Cannibal Dance]

X enters the lowest house and sits down near the door, on leaves, with the weight of the crystals, to proceed further. He growls persistently, while the kakaciai women present dance monotonously, and those who have accompanied him utter their cry of hoip. These measures at last provoke the Cannibal to move, but only to the next house, where the same procedure is repeated, and so for each in the village. The uninitiated peer curiously and fearfully from their bedrooms, but would never dream of joining in the cry of hoip. If X should be asleep or otherwise engaged when the voices are heard, some of his assistants awaken him and send him forth. The arrival of strangers also excites X. One of his followers tells him of their coming and when a canoe reaches the river, he runs down into the water and bites as many of the newcomers as he desires. The herald, watching the approach of the strangers and knowing what will happen, cries out to the uninitiated to conceal themselves prior to X's appearance. The guests proceed to the dwelling of their host, but that evening the Cannibal's father, or whoever acts for him, calls them to his house where he gives them presents to validate the biting. If foreigners have been expected, gifts are always saved for them from the previous distribution. The value of the present depends in part on the rank of the recipient, but more upon the feeling of like or dislike with which X's father regards him. A chief naturally receives more than a person of lower rank, although these donations are not returned. 575* 796* 431 [609] [554]

On the morning of the fifth day of X's retirement, some of the kakaciai collect chamber-pots and towards noon he is immersed in the river in the manner previously described. Then he goes through the village four times, on each round visiting every house. The uninitiated are told that the washing has caused his call to depart, and the whistle is heard no more.* 575* 796*

Towards dusk all the kakaciai assemble in X's house. He

*The dummed of the call at this time may not be the correct procedure.

[The Scratch Dance]

[illegible] THE BELLA COOLA INDIANS

and the lunatic long rolling all to be attractive. The chorus for every Scratch's song consists of the supposedly meaning-less words, 'wi, wi', as if a child were crying. It would then the same refrain is used for Scratch dances by every second villa-After this practice the singers chant forth X's song more loudly, the audience joins in, and he dances. The Scratch dance differs from all other Sacrat ones in that there are no fixed movements, with the exception of keeping time to the beating of sticks with the feet. The dancer sometimes bends down and forward, with arms closely pressed between his legs, or he bends back with arms thrown upwards; to and fro and back and forth he goes with high steps or short mincing steps, with leaps or jumps, his arms waving like the arms of a windmill. The best Scratch dancer is the one who can put most action and originality into his movements. The weird effect is increased by moving the facial muscles to cause strange grimaces. Four Sakaciat, two before and two behind, accompany X. At intervals he becomes excited and seizes his own hair as if in internal agony, whereupon his guardians press the back of his neck and call hoij to soothe him. His dance completed, he sits down, and no other performers follow him. The presents provided by X and his relatives are then distributed, those scratched and the song makers being the chief recipients, although everyone receives something. Then there is the usual meal, accompanied by admonitions from the marshals, followed by X dancing once more to his song.

Unlike most Sacrat ceremonials, this does not complete the night's rites. Accompanied by a number of Sakaciat, X visits every house in the village, and dances around the fire with wildly waving arms while the whistle sounds easily. Since the musicians do not beat time, his dance is without rhythmic qualities, otherwise it follows the lack of pattern just described. When he is brought back to his own house, the frenzied beating of sticks is twice repeated to soothe him, and water is thrown over him. Thus pacified, X goes to sleep and the Sakaciat quietly disperse.

the house to serve as targets, and stones as ammunition. As soon as the call comes, X (who can begin to throw stones at these objects, and the uninitiated are at once repelled). X is usually led, closely guarded, to every house where he can [illegible] more cubits, and may break a number of utensils. Since it is well known that, under normal circumstances, he may never throw a stone, the uninitiated are convinced that he must indeed be possessed by a strange power. This being [illegible], the Bakwiri gather in X's house during the evening to learn and practice one, or sometimes two, songs for him. If X is a [illegible], the dance is of his invention and the accident which originated the dance; on here occasions it is of his person and the land above. All Breakers do not have Sindikwedi Ilyamba as patron; some have Ondikindi, a supernatural being who causes wealth to rise up and come to him. The chorus is the same as for Screechers, the meaningless words, 'eri, 'eri. It is said that this same refrain is used by the Breakers of all coastal tribes, so that their songs can be distinguished from those of Screechers only by the words. With the food, presents are given to recompense those on whom X has displayed his prerogative, that is, those whose utensils have been broken. Sometimes canoes and other valuable objects are destroyed by Breakers, depending entirely on their desire to exhibit their rights.

Next morning, naturalmente, X again becomes frenzied and rushes from house to house, destroying property. Of course this is later paid for, but the uninitiated have no idea that arrangements had been made for the boxes and other objects to be placed in suitable spots. During the day a number of Bakwiri are sent to collect wood for nine masks. When members of the society gather in the evening the songs are practised, and the making of the masks allowed. One of these is of Sindikwedi Ilyamba, four are of Breakers in the land above,* four of supernatural beings who sing there for the supernatural Breakers, and one of the inevitable Ekiri.

*The relations of these Breakers to the patron is not clear.

[illegible]

[illegible] with them that he wants a mask made to represent his own face. The purpose for which it is to destined is not mentioned, although there is no reason why the workmen, all of them believers, should not know, as they actually do. X teaches his face a wife, making it easier to depict, and he does so model for the carpenters, who at once start detailing masks. Each works independently, and usually finishes one, or even two or three, in a day. Five or six carpenters are labouring simultaneously, and when the first group of masks has been finished, the mandarin, and perhaps one or more influential chiefs as well, come to inspect the handiwork. The masks are laid out in a glade of the forest and the mandarin make their criticisms.

"No. The nose is too long," they say of one mask, or,

"The cheeks are too full," with regard to another.

It is seldom that one of the first group of completed masks meets with their approval, but the next morning the carpenters try once more, with X again lying down as model. In the evening the mandarin again examine the masks. Hundreds (probably an exaggeration) are often made before one is found which satisfies every requirement, and if the carpenters fail to produce a realistic portrait, the ceremonies be carried out. The unsuccessful attempts are carefully hidden in the forest but they should be seen by an unmarried person. When Dr[illegible] was performed the rite, it was near the end of September before one of the carpenters succeeded in making a satisfactory model.

When the wooden representation has been completed, there is no further doubt about holding the ceremony, and one of the mandarin, acting for X, summons the singers and other influential Indians to the secret meeting place for a discussion of preliminaries.* At this conference X tells the carpenters what he proposes to give them as payment for the work they have done for him; the concept of "pay" is entirely lacking although it is an essential part of the transaction. The singers are told

*Several details that apply to all factions are left included which were inadvertently omitted by informants in describing the Smooth Cutting dance.

575*
796*
[831]

gation. When the dance has ended, X gives presents, first to each spectator, and then to those who are assisted him, starting with the singers. This is the last case of the evening and the Initiates disperse.

The dance of doing things in the seven order appears not only in sections, but in the order of the ceremonies. Those just described, although at the beginning of an era, resemble a culmination in many respects. Consequently it is not surprising that the seven nights to follow. The singers are the first to assemble and they compose a second song to X, with the same theme but different words and tune to the already prepared. Meanwhile the Initiates are gathering and when they have learnt the new song, the uninitiated are summoned. No enclosure has been built, and X is much in evidence. His body has been painted green with a preparation of green rubbed on [302] [292]
[533]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible

[The Octopus Dance]

[illegible] THE BELLA COOLA INDIANS

*575 Consulted begins to growl and soon the kukwiat are left alone
*796 in the house. The singers begin not a new song for X and the usual continues like that of any other kwakiutl. No description is needed for the ceremonial that occurs on everything and gallon.

On the evening of rubrum the uninitiated are summoned in due course. The exact number of masked figures shown could not be known, but among them is always an octopus.
[532] The rite concludes in the usual manner.

The presents given in connection with the Octopus dance are more valuable than those bestowed at most kwakiutl crests, [431] accordingly none but wealthy people are able to carry it out. [534] The heralds especially are always beneficiaries.

THE DANCE OF THE DARK-SHADE

*575 One of the most peculiar and irregular of kwakiutl dances is *796 that performed by a certain Kilpem, whom it will be convenient to call X. His patron is the supernatural woman Sagwaxlaxtwi, Dark-Shade, whose home is beneath the thick evergreens of the river valleys, thus explaining the darkness and shadows found in such places. X's repository is beneath some large cedars near the northern side of the Bella Coola valley, a few hundred yards above the end of the fiord; it is probable that other dancers with the same patron have repositories in other dark and gloomy spots.

When X wishes to dance he must as usual obtain consent from the marshals who insist that he delay his performance until after the solstice at earliest. The reason is because his patron, Dark-Shade, alone of all supernatural beings, has the power to open every repository; X brings her to the village and in consequence calls come to many kukwiat,[illegible] which would be undesirable during the first few weeks of the season. On the evening of the day selected for the beginning of the dance, X steals away from the village with three or four kukwiat, [illegible]The implication in this case is that calls come from repositories, not from the land above, the customary source.

[The Dance of Dance]

[575] [776] [777] [533] what they do. With them comes the being Ontlatamen, "The Sleeper," wearing a mask to represent a drowsy man who constantly covers and rubs his eyes. It is explained that this being delights in sleep and does not care if the sun never rises.

THE DANCE OF THE GREEDY ONE

Nuxnilkinatem, also called Tatsuoi, is a greedy person who spends his time going from one supernatural being to another in the land above, always begging for food. He is patron for several kukuxiut and on the nuhuam of one of his protégés a masked figure representing the Greedy One visits every house in the village asking for food. The ministered women to the hall-room, but the kukuxiut comply with his request. In consequence the dancer's house is filled with food which is given away to the kukuxiut guests.

[532] [481]

THE DANCE OF THE REPOSITORY MAKER

[778] Some repositories were constructed in the beginning of time by the supernatural being, Nuxnadjinum, who is patron for several kukuxiut. On the nuhuam of one of his protégés a figure, masked to represent a male being, appears and Ano'kitsulaie explains that this is the maker of repositories. It is uncertain whether this being is found in Bella Coola or only in Kimsquit.

[535] [184]

THE DANCE OF Alquntám'S SLAVE

In the land above there lives a slave of Alquntám who spends his time providing fuel for the fires in Nuxpalewaite. He is patron for a Bella Coola kuxiut, though the details of his dance were not obtained.

THE DANCE OF Alquntám'S HERALD

Ojelikt Alquntám is patron for several kukuxiut. During the nuhuam of one of his protégés a masked figure representing him visits every house in the village, bidding the kukuxiut with such power that they killed one another in their performances. Consequently, they decided to dance only in the winter months, and merely to imitate the actions which had been previously carried out.

There are other traditions, probably with an historical basis, describing conflicts with the o'ult. The Bella Coola say that long, long ago there were not enough Kwakiutl names to go over that the old people to be admitted to the society, and that though members were regarded as having supernatural powers, yet the o'ult, confident in their numbers and strength, used frequently to assail the supremacy of the Kukwakiutl. On one occasion, when the latter had prepared an elaborate feast of smoked goat flesh for themselves, the o'ult collected their weapons and demanded a share of the feast. The Kukwakiutl, furiously angry, felt compelled to yield, though later they took revenge through the destruction wrought by many Cannibals and Sorcerers when dressed. It is said that even recently if the Kukwakiutl did not invite the o'ult to one of their dances, they were always careful to placate them by sending half of the food as a present.

Sometimes the o'ult, collectively, were bold enough to kill a Kwakiutl, particularly if something had gone amiss in a dance house. Or other motives might be strong enough to outweigh respect for a member of the society. On one occasion a chief, who was not a member of the society, was told that his wife, who was, had been in the habit of prowling off at night with a Cannibal. The jealous husband prepared his best spear and slew the Cannibal when next he entered his house during a frenzied rampage of the village. Kukwakiutl, both from that village and others in the vicinity, combined to cause the murderer's death with the aid of a member of the society who was a professional killer.

Success did not always come to the Kukwakiutl in quarrels between members of the two societies. Long ago, the o'ult were invited to a potlatch in a village in the upper Bella Coola valley. One of their own dances was taking place, but they

[illegible]

[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

(a) [illegible] [illegible]

(b) [illegible] [illegible]

(c) [illegible] [illegible]

(d) [illegible] [illegible]

(e) [illegible] [illegible]

(f) [illegible] [illegible]

(g) [illegible] [illegible]

(h) [illegible] [illegible]

(i) [illegible] [illegible]

(j) [illegible] [illegible]

(k) [illegible] [illegible]

(l) [illegible] [illegible]

(m) [illegible] [illegible]

(n) [illegible] [illegible]

(o) [illegible] [illegible]

(p) [illegible] [illegible]

(q) [illegible] [illegible]

(r) [illegible] [illegible]

(s) [illegible] [illegible]

(t) [illegible] [illegible]

(u) [illegible] [illegible]

(v) [illegible] [illegible]

(w) [illegible] [illegible]

(x) [illegible] [illegible]

(y) [illegible] [illegible]

(z) [illegible] [illegible]

(a) [illegible] [illegible]

(b) [illegible] [illegible]

(c) [illegible] [illegible]

(d) [illegible] [illegible]

(e) [illegible] [illegible]

(f) [illegible] [illegible]

(g) [illegible] [illegible]

(h) [illegible] [illegible]

(i) [illegible] [illegible]

(j) [illegible] [illegible]

(k) [illegible] [illegible]

(l) [illegible] [illegible]

(m) [illegible] [illegible]

(n) [illegible] [illegible]

(o) [illegible] [illegible]

(p) [illegible] [illegible]

(q) [illegible] [illegible]

(r) [illegible] [illegible]

(s) [illegible] [illegible]

(t) [illegible] [illegible]

(u) [illegible] [illegible]

(v) [illegible] [illegible]

(w) [illegible] [illegible]

(x) [illegible] [illegible]

(y) [illegible] [illegible]

(z) [illegible] [illegible]

Song of Akpalin of Kinnapit when [illegible] into the Kanak Rapids

[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

(illegible)

[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

(illegible)

C The third part has been forgotten.

(a) Recorded as song VII D 12a, National Museum of Canada, stages, Jim Pelland.

(b) The wording shows that the song was to be used at a potlatch.

(c) Meaning: Make use of in all directions.

[illegible] the reputation would not be increased by the manner of his death. He thought he would find out the [illegible], and until a decree of safe down was taken both the parties within that he another had been killed with nothing were doubly. They reached the settlement of friendly relations.

The Kitkatla had brought their own singers, who now began to have [illegible] Tsibasa to perform a ceremony. He was followed by several other chiefs, and then the strangers gave presents to influential Bella Coola on the most lavish scale. Paitsi likewise performed a ceremony, and bestowed gifts on the guests in return in, such were, of course, not reciprocable. A meal was then served, and after that Tsibasa made a speech of which the gist was that the Bella Coola had previously known the achievements of a warrior, they now learn his activities and bravery in risking his life, and that the name Tsibasa could never be forgotten, irrespective of his own [illegible].

Tsibasa left soon afterwards. It was somewhat difficult fully to comprehend his motive in thus risking his life. Undoubtedly his main object was to display his valour and disregard of danger. Moreover, it gave him an opportunity to impress these qualities upon the Bella Coola, and thus to exhibit his prowess actually within the enemy's camp, which must have been a source of tremendous gratification to him. The alleged motive, vague as telling a chief, may have been a contributory factor.

Although this visit was an invitation from Tsibasa that the Bella Coola could have no further fear of him, the suspicions of yesterday not be immediately allayed. In fact, an occasional skirmish will take place although Tsibasa himself refrained from fighting. A few years after his visit to Bella Coola, Paitsi prepared to give a potlatch to which he determined to invite the northern chief. Many of the Bella Coola doubted whether the Kitkatla warriors would respect the safe-conduct usually afforded to envoys, and no one was anxious to bear the invitation. At length six chiefs volunteered for the task and set out, though with many misgivings. They stopped en route at Bella Bella where a chief of that tribe, Omps, joined the party; he thought that he would have influence with the Kitkatla and might add prominence to the Bella Coola. Fearing to be seen by any small Kitkatla bands, the delegation travelled only by night until they could actually reach Tsibasa's village. As they paddled up, they indicated their mission by singing one of Paitsi's nuxk songs. On hearing this, Tsibasa asked one of his Bella Coola slaves whose song it might be, and when he answered that it was one of Paitsi's, Tsibasa despatched a chief, Kwinan, to invite the guests to his house. Omps was thankful when he saw this man approaching, since he felt that it heralded a friendly welcome. The party was conducted to Tsibasa's

[i.e. to the peace negotiations – ANALYST]

to their forefathers. Profound as these material changes have been, those of a psychological nature have been even more important. New worlds have been thrown open to them, stimulating ideas have been brought to their attention, and they have realized for the first time that the world is infinitely larger than they had imagined. Hand in hand with this extension of knowledge has gone disbelief in their own ancient lore. The white man, whose superiority and mechanical skill they admit, positively denies the actuality of their mythology, and laughs at the dramatic performances which were wont to fill the winter with engrossing interest. Such rites can flourish only in an attitude of profound belief; this has been so shaken that the dances continue listlessly, a mere shadow of a once living art. The young people were the first to embrace a scepticism that has rapidly grown into disbelief of the faith of their ancestors, and a half-concealed scorn for their elders, the upholders of the old customs. Worst of all, prohibition of the potlatch has made it impossible for a man to reach a position of social eminence. Moreover, since the holding of any type of ceremonial requires a distribution of gifts, formal gatherings of all kinds have become virtually impossible; even marriages have no longer the social support that formerly made them so lasting.

These cumulative blows would be enough to shake any civilization, and that of the Bella Coola has been entirely unable to adjust itself to the new conditions. The young people, having lost respect for their elders, are deprived of the advice and support essential to the continuity of culture. They ape the white man's dress; they want his mechanical devices, but have failed to assimilate them. For example, a gramophone in a Bella Coola house is an anachronism, while several similar articles spoil the old picture but do not provide a new one. Seeking to copy the new ways thrown open to them, they have achieved the outward show but not the substance, and in so doing have destroyed their own culture. In the old days they were ambitious to hold potlatches and willing to work steadily towards that goal; now, new desires have not kept pace with [illegible]: Supernatural being sent by Imsem-a to meet Nulqiyum.

1927

[illegible], "One Who Is a Guest": The term applied to a youth whose father, a chief, will certainly give a potlatch to enrollim on the path to social importance though he has not yet done so. Such a lad is served ceremoniously on empty boxes. [556]
[illegible]: Shaking-shell covered with sand by one of the first settlers in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: One of the first women to settle at Tal'a in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Word of uncertain meaning often appended to kumkum to complete term for the four night of a Bella Bella dance. [576]
[illegible], "A Dragging Arrow" (as one does with a heavy leg): The term applied to the transmission of a name from a wife to her husband either at marriage or later, when being superfeinned. [425] [553]
[illegible]: Toasted food of any kind. [262]
[illegible]: Ancestral name of a Bella Coola man. [252]
[illegible]: Performed, adjective.
[illegible]: Those who perform to assist marriage dances.
[illegible]: Kwakiutl name of a Bella Coola man.
[illegible]: One of the first men to settle at Tal'a in the beginning of time. [585]
[illegible], "Weapons of War": The term applied to the presents distributed by the groom and his relatives to the bride and her peers in assuming her house. [431]
[illegible]: Gifts given in return, more often beneficial, by the father of the future groom to the father of the future bride. [584] [illegible]: Marshal.
[illegible]: Immoral supernatural woman; synonym for Sainsainuk.
[illegible]: One of the men who came to earth at Mount Tsoxis in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Totem-pole erected by the first settlers at Sisaa in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Lying position with legs close together such as is maintained for four days by an adolescent girl, and also by a widow or a widower. [516]
[illegible]: Sacred song in fast time.
[illegible]: Rapid beating of time during which a dancer does not try to move his feet in rhythm with it. [533] [535]
[illegible]: Daughter of the first settlers at Sisiha in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Kwakiutl dancer whose disguise becomes apparent through an accident.
[illegible]: Synonym for [illegible]; one of the days of a potlatch, probably that following the appearance of a masked representation of the deceased. [556] [illegible]: 1—Night-time.
2—That part of a Cannibal dance when songs are prepared in the middle of the night.
[illegible]: Come, imperative singular.
[illegible]: 1—One of Imsem-a's sons in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first women to settle at Nuwulir in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Central seat behind the fire.
[illegible]: Hammer with handle for pounding stakes for fish-nets. [412]
[illegible]: Mountain on north side of the lower Bella Coola. [805] [illegible]: One who estimates the passage of time by watching the movements of the sun.
[illegible], "The Devourer of Meat Killed by Another": Term used by hunters to Wolf. [825]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 192*

ālpim: Something long sought-for on account of its especial desirability, such as well-grained wood.

ālpim ues mnas: Child whose parents were long engaged and who is accordingly regarded as being well prepared for. [554] ālpkst: Sisiok initiate concealed within the back-room.

Ālpnālā: One of the first men to settle in Kimsquit in the beginning of time.

ālpe: Guests at a potlatch.

Ālpnnkam, "The Shelterer": Name assumed by Smaua in the beginning of time.

ālpmāmāmis, "What Has Been Shaken Off": Term applied to presents distributed when a corpse has been carried through the roof. The implication is that they are dust shaken from the fingers of the deceased. [431] [764]

Ālpuntām: 1—The supreme god.
2—One of the first men to settle on the upper Bella Coola in the beginning of time.
3—One of the first men to settle on the upper Kimsquit in the beginning of time.
4—Tail of a Sisiut repository.

Ālpuntāmāsh: 1—Mountain on the north side of the lower Bella Coola.
2—Name assumed by one of the first settlers at Swalāli in the beginning of time.

ālpnālāipīyīy: Old people, especially parents; this is a polite term for direct address. [601]

Ālpnānānāt: Supernatural artisans who made mankind in the beginning of time. [576] ālp"ā: Presents given to validate the initiation of a Sisiut.

Ālpnātimat: Ancestral name of a Bella Coola woman. [331] ālpnnnāskwnnāmmy: Professional mourner. [463] ālpnnnāyāiyāt: Professional droner at marriages.

ālpnnyāma: Professional hunter.

ālpnnyālā: Professional warrior.

Ālnkāu-i: Kimsquit fisherman living in the last century.

ālp'ōu: Olachen net.

Ālnlāy: Celebrated hunter mentioned in an ancient story.

ālkāt ōt ōi ānāhm: Second oldest sibling. [601]

Ālnmos: Repository of a Kimsquit Cannibal where cures are effected.

ālnnnmālā: Professional warrior. [463] ālnnnnāānm: Professional river guard.

Ālnnlāpnnu: Mountain near mouth of the Kimsquit River.

ālnlnnāla: Shaman.

ālnlnnnnnm: 1—Meeting of those who have given potlatches. [753]
2—Unidentified disease said to attack only chiefs.

ālnlnnnt: Marriage associates, i.e. those who, not being relatives, wish to associate themselves with the bride's family in the financial transactions of a marriage.

Ālnnlānnnm: Name applied to the supernatural artisans with reference to their construction of everything used by mankind.

Ālnlānnnm, "Cloud-Covered": Name applied to the supernatural being Nānlānnm with reference to his frequent invisibility.

Ālnlnnnt-ais, "The Highest of All Chiefs' Sons:" Name of Smaua's son in the beginning of time.

Ālnr-ānnn, "Falling Star-Fish": Name acquired by a Kimsquit man long ago.

Ālnnpn, "The Rent-Maker": Name acquired by a Kimsquit man long ago.

ālnālāt: One who has received a commission for carpentry work in preparation for a potlatch. [465]

2; McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Anuhlo: Village near mouth of the Dean River.
Anululem: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Anutsyne-ust, "Labretted": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
Anuxmlaix: Name obtained by an Alyalaxt man in the beginning of time.
Anxpalmmut, "Quivering To and Fro": One of Tlitxpilôw-a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.
Anxsimôlo: Kuxlat name of a Bella Coola man.
Anxsimôw-a: 1—Kuxlat name of a Bella Coola woman.
2—"Left Hand": Sisaa repository named from part of a supernatural creature.
[431] [426] anxyep': Term applied to the giving of a copper, indicating that 100 per cent interest is expected in return.
Anxsimmdmut: One of the names of Great Blue Heron as chief.
[463] anxwnixhw-aix: Kuxlat profession, at Kimsquit only, of throwing masks on the fire.
Anxwnintmlt, "The Moving House": One of the names of the supreme god's dwelling.
anxyas: 1—Owner of a puppet-person.
2—Synonym for xlômômmum, q.v.
Anxyulhalaix: Supernatural being who robs tsâxalat of their thoughts at the Mystery dance.
Ar-ôi: 1—Name created for himself by one of the first settlers at Alyalaxt in the beginning of time.
2—Bella Bella chief.
aks: Excrete.
Ahmô-a, "The Privy One": Name taken by a chief for himself in virtue of the remarks made about his habits.
Aqulaix: Sisaa name of a Kimsquit man.
[825] aqam: Herring eggs.
[824] aqmoulp: Cottonwood.
aqna: Type of sea-going canoe.
[825] aqwa: Harlequin duck.
Aqulaiyutmamm, "The Constant Eater": Term used by hunters to Eagle.
Aqw-aw-i, "Concave Town": Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.
aqwoanp: Canoes lashed together.
Ar-ôs: Locality on south side of North Bentinck Arm, about one-quarter mile from its head, including the area beneath the surface of the water.
[601] ar-ôw-ôi: 1—Second oldest sibling.
2—Second part of song.
[775] aristmum: 1—"They Who Have Become Supernatural": Title preferred by ghosts.
2—Woman living in the moon.
Ar-iromnp: Inhabitants of the village of Ârsa°.
[424] arsumnalus: Person with good memory commissioned to remember family prerogatives.
Ârsa°, "At the Head": Village southwest of the head of South Bentinck Arm.
ashaiat: Totem-pole, literally, "Outside Post." [756] ashalat: Shaman with power derived from ghosts.
ashalum: Ceremonial bathing at dawn.
[515] Ashlaxilaix: Kuxlat name of a Bella Coola woman.
Ashmôk: Kuxlat name of a Bella Coola man.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

E

mayo or mayoi'a: Medicine; generic term for all remedies of a magical or medicinal nature. [278]
e-m: Coitus, term in common usage.
emis: Nephew or niece. [601]

A

ahnuk: Ancestral name of a Snaitl'a man.
'anlaiza-a: Daughter of the first settlers at Green Bay in the beginning of time.
anlaitlaitla: Moon, semi-anthropomorphized.

H

hai-ahkila: 1—Bella Bella term; commonly used in Bella Coola, for nuxut official 2—Kaziut name of a Bella Coola man.
haidzi: Type of sea-going canoe used by the Haida; the word may be a corruption from English.
Hai-h-hala: Man who descended to the upper Bella Coola in the beginning of time.
Hau-a: One of the first women to settle at Schooner Pass in the beginning of time.
hauhau: Mythical, supernatural bird. [825]
Hamut: 1—One of the first men to settle at Nuxulz in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Ziwiyai in the beginning of time.
hali: Penis.
heik: Call used by members of the hamat'sa society to strengthen their fellow-members.

I

iba': Pounded cedar-bark, undyed. [824]
ilaia: Zigzag course up or down a mountain slope.
Iniyai: Twalitl's dog.
Ishmai-i: One of the first women west down west of Kwatna in the beginning of time.
ishuma: iba ceim: Bandage of undyed cedar-bark placed around an infant's head to produce cranial deformation. [856] ishuma, Bandage: Term applied to presents distributed as validation for the bitings of a self-Cannibal. [431] iti: One of the frizilaria.
itsalwalqualaa: Abbreviated rite of Nootqma dance.
Iwatsin: Nest.
I'wanlah: Kaiuk name of a Kitwanga man.
Iwinqalaain, "The Mouse": Male supernatural child who famous Nootqma's craft.
iyaaqa, "Hold Him Down": Cry used in Cannibal dances.
iyaaqlal, "Accept": Said to spring salmon during the ritual connected with the first taking of these fish. [226] iyahwatsaa: Alleged singing of a naxat initiate's song by the supernatural being, Mislakila.
iya'la-ceim: Reduction of the value of an investment-present by immediate return of part of it. [426]
i-yiki: Moon. [824] iyoshwatsalkilla: Polyandry.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

#192 tsutcmap, "Come and eat": Invitation to the kukwist to assemble in a performer's house.

tsuhs: House beams.

tsut-ste: Messenger bearing invitation to a potlatch.

[952] tsuhtsu: Message.

[585] tshshtmsh: 1—Presents, regarded as clothing, etc., given by the groom's relatives to the bride's kinsmen when the latter visit his house on the wedding day.

[431] 2—Other presents given by the husband's relatives to the wife's kinsmen prior to her repurchase.

[583] tswaqlut, "The Throwing Off of a Heavy Burden from the Shoulders": Said of the repayment by a wife's relatives of presents received from her husband's kinsmen.

tswuhsts: 1—Battering-ram.

2—The destruction of the house of a chief who is about to give a potlatch.

Tsilqutsen: One of the names of the supreme god.

[201] tsuhsmstum: Notification, by pressure on the foot, to a chief to go to the meeting-place.

[533] tsuhsum: The employment of frenzied stick-beating.

Tsqu-mum: Hot Springs on South Bentinck Arm.

tsutstqumum, "The Hearing": Synonym for ulumum, q.v.; this is a Kimsquit term only.

t-qtimut: Kwistum rite in which the performer appears to be burnt to death.

t-qumum: The casting of kwistut masks on the fire.

Tqumt, "Far from the River": Village on the upper Kimsquit River.

[847] tswut: Abortion.

t-swutla, "Disappointed": said of the supernatural beings called by a ulu'a dancer who arrive too late for the potlatch.

ulus: Slave from the lower Fraser owned in Kimsquit during the last century.

[101] ulmulumq: Bella Coola term for the Bella Bella.

[601] ulmulshshumu: Half-brother or half-sister.

umlt: 1—Man.

2—Son; term used by old person in direct address to adult.

3—Husband.

[614] umltsta: Male relative of same ancestral family.

umltlus: Woman who performs man's work.

[601] umltqsta: Single brother in a family with several sisters.

umumlti, plural, umumltsti: Small boy, especially son; term used in indirect address.

[431] uplsts", "Working Clothes": Presents given by the relatives of the future bride to the kinsmen of the future bridegroom at the first announcement of the engagement. The implication is that they will have to labour industriously to obtain the wealth necessary for the marriage.

[821] ulmlmul: Cold wind of the mornings, semi-anthropomorphised.

umuq: Bella Bella term for the umuq.

[563] umuq: Bella Coola term for the people of mixed Bella Bella-Kimsquit stock who inhabited the shores of Dean Channel.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

[805]

[583]

[431]

[827]

[825]

[583]

[787]

[556]

[821]

[824]

[825]

[illegible], "The Time for Kuxiut Rites": Fifth moon after the summer solstice.
[illegible]: 1—One of the first men to settle at Ala[illegible] in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle on the lower Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
3—One of the first men to settle on the upper Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
4—Stand name of a Kimsquit man.
[illegible]: One of the supernatural carpenters.
[illegible]: The repurchase of a wife from her husband.
[illegible]: Synonym for qwaqlut, a present for which a return is not expected.
[illegible]: Hereditary tendency.
[illegible]: Kuxiut name of a Sisaa man.
[illegible]: Red rock cod. The difference between this and Ala[illegible] is problematical.
[illegible]: One of the first men to settle at Kempo-is in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: The entrusting of a woman to a husband's care. This phrase is used by a wife's relatives when about to rebuy her as expressing their somewhat boastful sentiments concerning the relations entered into at marriage.
[illegible]: Sterile supernatural visitation.
[illegible]: 1—To strengthen, or to shore up.
2—Goods provided by a wife to strengthen her husband's position.
[illegible], "Different from All Others": Bella Bella chief living in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Wife of North Wind, a supernatural being resident in a side valley of the upper Bella Coola.
[illegible]: Supernatural aid granted to the unfortunate.
[illegible]: Son of Raven and one of the first settlers at Tal-io in the beginning of time.
[illegible], "The Track of the Sun": A'alt name obtained in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: Supernatural name of [illegible].
[illegible], "Commander": 1—Said to be the word from which Alqualam is derived.
2—One of the names of the supreme god.
[illegible], "The Circuit": Name assumed by Sisaa in the beginning of time.
[illegible]: One of the names of Great Blue Heron as chief.
[illegible]: Kuxiut name of a Sisaa man.
[illegible]: Kimsquit hunter mentioned in an ancient story.
[illegible]: 1—One of the first men to settle at Kempo-is in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Rivers Inlet in the beginning of time.
[illegible], "The Circuit": Name assumed by Sisaa in the beginning of time.
[illegible], "The Walker": Supernatural being resident in a glacier near the overland trail between Swalal and Tal-io.

K

Ani: 1—Snow.
2—Unidentified berry.
Kalaalitz: Name obtained from a supernatural being by a Bella Bella man.
Kalamit: One of Raven's Crow sisters.
Kalas: Crow.
Kalaslu: Locality in the Bella Coola valley mentioned in an ancient story.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

kätsän: Tail. 192*
katskitl: Ants.
kax: Black hawthorn. [825]
Kalan·i: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man. [824]
Kamilkän: Ancestral name of the wife of Swaky who was changed to stone in the beginning of time.
kanki: Region.
Kapsalopst: Kitlobe chief living in the beginning of time.
kasäly: 1—Marriage, properly arranged and legalized.
2—The actual wedding day. [585]
Kawälän·i: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit woman.[1] kelai: Bark bucket for holding liquids. [415] kelamkädjut: The seeking of assistance from a man who owns a curing repository.
kelamkusnäm: Investment-present, i.e., one for which a return is expected. [426] kelusta: Back-room in which nsaok initiates and others are concealed.
kelän: Woman during catamenia. [431] keleta, "What Was Sent Down": Intangible possession, such as a myth or a prerogative, inherited from the distant past, usually from the coming to earth of the first settlers in the beginning of time. [424]
komapsta: Wooden tongs such as are used for lifting hot stones. [412] kelsämkdjot ela kwanäxsta: Kusiotem rite in which the performer appears to be drowned.
kel·aix or kel·äil, "The Gainer": One who has been initiated as a member of the kusiut society but has not yet danced, especially one admitted through unauthorized knowledge or through successful participation in either a kusiotem or a Mystery dance. [575]
kelulx, "Rendered Incapable of Returning": Said of an uninitiated person who is alleged to have stumbled on a repository.
Keldcup: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
kestcao: The dormant waiting for power by a shaman who, having had one visitation, awaits further manifestations before displaying his ability. [756]
kiła, vocative, kiłaas: Grandmother. [601] kikä·tstam·um·i: Ceremonial marriage of a female child to an adult man.
Ki'laiolotl: Name given to their canoe by the first settlers at Stnux in the beginning of time.
Kilakamxwu, "The Wise One": One of Raven's names as chief.
Kimilkän: One of the first women to settle at Alqälxl in the beginning of time.
Kina'o·: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
kinaxw: 1—Crab. [825]
2—Enormous crab-like creature, alleged to be found far in the forest. [824]
Kipulxs: Name of a shaman who received his power from ghosts.
kipl: Red elderberry. [413]
kipla: Wooden tweezers used in the pounding of cedar-bark. [252]
kis: Unidentified plant.
kisäm: To toast dried salmon.
kisianmotla: Supported, in the sense of held in place by physical assistance.
Kisiqwatl: Locality on Dean Channel, west of Suxwäk.
Kit·co: Place on south side of North Bentinck Arm, about one-quarter mile from its head.

[1]This name appears to be an entirely different word from Kalän·i.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 192*

kulkāmut: Generic term for presents given to a future bridegroom by the father of the future bride. [431] Kulilkākmidjut: Supernatural being whose stomach is cut in the land above. [584] kumai·t: Good-bye. [576] Kunkunālpstus, "What Brings Our Food": Synonym for the supernatural being Winwina.
kusiotem: Designation for a series of difficult and spectacular kusiut dances.
kusio·tem: Said to be identical with sāfukwalas, the visible object obtained by a shaman from his supernatural benefactor. [756] kusiut: plural, kukusiut; vocative, kusioot; vocative plural, kukusioot:
1—Society comprising those entitled to perform dramatic dances during the winter ceremonial season. [575]
2—Member of the society.
3—"The Learned One": Designation occasionally applied to a supernatural being, especially a petrified one, or to a person having power to cure the sick. [756] Kusiyot: Kimsquit female shaman living in the last century.
kuskao: Beloved one, especially a child; this is the vocative form of the word.
kusqiyum: Orphan.
Kwai'kila'yekwa: Woman dwelling at Fort Rupert in the beginning of time.
Kwa·sila: Smith Inlet.
Ḱwakwāk'la: Supernatural name of Cormorant.
kwa·kwao·s: Merganser. [825] Kwakwaosiloil: Merganser canoe acquired by the first settlers at Stuax. [763] kwakwas: Unidentified bird of which the note is an omen of death.
Kwalais: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
Kwalākmas: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
Kwala·tsimut: Kusiut name of a male Green Bay Cannibal.
kwal·io·l: Smooth greenstone, "jadeite," such as is found on the Queen Charlotte Islands. [823]
kwals: Evergreen bough. [824] Kwalsānl: Famous Bella Coola warrior.
kwaqwai: One of the sculpins.
Kwasta: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man.
Kwat·iwalu, "The Big One": Lustful male supernatural being.
Kwatlnuslsa: Man who came to earth near Stuax in the beginning of time.
Kwa·tsua: Kimsquit woman.
Ḱwilais: Kimsquit man mentioned in an ancient story.
Kwilnao: One of the first men to settle at Schooner Pass in the beginning of time.
Kwinao: Kitkatla chief living in the last century.
Kwilāxlaix, "One Who Sits without Right": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.
Kwla: Influential Kwakiutl woman captured in the beginning of time by a Nusqalst chief; the word is a synonym for Wikwan·kwla.
Kwlilias Nuskāmpsa: One of the nine supernatural siblings.
kwlwālsikān·aix: Lullaby. [533] kwoi·yaix: Archaic expression used in a string figure.
kwlis: 1—Pen or trap in the ocean for salmon. [226]
2—Village on east side of South Bentinck Arm, not far from its head.

*192 nā'plu: Miniature copper ornament worn by adolescent girls during seclusion.
[301] Nē·tci: Bella Bella man living in the beginning of time.
nāxam: To dance.
[825] nāxamda: Those who dance at marriages.
nāxnax: Mallard duck.
[824] nāxmusmm: Night of potlatch on which xsask initiates appear for a short dance.
naxiki: Berries of Canadian buffalo berry.
[415] nāhixnkts: Thimble-like wooden dish.
'namlānkaix: Ceremonial seating of chiefs according to their validated places in a house.
Namutsts: Name acquired by a Rivers Inlet man from sea-lions in the beginning of time.
Namulsts: Professional name of a kusiut marshal.
'Nāx·utān·a: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola Scratcher; the designation was derived from Rivers Inlet.
Ne·sle·s: Celebrated Kitkatla chief.
Ne·xwunkai: Influential Bella Coola chief.
*[776] Nēksullāhaix, "The Resident": Supernatural being dwelling under rivers who punishes infractions of taboos concerning them.
[784] nēhusam: 1—Fourth day of a kusiut dance, on the evening of which masked figures appear.
2—Something exposed to view.
Nepepa: Old woman resident in Sea-lion's house in the beginning of time.
nnnk, "Little Dance": Term of grandiose humility.
nexnāxam: Gathering of the people for a non-sacred dance after the kusiut season.
Nexnāx·mālsaix: 1—"The Dancer Near the Fire": One of Tlitcāplilan·a's names, and hence a designation given to shamans.
2— Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
Nexnexlwalaix: Kusiut name of a Nusālst man.
niamlmtam: One who has preserved a marriage song.
niaxwālrmsk: The intangible strengthening that comes to a bridegroom as a result of the oration of his ancestral myths and the giving of presents to the bride's relatives when they first come to his house on the wedding day.
[585] [431] Niullāix: Daughter of the first people who came down to Mount Tsnisi in the beginning of time.
[524] niskq'ctl: Wooden ring used in a game.
Niktcks: Place on Dean Channel, about three miles from the head, where the deer formed a colony soon after the beginning of time.
[825] nikpapa': Otter.
Ninilānk: Name of a certain spot where mountain goats are wont to congregate for mating.
Ninitsamlaix: 1—"The Restorer": One of Tlitcāplilan·a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.
2—One of the first men to settle in the upper Bella Coola valley in the beginning of time.
[556] nitsam, "Brought to Life": Term applied to a copper brought back from a cemetery and renamed.
Nitsmdimut: Shaman's name derived from Tlitcāplilan·a.
nitstominu: "I have saved you."

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192

Nukajuxtum: An influential Kwakiutl chief.
Nukstco: Bella Coola pronunciation of a Carrier village; the Anglicized form is Ulkatcho.
nuḱaxm: To lose something through faulty concealment; the term is used to describe a kusiut who is alleged to have suffered loss through the discovery of his repository by an uninitiated person.
nukslemsk̓i': Grease extracted from sockeye salmon heads.
[825] Nukiadji: Ancestral name of a Stax chief; the designation is of Kwakiutl origin.
[778] nukila·xta: 1—Spider.
2—Place on the east side of South Bentinck Arm where cures are effected; the power is derived from a spider petrified there.
Nukil, "Place of the Whirlpool": Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.
Nukokwixodjax, "The One Whose Seat is Dusty": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.
[552] Nuliqumutl di mak', "The Rolling Down of Excrement": Dog's name.
Nulalumtnam: 1—Supernatural being who leaves his home at the time of Nuskymm's departure to warn kukusiut to tidy their houses for the ceremonial season.
[356] 2—To tidy the houses preparatory to the ceremonial season.
Nulalulaks, "The One Whose Eyes Are Hungry": Name taken by a wife in consequence of slights received from her husband's relatives.
[431] nulexm: Presents given by a chief to his fellow-villagers prior to a potlatch.
Nulilqolank, "Place of Many Boulders": Ancient village on the Kwatna River.
Nulixumanksta: One of the first women to settle at Tal·io in the beginning of time.
nulmkmankdas: Fastenings, especially those of plumage or skins worn by the first settlers when coming down to earth in the beginning of time.
Nulkitl: Poverty-stricken chief mentioned in a song.
nulkmakdas: Bonds used to fasten a Cannibal; the word is etymologically connected with nulmkmankdas.
[428] nulmastmax: Succession, as applied to the assumption of a marshal's prerogative by a son or other relative.
nulostnik·osta, "Forehead Thing": Small mask worn on a nsask head-dress.
nulq: Landslide, such as is caused by Tualalit or nsiutl.
Nulqanlaix: Name given to their sister by the first settlers at Nutsymali in the beginning of time.
nulqunta, "To Have Become Nothing For": Said of a poultice which is thrown away after serving its purpose.
nulqustas: House-posts nearest to front door.
nulnikta: Posts extending from this world to the land above down which swarmed some of the first settlers in the beginning of time.
[426] nulsmamatnam, "Belt Goods": Goods borrowed during a potlatch by a donor who finds himself deficient. The implication is that he will have to fasten up his [556] clothing and work industriously to repay his indebtedness with heavy interest.
nulsodjim: Cry uttered by a nsask official to free a house from the intangible influence of the supernatural after the initiation of nsask novices.
[342] nulxinqailain: The alleged entrance of a supernatural being into a nsask novice.
nulxwalkals: Semi-subterranean house with two levels for seats.
numalkals: Semi-subterranean house with a single level for seats.
Numam·u, "Place of Flies": Place on north side of North Bentinck Arm, about one mile from its head.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192
[198] Nuxnánnqkt: Area around a spring near Nuliax.
nuxmítta: Chamber-vessel in the language of supernatural beings.
Nuxwíita: Kuxist name of a Bella Coola man.
Nuxkhunuta, "Place of Meeting": One of the names of the supreme god's house.
Nuxpuxte Smoiaikila, "The Peace-Giving Smoiaikila": Designation of the supreme god with reference to the function of peace.
Nuxqápa: Skeena River.
Nuxqápa, "Place of Many Spring Salmon": Village on the upper Kimsquit River.
,nuxqáit-a: 1—Chamber-vessel.
2—Nickname of a Kimsquit child.
Nuxqáit, "Place of Sqáit": 1—Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.
2—Mountain, the loftiest in the Bella Coola valley, near the village.
Nuxqat: uxámy village.
nuxqéjat: Kuxistem rite in which the performer pretends to have his stomach cut.
[826] nuxqilhutxa: Person fastened to the ground with roots.
nuxqo: Person suffering from umbilical hernia.
nuxʼqodjunmuta: Appurtenances for washing given by the donor of a potlatch to his guests.
[431] Nuxqulxwaita: House of the supreme god during the winter dances of the supernatural beings.
nuxqual: 1—One of the a'alt dances.
[825] 2—Yearling mountain goat.
3—Man dwelling in Xmoqwa's house.
nuxqualxi: The alleged attraction of the spirit of an uninitiated person to a performer in the house where a kuxist dance is taking place.
Nuxqualxwaita: Variant of Nuxqulxwaita.
Nuxqualxwalmilt Nuákymu: Supernatural dancer who comes in Nuákymu's canoe.
[198] Nuxqualxix, "Kingfisher," in the language of supernatural beings: Ancestral name of a herald who came down to the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
Nuxqualhaita, "The Making Place" (with reference to qualhaita): One of the names of the supreme god's house.
Nuxqualtu-i: 1—Man mentioned in an ancient story of Green Bay.
2—Man mentioned in an ancient story of Stuxa.
Nuxqʼʼlos: Supernatural merry-maker or clown.
[825] nuxqwkoil: The annual scattering of birds by the supreme god in the land above.
Nuxqul: Locality near the Hot Springs on Labouchere Channel.
[583] nuxqwtxumuta, "Washing Appurtenances": Term applied to presents given to a husband by his wife's relatives when rebuying her.
Nuxhlita: Locality near Stuxa.
[431] nuxhxumáita, "Ground Covering": Expression used for the presents given to validate nuxok initiates with regard to the ground over which they will dance, or [556] chiefs to the ground over which they will tread.
[431] nuxhxumáxta, "Seat Covering": Expression used for the presents given to validate the seat of a chief or of a nuxok dancer.
Nuxhiuq: Herald of Smaxa in the beginning of time.
Nuxhmnámmuta, "Place Where People Were Made": One of the names of the supreme god's house.
nuxhmqs: Carpenter.
nuxlqwamáa: Smear of red paint.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

Nuswin·amx, "The Warrior": Name acquired by a Kimsquit man long ago. [578] nuswinästa: Women's verbal quarrels about prestige.
Nusx: 1—Barren district above Green Bay.
2—Evil, adjective.
Nusxalxiq: Tāl·io bird hunter.
Nusxemda: 1—One of the first men to settle at Tāl·io in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Ālqālaxl in the beginning of time. [772]
3—Ball of the universe which, when broken, released the sun.
Nusxemtaian·a: Daughter of the first settlers at Ālqālaxl in the beginning of time.
Nusxeq: 1—(Probably) "The Place of Barrenness": Village at Green Bay.
2—One of the first men to settle at Green Bay in the beginning of time.
nusxi'ipsta: Repository, archaic term.
nusxwan·ai·nutsnam: The assumption of a name upon earth. [431] nusxwohmqsta, "Things to Sweep the Floor With": Presents given to a bride's relatives by a groom and his kinsmen on the actual day of marriage. [585] nusxwo·ksta: Wooden dish used for washing an infant.
nusxwiläntom: Abstinence from acts of an unclean nature after the taking of a powerful medicine. [415]
nulaikim: The power which a shaman brings forth from his own body and casts into a patient. [785] [756]
Nulaodaxw': Name of a celebrated shaman.
Nulam: Bella Bella village and undefined area in the vicinity.
Nulal, "Canyon": 1—Dean River.
2—Village on the lower Dean River.
nulaxgnam: Alteration of a dance from sisaok to kusiut. [825] nulkalxita: Bone in the back of a salmon's neck.
nulläläumtmm, "A Drying-Up with Fire": Expression used for the ceremony held on the return of a deserting wife to her husband. [586] nulläläumam: Goods given by a wife's relatives to her husband to validate her return to him after desertion. [431] Nulleux, "Place Where There Are No Falls": Village in the upper Bella Coola valley.
Nuthodol: Totem-pole of the first settlers at Nusqalst in the beginning of time.
nuthunult: Parents of twins. [845]
nutsaqmax: Wolf. [825]
Nulsätlmais: Mythical house in the sky.
Nulsaqmäls: One of the names of the supreme god's house.
nutsiakem: Present, invisible to all but the owner, given by Tlitcäplilan·a to a shaman. The word may be etymologically connected with nulaikim. [756] nulsiagnam: A creation of new kusiut names, such as is necessitated by a disaster, or at the will of a mighty chief. [553] nulsixäxlm: Kusiutem rite in which the performer pretends to swallow hot stones.
nulsiexam: 1—"A Throwing Off": Term used with reference to presents given to heralds by a person splashed in Otter dance. [431]
2—Presents given by guests at a potlatch to their host and his associates.
nulqasa, "The Face Maker": Name given to a woman who paints upon the bandages used to produce cranial deformation in an infant. [856] Nutsqualt, "Place of Many Spawning Sockeye Salmon": Kimsquit village.
Nulwimäx: Kusiut name of a Tcumoil man.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192

ōtsulta: Promontory on hunting ground extending into ocean.
Ovlxān·i: Kimsquit fisherman.
Owiki: Calvert Island.
Oxḑoxem: Synonym for Xemxemālotla, one of the nine supernatural siblings.

P

[415] ṗai·s: Small wooden dish.
Pāluātl: Legless messenger of the dead.
Pa·s: Place on mainland opposite north end of Vancouver Island.
[585] pāsutnm: Synonym for nuṗāxsikel·um: Payments made by the wife's relatives to [431] those of the bridegroom on first arrival outside his house on the wedding day. They are said to be in return for "Food" received from them on many occasions.
Pāscāicus: Ancestral name of a Nusḑalst man.
[412] ṗātsalta: Bone needle.
pāxotla: Anything powerful and dreaded; the word is frequently applied, rhetorically, to Cannibals.
Pe·ātlo: Small stream rising north of the Bella Coola valley and east of the Necleetsconnay; it flows into the head of South Bentinck Arm between the Necleetsconnay and the Bella Coola.
Piqotla: Bella Coola man figuring in a story.
pātitl: Herring scales.
pināxta: Dance-apron.
Pinqkla: One of the first men to settle at Snuhli in the beginning of time.
[825] ṗkm·: Mosquito.
Ponpoilotsdimut: Name assumed by Smaoan in the beginning of time.
po·qwais: Variety of smnq.
Potlas: Celebrated Bella Coola chief who died about 1880.
Po·istlo: Mesatche Nose, the point between Labouchere Channel and North Bentinck Arm.
[824] potsqi: False hellebore.
[411] poistin: Bow, weapon.
poyāx, "Fallen Heavily with a Crash," as when a dead tree thunders to earth: The [195] term is used rhetorically when referring to the death of an old and influential chief.
[372] ṗsaixl: Tree, probably birch, used for torches.
ṗskun: Meeting of chiefs.
[825] ṗwi: Halibut.
ṗx': Crabapple.
[824] ṗxolt: Bunchberry.

Q

[525] Qa'aklis: Rivers Inlet man, living in the last century.
qai: King stick in a gambling game.
qainaxqwalitl: Women's droning cry uttered at the appearance of a masked dancer.
qai·nuqs: Uncommon term for the second day of a kusiut dance, applied to the rites taking place during the day itself only.
Qaiyu: Name conferred on the grandson of Smaoan in the beginning of time.
Qak'lis: Man mentioned in a story.
Qakmo: 1—One of the first women to settle on the Dean River in the beginning of time.
2—Celebrated Bella Bella chief.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

qalibu: Omen of death, generic term.
qalka: One of the berries, probably raspberry. [787]
qamá, vocativ, qámao: Mother, term used by child.
Qamálxem: Celebrated Carrier chief. [824]
Qamux: 1—Village on west bank of the Necleetseonnay, about three-quarters of a mile from the sea. [601]
2—Mountain behind the village.
*Qámspextámem: am'lal*a name of a Kimsquit man.
qámxámila, vocativ, qámxámilao: 1—Term used for spring salmon during the ritual following the first taking of the fish. [825]
2—Term used by smmq to human beings, who are like salmon to them.
3—Salmon, in the language of supernatural beings. [198] qanxta, "Rope Fastenings," i.e., something binding: The function of the "Bed Covering" and other presents given with a wife which bind her to her husband. [585]
qoo-luks: Unidentified species of duck. [431] Qoominoaka: Kwakiutl term for "The Weeper," a female supernatural being.
Qopátus: Kusiut name of a Stuix man. [825]
Qá·pxook: ustámq chief living soon after the beginning of time.
Qaqa^{n}li: Herald who came with the first settlers to the Dean River in the beginning of time.
Qáqos: Carrier pronunciation of Tcaqas, one of the first men to settle on the upper Dean in the beginning of time.
qálaxm: Kusiut with ability to produce a puppet-patron, cf. nunuyaxum.
qatitsta: Sweat-bath. [515]
Qálsmus: Slave mentioned in an ancient story.
qatsq': Star-fish. [825]
qax: Rabbit.
qá·q: Salmon-berry. [824]
Qaxlewals: One of the first men to settle at Schooner Pass in the beginning of time.
qáxmats: Unidentified plant.
qahm: Black cod. [825]
qam, "A Wiping of the Feet upon the Ground of Chiefs": Term applied to a deadly insult offered to persons of importance. [578] qamta: Wooden armour.
Qankhlst: 1—Village on east side of South Bentinck Arm. [714]
2—Island off Rivers Inlet.
3—Island.
Qay·axwsila: One of the names of Raven as chief.
Qril: 1—One of the first men to settle at Siskiul in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Stuix in the beginning of time.
qe·ko: Unidentified migratory bird, black in colour. [825] Qéldjut: Scratch River, near Bella Bella. qi'aqa: One of the a'alk dances.
Qiqia, "Head": Stuix repository named from part of a supernatural creature. [578] qsikyálpáwslaixnam: A verbal exposure of what should have remained concealed, such as comments upon the slave ancestry of a person whose blot in this respect has been covered over by lavish giving. [431] qsluliista: Presents distributed by a wife to strengthen her husband's seat, and thus prevent him from "wobbling." [556]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

APPENDIX D

qaxta, "Bed Covering": Term applied to the presents given as such to the party of a bridegroom when they enter the bride's house on a wedding day. [585]

ḳpämdjut, "A Shaking of the Fingers": Rhetorical allusion to presents regarded as "Dust." [431]

ḳpänliktmm: To revolve sunwise. [195]

Ḳpänpänliktmmlaix, "The One Who Revolves Sunwise to Give Strength": One of Tlitcaplän-a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.

Ḳpajulxs: Place of petrified power near Kwatna. [778]

Ḳsxwan: Village on the Skeena River.

ḳtaiutl: Supernatural creature resembling a diminutive human being. [825] ḳubetl: Salmon liver.

ḳuks: Co-wife in a polygynous household. [595]

ḳulwas, vocative, ḳulusis: Wife's brother, or sister's husband, man speaking.

ḳulxwaix: Gathering of the supernatural beings for the performance of dances in the land above. [601]

ḳuma: Unidentified salt water fish, said to be called "Lard-fish" by white men. [825]

Ḳunqumm ul di dä Sqem, "The Unlooser of Light": One of Raven's names as chief.

ḳupstäxm: 1—The ability of a chief to sit down ceremonially in virtue of the goods distributed for his seat, the ground over which he walks, and other requirements.
2—The initial establishment of a youth as chief.

ḳuputsälets: Stone axe.

ḳus: Period of engagement. [412]

Ḳwahila: Ḳmqo·ts man.

Ḳwai·lils: 1—One of Raven's names as chief.
2—Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.

Ḳwaiutsamlaix: Stuix man mentioned in an ancient story.

Ḳwaixostn·i: Shaman's name of a Stuix woman.

Ḳwaixwos, "Begrimed": Name of a copper often cast into fire.

ḳwalts: Unidentified (and probably mythical) type of lizard, allegedly about four feet long, found near Dean Channel. [825]

ḳwalem, vocative, ḳwalämi; plural, älḳwalämi: Eldest brother or sister. [601]

Ḳwa'lems: Name, in the Bella Bella language, given to a wooden woman made by one of the first settlers in the beginning of time.

ḳwalik: Gull. [825]

ḳwal'ma"ks, "Eldest": Term of respectful address to Porcupine as senior of all animals.

Ḳwalwalelim, "The Mover": Name given to their house by one of the first groups of settlers at Täl·io in the beginning of time.

Ḳwalna: Term from which the Anglicized "Kwatna" is derived: Generic name for the villages at Kwatna Harbour, Burke Channel. [103]

Ḳwamaxa'ks: Chief living on the upper Tsawat in the beginning of time.

ḳwanä·xsta: Large box used for boiling olachen. [415]

Ḳwapa: Village south-west of the head of South Bentinck Arm.

Ḳwaqmai: Place on Schooner Pass.

Ḳwaqwasila: Sisaok name of a Bella Coola man.

ḳwatlnakam: Marks made to commemorate an event, such as carvings at chiefs' meeting-place, virtually a memorial. [211] ḳwatlnuxum: Figure representing crest.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 192
*[773]
[777]
[825]
[601]
[825]
[431]
[825]
[583]
[854]
[581]
[195]

ɣwalnnsta: 1—Tally post, one of the supernatural elements possessed by all human beings.
2—Invisible supernatural element which constantly moves before the face.

ɣwalhnia; vocative, ɣwalhnsso, (rarely, ɣwalhnta): Crest.

ɣwax: Raven.

ɣwax: Big old male mountain goat.

Ɣwaxila: Ɣmqo·ts man living in the last century.

Ɣwaylielis: Celebrated Kwakiutl chief.

Ɣwaxɣwax·wamm: Name of a shaman who received his power from Raven.

Ɣwaxwats: One of the first men to settle at Stanx in the beginning of time.

ɣwaxwam: Fourth oldest, or youngest, brother or sister.

ɣwa'yuhks: Steller's jay.

Ɣwakst: Kimsquit woman.

ɣwana: Woman's pubic hair.

ɣwata: Sea-lion cub.

ɣwem: Those who are present and receive gifts when an announcement of a marriage is first made.

Ɣwets: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.

ɣwia·x'sem: A revelation, such as the sight of a supernatural being or object usually concealed.

ɣwilais: Yearling seal.

ɣwimap: Word used in inviting to a marriage announcement.

Ɣwinao: Kimsquit man mentioned in an ancient story.

Ɣwiɣwexaowa: Kwakiutl supernatural being, said to be identical with Ālɣunsam.

Ɣwixlskilak": Nusqual name of a Kimsquit man.

Ɣwiyai: Bella Bella village west of Namu.

Ɣwul: Hot Springs on Labouchere Channel.

Ɣwlaiyu: Professional female marriage droner who came down to Kimsquit in the beginning of time.

Ɣwlaxwoa: One of the nine supernatural siblings.

Ɣwliutl, "Place of Herbage": Village in the upper Bella Coola valley.

ɣwnta: Inspiration, in the sense of the source of a kusiut dancer's power of thought.

Ɣwoalk: Village west of Kwatna, settled in the beginning of time.

ɣwoshandjut: Actual goods used for the repurchase of a wife.

Ɣwoyusditsas: Ancestral name of a Kimsquit chief.

ɣwtutl: Cradle.

Ɣwu'nsk': Kusiut name of a Bella Coola woman.

Ɣwu·a: Man mentioned in an ancient story.

ɣ"xlhn: The noble and rightful sentiments engendered in both families by an elaborate marriage, either real or fictitious. The word embodies the concepts of financial interdependence and of consequent mutual strength.

ɣwakim: The transference of activities to a new sphere; the term is used, rhetorically, when referring to the death of a skilled craftsman.

S

saiks: 1—Skeleton.
2—Kimsquit man mentioned in an ancient story.

Saikwaio·sem: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.

sai·mis ɬɬalas: The constant blinking of the eyes.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Sa·iut: Thunder, anthropomorphized. 192*
Sa·iyuts: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man. [821] sa·ltsi: Historical account; the term does not include ancestral myths or other personal property. [173]
sa·lkstmm: 1—Food distributed by the donor of a kusiut dance; the term is also applied to presents given instead of food. [431]
2—Food stored up for this purpose, or even for a meal.
sa·lpsit: Cannibalistic incubus. [257] sa·lpstnm: Presents given as "Food" by a bridegroom and his relatives to the bride's kinsmen when the latter come to his house on the wedding day. [585] sa·lskbidimut: Profession of kusiut executioner. [431] sa·lskwalas: Object obtained by a shaman from a supernatural being and displayed by him. [463]
sa·mi: Sockeye salmon. [825]
Sanalamulelts Alquntam: One of the sons of the supreme god.
Sanawisnumlaix: Supernatural being who has the prerogative of scratching in the land above.
Sanutlam or Sanutlkmdimut: One of the names of Mount Nusqalst as chief.
Sanuxmaxots, "The Light Bringer": 1—One of Raven's names as chief.
2—Ancestral name of a Stuax man.
3—A celebrated Bella Coola hunter and chief.
sata·x; vocative, sata·i; vocative plural, sata·xwa·ks: Comrade, especially one engaged in an enterprise with the speaker.
sa·tla: Spoon-shaped river canoe.
Satla: Village at point between North and South Bentinck Arms.
Sat'yuts: River flowing into the middle Bella Coola from the north.
Sa·tma: Death, anthropomorphized. [761] salalx: Whetstone, archaic.
Sa·tsi': 1—Kimsquit River. [412]
2—Village near the mouth of the river.
Sa·tskumg: Inhabitants of the Kimsquit River valley. [101]
satskwal·a: Raft.
Sa·tsmnan·i: Shaman's name acquired from Death.
sawa: Pillow. [573]
sawadjst, "Pillowness": Kusiut ceremonial at which no call is present.
sapi, vocative, sapinao: Brother or sister younger than speaker, especially the youngest of a family. [601] Sapinao: Proper name of a youngest brother mentioned in an ancient story.
sasbam: Bracken. [824]
sasnanos: Tide flats. [823]
sabdjalt: Heart.
Sabualsam: That part of Song"' which did not fall in the crash at the beginning of time.
Samhad: Village on Rivers Inlet.
Samsiulan·i: Part of a peculiar repository.
sammalkdimut, "Like Salmon": The so-called "Winter Salmon," probably steelhead salmon, obtained by Raven in the beginning of time.
sa'mtsu, "Resting Place": Limit of the sun's course. The word for December is connected with this. [805] sanlwalam: Leader of musicians. [821]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

sa·qwa·t: String figure.
Saskwanuts: Harbour on east side of King Island.
[227] sdjidji'is: Movable box-like container which can be raised at a salmon-weir.
Sekakmōn·a: 1—Supernatural herring woman, or perhaps herring head.
2—Carrier murderer living in the last century.
[823] sekilāxt: Rock crystal used in kusiut initiation rites.
[822] sekima siālamkek: River net for salmon.
Setsalānt: Echo.
Sexsexqālaix: Supernatural being who advises the supreme god.
Sexsexqwalxelaoslaix, "The Strengthener of the Breathing": One of Ťlitcāplilān·a's names, and hence a designation given to shamans.
[805] Siālxelāx: Ancestral name created on earth by a Łomqo·ts man.
[825] Siałam, "When Herrings Spawn": Third moon after the winter solstice.
[805] sidāgsu: One of the river sculpins, the so-called cat-fish.
Sidakaos di Ano°likwolsaix, "The Coming of Ano°likwolsaix": Fourth moon after the summer solstice.
sinatla: Servants; the term is used to describe the relationship of the supernatural beings to the supreme god.
[805] Si'ishlitl, "The Time for Eating Dog Salmon": Second moon after the summer solstice.
Si'iswai·stl, "The Time for Eating Cohoe Salmon": Third moon after the summer solstice.
[584] si'illiukek: Presents, given unostentatiously, at the time when a proposal of marriage is broached.
[431] si'iyikim, "The Ability to Walk": Strength or stability as obtained for children by the repurchase of their mother from their father.
[583] Sismt, "Sits Down": Moon of the winter solstice.
[805] Sisāml, "Time for Eating Spring Salmon": Moon of the summer solstice.
Sikālamak, "Time When Sockeye Salmon Ascend the Rivers": First moon after the summer solstice.
[104] siki, "One who Cures": Functionary who protects novices at kusiut and sisaok rites.
Sikiliktmm: Evil supernatural being who acts as executioner for his fellows in the land above.
[805] Siłulx, "Time for Making Salmon-Weirs": Fourth moon after the winter solstice.
Sikwalxwlelx: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
Sikwldjut: Ancestral name of a Stuix man.
Sikxm: Chief of mythical house in the sky.
Silias: Celebrated composer.
[226] siltmaq: Salmon-weir.
sinaxgme'ax: Sisaok head-dress.
[827] sininits: Breath, or power of being alive, an element in the human body.
[761] si·nipodjoxstmax: Hide-and-seek as played by two boys.
Simptcus: Man led astray by a supernatural being in the beginning of time.
[805] Sinomwak, "Time for the Use of Olachen Hand-Nets": Fifth moon after the winter solstice.
[726] Sinulkemitl, "Where It Spoke": Outpost near mouth of the Kwatna River, occupied to give warning in times of danger.
Sinunukalilum: Benign supernatural being who causes Cannibals to return from the land above.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*192 sisa: Supernatural good luck.
[821] sikuoas: Fog.
[825] sika': Pack-rat.
sik: Mind or mentality.
[828] siłłan: Place of lucky finds, such as a point where whales drift ashore.
sixotleältwa: Cannibal recently returned from the land above.
Sdilälan·i: One of the first women to settle at Sałia in the beginning of time.
sumd: Mountain.
[825] sumłk or sumłkts: Salmon, generic form.
sumłumnikdas: (Probably) viscera of an animal, archaic.
Sumsiutaäks: One of the first women to settle at Green Bay in the beginning of time.
[173] sumsma: Story, i.e., a legend which, lacking sociological significance, can be related by anyone.
Sumtus: Woman mentioned in an ancient story.
[822] Sunk'lusam: Bella Coola chief.
Sunłominit: Darkness, anthropomorphized.
[828] sunłus: Anger.
sunx: Sun.
Sunxäkila: 1—One of the first men to settle at Green Bay in the beginning of time.
2—Name received by one of the first settlers at Alqälxl in the beginning of time.
Sunxälotla: 1—"The Light Maker": Name of the supreme god with reference to his control of the sun.
2—Ancestral name of a Bella Coola man.
3—A'alk name of a Kimsquit man.
4—Sussok name of a Kimsquit man.
Sunxan·a: 1—Daughter of the supreme god.
2—Bella Coola woman.
[827] sunxki: Mucus.
Sunxl, "Sunny": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
suqwlsiak: Game played with miniature spears.
[575] susook: 1—Society intimately connected with chiefs.
2—Member of the society.
susutl: Supernatural creature somewhat resembling a double-headed salmon.
Susuxakila: Shaman's name of a Sunxl woman.
sukiak': Present, invisible to all but the owner, given by Ťlitcałilän·a to the one favoured.
[601] sukum: Father's sister or mother's sister (in either direct or indirect address).
[583] sumuuka: The ceremonial strength acquired by a child through the repurchase of its mother.
[431] suqo·si: Presents given as "Food" by a bridegroom and his relatives to the bride's kinsmen when the latter come to his house on the wedding day.
[585] suqunk': Western dock (plant).
[824] sisuwatualp: Snowberry.
suxuałaimu: Distribution of carpentry tasks prior to a potlatch.
[825] suxmmsta, "Food Supply": Synonym for sel'alum, ancestral hunting-ground.
skalk': Porcupine.
[824] skal·uts: Black huckleberry.
[821] skälutslain: Eye-lashes of the supreme god, i.e., sunbeams.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

shalk': Devil's-club.
shälnämudits: To lament ceremonially, the term used to describe the reason for a memorial potlatch. [824] Shämł, "Ashes": Ancestral name created for a Snuhsli chief about 1910. [765] shämtsk: Supernatural creature dwelling in water.
shay: Anus.
shänm: Splinters projecting upwards from the bole of a broken tree-trunk. [824] Shamolsymän-a: One of the first women to settle at Snuhsli in the beginning of time.
Shatpts: Chief of the spring salmon.
shatsämhm: Narrow strips of goat skin with wool attached, distributed at marriage. [585]
shelists: Merganser. [825]
shelwadjut, "The Opening": Ceremony when the first public presents are given to the family of a future wife, following the announcement of betrothal. [584]
shi: To cure, especially with the aid of a frenzied beating of sticks. [431] Shimutcitl: Snux man mentioned in an ancient story.
shimp, "Cure Yel": Call of invitation to a kusiut dance in the upper Bella Coola valley.
shinwds: Cloud. [825]
shma: Thick hide, either of moose or caribou. [412]
shma: Semi-circular knife used by women for cutting salmon.
shmaix, shmanl, or shmdjut: 1—Frenzied beating of sticks for curing purposes, especially when the patient is a member of a secret society. [755]
2—Final kusiut rite at end of the ceremonial season.
shimim: To cure by means of the frenzied pounding of sticks.
Shml, "The Charred Portion of a Half-Consumed Log": a'alk name obtained in the beginning of time.
Shmuänl: House used by a group of first settlers near Snux in the beginning of time.
Shmuältn-a: Daughter of the first settlers at Nuqalst in the beginning of time.
sha'tcalx: Fungus. [824]
shlsmaixta: 1—Box made of strands of cedar-bark. [415]
2—Ancient name of nsook head-dress.
shy: Ceremonial designs executed on the exterior front wall of a house.
shshk': Rose.
Shslikwan-a: Kusiut name of a Kimsquit man. [825]
shsil: Wasp.
Shslsemmänta: Rock on shore of North Bentinck Arm where war trophies were washed. [727]
Shyushsl: Name of house brought down by first settlers at Slskisl in the beginning of time; the term was also applied by them to one of their female relatives.
shsi, socatlu, shsai: Parent-in-law or child-in-law. [601] shtay: Suitable place in the river for setting olachen nets.
shta: Game played with throwing stones.
shustut: Synonym for yearman, the tangible or intangible prerogative possessed by some kukusiut in addition to a dance rite. [424]
shwa-akwa: River sculpin. [825]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Sxaē·y': Affluent of the middle Bella Coola.
Sxaqwala: Kimsquit woman mentioned in an ancient story.
Sxaqwmnāl: 1—Copper Raven that perched on house of first settlers at Alqālxal in the beginning of time.
2—Name given to the Raven design used by the first settlers at Stax in the beginning of time.
sxasaik: Skeleton. The word is obviously a derivative of saik.
Sxaxlkāl: 1—"The Wise One": One of the more important supernatural beings.
2—Ancestral name of a Tsimsal man.
Sxaxmkāl: Name of salmon mentioned in origin myth of Alqālxal, probably a supernatural designation.
Sxaxmlkānt': Name of salmon mentioned in origin myth of Alqālxal, probably a supernatural designation.
[374] Sxaxlkāt, Cold: A supernatural being.
Sxaxlaxwal, "The Mystery of Alqantām": The place where the supreme god puts what he wishes to conceal, such as the correct solution of the Mystery dance. The concept is semi-anthropomorphized.
sxaxp: Generic name for several supernatural animals.
sxaxpadjāx·a: Right front corner of a house on entering.
Sxaxri: Pronunciation of Sxalsli by a man with idiosyncratic r usage.
Sxaloli, "Place of Dog Salmon": Village in the middle Bella Coola valley.
[965] sxaloloxlm, "A Shoring Up": Term used to describe the functions of mourning songs.
Sxalkānāl, "Box": 1—One of the first women to settle on the upper Dean in the beginning of time.
2—Box in Sxmayaw's house.
3—Name of a Tāl·io man derived from the last.
Sxalc·ōl, "Place of No Falls": Village in the upper Bella Coola valley.
Sxalhmy: Kusiut name of a Bella Coola man.
Sxalqomikāsta: Point between North and South Bentinck Arms.
[821] sxatrālāxt: Race of dwarfs, presumably mythical.
[778] Sxalxlarnanem: Whirlwind, anthropomorphized.
Sxalxlāxāl: Generic term for four supernatural, eagle-like creatures.
Sxamāl: Place on South Bentinck Arm where curative power is localized.
sxapaxlāmat, "Bring Light": Call of invitation to a kusiut dance in the lower Bella Coola valley.
sxapa·ālk: One who seeks embers.
Sxaxmalāmāx·a: One of the first women to settle at Tāl·io in the beginning of time.
Sxaxwaxlāl: Name of first settlers at Alqālxal in the beginning of time.
Sxayalālxax·a: Rivers Inlet name used by a Bella Coola kusiut woman.
[484] selāx: Food carried for consumption on a journey; the term is also applied to the provender brought from above by the first people in the beginning of time.
sel'ālam: Hunting-ground owned by an ancestral family.
Sem: Woman mentioned in a song.
sem'': see dā sem'' dā.
Semwaāk: 1—One of the first men to settle at Nalāax in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.
Semwax·a: One of the first women to settle at Nalāax in the beginning of time.
[431] semwadjat: Synonym for sywonadj, the preliminary presents given to guests at a memorial potlatch.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 192*

Sonq'mai: Kusiut name of a Stuax man.
Sopos: Kusiut name of a Tsmoil man.
sopoleaxmm: Scalp.
sopualáh': Gnarled projection of wood from a birch knot. [824]
Spaixpaxpumán-a: Supernatural being who wakens his fellows in the morning.
Spanhálinaix: One of the first women to settle on the Kimsquit River in the beginning of time.
spánie.ts: Temporary camping-place.
Spatcahlt, "The First Born": Name brought from Kitlobe to Kimsquit by a marriage in the beginning of time.
spálki: Star.
spekm, "A Washing of the Hands": Term used to describe a marriage arranged by the offending party to settle a feud. [581]
spepandots: The forcing upwards of water at high tide, through openings in the rocks at sea-level. [823] spikpikmm: Person who pounds cedar-bark.
spikts: Tools for pounding cedar-bark, specifically the upper beater.
Spipixinán-i: Region on the east side of Dean Channel, about one mile from its head, where supernatural power is localized. [778] Spi'xnunsta: Island west of Namu.
spkx: 1—Pudenda.
2—Variety of smmq with female organs. [824]
spoxáltcua: Unidentified berry. [821]
S'ps', Cold Wind: A supernatural being.
Spskwasta: Meeting place of chiefs on rock ledge behind Spmqo-ts; the term is probably applied to any meeting place of chiefs.
spla: War-knife used by Raven in the beginning of time.
sputy: Olachen. [825]
spux: Eagle down.
spundjut, "Eagle Down-nest": Rhetorical reference to a present for which no return is expected. [431] spuxpux: Long, delicate feathers on an eagle's breast. [825]
Spuxpuxhallaix: Kusiut name of a woman sent down near Nusfalst in the beginning of time.
Spuxpuxpá'mpdimut: Sisook name of Xusais origin.
Spuxspuxta: Sisook name of a Kimsquit woman.
sqál-a: Unidentified berry. [824] sqaolt: Alder wood, dead and dried. [825] sqáfts: Spring salmon which have spawned.
sqadi: Hunting ability. The term usually refers to the ability of the supernatural artisans to hunt, i.e., to kill, human beings.
sfalst or sfalstuat: Stone, suitable for axes, found on Mount Nusfalst. The name of the mountain is said to be derived from this. [316]
sqama: 1—Chest. [103]*
2—Smoke cure for diseases of the chest.
Sqamí: Land of Ashes.
sfaxusts: First proposal of marriage if made by relatives of the man. [584] sfals: River sand mixed with small pebbles.
Sqatcle: Mountain on north side of the lower Bella Coola River. [823] sfaxm: Flood.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

[824] squilp: Cedar roots.
squt: Sling.
[578] squtqtkm: To use a sling.
squli: Term of opprobrium applied to a woman, signifying slave ancestry.
[821] squmma: Fleecy cloud.
squlz: Muzzle-like power which binds the mouth of a Cannibal against ordinary [412] food.
sqma: Wooden comb.
S'qa's'i: Land of Ashes, alternative term for Squmi.
sqo: Umbilical hernia.
[601] sqodymu: Distant relative of female sex, when referred to by man.
squhtindjut: Long phallus.
Squmi: Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
sqoos: Unconsumed portion of share of food carried away by guests from a meal.
sqoosly: Food distributed for carrying away as sqoos.
[415] squlz: Large, flat, soft basket of broad strips of bark.
sqmoos: Presents given by guests to the donor of a memorial potlatch.
[431] squlp: Magic.
squm: Sudden start that expels the spirit.
[824] squpaint: Outer plank of cedar, convex and bark-covered on one side.
squsal: Love song or other non-ceremonial composition.
squskm: Fern, probably one of the genus Aspidium.
[533] squslwskm: 1—Theme of a song dealing with current events, especially allusions to the faults of someone present.
2—Singers who use this type of composition.
[825] squsl-ann: Large, unidentified bird.
[374] Squtkhm: Heat: A supernatural being.
Sqwli: Kwakiut name of a Bella Coola man.
[825] sqw'an: Loon.
sqwi-ol: Mountain goat marrow, a food which is said to have remarkable powers of [262] preventing hunger.
Stalqalmm, "The Increase of the Sun's Heat through the Addition of Five Sticks": Nuxalk name obtained in the beginning of time.
stalhmq; plural, stastlhmq; vocative plural, stastlhmq:
1—Chief.
2—One of the first men to settle at Ilqalmt in the beginning of time.
3—One of the first men to settle at Sunut in the beginning of time.
4—Name created by Smaoan for a grandson.
5—Sunut name of a Kimsquit man.
[601] sun: Mother, term commonly used by an adult in indirect address.
[825] standhkim: Bat.
standimut: Step-mother; the term is also applied to other women of the generation [601] older than the speaker and related to him by marriage.
stantsunu: Elderly female relatives of the same ancestral family as the speaker.
[614] slank: Whetstone.
Stanu: Man mentioned in a story.
[412] Stap': Mountain near Tal-in.
stapam, "What Is Hidden": The correct solution of the Mystery dance.
stimum: Archaic term for chiefs, now used only rhetorically.
[824] sluir: Cranberry.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

sk̓ʷqhkw': Goods collected by the relatives of a man when working on his commission as carpenter or other artisan in preparation for a potlatch.
Sxɛ'tsxem: A short-legged person who tries to cross a river; name of a string figure.
sxeq': That part of a house on either side of the central fire. [513] Sxiteme: 1—Sleep, a supernatural being.
2—Sleep, intangible hazlat prerogative. [585]
sxiuxnem: Presents given to the one who leads a bride to her husband during a wedding. [431] Sxqwenhsxkwi, "Dark-Shade": A supernatural being. [412] sx-pil: Shadow. [601]
sxtqumas: Hammer, archaic.
sxukes: Brother-in-law or sister-in-law.
sk̓ɛmalis: Shaman's stick with power of life at one end and death at the other.
stiben: Bloody grease that rises to the surface of the water when a seal is cooked.
stik: That on which a chief sits, that is, his ceremonial prestige gained by the distribution of much wealth. [283] shlts: 1—Caribou hide.
2—Thong made of caribou hide. [825]
shsem: Chequer-work cedar-bark matting. [285] sitsɛlt: Caribou.
shmi: Love charm consisting of hair of the one desired mixed with other ingredients. [832] Shmsile: Supernatural being who causes nightmares. [828] shmsɛ or shmsɛnkh: Mortals, in contradistinction to supernatural beings.
shmstaliktsis: Body.
shmstɛnkhsem: Assumption of human characteristics by mankind in the beginning of time.
Sthmawukinmɛ-a: Professional name of a female berry-picker.
Sthmawukanem: Professional female berry-picker. [825] shka: Mountain goat grease.
shkaltqa: Castor. [824]
Shqhal, "What Has Been Divided": Village in the lower Bella Coola valley.
Shshk: Son of the first settlers at Green Bay in the beginning of time. [825] shmɛs: Octopus.
Shsakhlu: One of Raven's female Crow relatives. [386] shqmarma: Red rock paint.
shka: Singer's baton.
shsalt: Text. [823]
shte-qaas: Part of a river where there are rapids and projecting stones.
stake: 1—Memorial-post, decorated with crest, erected near grave. [211]
2—Plain posts erected near grave to indicate major ceremonies performed by the deceased. [764]
Stuxa: 1—Village in the upper Bella Coola valley. [262]
2—Famous hunter mentioned in an ancient story.
stuxem: Dried dog salmon soaked in water.
shmsnik: Masked representation of a dead person in crest form.
Sly', "Rainwater-Dripping-through-the-Roof": A supernatural being.
sulmlt: Black raspberry. [824]
sulster: Ocean.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

 192*

Syngmastas: Supernatural children guarded by the hermaphrodite in the land above.
Syuil: Name taken by a Stuax man in the beginning of time.
sxtogmuil: Place in stream or river where a salmon has just jumped.
sxmoit-a: Name created upon earth.
sxmapaxit: Deer.
sxmut: Water-tight receptacle made from the internal organs of a mountain goat.
Sxnakmgmtm, "What Sweeps Away the Food": First moon after the winter solstice.
sxwomqs, "Tears": Preliminary presents given to guests at a memorial potlatch.
sxw'ilamkis, "Short-lived": Rhetorical term used with reference to the death of a young chief.
sxyaxwi: An adolescent girl, not yet subject to the full taboos of womanhood.

[825] [415] [805] [431] [195]

T

lakalst: Cave.
lal: 1—Son, in direct address. As a courtesy title this is often used for lads unrelated to the speaker.
2—Masculine suffix.
Talalwala: 1—One of the first men to settle at Schooner Pass in the beginning of time.
2—One of the first men to settle at Swalv-tl in the beginning of time.
talamtmak: Desertion of husband by his wife.
lain: Dorsal fin of a fish.
talasing: Heavy kind of copper.
talumax: Tournament between rival villages.
Tal-la: 1—Village at head of South Bentinck Arm.
2—Generic name applied to all villages on South Bentinck Arm.
Tilakta-a: Nuagual name embodied in a Swalali origin myth.
Tamtmale-pata, "The Breather": One of Thitaplita-a's names and hence a designation given to shamans.
Tamalua: Stuax man mentioned in an ancient story.
tapamamum: The issuing abroad of invitations to a memorial potlatch.
lapta: Forest consisting of dense underbrush between big trees.
lapul: Blood-stained cedar-bark pad.
ta-s: 1—Bird arrow.
2—Weapon, invisible to mortals, with which a wolf kills its prey.
Tas; tacatas, Tatas: 1—Designation of supreme god used in prayer.
2—Father, term used by child.
lalkamlp: Water-lily.
Ta-pa-al: Land inhabited by the Kwakiutl.
Tatkawam: Leading chief of Alpalial and reputed founder of the village.
Tappkwam: Bella Coola chief living in the last century.
tahas: Type of sea-going canoe with bow and stern identical.
tamlaal-ki: 1—White-fronted goose.
2—Type of sea-going canoe named from the bird.
lamat: Husband (di tahamatalai: My husband).
tamaw': River.
Tamwatha: Chief who came to Cape Mudge in the beginning of time and later moved to Bella Coola.

[601]

[586] [825] [628] [101]

[824]

[601] [824]

[825] [601]

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

Tsi·dis: Kitlobe River.
Tsilwakts: Eagle that perched on top of a post supporting the sky in the beginning of time. [825] tsima: Animal's entrails.
tsi·t: Note of the kwakwas, foretelling death. [763] tsitsowi: Cormorant, in Bella Bella language.
tsklusmam: Goods taken to her husband by a deserting wife on her return to him. [586] Tskwi: Restoration Bay.
Tsilt, bald eagle: 1—Village in the lower Bella Coola valley. [431]
2—Bald eagle. [825]
3—Name created for himself by one of the first settlers at Kimsquit in the beginning of time.
tsu: Novice, either kusiut or shaman.
tsuttmem or tsuttlsix: First night of a kusiut dance.
tskankdmut: 1—Heavy coppers in Lemoqua's house.
2—Name obtained from these by a Sattia man in the beginning of time.
tski·kdimat: Kusiutem rite in which the performer's head appears to be pulled off. [415] tsla: Closely woven basket of spruce roots.
tslaqusix: Any act of an unclean nature which prevents a supernatural being from seeing the perpetrator. [784] tslla: Presents distributed when a nusek initiate dances. They are provided by the donor "To Shield Our Eyes" from the tutuinam and serve to recompense the carpenters and others who have assisted in the rite. [431] tsma: Belt. [465]
tsna: Nettle. [824]
Tsomlkts: Woman resident in the far north in the beginning of time.
tspadjut: The giving of presents to the servants and associates of the donor of a potlatch in return for being served with food in a rude manner. [431] tspeit: Small woodpecker, species unidentified. [824] tspotka: Winter wren.
tsqual: Spawning sockeye salmon. [825] tsubilla: Intangible kusiut prerogative consisting of the right to scratch the genitalia. [424] tsulkm: Prompter.
Tsumlkts: One of the first women to settle at Snuboll in the beginning of time.
Tsuskilak: One of the first men to settle at Tsumoi in the beginning of time. [824] tsumtulp: Unidentified tree of which the bark was smoked. [825] tsuskumg: To grasp firmly with both hands, archaic.
tutupin·i: Trout, plural.
tutu'ses'alsuk: Ceremony resembling a potlatch given by a chief for the benefit of his fellow-villagers, especially during the year preceding his main rite.
tutuyt, "What Is Good": Synonym for tsimamimum, the repurchase of a wife from her husband. [583] Tutmi·as: Synonym for Nustilalsalkm: Supernatural being who shamelessly begs food from his fellows.
tutuinam: 1—Masked figure, usually in crest form, which appears to nusek and a'alk initiates.
2—An appearance, that is, the coming into sight of what is usually invisible.
Tsulklit: Supernatural hunter of mountain goats.

2:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

192*

xosa: Kwakiutl term for presents distributed as "Eagle down."
ɣota: Scoop-net for catching salmon in rivers. [227] ɣɣpanhqta: Head-dress of eagles' tails worn by kusiut dancers. [292] xwanul: Spring water.
Xwastlo: Settlement in the Carrier country. [824] xwe·k': Cow parsnip.
Xwelbon: Name obtained in the beginning of time from the Skeena people in whose language it is said to mean whale.
Xwinxwitsahmlaix: Shaman who obtained his power from Thunder.
Xwisamkila: Daughter of a Kitlobe chief living in the beginning of time.
xwlxwila: Wrestling.
Xwodjw·i, "The Crash": Name taken by one of the first settlers at Nuiteux in the beginning of time but long since changed to a kusiut designation.
xwoxwoqum: 1—Hummingbird.
2—One of the first men to settle at Ālqālxul in the beginning of time. [825] xwoxwontsl·aix: Puppet-patron in the form of a hummingbird.
xwoqa·xts di siut: The concluding ritual of the kusiut season.
ɣwosäw·i: Gambling game played with crabapple sticks. [525] Xwolxlmis, "The One Whose Work Has Failed": Professional name of a kusiut marshal.
xwhatmak: The desertion of her husband by a wife. [586]

Y

Yakothes: Ancestral name of a Stalx man.
Ya·k"axwaxwa: Kimsquit man mentioned in an allegedly historical account. [576] yao: "Hello!" "Hail!" or "Greetings!"
ye·: Exclamation having the significance of, "May you have a safe passage," said when a corpse is drawn through the roof.
Yeälos: One of the first men to settle at Nuisqualt in the beginning of time.
'Yeäxdji: Bella Bella man mentioned in an ancient story.
yearmax: 1—Prerogative, tangible or intangible, which some kukusiut possess in addition to a dance.
2—Similar prerogative formerly displayed in sisook rites.
yeix: 1—Call, that is, that which impels a kusiut to dance.
2—Kusiut whistle.
Ye'mdjälaos: Man sent down west of Kwatna in the beginning of time.
yetla: Term, implying both wealth and good fortune, applied to a man able to give a memorial potlatch soon after the death of a relative.
yeyä'timut: Presents given by a prospective bridegroom to his future father-in-law. [431] ye: Good, adjective. [584]
yeki: Mountain goat. [825] Yel-xäiaix: Goose Island.
yehle: "All Right," cry used in a kusiut dance.
Yelhal·a: Man mentioned in an ancient story.
Yelyelhuslaix: One of the first men to settle at Ālqālxul in the beginning of time.
yelhelmem: Bringing down of a call by means of the rite of sawadjut.
yellelaiul: Presents given by the bride's relatives to the groom's when they enter her house on the wedding day. [431] [585]

6:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1892
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

844 fessional midwives. The child is washed in warm water. For ten days [846] the mother must remain in this hut. Father and mother must not go [825] near the room for a year (according to Nusk'ɛlu'sta, for ten days), else the salmon would take offence.

553 The child is soon given its first name. On this occasion the whole [852] tribe is invited to a feast, the name is made public, and the guests receive small presents. The child retains this name until it becomes a member [556] of the Kū'siūt, when it is given its Kū'siūt name. This ceremony takes place after puberty has been reached. About this period the young man gives his first potlatch and assumes the Qē'mtaioa name.

881 When a girl reaches puberty she must stay in the shed which serves as her bedroom, where she has a separate fireplace. She is not allowed to descend to the main part of the house, and must not sit by the fire of the family. For four days she must remain motionless in a sitting posture. She fasts during the daytime, but is allowed a little food and drink at a very early hour in the morning. After this term she may leave her room, but only through a separate opening. She must not yet [292] come to the main room. When leaving the house she wears a large hat, [821] which protects her face against the rays of the sun. It is believed that if the sun should shine on her face her eyes would suffer. She may pick berries on the hills, but must not come near the river or sea for [262] a whole year. She must not eat fresh salmon, else she would lose [261] her senses, or her mouth would be transformed into a long beak. She must not chew gum or eat snow (see Fifth Report of Committee, 1889, p. 838).

584 If a young man wishes to marry a girl he goes, surrounded by his friends, to the house of the girl's father and states his intention. His [431] friends carry food and presents, and if the father accepts the suit he sends out a young man, who receives the food and presents and carries them into the house. Sometimes the father does not accept the offer at once. In such cases the young man may repeat the same ceremony until he is finally rejected or accepted. After the time of the marriage has [527] been agreed upon between the contracting parties, and the day preceding the marriage has arrived, the young man invites all the people to a feast, during which he states that he is to be married on the following day. He asks a number of men, generally from twenty to thirty, and four [302] women to assist him. On the following forenoon they assemble, and accompany the bridegroom to the girl's house. They sing outside, and 585 four of the men dance. All of them have their faces painted red. Finally they enter, and the bridegroom gives a large amount of property to the girl's father. Then the girl leaves her parents and goes to the bridegroom, bringing him also a large amount of property which has been [431] given to her for this purpose by her parents and relatives. He in turn gives her blankets and other apparel of the best quality, and distributes presents among her relatives. This is repeated after some time. All he has given to his bride and her relatives is repaid to him with interest. A rich girl will repay twice or three times the amount given by the man. At the time of the marriage the bride's father may promise the groom to give him his Sisau'kH secrets as soon as the pair have their first child.
[851] The children may belong to the father's or mother's gens, as the parents may choose.

586 In case of a separation the wife refunds the amount of purchase-money. The children may stay with either parent, or part of them may tradition of the Awi'k'enôx as an explanation of the ceremonial. The only modification which I note in this tradition is that the Cannibal's wife is described as sucking out through their ears the brains of children,—an incident which I heard related of the mother of ALk'unta'm.[1] He calls him "Beck-Beck-Kvalanit, and in the Bella Coola dialect, Pâh-Pâh Kûalanusiya." This word is decidedly of Kwakiutl origin, meaning "the one who eats human flesh at the mouth of the river (or at the north end of the world)." Neither have I been able to find any mask representing this being among the Bella Coola tribe. The masks which they use in connection with the Cannibal ceremony are of quite a different character (Plate XII, Figs. 1-8). I am the more inclined to think that Mr. Jacobsen did not clearly distinguish between the customs and traditions of various tribes, since he introduces "Ganikilla Ko" (Qa'nig'ilak[a]) in the traditions of the Bella Coola, while it is distinctively a legend of the Kwakiutl tribes of the extreme northwest of Vancouver Island. Jacobsen does not distinguish clearly between the sisau'k' and the kō'siut, stating that the kō'siut dances are performed during the sisau'k' in the same way as, among the Kwakiutl, a LaÔ'laxa may be celebrated during the ts'e'ts'aēqa. This may be, but theoretically the two ceremonials must be considered entirely distinct. According to the information which I received, sisau'k' dances may be held in summer, in which case the kō'siut could not possibly form part of the sisau'k' ceremonial. When, on the other hand, the sisau'k' takes place during the kō'siut period, it would naturally be accompanied by kō'siut dances.

7:Boas E-5 (1886-ca. 1890)1900 NE6 Bellacoola NE6

As stated before, the sisau'k' is a ceremonial in which the legend of the clan is illustrated by means of dramatic performances. At the same time valuable presents are distributed among the guests who are invited to witness the ceremonial. The value of the gifts amounts often to several thousand dollars. At this time the family legend is told in general outlines, but the details of the legend are kept a secret, and are transmitted only to those who are initiated in the sisau'k' of the clan. It seems that we must consider the transmission of the sisau'k' legend in the following manner: At any given time it is the property of the chief of the family, who, at the time of the celebration, transfers his rights to his successor, generally to his son. The full tradition is kept secret by the owner. It seems that there is a close analogy between the conditions prevailing in the northwest and those found among the southwestern Indians, among whom certain priests are guardians of traditions. Among the tribes of the northwest coast the chief of a family is the guardian and owner of the family tradition, while among the southwestern tribes the priest is the guardian of the tradition belonging to a clan or to a fraternity. My impression is, however, that among the northwestern

[1] Verhandlungen der Berliner Gesellschaft für Anthropologie, Ethnologie und Urgeschichte, 1891, p. 394.
[2] Ibid., 1894, p. 292.

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

receive $100 in return. The last sum is now the value of the copper. This second bestowal may take place before the owner has paid the $50 that he owes to the original possessor. There is no time limit to Bella Coola debts since it adds to the debtor's prestige to pay off his indebtedness, publicly of course, when his creditor is giving a ceremony of any kind. At every change in ownership announcement is made of the history of the copper and of its value at every stage of its existence. In this way the worth of a copper increases until it is fit to be thrown into the fire after the passing of a dead kinsman. When one that has been used as änuxop' is at last cast into the flames, and later rescued from them, it is customary for the new owner to use it once more as änuxop'. On the other hand, a copper that has been raised to value by the gift of a name, painting, and so forth, is normally again revalued in the same way when rescued from oblivion. There is no definite rule about this; it is only a tendency.

426 556* 435 556*

The value of a copper acquired from either a white man or a member of a foreign tribe is equivalent to its purchase price, and can be raised in any one of the ways employed for one that has been thrown into a fire.

In many cases the donor of a potlatch prefers not to be the actual possessor of a copper at the time of the entry of his deceased relative, though he always arranges to obtain one. When the masked figure has disappeared, the donor stands up and says:

426 556*

"I have nothing to make bone for my ancestor. Chief So-and-so, please give me your copper."

The chief so called upon transmits the copper with a statement of its value and the recipient throws it into the fire. Nothing is said about repayment, but the transaction has been public and everyone realizes that the chief must repay with 100 per cent interest when the seller gives his next ceremony. In this way the donor is able to use a copper without having had to pay for it at an inconvenient time when he needs all his wealth to give to his foreign guests. A chief often sells a copper

[432] [435]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

435 immediately before, or during the early stages of a potlatch, in order to receive goods immediately, but with the proviso that *556 it shall be returned to him for throwing into the fire. This [432] method has the advantage of providing the chief with goods [426] when required, and doubles the worth of the copper.

Coppers are not always rescued from the ashes and given to poor men. If one is still lying in the fire after several days, [764] the donor of the potlatch removes it and fastens it to the memorial-post over the grave of his deceased relative. It may be left there, or another chief wanting a copper may buy it from the donor and increase its value in the usual manner. Only a small price is paid in such circumstances, since the copper, having served its purpose, is practically valueless.

177 The Bella Coola state that in ancient times coppers were worth less than at present, and that the change in sentiment 435 regarding them is due to Kwakiutl influence. All agree that *556 the value placed upon them at Fort Rupert and Alert Bay is greater than elsewhere on the coast. The Bella Coola believe that the Kwakiutl distribute presents in respect to their coppers and that their values mount to enormous sums when the gifts are returned. It is clear that the importance of coppers, like the potlatch and other elements of culture, has increased in recent years through the influence of the coastal tribes.

*556 It is almost impossible to define coppers in the nomenclature of economic theory. They are not mere articles of barter, since they have no practical use outside the ceremonies of chiefs. Nor are they standardized units of trade or cur- [436] rency, since each differs not only from all other coppers, but also at different periods. In a sense they serve as tokens of [211] what has been expended; representations of them may be carved and painted on totem-poles where they serve as marks [532] of the goods which the chief has given away, but this is only a minor consideration. A copper can perhaps best be described [426] as an investment which can be applied only to one purpose, [435] "the making of bone for a deceased" person. It grows more valuable at every transmission in accordance with the goods ex-

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

old man came back to Bella Coola with his son, a man about twenty-five years of age. During his absence all his relatives had died, and he was forgotten. He went to the house of a man with whom his ancestors had intermarried generations ago, explained who he was, and was welcomed. The old man and his son have since lived there, although it is doubtful if the owner of the house had ever heard of their existence, and the son cannot even speak the Bella Coola language. 602 476

X and Y themselves are not entirely overlooked in the exchange of presents between their two families. If Y's father is well pleased with his son-in-law he may show this not only publicly, which redounds to his own credit, but by the communication of secret lore such as a special number of nights for ceremonial chastity. Conversely, if Y should not be a kusiut, her father-in-law often asks her father's permission to make her a member of that society. The woman's father is naturally pleased and makes no objections; so she is initiated, using a name and prerogative embodied in her husband's family. Commonly too, they give her one of their ancestral names at any convenient ceremony later than the wedding. In conformity with the rules already explained, if Y should die childless the names return to X's relatives, but if there are children they pass to them. It is said that susaok names can never be transferred in this manner. 606 431 425 [785] [575] [553] [575]

Y's father and other relatives continue to take an interest in her ceremonial welfare and in her personal comfort. If X beats or otherwise abuses her, they expostulate; and if his cruelty becomes unbearable they shelter their daughter when she runs away from her husband. If X should murder Y, she would be revenged by her family. Only one instance of this was known, when the murderer avoided his pursuers by fleeing from the country. As a rule a wife is fairly well treated, though this depends on the character of the husband, the importance of her relatives, and the amount of goods expended to validate the marriage. Among slaves and persons of no influence, it is assumed that a husband may sell his wife as a 593 [602] [627] [567] [432] [648]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

593 slave, and this is believed to have occurred on one occasion 567 to the daughter of a chief.

432 Once, many hundred years ago, the daughter of a Bella Coola chief 148 was married to the son of Ťaxlexwam, a Bella Bella chief, living at Qoqayel. At the marriage, in Bella Coola, valuable presents were given by both families, and the girl went to live in Bella Bella with her husband. Some ten years later, Ťaxlexwam gave a large potlatch to which he had invited guests from all parts of the coast. As in duty bound, his daughter-in-law's relatives gave a certain amount of goods to rebuy her. They were not wealthy, so that the contribution was of small value. Ťaxlexwam had expected a larger present, and now found himself unable even to repay his debts to those who had assembled. He did not immediately show his resentment, but soon afterwards sold his daughter-in-law as slave to a Kitkatla chief. The Bella Coola were justly indignant, but could not make up their minds what to do in such an unprecedented case. The girl ultimately escaped and made her way home after lengthy wanderings (II, p. 505).

837 A husband demands faithfulness on the part of his wife, though he himself is often rather lax. Illicit intercourse is regarded, not as a deadly sin, but as an infringement of the husband's prerogatives. But if a woman should bear a child at a time when it was impossible for the husband to have been the father, due to absence, he would probably accept it as his [586] own and do no more than administer a beating, though some jealous men would divorce a wife for this. Bella Coola sentiment on such matters varies with the individual; it is universally considered to be a matter that concerns the husband [184] alone and he can do as he thinks fit. The daughters of chiefs are usually faithful to their husbands, whereas those of poorer persons, unrestrained by the valuables expended at their mar-
[682] riages, are more lax. If the husband should catch an adulterer, he can, if bold, slay him on the spot and the exaction of blood revenge would be uncalled for. Usually a fight ends the matter, though the offender's family may give presents to the aggrieved husband, and his wife's relatives may also make donations to atone for their daughter's failings. A husband does not share his wife with anyone, and a question as to the lending of a wife

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

539 She assumed it to be a forest fire, but, when she idly went near to investigate, her amazement was past all bounds at seeing a fine house filled
* 787 with valuables. Nor was her surprise lessened when she discovered that 'Yeāxdji was lord of it all. He welcomed her gladly, gave her a hearty meal, and sent back with her some seal meat for her child, only adding that it was to be eaten secretly as he did not wish his father to know of his good fortune.

"But," he added, "I don't mind if you send me any of the people except my father, especially any who were good to me long ago."

The slave woman thankfully carried the meat home to her child. But he, long deprived of proper food, ate so ravenously that night that a lump stuck in his throat and his coughing awoke Ḷomo'sala. The chief pounded the youngster's back until he vomited what was obviously a piece of seal. The slave woman, remembering 'Yeāxdji's order, tried to evade her master's questions as to where her son had obtained it, but at last she blurted out the truth, how the abandoned youth had become prosperous.

The slave woman and her friends moved to Ḷwiyai, where 'Yeāxdji used his power of thought to obtain for them houses filled with everything they could desire. But Ḷomo'sala and those left with him were starving, so that they too were driven to seek his aid, gladly marrying their daughters to him in return for his protection. He rapidly rose to a position of importance, being the husband of both real and fictitious wives, and was even able to provide his elder brothers with mates. Some of the women married to him became almost his slaves, as their families were unable to rebuy them.

Supernatural Good Luck

777 A third manner in which the Bella Coola can come into
* 787 contact with powers of another plane is through supernatural good luck. This consists in obtaining something from a super-
[224] natural being, usually a portion of its slain body, which acts [226] as a bait to fish, mammals, and even to such inanimate articles as blankets or skins. Even a tiny morsel placed on a weir will attract numerous salmon, or if set on a trap will prove an infallible lure to animals. When put in the owner's box, valuables will be attracted to it as steel to a magnet. Thus the fortunate possessor will be able to give many potlatches and to reach a [432] high position in the community. Since this good fortune is

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

wrapped up in a specific object it follows that the luck is transmissible; in fact, one of the chief advantages to the man who owns some valuable object is the wealth which he derives from selling a small portion of it. 777 787 * [432]

The Bella Coola term for supernatural good luck is siye, meaning, "What is Good." This can come from any being though it is most frequently obtained either from a mätsqus or a susiutl. The former resembles a toad of enormous size, with a blazing fire-like glow in its throat; the latter is a double-headed salmon or snake that can travel on land. The person who succeeds in killing one of these creatures can use the carcass as a lure to wealth, if he knows the proper means. The portion must be wrapped in an article that has been in close contact with the slayer, such as a piece of his soiled clothing. This must be kept carefully hidden for one year in a cranny to which no rain can penetrate, and after that it can be used as bait. There is equal potency in a stick or other object which has come in contact with the beast. Great danger is attached to the sight of a mätsqus or a susiutl, since death usually follows any incorrect attempt to gain wealth from either. The person who sees one of these creatures feels no ill effects until he draws near a fire, when his stomach bursts. All the Bella Coola agree that if a man has been close to one he can be saved by the use of certain medicines, but the following stories show that there is no clear-cut opinion as to which are the best. In fact, most families have knowledge of a specific cure which they regard as the most efficacious. [776] [776] [761] [757]

The opportunity to obtain supernatural good luck does not come solely to unfortunate individuals; indeed the Bella Coola state that it is fortuitous. It appears, however, that usually the person who is thus favoured is one who has practised ceremonial chastity, or is, through some other means, in a state of cleanliness pleasing to the supernatural. At any rate the danger of seeing such creatures is less to a man who is in a pure condition than to any other. Further, in most cases they are apt to appear to a person whose ancestors have seen one. [785]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

621 623 ters, and the village constitutes a unit for all dances; in fact [535] this ceremonial unity is its most important function.

[796] With the exception of a few villages built on the seashore, each Bella Coola settlement consists of a row of houses on the 361 river bank. These are of the usual rectangular, plank-built [184] type typical of the North-West Coast. In front of them stretches a sidewalk, usually supported by piles on the side [342] nearest the river to make it level. The houses, too, in many [171] cases have piles beneath their front ends, made necessary by the steep slope of the bank. In large villages there may be two rows of houses, behind and above one another. Usually there [481] is a rough path parallel to the row of houses at the very edge of the river. The number of houses varies; before the smallpox [164] epidemic some villages contained as many as thirty or forty, others, only two or three. There is no definite arrangement of the houses; anyone may build where there is a vacant space. [433] Much the same arrangement occurs in the sea-coast villages, each of which depends for its main sustenance on an ocean fish-trap, as the river villages depend on a salmon-weir.

342 The central part of each house is occupied by a large fire, [354] often sunk a considerable distance below the level of the floor, and around this is an open space free to all. Toward the side-walls are raised the partitions, forming bedrooms for the different families, or for different members of one. In many cases the flooring is removed in three or four parts of the house for small fires on which different groups cook, the central fire being used for heating and for more important meals. The [592] number of families occupying a house depends on its size; an [622] important chief, with many relatives, often builds an enormous house which is occupied by ten or more families; smaller houses contain only two or three. Life in the larger houses is free and open; people are constantly passing in and out, and any- [261] one present when food is being distributed is given a share as a matter of course. Most of the houses are decorated with [353] carved upright posts and paintings on the beams and back-wall. [535] A door through the latter leads to the back-room, so important in dances.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

ened by the age-long power of his ancestor. Finally, in old age a powerful chief is careless where he seats himself; his fame is so great that he can afford to disregard all conventions. 554 556* 622 [183]

POWER OF CHIEFS

It will be seen from the foregoing that chieftainship among the Bella Coola does not depend on hereditary rank, still less on an elective principle, but on the individual's prestige as displayed, especially in his ability to acquire for himself a firm seat by the giving of presents. As he continues to do so his influence becomes ever greater. Consequently, it is impossible to state clearly what are the powers of a chief; such depend upon his prestige and influence. For a Bella Coola chief has no executive or judicial authority; what deference is shown to him depends on his success as a man, a factor which is constantly rising or falling.

The coming of the white man has enabled the Bella Coola [177] to earn comparatively large sums of money by trapping and fishing. This in turn has enabled nearly everyone to give at [434] least one potlatch, a very different state of affairs from that which prevailed in the last century when it required years of toil for a man to amass the necessary food and skins. Consequently, in many towns there were no men who had given potlatches, so that a man's prestige was estimated by the [431] presents he had given at smaller ceremonies. Sometimes, moreover, a man preferred to increase his fame by giving rites [535] of a different nature, such as kusiut dances, and the presents then distributed might elevate him in the eyes of the community, to a position above that of a man who had given a potlatch. This, however, was unusual.

After a fourth potlatch a man is accorded a position of eminence, and is termed a numitl chief. Numitl is an untranslatable word, with the significance of "passage," an allusion to the amount of goods which have passed through his hands. Jealous and vulgar-minded persons pun on the word, applying [578]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

given as a slave to a Bella Coola, he was treated as a guest.[11] 567
Slaves were bartered between Bella Coola individuals as a [431] matter of course. Their value depended on sex, ability, and [435] industriousness, as well as on supply and demand. When there was an over-supply, the value of a slave fell to twenty or thirty [437] salmon, but whenever an owner found that someone wished to purchase a particular slave he endeavoured to raise the price.
If a foreigner borrowed goods in Bella Coola he usually had to [426] leave a relative as pledge. Thus, not many years ago, a Xuxais
Indian, from near Ootsa Lake, borrowed goods from a Kimsquit man and left his son as pledge. The goods were not returned, so the son was sold as a slave to the people of Kitimat.

It was not uncommon for a Bella Coola to lose his freedom 525 by gambling. At lehal especially, a player who had exhausted 567 his goods not infrequently wagered his children, or in extreme cases, himself. If he lost, his children, or himself, became the property of the winner. Unless speedily repurchased by some relative, such slaves were usually sold or given away at the first opportunity to a member of a foreign tribe, since it was considered improper for a man to hold a member of his own 567 tribe in servitude. The same course of action was taken on [628]
those rare occasions when one Bella Coola village fought [727] against its neighbour and prisoners were taken.

To the Bella Coola, who still consider a man's "power" in [554]
the land as dependent to a considerable extent on his ancestral myth, a slave's greatest misfortune lay in the fact that he had [773] no ancestral home, and hence no rights.

"No slaves came to earth with the first people," they say.

A slave was a stranger in a strange land, unsupported by a chain of ancestors reaching back to the beginning of time. On the whole, captives taken in war were better treated than other [727] slaves since it was felt that such a misfortune might occur to anyone at any time. They were frequently ransomed by their

[11]This is said to be an ancient practice, due to the fact that several of the [773]
forefathers of the Bella Coola came to earth in that region and were on friendly terms with the inhabitants. It is conceivable that this tradition may have reference to the breaking away of the Bella Coola from the main Salish stock.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

* 556 465 skill shown by those who assisted, as well as the generosity of X, regulates the disbursements.

The following presents of money were given at a potlatch held about 1890, and were considered reasonable.

For painting two designs[26] on the front outside wall of the house	$ 40.00
For the erection of four upright posts, supporting the walls and roof of the house	30.00
For each longitudinal beam with painting	20.00
For each cross-beam, without painting	10.00
For the planking of the side walls[27]	100.00
For painting the rear wall of house, which is also the outside wall of the back-room[28]	40.00

• [435] An average totem-pole would cost perhaps $150, but the prices varied greatly with size, complexity of design, and skill displayed.

426 The next distribution is of goods to repay debts which X has incurred at previous potlatches, that is, to return "investment presents" then received (I, p. 232). This is known as lisdjut, "repay," and the word is applied to all kinds of repayments, including revenge. One of a chief's difficulties is to remember his indebtedness. He may have been a guest at twenty potlatches, and at each has received presents varying in value, not only from different donors, but from other people associated with them. To keep these accurately in mind is hard but essential, and parents carefully train their children to do so.

*556 [867]

As previously mentioned, the Bella Coola have no fixed scale of interest on debts. Careful inquiries made on that point disclosed the idea to be entirely foreign. The greater the interest, the greater does the donor show himself to be. If, for example, X received an investment present of one hundred blankets from a Bella Bella chief ten years previously,

[532] [342]

[26] When two are painted, that on the left of the central door on entering portrays X's father's crest, that on the right his mother's.

[27] Four men would work together on this task.

[28] Two men would work together at this, the choice of designs corresponding to those of the outside front.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

of their occurrence in most ancestral myths.[8] There seems to be no mythological explanation for the casting of a copper into the fire after the passing of the representation of a deceased relative, but the desire of chiefs to use them at potlatches is the result of their use under similar circumstances by their ancestors. Some ancestral myths lack reference to coppers, but their use is common to all, whether or not embodied in such. It is said to be easier for a chief to acquire coppers if they had been used by his ancestors, but this is not essential. 556* 773 [769]

When arranging for the appearance of a dead relative, the donor of a potlatch is careful either to possess a copper, or to be able to borrow one at the right moment. As soon as the masked figure has disappeared, the donor stands up, breaks or bends his copper, and throws it into the fire "to make bone for the deceased." No matter how valuable a copper may have been, it is now worthless; its value has been expended on the purpose for which it has just been employed. It lies unheeded in the flames, a valueless article belonging to no one. 556* 769

At some convenient time, either hours or days later, any chief may remove the copper and give it to a poor man, only taking care to choose an individual who has not recently received one. It is said that the gift is "to patch his canoe." It is now the poor man's property, but it has no value, since no goods have been expended for it. The new owner straightens and repairs it, if necessary by riveting on the broken piece, thus making it ready for further use. The poor man may keep the copper for years, or it may be only a few weeks before some chief, preparing for a potlatch, offers, perhaps, $20, for it. In the old days, values were computed in slaves, canoes, salmon, and other commodities, but now in dollars. If two chiefs should happen to want it, the poor man may haggle about the price, though in such a case the two rivals would probably agree amicably rather than lower their dignity by seeming to be interested in a matter of money. It is to the advantage of a 556* [735] [325] 435● 556* 437

[8] Abalone-shells and mesoplidon are treasured for the same reason; the former are mentioned in several origin myths, the latter in two at least. [237]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*556 chief to pay somewhat lavishly, since the value of the copper [435] depends on the amount expended on it.

[497] The $20 received by the poor man must not be casually spent. He is expected to invite the whole village to his house,
*556 otherwise he would never again be given a copper. The heralds call everyone to the house, the singers as usual being the first 735 to arrive. They beat out the kusiut song of anyone, to which [533] the owner dances; the songs are used one after another, until [575] almost every member of the society has danced. Susook songs may then be used in the same way. Since the supernatural beings are not present, the rite has no religious significance; it is merely a social affair. At the close of the dancing, the poor man distributes food to all, equivalent in value to the money received. It is probable that poor men sometimes give away slightly less than they have received, although any noticeable laxity in this would be punished by the receipt of no further coppers. The recipient of a copper from a fire derives no direct gain from it, though it is to his indirect advantage, since a person who has given away food is likely to receive larger presents on future occasions than one who has not.

Meanwhile the chief owning the copper is unable to use it 435 at his potlatch since the value, dependent on the goods ex-
*556 pended for it, is only $20, a sum so small that to use it would be insulting to his dead ancestor. There are several ways of increasing its value:

(1) By Painting. Taking advantage of some ceremony
[532] when a number of people are present, the owner gives a carpenter $10, for example, with a request that he paint on his copper a representation of the crest used by his, the owner's, first ancestor, when coming to this earth. Henceforth the value of the copper is $30.

435 (2) By Naming. The Bella Coola say that among the 552 Kwakiutl names are given to almost all coppers; in Bella *556 Coola it is a rare practice. Occasionally, a chief creates a name for his copper and validates this by presents to all the

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

village at some ceremony, exactly as a child's name is conferred. Designations are chosen with respect to the appearance of the copper, or some incident connected with its history. Such a designation is Quaixwos, "Begrimed," applied to a copper thrown many times into the fire. If, for instance, $50 be expended for a name, the value of a $30 copper is henceforth $80. 435 552 556*

(3) By Making Gifts. The owner of a copper can increase its value by calling together the other chiefs of his village, and sometimes of adjacent ones as well. After the customary meal, the owner expounds the history of his possession, giving details of its value. Then he passes it to one of his guests, who, unless he wishes to insult his host, must hold it upright, that is, with the broad end uppermost. The owner gives it in turn to each of his guests. To validate the display, the owner must bestow gifts on all present, and the total value of these is added to the value of the copper. Such gifts are not strictly returnable, although it is customary for chiefs to show their generosity and prowess to their fellows by a later repayment with interest. 435 556* [578] [426]

By these means the original purchaser of a worthless copper can increase its value to such a point that it can be used at a potlatch. There is no established custom about this. Coppers are not as valuable in Bella Coola as, for instance, at Fort Rupert, and it is unlikely that any are ever worth more than $300, and the average value is probably between $150 and $200. Considerable time is required to raise the value of a copper to this sum and the owner in many cases finds that he has all the other requirements before his copper is ready for use. In that case, he tries to buy another which has been raised to sufficient worth by its owner. Everyone knows the values of the different coppers in the community, and the intending purchaser calls his fellow-chiefs to his house and offers to buy one valued, for example, at $150. If the owner consents to sell, he usually endeavours to get as much as possible, perhaps $175. The sum is publicly paid and is henceforth the value of the copper, which is transmitted to the new [171] 435 437 556*

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

435 owner with a statement of its history and the amount expended
437 on it. The purchase of a copper is, therefore, a good business
*556 transaction, and it might be assumed that a chief with keen commercial instinct would endeavour to acquire as many as [171] possible. This is said to be the case in Fort Rupert, but in [183] Bella Coola public opinion is averse to the obtaining of coppers unless for use at potlatches. As every ambitious chief hopes to give potlatches, he can always claim that the acquisition of a copper is for this end, and that the sale of it is from a kindly desire to assist a fellow-chief who is nearer the desired goal than he himself. Consequently, the sale of coppers is tolerably common, and a chief is not considered to be mercenary unless he sells too frequently.

426 The intending donor of a potlatch can now proceed to the ceremony, secure in the possession of a copper worthy to be
*556 thrown on the fire after the passage of his deceased relative. In addition, he may own another copper of too small value for this purpose. As described in the last chapter, he repeatedly calls together the inhabitants of his own village to rites which he validates by the distribution of presents, and at which he also gives away investment presents. He may decide to use his second copper for this purpose. All investment presents, [558] which are given only to men of standing in the community, must be repaid with interest unless the recipient is willing to decline in popular estimation; but when a gift of this kind consists of a copper, a return of 100 per cent is expected on the transaction. Bestowal of a copper in such circumstances is not spoken of as an investment present, kəlämkusnäm, but as änuxop', which has the definite significance of something that must be returned with 100 per cent interest. If the value of the copper were $25 before this bestowal, it is now $50, since the new owner must repay this amount to the chief planning to give the potlatch. The new owner can use the copper in any way he desires; if he repays a previous indebtedness, he cancels $50 by giving it; whereas if he bestows it as änuxop', announcement is made that its value is $50, and he expects to receive $100 in return. The last sum is now the value of the copper. This second bestowal may take place before the owner has paid the $50 that he owes to the original possessor. There is no time limit to Bella Coola debts since it adds to the debtor's prestige to pay off his indebtedness, publicly of course, when his creditor is giving a ceremony of any kind. At every change in ownership announcement is made of the history of the copper and of its value at every stage of its existence. In this way the worth of a copper increases until it is fit to be thrown into the fire after the passing of a dead kinsman. When one that has been used as ānuxop' is at last cast into the flames, and later rescued from them, it is customary for the new owner to use it once more as ānuxop'. On the other hand, a copper that has been raised to value by the gift of a name, painting, and so forth, is normally again revalued in the same way when rescued from oblivion. There is no definite rule about this; it is only a tendency.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

426 556* 435 556*

The value of a copper acquired from either a white man or a member of a foreign tribe is equivalent to its purchase price, and can be raised in any one of the ways employed for one that has been thrown into a fire.

In many cases the donor of a potlatch prefers not to be the actual possessor of a copper at the time of the entry of his deceased relative, though he always arranges to obtain one. When the masked figure has disappeared, the donor stands up and says:

426 556*

"I have nothing to make bone for my ancestor. Chief So-and-so, please give me your copper."

The chief so called upon transmits the copper with a statement of its value and the recipient throws it into the fire. Nothing is said about repayment, but the transaction has been public and everyone realizes that the chief must repay with 100 per cent interest when the seller gives his next ceremony. In this way the donor is able to use a copper without having had to pay for it at an inconvenient time when he needs all his wealth to give to his foreign guests. A chief often sells a copper

[432] [435]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

435 immediately before, or during the early stages of a potlatch, in order to receive goods immediately, but with the proviso that *556 it shall be returned to him for throwing into the fire. This [432] method has the advantage of providing the chief with goods [426] when required, and doubles the worth of the copper.

Coppers are not always rescued from the ashes and given to poor men. If one is still lying in the fire after several days, [764] the donor of the potlatch removes it and fastens it to the memorial-post over the grave of his deceased relative. It may be left there, or another chief wanting a copper may buy it from the donor and increase its value in the usual manner. Only a small price is paid in such circumstances, since the copper, having served its purpose, is practically valueless.

177 The Bella Coola state that in ancient times coppers were worth less than at present, and that the change in sentiment 435 regarding them is due to Kwakiutl influence. All agree that *556 the value placed upon them at Fort Rupert and Alert Bay is greater than elsewhere on the coast. The Bella Coola believe that the Kwakiutl distribute presents in respect to their coppers and that their values mount to enormous sums when the gifts are returned. It is clear that the importance of coppers, like the potlatch and other elements of culture, has increased in recent years through the influence of the coastal tribes.

556 It is almost impossible to define coppers in the nomenclature of economic theory. They are not mere articles of barter, since they have no practical use outside the ceremonies of chiefs. Nor are they standardized units of trade or currency, since each differs not only from all other coppers, but [436] also at different periods. In a sense they serve as tokens of [211] what has been expended; representations of them may be [532] carved and painted on totem-poles where they serve as marks of the goods which the chief has given away, but this is only a minor consideration. A copper can perhaps best be described [426] as an investment which can be applied only to one purpose, [435] "the making of bone for a deceased" person. It grows more valuable at every transmission in accordance with the goods expended, so that it serves as a visible and tangible memorandum of the chief-like generosity of its owner. By means of these media, debts are passed from one individual to another without actual liquidation in goods; in fact, it is unlikely that the Bella Coola possess sufficient money to meet the sums represented by their coppers. 556 [435] [426]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

Professional Prerogatives

The importance of prerogatives in the lives of the Bella Coola has already been noted in many connections. A man's name is his only because his ancestral family has the prerogative of using that designation; a kusiut dance can be performed only by an individual with the necessary prerogative; specific totem-pole designs, the portrayal of bird or animal on spoons, seats, house-posts, and other objects is a right dependent upon an ancestral prerogative; as is also the area on which a man can hunt or fish. The concept colours all Bella Coola life. Not only is a man's ceremonial life based on this principle, but on it depend his actions as chief, and the economic sources of his food-supply. No prerogative, even though it be the property of a man, is effective until validated by the distribution of presents. Much of a man's energy throughout life is expended on the validation and display of his prerogatives; most Bella Coola feuds are caused by the infringement of one individual on another's rights. 424 556* [532] [796] [431] [627] [578]

In addition to the various types already mentioned, there are a number of professional prerogatives on which depend a man's vocation. That of herald approximates this class, although the Bella Coola consider it rather as a right operative only during ceremonials. Professional prerogatives rest on the belief that a man's ability as a hunter, wood-worker, and so forth does not rest in his innate skill, but upon an inherited right which must be confirmed and validated by the distribution of presents. These can be given at any convenient time when the people have been called together, but, as it is to the man's advantage to have his right made known as widely 424 463 556*

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 manner in which he had shielded them from the falling fish. Sonxwaăkıs alone kept his original name.

When returning they made presents of abalone-shell[42] to everyone they met, and reaching Kimsquit they made very valuable gifts to all the people. The four had been absent about six months, and as they approached their home the three elder brothers poked fun at Ăluqox, saying:

"You will find that your wife has gone to another husband while ours will be waiting for us."

They found the reverse to be true. Ăluqox's wife alone had remained faithful to her absent husband; all the others had taken new consorts. The three fickle wives regretted what they had done as soon as they saw the wealth brought back by their former husbands but it was too late to change their course, so they were left lamenting. Many people were rather jealous of Sonxwaăkıs's success, but he distributed valuable presents to all. Soon after this the three brothers married new wives, refusing to take back their former ones, much as the latter desired it.

Another informant stated that the first settler at this village was a single man, Swaăkıs, who brought a stone hammer as a present from Ălquntăm.

ORIGIN MYTH OF Nutsqwalt[43]

In the beginning of time Ălquntăm sent down to the Dean River four brothers, ıyuyuyut, Yeălos, Spănbăllnaix, Twalosdimut, and their sister Sximăna. They brought with them a herald, Nusqwalaix, who was a kingfisher, and two men, Xomtsla and Qwlaiyu, who had the prerogative of dancing at weddings. The five came as black bears, and for a long time retained that form. Yeălos carried with him from Nusmăı·a several moosehides, a stone axe, some dyed cedar-bark, sticks for making fire, and the prerogative of a kusiut dance. After tarrying a few days at their landing place, the party set out down the river, with Nusqwalaix flying in front as guide. He was a kingfisher at the time and used to make short flights with quivering wings, and then stop until his bear friends had caught up with him, exactly as those birds do at the present time when a canoe travels up a river. On reaching Nutsqwalt, "The Place of Many Spawning Sockeye Salmon," about a mile and a quarter from the mouth of the river, on the south-east side, they camped for the night.

[237 301 435]

[42]This was formerly valued very highly, both for its use as beads and ornaments, and because it had to be imported from a great distance.

[43]Related by Jim Pollard.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*556 769 [575] [535] to a complicated figure such as a whale, and in that case an expert dancer among the guests is called upon to perform. It is announced that this is, "to make clean the road for the dead."

After each masked figure has disappeared, the sound of whistling from without grows gradually weaker, as the apparition returns whence it came. In solemn silence X takes a copper[21] which he has had in readiness, breaks it across his knee,[22] and throws it either into the fire or down on the ground in the track that the figure has taken. Then the announcer calls out loudly:

"It is for his crest.[23] It has 'made bone for the dead.'" Then he continues, speaking for X and using the first person:

"My heart is glad at seeing my father.[24] At death he returned back on the path of my family's ancestors and donned our ancient crest. He now lives in Nusmät·a, whence he came to visit us and whither he has now gone back."

[178] The significance of the throwing down of a copper is entirely unknown to the modern Bella Coola, although they still perform the ritual. In some vague way it is felt that "bone," which may imply stability, has been provided for the deceased. The act thus appears in the light of an offering to the dead, but this sentiment is not clearly appreciated by the participants in the rite; the present has been made for, rather than to, the one being mourned.

The copper, now valueless, is picked up by any chief and given to a poor man.

After a short interval a number of youths begin to distribute presents, provided by X, which have been placed in readiness. [562] [431] Gifts of equal value are given to all foreign male guests; while the women receive ones less valuable. These presents

[325] [436]

[21] One of the plaques of native copper, such as were formerly beaten out cold and used as tokens of value by the coast tribes of British Columbia. Their employment by the Bella Coola will be described later in greater detail (I, p. 252).

[22] The breaking is sometimes omitted.

[23] That is: "For the dead man, now in form of his crest."

[24] Or whatever relative the deceased may have been.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

435 immediately before, or during the early stages of a potlatch, in *556 order to receive goods immediately, but with the proviso that it shall be returned to him for throwing into the fire. This [432] method has the advantage of providing the chief with goods [426] when required, and doubles the worth of the copper.

Coppers are not always rescued from the ashes and given to poor men. If one is still lying in the fire after several days, [764] the donor of the potlatch removes it and fastens it to the memorial-post over the grave of his deceased relative. It may be left there, or another chief wanting a copper may buy it from the donor and increase its value in the usual manner. Only a small price is paid in such circumstances, since the copper, having served its purpose, is practically valueless.

177 The Bella Coola state that in ancient times coppers were 435 worth less than at present, and that the change in sentiment regarding them is due to Kwakiutl influence. All agree that *556 the value placed upon them at Fort Rupert and Alert Bay is greater than elsewhere on the coast. The Bella Coola believe that the Kwakiutl distribute presents in respect to their coppers and that their values mount to enormous sums when the gifts are returned. It is clear that the importance of coppers, like the potlatch and other elements of culture, has increased in recent years through the influence of the coastal tribes.

*556 It is almost impossible to define coppers in the nomenclature of economic theory. They are not mere articles of barter, since they have no practical use outside the ceremonies of chiefs. Nor are they standardized units of trade or cur-[436] rency, since each differs not only from all other coppers, but also at different periods. In a sense they serve as tokens of [211] what has been expended; representations of them may be [532] carved and painted on totem-poles where they serve as marks of the goods which the chief has given away, but this is only [426] a minor consideration. A copper can perhaps best be described [435] as an investment which can be applied only to one purpose, "the making of bone for a deceased" person. It grows more valuable at every transmission in accordance with the goods ex-

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

601 Coola social organization, and of the absence of standardized obligations based upon specific relationships.

Slaves

567 Since a slave was[11] without status in the Bella Coola community, it is perhaps incorrect to include a description of [554] slavery in a chapter on social organization; but as slaves lived in the Bella Coola villages, it seems reasonable to include them when dealing with the different units of the tribe. It was 162 impossible to obtain an accurate estimate of their number in 567 Bella Coola; slavery has been so long abandoned that the present natives could only hazard vague guesses. Judging from conversational remarks by elderly men, it seems probable that in the old days there was a considerable slave population in every Bella Coola village, comprising at times as much as thirty to forty per cent of the total population.

567 When a party raided a village most of the inhabitants were 727 slain, but some, especially children, young adults, or famous chiefs were captured. As far as could be learned, once a captive had reached Bella Coola he was in little danger, since torture or systematic slaying after the heat of battle had subsided was not a Bella Coola characteristic. The leader of the expedition retained many of the captives as his own slaves, and distributed others among his followers. Anyone, chief [422] or commoner, could own slaves in the same way that he could own any other type of goods.

567 Like any other commodity, slaves were bought and sold. 437 The Bella Coola were usually so well provided with salmon that they were able to exchange these fish with the members [622] of other tribes for slaves. Lack of strong chieftainship among [726] the Bella Coola hindered their success in war, so that most of [431] their slaves were obtained by trade. To the same category belong those obtained as presents at potlatches. If, however, [773] a member of one of the tribes on the lower Fraser River was

[648]

[11] One of the first effects of the white man's establishment in British Columbia was the freeing of all slaves. Consequently the past tense is used in this section.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

given as a slave to a Bella Coola, he was treated as a guest.[18] 567
Slaves were bartered between Bella Coola individuals as a [437] matter of course. Their value depended on sex, ability, and [435] industriousness, as well as on supply and demand. When there was an over-supply, the value of a slave fell to twenty or thirty [437]
salmon, but whenever an owner found that someone wished to purchase a particular slave he endeavoured to raise the price.
If a foreigner borrowed goods in Bella Coola he usually had to [426] leave a relative as pledge. Thus, not many years ago, a Xuxais
Indian, from near Ootsa Lake, borrowed goods from a Kimsquit man and left his son as pledge. The goods were not returned, so the son was sold as a slave to the people of Kitimat.

It was not uncommon for a Bella Coola to lose his freedom 525 by gambling. At lehql especially, a player who had exhausted 567 his goods not infrequently wagered his children, or in extreme cases, himself. If he lost, his children, or himself, became the property of the winner. Unless speedily repurchased by some relative, such slaves were usually sold or given away at the first opportunity to a member of a foreign tribe, since it was considered improper for a man to hold a member of his own 567 tribe in servitude. The same course of action was taken on [628]
those rare occasions when one Bella Coola village fought [727] against its neighbour and prisoners were taken.

To the Bella Coola, who still consider a man's "power" in [554]
the land as dependent to a considerable extent on his ancestral myth, a slave's greatest misfortune lay in the fact that he had [773]
no ancestral home, and hence no rights.

"No slaves came to earth with the first people," they say.

A slave was a stranger in a strange land, unsupported by a chain of ancestors reaching back to the beginning of time. On [727] the whole, captives taken in war were better treated than other slaves since it was felt that such a misfortune might occur to anyone at any time. They were frequently ransomed by their

[18]This is said to be an ancient practice, due to the fact that several of the [773]
forefathers of the Bella Coola came to earth in that region and were on friendly terms with the inhabitants. It is conceivable that this tradition may have reference to the breaking away of the Bella Coola from the main Salish stock.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

of their occurrence in most ancestral myths.[8] There seems to be no mythological explanation for the casting of a copper into the fire after the passing of the representation of a deceased relative, but the desire of chiefs to use them at potlatches is the result of their use under similar circumstances by their ancestors. Some ancestral myths lack reference to coppers, but their use is common to all, whether or not embodied in such. It is said to be easier for a chief to acquire coppers if they had been used by his ancestors, but this is not essential. 556* 773 [769]

When arranging for the appearance of a dead relative, the donor of a potlatch is careful either to possess a copper, or to be able to borrow one at the right moment. As soon as the masked figure has disappeared, the donor stands up, breaks or bends his copper, and throws it into the fire "to make bone for the deceased." No matter how valuable a copper may have been, it is now worthless; its value has been expended on the purpose for which it has just been employed. It lies unheeded in the flames, a valueless article belonging to no one. 556* 769

At some convenient time, either hours or days later, any chief may remove the copper and give it to a poor man, only taking care to choose an individual who has not recently received one. It is said that the gift is "to patch his canoe." It is now the poor man's property, but it has no value, since no goods have been expended for it. The new owner straightens and repairs it, if necessary by riveting on the broken piece, thus making it ready for further use. The poor man may keep the copper for years, or it may be only a few weeks before some chief, preparing for a potlatch, offers, perhaps, $20, for it. In the old days, values were computed in slaves, canoes, salmon, and other commodities, but now in dollars. If two chiefs should happen to want it, the poor man may haggle about the price, though in such a case the two rivals would probably agree amicably rather than lower their dignity by seeming to be interested in a matter of money. It is to the advantage of a 556* [735] [325] 435 556* 437

[8] Abalone-shells and moosehides are treasured for the same reason; the former are mentioned in several origin myths, the latter in two at least. [237]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*556 chief to pay somewhat lavishly, since the value of the copper [435] depends on the amount expended on it.

[437] The $20 received by the poor man must not be casually spent. He is expected to invite the whole village to his house,
*556 otherwise he would never again be given a copper. The heralds call everyone to the house, the singers as usual being the first 735 to arrive. They beat out the kusiut song of anyone, to which [533] the owner dances; the songs are used one after another, until [575] almost every member of the society has danced. Sisaok songs may then be used in the same way. Since the supernatural beings are not present, the rite has no religious significance; it is merely a social affair. At the close of the dancing, the poor man distributes food to all, equivalent in value to the money received. It is probable that poor men sometimes give away slightly less than they have received, although any noticeable laxity in this would be punished by the receipt of no further coppers. The recipient of a copper from a fire derives no direct gain from it, though it is to his indirect advantage, since a person who has given away food is likely to receive larger presents on future occasions than one who has not.

435 Meanwhile the chief owning the copper is unable to use it at his potlatch since the value, dependent on the goods ex-
*556 pended for it, is only $20, a sum so small that to use it would be insulting to his dead ancestor. There are several ways of increasing its value:

(1) By Painting. Taking advantage of some ceremony
[532] when a number of people are present, the owner gives a carpenter $10, for example, with a request that he paint on his copper a representation of the crest used by his, the owner's, first ancestor, when coming to this earth. Henceforth the value of the copper is $30.

435 (2) By Naming. The Bella Coola say that among the 552 Kwakiutl names are given to almost all coppers; in Bella Coola it is a rare practice. Occasionally, a chief creates a *556 name for his copper and validates this by presents to all the

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

village at some ceremony, exactly as a child's name is conferred. Designations are chosen with respect to the appearance of the copper, or some incident connected with its history. Such a designation is Qwaixwos, "Begrimed," applied to a copper thrown many times into the fire. If, for instance, $50 be expended for a name, the value of a $30 copper is henceforth $80. 435 552 556*

(3) By Making Gifts. The owner of a copper can increase its value by calling together the other chiefs of his village, and sometimes of adjacent ones as well. After the customary meal, the owner expounds the history of his possession, giving details of its value. Then he passes it to one of his guests, who, unless he wishes to insult his host, must hold it upright, that is, with the broad end uppermost. The owner gives it in turn to each of his guests. To validate the display, the owner must bestow gifts on all present, and the total value of these is added to the value of the copper. Such gifts are not strictly returnable, although it is customary for chiefs to show their generosity and prowess to their fellows by a later repayment with interest. 435 556* [578] [426]

By these means the original purchaser of a worthless copper can increase its value to such a point that it can be used at a potlatch. There is no established custom about this. Coppers are not as valuable in Bella Coola as, for instance, at Fort Rupert, and it is unlikely that any are ever worth more than $300, and the average value is probably between $150 and $200. Considerable time is required to raise the value of a copper to this sum and the owner in many cases finds that he has all the other requirements before his copper is ready for use. In that case, he tries to buy another which has been raised to sufficient worth by its owner. Everyone knows the values of the different coppers in the community, and the intending purchaser calls his fellow-chiefs to his house and offers to buy one valued, for example, at $150. If the owner consents to sell, he usually endeavours to get as much as possible, perhaps $175. The sum is publicly paid and is henceforth the value of the copper, which is transmitted to the new [171] 435 437 556*

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

435 owner with a statement of its history and the amount expended
● 437 on it. The purchase of a copper is, therefore, a good business
* 556 transaction, and it might be assumed that a chief with keen commercial instinct would endeavour to acquire as many as [171] possible. This is said to be the case in Fort Rupert, but in [183] Bella Coola public opinion is averse to the obtaining of coppers unless for use at potlatches. As every ambitious chief hopes to give potlatches, he can always claim that the acquisition of a copper is for this end, and that the sale of it is from a kindly desire to assist a fellow-chief who is nearer the desired goal than he himself. Consequently, the sale of coppers is tolerably common, and a chief is not considered to be mercenary unless he sells too frequently.

426 The intending donor of a potlatch can now proceed to the ceremony, secure in the possession of a copper worthy to be
* 556 thrown on the fire after the passage of his deceased relative. In addition, he may own another copper of too small value for this purpose. As described in the last chapter, he repeatedly calls together the inhabitants of his own village to rites which he validates by the distribution of presents, and at which he also gives away investment presents. He may decide to use his second copper for this purpose. All investment presents, [558] which are given only to men of standing in the community, must be repaid with interest unless the recipient is willing to decline in popular estimation; but when a gift of this kind consists of a copper, a return of 100 per cent is expected on the transaction. Bestowal of a copper in such circumstances is not spoken of as an investment present, kəlämkusnäm, but as änuxop', which has the definite significance of something that must be returned with 100 per cent interest. If the value of the copper were $25 before this bestowal, it is now $50, since the new owner must repay this amount to the chief planning to give the potlatch. The new owner can use the copper in any way he desires; if he repays a previous indebtedness, he cancels $50 by giving it; whereas if he bestows it as änuxop', announcement is made that its value is $50, and he expects to

McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

133 tains. From each pocket between these mountains an ice-cold affluent comes swirling down to the main river. The 137 predominant tree in the river valleys is the cedar[4] which in many cases attains great girth and height. Cottonwoods flourish in places, and everywhere there is an almost impenetrable undergrowth of devil's club, berry bushes, and other shrubbery of almost tropical density. On the lower slopes of the mountains, moss-festooned pines and spruces are the most common trees, gradually becoming smaller and fewer until the 133 barren peaks are reached. The mountains rise so precipitously that their snowcaps and glaciers seem to overhang the valley, a narrow ribbon of green winding far below. The range of vision from the bank of the river is limited by the all-encircling mountains. Here and there a distant vista opens up to expose peak after peak, but on the whole there is a feeling of confinement, in contrast with the open wastes of the upper country where the Bella Coola rises. Mountains, forests, flowing water, these are the three dominant impressions of the country (see Plate 6).

136 The mammals of central British Columbia, although comparatively common, have never been of primary importance.
[291] The marten, the wolverine, the lynx, and bears, both black and grizzly, were formerly hunted for their skins to serve as [262] cloaks. Deer were killed whenever possible, but formed a negligible item of diet. The beaver also was prized for its [439] flesh. The skins of moose and caribou were traded from the Carrier Indians, but neither of these animals was found in the [286] Bella Coola area. The mammal of greatest economic impor-
[237] tance was the mountain goat, the wool of which was woven into blankets. Smoked goat meat was formerly found in every [251] house and was almost the only flesh available during the [262] winter. Small game was abundant, but seals were a luxury.
Neither were birds of great importance to the Bella Coola.
[223] Members of the tribe resident near the sea-coast used to kill

[4]Appendix C contains a glossary of the scientific names of the flora and fauna mentioned in this monograph.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

211 in the appearance of the poles. Sometimes one is erected at *556 the front door of the house with an opening at its base through 778 which all must pass to enter the house, or a pole may be solid 532 and stand on the opposite side of the sidewalk; the choice in [184] either case depending upon the usage recorded in the ancestral myth. Instead of a totem-pole, a chief may display his ancestral cloaks by means of paintings on the front wall of his house, or by carved house-posts supporting the longitudinal beams, if such had been used by his ancestors. Moreover, a chief entitled to display a totem-pole may choose to use only paintings. If he validates these by presents, they give him the same dignity and importance as a totem-pole, particularly if he cannot validate its construction by lavish gifts. Most Bella Coola poles are only about fifteen to twenty feet in height, and though [171] it is possible that a few families had prerogatives entitling them to construct lofty poles, such as used by the Haida, it is unlikely that such were ever common.

When a chief who has erected a totem-pole before his house gives another potlatch, he may wish to put up a second pole beside the first. Occasionally two or three poles stand before the house of a chief, but one is more frequent or even none at [764] all. At death the pole is often taken to the cemetery where it acts as a memorial-post (I, p. 461). Otherwise it remains standing until some other occupant of the house wishes to erect another in its place, when the first is pulled down and neglected.

Coppers

*556 The Bella Coola use coppers for only two purposes: casting [769] on the ground upon which the representation of a deceased relative had trodden, or throwing into the fire when the figure has left the house. In either case, they are said to "make bone for the dead." Although used but rarely, the occasion when a copper is employed is so important that to obtain one and increase its value is a vital consideration for every chief.

[177] Most of the coppers now used by the Bella Coola are made [439]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

of metal obtained from the white man, if not actually machine-made for trading purposes. They resemble the familiar shape found in all parts of the British Columbia coast and vary in length from about six inches to as much as three feet. There is considerable difference in thickness; some of the newer ones are thin plates, others are heavy and appear to be old. The early white traders realized the value placed by the Indians on their coppers and these were soon imitated and became important articles of barter. The Bella Coola state that many of the early Hudson's Bay Company's coppers were made of drawn wire, but this type seems to have passed out of existence, since all the specimens seen in Bella Coola consisted of flat metal plaques. 556* 177 439

The Bella Coola maintain that their ancestors have, ever since the beginning of time, used two kinds of coppers. One variety, known as lália, resembled the plaques produced by white men. This is the term in common usage for all kinds of coppers at the present time. The other variety, taitaimy, is said to have been thicker and heavier and was made by heating the metal in a fire, beating it into the required shape. Long, long ago, coppers of this kind were sometimes found in the forest by hunters who were thus rewarded for observance of ceremonial chastity, but most were obtained in trade from the northern tribes. One of these is said to be preserved at Kimsquit, but none is said to have been owned by a Bella Coola within the last few years. 556* [325] [439]

The Bella Coola believe that taitaimy can only be manufactured in one district, far to the north, at the mouth of an unknown river. There, it is said, the chiefs range themselves along the river bank, each armed with a spear, and each with a number of slaves behind him. When the tide is highest, salmon of some peculiar kind appear at the surface of the water. If one comes within reach of a spearman, he lunges at it, but invariably misses; then the chief drops his spear, seizes one of his slaves and kills him by cutting his throat. A small piece of 552* 973

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

the front-door facing the river, but has to leave the house 784 through the trap beneath the enclosure where she sleeps. The 881
Bella Coola consider it unthinkable for a girl to disregard these prohibitions, but if this should happen, she would be chased home by her parents, by the Guardian of the River, or, in fact, by any elderly member of the community. The strongest [761] reason for respecting these regulations is the belief that disobedience brings death; no one knows how it is inflicted, but a careless girl soon dies. During this period, she cannot eat [262]
fresh salmon, though she is allowed them if they have been smoked for four or five days. Her scanty meals are brought to her in the enclosure where she is virtually a prisoner. It is true that she can leave it and wander in the woods, but her com- [783] rades avoid her as being in an unclean condition of which they are afraid, and she is barred from taking part in all activities by the river which constitute so large a part of the life of the Bella Coola. A girl cannot pick berries during this time, as no [222] more would grow in the valley which she had thus defiled; she must not touch anyone, nor allow anyone to touch her; she must not pass in front of a man; she must go to bed before [513]
everyone else in the house, and be the last to arise. The danger of breaking some taboo is so great that it is safer for a girl to [867] remain within her enclosure where her mother, and other old women, gather to tell her the many things which it is fitting for an adult woman to know. This seclusion is not pleasant, but it unquestionably serves to emphasize the importance of married life to which it is a prelude. The writer remembers an occasion when a Bella Coola family was eating tasty fresh salmon while one of the daughters, who had recently reached adolescence, watched enviously. Her grandfather rose and gave the child an orange, remarking that in his youth little girls did not receive such dainties to ameliorate their lot.

Adolescent girls wear certain distinctive articles of clothing 881
and ornaments. The most noticeable is a skull-cap bound [292] with grass; this is the only time in a woman's life that a hat is [301] worn. She also wears ear-rings, each consisting of a neat [439]
1 [i.e. - one year after puberty - ANALYST]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

881 bundle of four macaroni-shaped shells, probably Dentalium, [301] which are said to have been imported from the north in early [439] times. These marks serve to indicate the position of the girl, who is both feared and respected, possessed of supernatural [789] power, and yet baneful. Many Bella Coola stories describe how adolescent girls have been able to vanquish supernatural [538] beings; perhaps the most striking of these is the manner in which they once saved mankind when the sun came too close to the earth. At the end of a year, or eleven months according to one old woman, the seclusion is terminated, and the girl resumes her normal activities. The first time she goes to the river she must throw on the water four pieces of dyed, and four pieces of undyed cedar-bark. This is especially important if the salmon are running at the time, although no explanation of this ritual is given.

582 The resumption of her freedom indicates that a girl has 556 reached marriageable age. Chiefs sometimes confine their daughters for even longer than a year, and usually delay their 882 marriages for several years to demonstrate their importance;
but this is not necessary, nor is it practised by other than wealthy individuals. It is not uncommon for a girl to wed before her year is out; in that case her restrictions automatically [554] lapse. Chiefs never allow such a curtailment for their daughters; to do so would diminish the prestige of the latter, and be detrimental to the status of their children when they marry
836 and have families. Illicit intercourse with a secluded adoles-883 cent is considered not only illegal but disgusting as well. Between the period of confinement and marriage, intercourse is [881] prohibited and guarded against by the parents of a girl, but is not considered filthy and seems to have been fairly common in former times with the daughters of poor people and slaves. This sometimes took place before the first menstruation in spite of the disapproval with which this was regarded.

826 Although the menstrual blood which appears at the first discharge is considered more baneful than that emitted on later 841 occasions, it is always regarded as uncanny or unclean. It is 789

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Tsimshian NE15

B 721 these accounts seemed to be exaggerations, and the casualties were probably few. The Bella Coola did not have the same [554] admiration for the successful warrior as for the man who gave many potlatches, while everything indicates that their raids B [703] were on a small scale, rendered singularly ineffective by lack of discipline.

Specific Accounts

B 72 Active warfare has been so long discontinued on the coast that none of the living Bella Coola can describe conditions as 128 they existed during hostilities. It was possible to collect the 539 following accounts of raids and adventures which, though individually of small value, illustrate tactics and strategy, and recount incidents which throw light on the frame of mind of the participants.

Kitkatla War

B T 648 For many years there was animosity between the Bella 721 Coola and the Kitkatla who, with the advantage of strong government, used to sweep down from the north for salmon and slaves. Bella Coola itself was comparatively immune from attack, but the Kimsquit people suffered severely. The attackers were not always successful; one old man related how, when his mother's mother was an infant, they were driven off with the loss of four canoes and many men. The fact that this B incident had been remembered for so many years indicates that T it was unusual.

567 Slaves captured in this way were traded from tribe to tribe 439 and rarely escaped. When an elderly Bella Coola was a lad, [727] there was considerable excitement in the community owing to the return of Slukwala, a woman who had been carried off when a girl. She had been traded to a northern tribe among whom, she said, it was customary to crush captives beneath totem-poles and house-posts. Her diligence saved her from this fate, and she was passed on until she reached the far north, on the

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6
Tsimshian NE15

B
T 567
[439]

shore of a river where "the white men got money stone." Then Slukwala began to go south, and was finally sold to an important chief living north of Port Simpson. He used to beat her; in fact, she carried the scars with her to her grave. Slukwala's master had another slave, a male Bella Bella, with whom the woman was on friendly terms since she was related by blood to a Bella Bella family and could speak that language. Angered by her harsh treatment, Slukwala suggested to her companion in misfortune that they kill their master and escape. The man was at first unwilling, but she assured him that she knew the route southward. The conspirators awaited their opportunity which came when their master went halibut fishing, accompanied only by his two slaves. One evening Slukwala cooked a large meal for him which made him drowsy as he sat by the fire; then she stole behind him, picked up an axe, and killed him by hitting him over the head. The two murderers carefully scraped up all the blood, tied stones to the corpse, and sank it in deep water so that their master's friends would believe that he had been drowned with his slaves. Then the two, having stolen a canoe, paddled off, hiding by day, and subsisting on what shell-fish they could gather. After many perils they reached Bella Bella, whence Slukwala returned home.

She had been carried off as a mere girl, but was past the age of child-bearing when she returned and had almost forgotten her native language. The Bella Coola were keenly interested in the tale of her adventures, and especially in the way that slaves were buried in Alaska. It was assumed that some of their own captives must have been killed in that way, so a slave from the far north was crushed in revenge. It is said that this custom was common among the northern tribes from whom the Bella Coola adopted several practices, although this particular one was carried out but once.

B
[648]
[177]

The most famous Kitkatla chief, and the one most dreaded by the Bella Coola, was Tokua, who is said to have had almost despotic powers over his northern warriors. The name itself was transmitted from one holder to another, but the most

B
648
721
T 622
648
721

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

*539 [237] As soon as the weather moderated, the rest of the party returned, each carrying enough marten skins for at least one blanket. Some had so many that three or four cloaks could be made, in addition to the large supplies of smoked goat meat and grease.

THE SUCCESS OF A LAZY HUNTER

*539 224 [177] [411] [439] In the early days, when the visit of a trading vessel to Bella Coola was a rare event, it is remembered that an Äsän·än·i chief bought a musket from the captain of the Beaver. He paid for it a pile of beaver-skins which, when stacked up, was equal in height to the length of the weapon. This was one of the first muskets owned by a Bella Coola and the chief took great care of it, never treating it roughly, and hanging it with ropes from the roof of his house whenever he was not actually using it. One day a certain Snäkelt asked the owner to lend him the musket to hunt goats. This was no slight request, and it was surprising, since Snäkelt was not a hunter, but merely packed in meat killed by others. At first the chief was unwilling to allow his prized weapon out of his sight, but at last consented when Snäkelt promised to give him half the goats that he might kill.

Snäkelt probably thought that even temporary possession of the mysterious musket would make it possible for him to kill goats, but when he had climbed up into the mountains, and stalked for hours, he had not succeeded even in approaching one. He knew that if he returned home, unsuccessful and without some plausible excuse, he would be laughed to scorn, so he determined to cover his failure. First he beat the musket on a boulder until it was bent and battered, then he took a sharp rock and pounded himself until he was covered with blood from head to foot, as if he had been caught in a land-slide. When near the village, he lay down on the ground and called faintly for help; at first the people could not locate the sound, but after a short search someone found the would-be hunter, apparently in the last stages of exhaustion. Help was called, and Snäkelt carried home, moaning feebly and saying that he would die. He could just whisper that he had been caught in a slide on the other side of the mountain, this explanation being necessary since no one had heard one in the near vicinity. As the apparent sufferer was lying in his house, one man noticed that the patient's wounds were from gashes, not from bruises, and loudly protested that Snäkelt must have mutilated himself to conceal his lack of success. Everyone came crowding around and agreed that this must be the case; Snäkelt finally admitted the deception and congratulated his discoverer on his powers of observation. After a few days, he was as well as ever, but the chief had lost his precious musket.

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

258 tacles; metal coal-oil cans are found convenient for this purpose and have
[41·5] almost replaced watertight boxes. After repeated stirrings and skimmings, all that remains is a mass of putrid flesh, bearing no resemblance whatever to the fish from which it came. The Kitlobe are said to com-
[171] press this into cakes for eating, but the Bella Coola throw it away. Some cooks bail out the dregs by hand, but many of the box-kettles have a [415] bung-hole at the bottom which, when opened, allows the semi-liquid remains to flow out into a rough trough leading to the river. As soon as one batch of olachen has thus been disposed of, another is boiled and [439] refined in the same way. The grease keeps indefinitely and is a useful article of barter with the Carriers as well as a staple of Bella Coola diet.
[262] Although the preparation removes much of its offensive odour, olachen grease has an unpleasant taste to the white man.

During the boiling, all other activities are suspended and the people 258 spend practically all their time on the river bank. If the fish are allowed 476 to rot too long, much of the grease is lost, so men, women, and children are pressed into service to make the most of the short period. The men rise at dawn to start the fires on the bank, the women and children follow with food, and for several days the whole village camps, as if on a picnic, amid an indescribably foul smell that almost sickens anyone passing within hundreds of yards. There are tasks for everyone; the fish must be carried from the pits to the furnaces, wood must be brought, the fires stoked, the kettles stirred, the grease carried away, the fireplaces repaired, food cooked, and a hundred other chores. It is a scene of great activity, carried on with good humour and merriment, for the Bella Coola realize that they are storing up luxuries for the following winter. Even the dogs seem to share the general excitement, and do not disdain to eat the dregs from the kettles, which, when emptied into the river, attract numerous trout and gulls, to the joy of small boys with hunting desires.

BELLA COOLA CANOES

501 Although travel and transport by water is still as vital to the Bella
[505] Coola as it was to their fathers, the motor-boat is fast replacing the canoe, and the science of manufacturing their own craft is being lost. In former times several types were constructed, but only one of these is still employed —the spoon canoe, sä·tla, used on rivers (see Plate 21). These vary from twenty to thirty feet or more in length, and are about four feet wide; they are without keels, and there is no difference between the bow and stern. Although one man can handle such a craft in smooth water, at 502 least two are required for a journey of any length, and four is the usual crew. The captain, who is either the best waterman or the one most familiar with the route, stands in the stern, the second in command in

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

842 To Cause Birth of a Child of the Desired Sex

789 If a boy is desired: The pregnant woman must have prepared for her a miniature bow and arrows on which she sleeps for four nights and then throws into the fire.

If a girl is desired: The pregnant woman must have prepared for her miniature tools used for beating cedar-bark on which she sleeps for four nights and then throws into the fire.

843 To Cause Easy Delivery (two means)

789 (1) The pregnant woman must boil stalks of stonecrop in water and drink freely of the decoction.

(2) A variant of the medicine already described can be applied during pregnancy. Strike the back of the woman with one or more porcupine embryos. The thrower must remain in concealment and the woman to be benefited must be unaware of what is about to be done.

853 To Cause Increased Flow of Milk

757 Heat pods of Sedum Spathulifolium (Hook) and apply them as a poultice to the breasts of the nursing mother.

MISCELLANEOUS MEDICINES USED BY ADULTS

461 To Cause Energy

789 Take the paw of a freshly killed beaver in one hand and pat it with the other, saying:

825 "Please, may I be like you."

This ensures that the man or woman will always work hard, like a beaver.

789 To Cause Long Life

Pick up a toad, spit on it four times, saying:

825 "May I be strong like you," and put it down carefully.

886 The basis of this medicine is the belief that toads are capable of resisting greater pressure than other animals. For example, if one is caught in an olachen net, it survives the crushing weight of fish and water and is alive when the net is emptied, though all other living animals so ensnared are killed.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

gles, bites him between the eyes or at the back of the neck so that a little blood flows. 865 861

"If you don't keep quiet," he says to the screaming child, "I shall bite you all over your head."

This medicine acts in two ways: (1) The offender is so frightened that he is likely to reform; (2) Contact with a man of good disposition imparts the same to him. A tuft of mountain goat wool is inserted into the wound to make it heal properly.

To Cure Disobedience and Laziness 461

Parents whose child exhibits these bad qualities also ask help of a man of good character. If he accepts the task, he provides himself with a bone needle and waits until he hears the child refuse to perform some simple task. Then, with a rush, he throws the offender on his stomach and supposits the needle until the blood flows freely. He then releases the frightened child who usually slinks away to bed for the rest of the day. When the bleeding has ceased, the quiet person cuts chips from the canoe of an energetic man and rubs them on the wound, saying: 865 861

"Please, may you be like the canoe, always active and doing whatever is expected of you."

An old Kimsquit man recalled vividly the application of this medicine to him when he refused to fetch water for his mother. He was about eleven years of age at the time and asserted that it had greatly improved his behaviour.

MEDICINES FOR ORDINARY DISEASES

For Sprains and Bruises 752

Pound stalks of false hellebore, mix with hemlock gum, and bind on the injured spot as a poultice.

For Swollen Neck

Cut off small pieces of a thoroughly smoked bear's heart, pound in water, and drink the mixture. 757

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

the most human of all substances, and, therefore, a potent 826 protection against supernatural beings. It is valuable as a 841 defence against evil monsters, but it is equally deadly to 789 shamans and other human beings with supernatural powers.
In the distant past, Raven taught mankind that to sleep with a 834 menstruating woman would so blind a man that he would be 841 unsuccessful in hunting. The belief is that animals, knowing [773] everything that takes place, avoid one who is so unclean. One [825] old man mentioned that he had failed to obey this injunction and considered his loss of virility as a punishment, overlooking the fact that he was over seventy years of age.

The coming of adolescence in a boy is recognized by change 881 in voice and the other usual indications. He is neither taboo nor unclean, and consequently does not have to undergo any restrictions on his actions. There is no ceremony to mark the entry of a youth into adult membership of the tribe; instead, this comes gradually and puberty is no more than an indication of increasing age and strength.

Marriage

Like most so-called "primitive" peoples, the Bella Coola 581 regard the married state as the normal condition of man. 589 Anyone unwilling to wed is considered unnatural. Since the number of the sexes is approximately equal, the only persons forced to live alone are elderly widows and widowers, and those [732] crippled, either mentally or physically. Such individuals are looked upon as unfortunate; in fact, they have failed in one of the most fundamental of life's struggles. Man provides fish 581 and game, builds houses and canoes, while woman collects berries, makes baskets, cooks, and performs the multitudinous [462] small household tasks.

"Is it not to the benefit of each to marry?" say the Bella Coola.

Marriage is not a mere economic arrangement, nor is its sole function to regulate relations between the sexes. Its most [858] important feature is that it governs the status of the child.

APPENDIX A

MECHANICAL PROCESSES

NO attempt was made to study either the material culture of the Bella Coola, or their methods of manufacturing, but information on some points was obtained incidentally. All sociological and religious features connected therewith have already been described. 121

THE TAKING AND PREPARATION OF OLACHEN

227

The run of olachen, sputx, comes about the end of April, and as many as possible are caught. In preparation, nets, *älte'x*ᵘ, are brought out from the boxes where they have been stored during the winter, examined, and repaired. If necessary, new ones must be manufactured out of nettle-(lsna-) fibre laid away by the women for this purpose. By rolling the material on their legs, they produce a thin twine; five strands of this are then interwoven, making a finished cord capable of resisting great strain. The nets are constructed by the men. The type used at the present time, which is said not to differ from that formerly employed, consists of a purse-like sack, oval in cross-section, open at the wider end and tapering very gradually to the other, which is closed. The total length is about thirty feet, the diameter at the open end about eight feet, and at the closed end about three feet. A new net is dipped in a mixture of boiled hemlock-bark to darken it, and then boiled in a solution of willow-bark to prevent the knots from slipping. [226] [221] [283] [462] [286] [386]

The setting out of a net is not an easy task, so two or three men agree to work as partners. In the present degenerate days, property rights are not respected and each group selects a suitable spot. The best location is where the water is about three feet deep and runs rapidly, but without ripples, over a smooth piece of the bottom; such a place is called a skllax. When the fish begin to run plentifully, the partners paddle out to set their net, taking with them four stakes, each about ten feet in length. The weight of a full net is tremendous, so the poles have to be driven down at least six feet, a difficult task on account of the stony bottom. Selecting the exact spot, one of four posts, älkdjälos, is set upright and held in position by being tied to a cross-piece, nudjiqosta, fastened to the canoe for the purpose. While his two partners hold the craft steady, the third man begins to pound down the stake; metal mauls are now commonly used, but in former times this work was always done with an unhafted stone maul, lixwoma. The fishermen relieve one another intermittently until the top of the pole has been driven down to within 226 [476] [423] [178] [412]

2: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

501 of the older people remember seeing in their youth another type, lakan, with a high raised prow; this may have been identical with the mdka which others describe as having an elevated bow and a low stern. An entirely different craft was the tamkwl·i, named from one of the geese, [825] probably the white-fronted goose. A strip of maple fastened along each side caught the water in moving, with a sound like that of the peculiar rustling flight of the bird. The bow was often carved in the form of a [532] bird's head and the stern in that of a tail to further the resemblance. No living Bella Coola claims to have seen one of these canoes, though some had heard of them from their grandparents. The large, open type of canoe made by the Haida was known to the Bella Coola, but not constructed by them. Sails were used on all ocean-going canoes; they were usually of matting, though skins sewn together were occasionally employed.

501 Canoes are occasionally lashed together. In several kusiut dances a wide platform for dancing is required, and the need is met by lashing 535 planks crosswise over two canoes, near the bow and stern, thus fastening them together. Planking is laid on the two supports and a platform so constructed. Careful inquiries showed that this fastening was merely a temporary arrangement; the booms were not bound in any particular manner, nor was there any fixed distance between the craft. Sometimes 501 the same expedient was used for transport when the load was too heavy [171] for two canoes separately, a device which is said to have been used more commonly by the tribes of the outer coast than the Bella Coola. Canoes lashed together are termed ás·awanāx.

Rafts, satskwal·a, consisting of rough logs fastened together with cross-pieces, were commonly used on the lakes of the interior, and occasionally for river work when canoes were unavailable and there was no time to make them. Another expedient in similar emergencies was to [177] make bark canoes, such as are still constructed by the Carriers. The Bella Coola regard the construction of these as definite copying, and do not profess to have as much skill as their teachers whose canoes, it is said, can be folded for portaging. There is a tradition that, many generations ago, a few clever Bella Coola knew how to make skin canoes.

THE PREPARATION OF CEDAR-BARK

314 Early spring is the time to susukumls, that is, to gather the inner bark of the cedar. Men occasionally assist in the task, though this is really [221] woman's work. The worker selects a small cedar, choosing one about six inches in diameter, with smooth trunk and relatively free from knots. [462] With a knife she makes a horizontal incision in the bark, two or three feet [412] from the ground, sometimes girdling the sapling. Then she inserts her

1: McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

from the moon and stated that there were mountains and snow on it. It is commonly stated that the marks on the moon represent a man carrying a bucket. 821 [756]

The stars figure but slightly either in Bella Coola mythology or thought; it is not even known who made them. Two in the Great Bear constellation are called respectively Tpiksta and X̱inx̱ines, "Little Girls." A lone star in the same part of the sky, named A'lox, is said to be following the girls to the forest for illicit intercourse. [773]

Moon, stars, and above all the sun, were, and still are to a certain extent, used by the Bella Coola in computing the passage of time. There are no individuals with the definite prerogative of keeping count of time, but formerly wise old men used to do so.[4] Differences of opinion were the rule rather than the exception, a condition which often led to bitter disputes concerning the proper date for starting the winter ceremonials. Boas (p. 41) has recorded the Bella Coola calendar in greater detail than the present writer has been able to do. The making of calendrical observations is a lost art, and the following list of the months was all that could be learnt. It will be noted that these agree with Boas in regard to the months in the early part of the year, but not in those between the summer and winter solstices; no explanation is offered for this disparity. 805 821 [554] [578] [796] [114] [178] [114]

First moon after the summer solstice: Sikālamtak, which has the significance, "The Time for Sockeye Salmon to Ascend the River."

Second moon after the summer solstice: Si'islalitl, "The Time for Eating Dog Salmon."

Third moon after the summer solstice: Si'iswai·stl, "The Time for Eating Cohoe Salmon."

Fourth moon after the summer solstice: Siqālx̱am, "The Time for Gathering Fern Root," or Sidakaos di Ano'likwolsaix,

[4] A Kimsquit informant stated that there were professional calendrical experts in his home when he was a young lad although members of the kulus society (II, chap. 1) sometimes attended to this matter. [575] [463]

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

The religious concepts of the Bella Coola are not limited to explanations of strange apparitions, nor to knowledge of a wide range of supernatural beings, anthropomorphic or zoomorphic. Many in whom they believe are invisible and intangible, though none the less potent. Almost every incident of life is attributed to the help or hindrance of a supernatural agency. If a fisherman constructs a salmon-weir, with a considerable amount of work, the Bella Coola ascribe his success to the assistance of some supernatural being or supernormal power; mere labour would never have sufficed. If a man has phenomenal success in hunting, it is because the supernatural has helped him in some way. It is not necessary that an anthropomorphic being should appear; they seldom do, but none deny that in some form or another supernatural ones have aided the enterprise. 771 776* [226] [224]

This attitude is clearly evident in Bella Coola beliefs concerning the construction of canoes. Many professions depend upon prerogatives without which a person cannot hope to succeed. This is not true of canoe-makers, although it is a great advantage to one of them if Yulätimut, the Master Carpenter, appeared to his ancestors in the beginning of time. Even without this in many cases a man can succeed in making a canoe if he is aided by a supernatural teacher, or Model Maker. No one knows much about this being, nor even whether there is more than one of them, but it is through his kindly intervention that a man is able to complete his complicated task. If carpenters who have left a half-finished canoe in the woods, hear adze beats, as they are returning to it, they remain away from the spot, knowing that their work is being done with superhuman efficiency by a supernatural artisan. Under such circumstances even a solitary man can construct one of the large, ocean-going canoes. About 1880 an expert carpenter, named Yelxlin, was making 396 776* [463] stated definitely that his mother had told him Mackenzie came down the Dean River when her uncle was a young man. As if to confirm this statement he added the inconsequential detail that Mackenzie, in dire straits for food, killed and ate a dog, and that he was given a marmot-skin blanket. 776* 177

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

428 influence of a chief is usually sufficient to settle claims as to 553 which of his brothers shall receive which name. Even if none
[578] of them is a chief, some one of them is certain to have greater influence than the others. If a dead man has no sons, his daughters can assume his names, which they may transmit to their children. Failing both sons and daughters, a man's brothers and sisters are his heirs, as usual, the one of influence being the one who really arranges matters.[6] None the less, it [614] must be emphasized that if the members of the immediate family are slow to validate a dead man's names, they may be taken by any member of the ancestral family.

463 In former days it was customary to create a "remem-869 brancer" to preserve the ancestral myth. The older and more influential members of the ancestral family would choose an [614] intelligent young relative to whom to relate the myth in great detail. One informant described how her mother, the last official "remembrancer," had been instructed by her grandfather. The old man had been accustomed to take his granddaughter, a girl about twelve years of age, to bed with him, and whisper to her the myth, with his hand pressed over her anus to prevent escape of his words. At the conclusion of the recitation [789] he always spat in her ears to make the words stick. The members of the ancestral family, recognizing that the "remembrancer" was the person best acquainted with the myth, were wont to consult him or her about it, and, of course, about the [553] names embodied in it. A "remembrancer" had no authority to decree who should receive names, but appeals were often made to him, and a tactful individual was frequently able to settle disputes.

578 Considering the extreme fluidity of the whole system it is 428 surprising that quarrels are not more common. These are limited by the system of wills, through which a man bequeaths
614 his most valuable personal property, especially his intangible 553 property in kusiut name-prerogatives (II, p. 2). Ancestral

[6]At the present time the same principle governs the disposal of houses and gardens on the reserve.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924) 1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

553
*556 More goods are brought forth. In like fashion all kinds of things are bestowed: a copper, "to support Y's back"; a moose-skin, "to shield him from the fire"; two slaves, "to make him strong and heavy as he moves about the earth"; a pile of blankets, "to provide a cape to keep him warm"; more goods, "to give him shoes"; some cloth, "to wipe his mouth after eating"; and other things to provide him with hat, leggings, and so on. The family of Y keep telling the heralds that they have more goods, so that he knows how long to continue his complaint about Y's needs.

As soon as all the available goods have been piled up, they are given to the guests, who are witnesses of the validation of the name and seat in the house. Theoretically, the value of the present received by each is not affected by the rank of the recipient. X decides whether or not each guest shall receive a present of like value, or whether men shall receive more than women. Owing to the difficulty of accurate estimation of the amount required, there is often a residue, which is given away to the more important chiefs. These goods are strictly not returnable. They are spoken of as having "become nothing," with reference to the name and seat in question.

Exactly the same procedure is carried out for every young person whom X wishes to start or to validate in his seat. Parents take advantage of a potlatch to "strengthen" their children in this way, and X never refuses a request for participation. It is always announced whence have come the goods for distribution, so that X receives no direct increase of fame, if they have been provided solely by the relatives of the youth, but, indirectly, his prestige is increased through the transaction having taken place at his potlatch.

It is at this time too that other names are validated. There will be usually a number of infants whose parents wish them to receive their first child names, such as are incorporated in the family myths. Likewise, men may be confirmed in their *556 occupations, as warriors, singers, or other professions in which •463

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

556*
[463] success, according to the Bella Coola, depends upon the goods expended in their establishment (I, p. 261).

556*
575
535

Throughout all this ceremonial the initiates have been carefully concealed in the back-room. They are now eagerly, though with trepidation, awaiting their time to dance. The order of appearance is a matter of no importance. It is arranged by the singers, who send word to one of the initiates and then begin to beat out one of his songs. He emerges, clad in a ceremonial blanket, wearing a susaok head-dress, and holding a rattle in his hand. Taking up his station behind the fire he dances in time to the beating of sticks. As he does so, the speaker calls upon X's wife to bring forward goods as "cedar-bark mats for him to stand upon," or "cedar-bark mats to make soft his seat." These are piled at some convenient spot. After dancing, the initiate retires to the back-room, accompanied by one of the older members of the susaok society, perhaps a siki. This man presently emerges, saying:

"It is most peculiar. An eagle is there now."[30]

At the same time a whistle sounds from the back-room, in imitation of the scream of an eagle.

There ensues a constant interplay of remarks between the heralds and those regulating the ceremony. One of the former may call out:

"Let us see it."

The elder returns to the back-room, saying, "I will bring it out."

There now emerges a figure masked to represent an eagle, or whatever bird or animal it may be, with a long blanket covering all but the feet. Any clever dancer is employed to wear this disguise, seldom the initiate himself. The "eagle" bends down beside the singers as if whispering a song to them, though in reality they have themselves composed it. They sing this as the masked figure moves around the fire, imitating the gait of an eagle with considerable dramatic skill, while an [30] Or whatever may have been the guise in which the tsiwinam came to him, in itself dependent on his ancestral myth.

1:McIlwraith E-5 (1922-1924)1948
NE6 Bellacoola NE6

pended, so that it serves as a visible and tangible memorandum of the chief-like generosity of its owner. By means of these media, debts are passed from one individual to another without actual liquidation in goods; in fact, it is unlikely that the Bella Coola possess sufficient money to meet the sums represented by their coppers. 556* [435] [426]

Professional Prerogatives

The importance of prerogatives in the lives of the Bella Coola has already been noted in many connections. A man's name is his only because his ancestral family has the prerogative of using that designation; a kusiut dance can be performed only by an individual with the necessary prerogative; specific totem-pole designs, the portrayal of bird or animal on spoons, seats, house-posts, and other objects is a right dependent upon an ancestral prerogative; as is also the area on which a man can hunt or fish. The concept colours all Bella Coola life. Not only is a man's ceremonial life based on this principle, but on it depend his actions as chief, and the economic sources of his food-supply. No prerogative, even though it be the property of a man, is effective until validated by the distribution of presents. Much of a man's energy throughout life is expended on the validation and display of his prerogatives; most Bella Coola feuds are caused by the infringement of one individual on another's rights. 424 556* [532] [796] [431] [627] [578]

